HUMAN LIVES AND VAST WEALTH OF FORESTS AND TOWNS IN FOUR STATES FALL PREY TO FIRE FIEND

BODY OF LAWRENCE LYNCH FOUND IN THE SIXTH AVENUE SLIP

Light Bruise on Temple Only Mark Found on Body.

Water Very Shallow at Spot Where Body Was Discovered.

Money in Pockets Not Touched Discrediting Murder Theory.

The body of Lawrence Lynch, a brother of B. A. Lynch, Sunday editor of the News Tribune, was found in six inches of water near the Sixth avenue slip this morning.

The cause of his death is a mystery. An autopsy by Dr. F. F. Clark failed to disclose any injury which would have been sufficient to kill him.

The lungs were partially filled with water, as though he had taken a last dying gasp when his head went under water. There was a bruise over the temple on the left side of the head, but it was only superficial.

The body was lying face downwards and was not covered by the water, which is very shallow at that spot. It was lying lengthwise with the railroad track, which runs along the water front, but no marks were apparent to show that he had been struck by any train. It is also stated that no trains were run on that line yesterday or early this morning. Dr. Clark gave it as his opinion that the body had not been in the water more than eight hours.

The discovery was made by Joseph Hawkinson, a laborer, who was walking along the track. He came in from the woods this morning and was wandering aimlessly about when he saw the body lying in the water.

The coroner was notified and the body was taken to the undertaking rooms of J. L. Crawford, where the post-mortem was performed. Identification was made by means of a letter addressed to him which was found in his pocket. He has been making his home with relatives at 111 Second avenue east. The theory that he had been killed for the purposes of robbery was eliminated when about $20 and his bank book were found on him. The relatives were notified by Detective Donald Irvine. Two of his sisters were completely overcome when they were informed of the finding of their brother's body. The funeral arrangements have not been completed.

The theory of the police is that he lost consciousness in some manner or became suddenly ill while walking along the tracks, falling into the edge of the slip and drowning before he recovered consciousness. Only a few months ago another man was found dead in almost the same spot. For a time it was thought that he had been murdered, but investigation disclosed that he had fallen from the dock, striking his head on a projecting spike, which killed him.

His relatives are certain he did not commit suicide. From the appearance of the body and the fact that the young man had no known motive for injuring himself, it is believed that he stumbled and fell, striking his head in such a manner that death followed. The bruise on the head bears out the theory.

The young man was well known in the city. He owned a store on Park Point for some time, but has recently been working for the Duluth, Missabe & Northern railroad. He had no bad habits, saved his money and was in fairly good circumstances. He is survived by four brothers, B. A. Lynch and Thomas Lynch of Duluth, Capt. P. J. Lynch of Superior and John Lynch of Chicago, and three sisters Mrs. Thomas Flynn of Chicago and Misses Jane and M. I. Lynch of Duluth.

REPORT OF WRECK IS DISPROVED AT LAST.

New York, Aug. 22.—The report that the steam yacht Viking, owned by George F. Baker, Jr., had sunk with twenty-three persons on board off Cape Cod, was disproved today when Mr. Baker telephoned here that the Viking had arrived this morning at Newport, R. I., from Larchmont.

A Newport dispatch stated that a bottle had been found there containing a note that the Viking struck a reef off Cape Cod, Mass., Aug. 13, and had sunk.

VATICAN RESENTS SPAIN'S PROTEST

Says Priests in That Country Are Merely Doing Their Duty.

Rome, Aug. 22.—Surprise is expressed at the Vatican at the protest of the Spanish government against what the Spanish government calls violent sermons, delivered by Roman Catholic priests in Spain, against the government. The protest was delivered by the marquis de Gouzales, secretary of the Spanish embassy to the Vatican, in charge of the embassy since the recall of the Spanish ambassador, and terms the sermons "insulting to the Spanish ministers and inflaming the passions of the people."

At the Vatican it is declared that the Spanish clergy is behaving admirably during the crisis, and is simply calling the attention of the faithful to the attempts by the Spanish government against the rights and liberties of the church.

METAPHYSICAL DOCTORS MEET

Organization With Big Name Begins Sessions in Missouri.

Nevada, Mo., Aug. 22.—A five-days' session of the National Association of Suggestive Therapeutics and Metaphysical chautauqua began with an address of welcome today by Prof. S. A. Weltner, and a reply by W. H. Cowgill of Lincoln, Neb., president of the association. Tonight there will be an address by Henry Frank of New York city, on "Twentieth Century Outlook for Higher Humanity." Others who will address the meeting are William Walker Atkinson of Chicago, on "Suggestion, the Master Key," and Lord Charles Kennedy of Edinburgh, Scotland.

TOLEDO'S POPULATION IS GIVEN AS 168,497.

Washington, Aug. 22.—The population of Toledo, Ohio, is 168,497, an increase of 36,675, or 27.8 per cent as compared with 131,822 in 1909.

EIGHTEEN PERISH IN THE WRECK OF BRITISH CRUISER

London, Aug. 22.—Eighteen lives were lost when the British cruiser Bedford ran ashore on the rocks of Quelpart island, Korea, yesterday, according to the report received here by the admiralty. The men were members of the engineering staff.

Th8 evessel lies in such desperate position that there is practically no possibility of saving her. The hull is full of water up to the engine room bulkhead, the water pouring in through gaping holes punched by the sunken rocks. The sister ships Minotaur and Monmouth of the British squadron, which anchored yesterday near the wreck to render any possible assistance, were obliged to put to sea last night owing to heavy weather.

During Speed Trials.

The accident occurred during the full speed trials of the vessel and the cruiser was evidently badly holed, since the deaths are stated officially to have been due to "the inrush of water."

The Bedford is an armored cruiser of the so-called "county" class, of 9,800 tons, completed in 1903 at a cost of $3,530,000. She was armed with fourteen six-inch guns, had a rated speed of nearly twenty-three knots and carried a normal complement of 537 men.

CITY BUDGET FOR 1911 SHOULD BE $836,500 SAYS COMPTROLLER

SAYS LIND MAY ACCEPT

O'Connor Makes Comment After Reading Letter From West.

Epistle From Absent Nominee Is Received By Frank Day.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Frank A. Day is in receipt of another letter from John Lind mailed from Portland, Or., and accompanied by a two-page typewritten letter from John E. Burchard.

Mr. Lind's letter, according to Mr. Day, is a personal one, and he refuses to give out any statement as to its contents. Its effect upon him, however, was most marked.

The letter had a similar effect upon R. T. O'Connor, who happened to be in Mr. Day's office about the time it was received. Mr. O'Conner has said that John Lind would not accept the nomination. After reading the letter he said:

"It would not surprise me if Mr. Lind decides to accept the nomination."

The John E. Burchard letter received scant attention at that time. It may have been devoured in bits later on, but it was plainly overshadowed by that from the absent chief.

LAKE SHORE ENGINEERS ARE GIVEN MORE WAGES.

Toledo, Ohio, Aug. 22.—William T. Colter, chairman of the general committee representing the engineers, today announced that a wage increase to 1,300 engineers on the Lake Shore railway betwen Chicago and Buffalo, aggregating $150,000 annually has been granted, following a conference in Chicago.

Vannutelli Leaves Rome.

Rome, Aug. 22.—Cardinal Vincenzo Vannutelli, the papal legate to the Eucharistic congress to be held in Montreal beginning Sept. 6, left today for Liverpool, whence he will sail for America.

Would Make Rate of 16.76 Mills on the New Assessment.

The cost of running the city in 1911, according to the estimate submitted to the conference committee this afternoon by City Comptroller W. S. McCormick, will be $836,500, as compared with $789,500 the present year.

Of this amount $670,500 is raised by general taxation and the remaining $166,000 is transferred from the general fund. The general fund is self-supporting, being raised from licenses and fees. It amounts to $234,445, leaving a balance of $68,445 for general expenses, of which no cognizance is taken by the comptroller.

The increase of the estimated expenses for 1911 over the cost of the city government in 1910 is $45,000, due partly to the additional levies authorized by the special charter amendments.

The comptroller's estimate of the tax rate is 16.76 mills as against 16.75 mills for the present year.

The small difference in the tax rate is owing to the increased valuation of the city. In 1910 the valuation was $37,283,400, making the earning power of 1 mill $37,283.40. This year the valuation will be approximately $40,000,000, unless the board of equalization makes some sweeping changes, making the earning power of 1 mill about $40,000.

The figures prepared this year by Comptroller McCormick for the conference committee are the most complete which have ever been gotten out in the city. He has taken up the figures of each department in detail and has also prepared many interesting tables for comparison. They are indicative of the rapid growth of the city. They show that the city's expenses have jumped from $620,500 in 1906 to $836,500 estimated for 1911.

ST. LOUIS, MO., GETTING NEARER ONE MILLION.

Washington, Aug. 22.—The population of St. Louis, Mo., is 687,029, an increase of 111,971 or 14.15 as compared with 575,238 in 1900.

ENTIRE WEST UNDER PALL

Duluthians marveled with all the rest of this part of the world at the remarkable phenomenon, and although every one readily accepted the theory that the strange light was caused by the fires in the West, all agreed that they never before had seen the like.

Traveling men who came in from Southern Wisconsin and Minnesota points, told that the same condition prevailed there, and the wires brought the information that throughout the Dakotas the same yellow sheen overcast the skies.

The light was likened to that of the footlights on the stage, to the flare of a monster bonfire seen at a distance, and to the light of the moon when it shines with its greatest brilliance. The day was not dark, in the accepted sense.

Conditions today reminded old settlers very vividly of the time of the great Hinckley fire, when for days the sky was masked with a pall much like the one seen today. At that time there was the added feature of falling brands that were carried as far as Duluth with the smoke. The feeling of nervousness so noticeable on all

ONE KILLED AND TWO WOUNDED

Two Men and a Woman Victims in Fight Over Money.

John Bolner, the alleged assailant, was arrested.

FIRES SET ON PURPOSE

Official in Oregon Has Sent Scouts to Seek Incendiaries.

Washington, Aug. 22.—Positive evidence that many of the forest fires in Oregon are of incendiary origin has been discovered by government agents, according to a telegarm received at the offices of the forest service here today from Associate District Forester Cecil of Portland.

Mr. Cecil says in his dispatch that there is no doubt but that the fires in the Crater National forest and at Medford resulted from incendiarism and that new fires are being set. He reports that he has started twenty-five men on scout duty in an effort to catch the culprits.

Fires in the Crater national forest in Southern Oregon and at Medford, Or., are proving more serious every hour. There are 300 men there now under the forest service, the war department already having 100 soldiers detailed in this district and has ordered 250 more from American Lake. Assistant District Forester Buck has gone from Portland to take personal charge of the situation.

GAYNOR WALKS JUST A FEW STEPS

Mayor's Condition Will Not Be Bulletined Hereafter, Say Doctors.

New York, Aug. 22.—Mayor Gaynor had a good night and his physicians said this morning that he seemed stronger than ever. The mayor jokingly remarked that now that he had stolen a march on his doctors and walked a few steps he hoped to indulge in his favorite exercise every day. The doctors anticipate issuing no further bulletins on the mayor's condition, as the work now is consigned practically to careful nursing.

HEINZE ADMITS HE IS TO MARRY ACTRESS.

New York, Aug. 22.—Fritz Augustus Heinze, in his office today confirmed the report that he is to marry Miss Bernice Henderson, an actress. Mr. Heinze said the ceremony would take place about Sept. 1 and that he and his wife would go to Europe and then visit his copper mines in Butte, Mont.

OVER 100 LIVES ARE HIS TOLL

Forests, Ranches and Towns Ablaze and Fighters Are Desperate.

Thirty-Five Companies of Regular Troops Trying to Subdue Flames.

Montana, Idaho, Oregon and Washington in Frantic Appeal for Aid.

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 22.—More than 100 human lives, thousands of ranches, portions of towns and cities, forest wealth to an incalculable amount, scattered railroad and other property whose value will run far into the hundreds of thousands—this is the toll exacted up to this afternoon by the demon of fire that is sweeping over huge areas in Washington, Montana, Idaho and Oregon.

Thousands of men are fighting hopelessly against the flames. Some of those who went out to risk their lives in order to check the carnival of destruction have payed the utmost sacrifice. Others are surrounded by the flames and by now may have succumbed to the terrific heat or the life-sapping waves of smoke that cover over the whole region and are drifting eastward.

Throughout the whole area where the flames are rioting, death and terror are stalking, leaving the once beautiful valleys bare alike of vegetation and animal life, or driving men and animals alike to flee by scores, by hundreds or by thousands to safer localities.

Thirty-five Companies.

Frantic appeals for help from the Federal government, not to protect the forests but to save human lives are pouring into Washington and thirty-five companies of regular troops have been sent out to fight the flames.

The last five companies available in the stricken region for fighting duty, and of pack trains, carrying medical supplies and army surgeons to the immediate relief of the sufferers were ordered out this morning.

Communication with many places is cut off. With all points in the fire zone it is difficult, and the intense darkness caused by the smoke and the uncertainty of conditions of tracks have caused delay in the running of trains so that even that form of communication is uncertain.

Fear for Wallace Again.

Intermittent communication, which was in effect with Wallace, Idaho, early this morning, was entirely cut off later and fears are entertained that the fires, which yesterday swept one-fourth of that place, have again started. Saltese is still safe, but is surrounded by walls of flames. The Northern Pacific officials' special is still at Saltese, but cannot be moved, as bridges are burned on either side. Telegraph and telephone communication to the place is cut off.

St. Regis, old town, has been abandoned by the women, children and disabled, only a force of able-bodied fire fighters being retained, under Supervisor Koch, to make a stand against the flames, which are steadily advancing.

Since daylight the wind has arisen and little hope is felt of saving the place. The breeze has veered slightly and is moving toward the city from the east and it is probable the new town will fall first.

Towns Are Abandoned.

The towns of Rivulet, Superior and Iron Mountain were abandoned this morning. The Iron Mountain tunnel company's mining property located near Iron Mountain caught fire early today and was destroyed.

A relief party started out from Saltese over the Milwaukee railroad early this morning for Borax, carrying a large searching party which will attempt to find a company of soldiers unaccounted for since Saturday morning.

The forestry officials this morning report the Camas country east of Potomac as being the zone of a big fire which is devastating forests and ranches. A large force of men was started out by the big Blackfoot Milling company last night for Potomac and this morning 100 more left this city for Camas country.

Ovando, farther east, is surrounded by flames, which are only twelve miles from the town on either side. The village, however, is said to be adequately protected and in no danger.

Men Unaccounted For.

In the Clinton district, n the Missoula forest, ten men are unaccounted for. A relief expedition was started out of Clinton to seek for the men.

In the Bitterroot valley from Woodside to Darby, a distance of twenty miles, on the west side of the Bitterroot river, twenty-five fires broke out

The home-seekers were out in thousands in Duluth yesterday and each new addition, which is on the market or will be on the market this fall, drew its full quota of visitors. One had only to visit one of the new additions yesterday to be assured that the "Own Your Own Home" microbe is about the busiest member of the microbe family in Duluth at the present time and the real estate dealers say that the germ is getting in effective work.

Crescent View Park has not yet been announced for sale by W. M. Prindle & Co., but hundreds of people visited the tract yesterday and looked over the lots and improvements being made. The property lies between First street and Fifth street and between Thirty-fifth and Thirty seventh avenues east. At First street and Thirty-sixth avenue east, an ornamental entrance is being constructed and the street improvements and beautifying plans are elaborate. Crescent View Park is designed as a site for beautiful homes. Many lots have already been sold and Prindle & Co. have hundreds of inquiries, which indicate that the park will be popular.

There was no sale in progress at Idlewild yesterday, but hundreds of people visited the new addition, which has been put on the market by Whitney Wall & Co. It is located between Second and Fourth streets at about Twenty-seventh avenue east and has a beautiful view. Inquiry for the lots is strong and many sales have been made. The property has building restrictions placed on it, streets are graded and it bids fair to become a popular residence district.

The Greysolon addition is attracting much attention and E. W. Markell reports a heavy sale. The addition is also intended as a district of fine residences and is attracting people who have the money to erect beautiful homes.

The sale at Highland, at the top of the incline, Saturday was so satisfactory that C. P. Craig & Co. have decided to put on another sale in two weeks. Only 100 lots were placed on sale Saturday and they were taken with a rush. In order to make lots available for another sale in two weeks, another street will be graded. Improvements in the incline railroad by the installation of two new cars of a larger type than that now in use will add to the attractiveness of Highland and will also stimulate the interest in Duluth Heights property.

The additions most recently placed on the market were not the only attraction to the home-seekers yesterday. Hundreds visited Lakeside, Lester park, additions in the vicinity of the steel plant and new additions recently placed on the market near Woodland. Almost every remaining lot in Homecroft park was sold by W. M. Prindle & Co. yesterday, and other real estate dealers report that yesterday called at their offices this morning to purchase lots.

It is a notable fact that there are few visiting the different additions for curiosity only. The home-owning microbe causes determination to buy and the determination is father to the act that will result in the next few years in a building boom that will surpass anything of the kind Duluth has ever known.

WIFE'S MONEY BUYS LIQUOR

Albert Johnson Given Thirty Days in the County Jail.

Albert Johnson takes the record as the meanet man in the city, according to the police. He was arrested Saturday night for drunkenness. It is alleged that he has been forcing his wife to give him money with which to buy liquor. She does washing and ironing to support herself and family.

It is also claimed that at the last circus he took 50 cents away from his daughter, who had been planning to take in the performance with the money, and spent it in a saloon. In police court this morning he got thirty days straight in the county jail without the option of a fine.

William Zuelow, who has been arrested five times the last two or three weeks for getting drunk, got twenty days straight. It is stated that he made improper advances to a young girl employed in her parents' confectionery store on West Michigan street.

ROUGH RIDERS TO WELCOME TEDDY

Denver, Colo., Aug. 22.—Rough Riders from Oklahoma, New Mexico, Arizona, Texas and all parts of Colorado will shout welcome to Theodore Roosevelt when he arrives here from Cheyenne next Monday. Some of them, riding from their homes, are said to have started already, but a large number, it is understood, are taking advantage of arrangements made by Gen. Sherman Bell in conection with the national encampment of Spanish War Veterans, then to be in session, by which any many sending his horse for use in the parade to be held in Col. Roosevelt's honor will be paid shipping expenses. Decoration of the city has begun.

PASSENGERS TRY TO HOLD UP STEAMER--KILL CAPTAIN

Companion in Bold Stroke Is Overpowered and Arrested.

Eureka, Cal., Aug. 22.—The Alaska-Pacific Steamship company's liner Buckman was held up at sea off this port yesterday by two passengers. Capt. Wood was shot and killed by one of the men while resisting. The second man was overpowered by the engineer crew. The passenger who shot the captain juped overboard with life preservers. The Buckman was en route from Seattle to San Francisco.

At 2:15 o'clock yesterday morning, Fred Thomas, a passenger, went to the captain's room, while an accomplice descended to the engine room. Both men were armed and they attempted to take possession of the vessel. Capt. Wood refused to comply with Thomas' demands and he was shot dead. The man ran out of the room, and seeing his plans had miscarried, strapped on a life preserver and leaped into the sea. In the meantime the accomplice had encountered resistance in the engine room. He was overpowered and placed in irons.

Report by Wireless.

The attempt to rob the Buckman was reported to the steamer President, northbound. The President searched the vicincity for Thomas without result.

Word of the holdup reached this city late last night from Humbolt by wireless telegram.

AUTO OWNERS MUST GET BUSY

Those Who Have Had Licenses Voted Must Take Them Out.

Owners of automobiles whose applications for licenses have been acted upon by the city council, but who have neglected to take out the licenses at the clerk's office, will be arrested if they do not get busy before Wednesday. Assistant Attorney Walter Dacey states that warrants will be issued for all those who have not taken out their license on that day. The complete list has been obtained from the records of the city clerk, and the attorney states that not one of them will escape.

About seventy-five people have had their applications granted but have neglected to take out licenses. Each of the senevty-five has been notified by letter to take out their licenses.

RANSACK HOUSE; STEAL SAVINGS

Robbers Get $40, Which Was Hard-Earned Money of Waitresses.

The residence of George M. Emerson, 1106 Park Point, was entered yesterday afternoon while the family was away and $40 was taken from the room occupied by Clara Dickey and Emma Christenson, two waitresses at the Boat club.

The members of the family were away from home, having gone on a picnic, and the two girls were on duty at the club. It was easy to get into the house and the thieves had an easy time getting the money. Nothing else was touched, so far as is known.

The girls had been saving their money so that when the season was finally over at the club they could make their way to Chicago, where they expected to secure work.

The house was broken into some time between the hours of 10 in the morning and 2 in the afternoon. The police have been notified.

USE WIRELESS TO FIND DULUTH MAN

Sad News Awaits Jack Shambeau, Who Is Taking Launch Trip.

Wireless telegraphy was called into use today for the purpose of advising a Duluth man who is somewhere on Lake Superior of the death of his mother.

Jack Shambeau is on board A. E. Ribenack's launch on a cruise that was to have continued for some time. Word was received from Two Rivers, Wis., this morning by Henry Ribenack that Mr. Shambeau's mother had died suddenly.

Without delay Mr. Ribenack sent a wireless message to Grand Marais, another to Isle Royale and a third to the steamer America, hoping that Mr. Shambeau might be reached by one of them. Mr. Ribenack received a reply from the addressee of his first message within three minutes of the sending time. Mr. Shambeau has not been located, but it is expected he will be within a few hours.

SUE OMAHA ROAD OUT IN MONTANA

Couple Ejected Six Miles From Ashland, Wis., Demand $1,950.

Helena, Mont., Aug. 22.—Alleging that they had been unlawfully ejected from a train on the Chicago, St. Paul & Minneapolis railway, Jan. 8, 1908, in separate suits filed in the district court by Peter Tobin and his wife, Margaret Tobin, $1,950 damages and costs are asked by each.

The defendants are the Chicago North-Western and Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha Railway companies.

Put Off Near Ashland.

The complainant's recited that tickets were bought in January for transportation from Hurley to Butte and that six miles from Ashland, Wis., they were ejected by the conductor who, it is said, declared that coupons had been detached from the tickets of the plaintiffs, in consequence of which they were not entitled to ride. It is alleged that if any coupons were detached it was the conductor who detached them.

MADRIZ IS DEFEATED

Revolutionary Forces in Nicaragua Are Victors in the War.

Washington, Aug. 22.—Confirmatory dispatches of reverses to the Madriz forces continued to arrive at the state department today. All dealt with the fighting about Granada and the evacuation of Bluefields Bluff last week, and none touched on the developments anticipated since that time. United States Consul Moffatt reported from Bluefields that the "entire Madriz forces vacated the bluff the night of the 19th inst."

The Madriz army is demoralized, consternation reigns in Managua, and Dr. Madriz, his general-in-chief, Toledo, and Dr. Irias are preparing to leave the country.

Americans in Danger.

The panic in the capital also is threatening the lives and property of Americans. Crowds are reported traversing the streets crying "death to the Yankees," while the cruisers Vicksburg and Yorktown are at Corinto and in close touch with the situation, the legation and consulates in Managuas are under heavy police guard and preparations have been made to meet attacks on American lives or property.

The situation grew out of a victory won by the Estradan troops on Thursday, when the revolutionists defeated a strong column of government troops and effected the crossing of the Tipitapa river. The rout of the government army seems to have been complete.

Granada also appears to be at the mercy of undisciplined mobs of soldiers.

TEACHERS TO BE ASSIGNED

Supt. Denfeld Will Organize His Corps This Week.

Many Preparations for Opening of Schols Sept. 6.

The rush before the opening of school is on in Duluth. Although some 12,000 or 13,000 children are looking forward with some regrets to Sept. 6. their concern is nothing to the volume of work into which Supt. Denfeld and the members of the school board are plunged on account of the approach of the first day of the new school year.

This week the hundreds of teachers to be employed during the year will be assigned to the different schools, the new Washington grade school will be dried out and made ready for the reception of pupils, the new Fairmont school will be given the finishing touches, temporary manual training quarters will be fitted up in the Central high school to accommodate the department until the new school is ready for occupancy Jan. 1. Principal Leonard Young will arrive from South Ben, Ind., to familiarize himself with the school before the opening of the term and many other matters will be attended to in the schools while hundreds of anxious mothers and fathers are preparing their hopefuls for entering school or beginning work in new grades.

The assignment of teachers will be no small task for Supt. Denfeld. The ability of the teachers who have taught in the schools here in past years is known and their assignment will not cause much concern, but additional positions and many resignations have necessitated the election of new teachers who must be assigned so that there may be satisfaction all around. Supt. Denfeld does not regard the task as an easy one.

The grade portion of the new Washington school is practically completed and heat will be turned on this week to dry it out for the reception of pupils. The old Washington school will be abandoned and the furniture moved to the new building. The rooms in the Central high school which have been used for grade purposes on account of the congestion in the old Washington building will also be turned over to the high school and the grades will be moved into the new building.

In the installation of the new central heating plant in the high school and the equipment of the ventilating system for its operation by electricity, the shafting in the old manual training quarters was taken out and the manual training department was practically wrecked. The new manual training school will not be ready for occupancy until Jan. 1, so it is now necessary to equip the old manual training rooms for use until that time. A motion has been purchased and the manual traning work will be carried on until the new building is ready.

Leonard Young of South Bend. Ind., who was elected principal of the Central high school to succeed George Buck, will arrive in Duluth Thursday or Friday of this week and will prepare for the openng of the high school. The number of graduates from the grade schools of the city in June was the greatest in the history of the school system and it is expected that the number of students to enter the high school this year will establish a similar record.

The adoption of the new course of study and the necessity for students and parents giving the courses careful consderation before making selections will probably cause a delay in the beginning of high school work. The new courses of study have been printed for distribution and Clerk C. E. Bronson of the school board has had a number of calls for copies. Parents are determining before the opening of school what courses they want their children to pursue and if a great number adopt the plan, much of the delay which is now regarded as probable will be avoided.

The rewiring of the Central high school has been practically completed and the system will be tested this week. The new Fairmont school has been completed for some time and it will be ready to receve pupils Sept. 6.

The enrolment on the opening day this year is expected to be greater than ever before. Some of the buildings will undoubtedly be crowded, but the school board is endeavoring to keep pace with the growth of the city and conditions at the opening this year will be much better than they were a year ago. It is expected that the new Oneota building will be erected during the coming year and congestion in the Oneota and Bryant schools will be thus relieved.

Two Boys Are Burned to Death in Fire at Liscomb, Iowa.

Marshalltown, Ia., Aug. 22.—Wayne Paris, aged 8, and Teddy Thurber, aged 6, were burned to death at Liscomb, near here, as a result of playing in a hay mow with matches. The children secured a quantity of matches from the kitchen and retired to the loft to play. The building was a mass of flames when the fire was discovered, and was completely destroyed. The bodies of the boys were found in the ruins, burned to a crisp.

CHORUS GIRL AND EX-FIGHTER HELD

New York, Aug. 22. — Stylishly dressed and well supplied with money, a man, in whose pockets were visiting cards engraved "Bert Vanderbilt, Lambs club," was found lying today in the rear of a theatrical boarding house on West Forty-second street. His skull was fractured and he has not regained consciousness. At the Lambs club it was denied that any Bert Vanderbilt was a member.

The police have taken into custody Edith Imen, a chorus girl, "Kid" Broad, a pugilist, and his chum, Ralph Millspie. The Imen girl told the police that Vanderbilt was trying to enter her room on the third floor by stepping over from the Broad's window to a window ledge of her room and that he fell into the yard. Broad says he was not in his room.

Quiz Philadelphia Girl.

The name of Vanderbilt is believed by the police to be fictitious, and acting District Attorney Moss says he thinks that Miss Beryl Vernon of 132 Pine street, Philadelphia, who has been visiting at the Forty-second street house, knows the identity of the man, whom he believes to be from Philadelphia.

Miss Vernon told the coroner that she knew little of the affair between Vanderbilt and Miss Imen, but Mr. Moss said she seemed to be anxious to conceal the man's identity.

MOISSANT NOT IN LONDON YET

American Aviator Fails in Two Attempts to End Trip.

London, Aug. 22.—John Moissant, the American aviator, was again baffled this morning in his attempt to complete the Paris-London flight with a passenger, which started so auspiciously last Tuesday e ening. He ascended twice this morning in his endeavor to cover the comparatively short distance over which a spell seems to have been cast separating him from London, but could make no headway in the wind, and on the second forced descent damaged his machine so seriously that he will be unable to resume the flight for twenty-four hours.

On his second trial a heavy gust of wind caught the monoplane and flung it down bodily 100 feet, just missing one of the high hedges bordering the English roadways. Moissant avoided it by an abrupt swerve and the machine landed in a field. It was badly broken and Moissant and his mechanician, Fileux narrowly escaped injury.

Moissant and his machine are at Seven Oaks, about twenty miles from Upchurch and an equal distance from London.

DROP TAFT TO PLEASE DIVINE

Winona Assmbly Will Bar President From Its Program.

New York, Aug. 22.—To satisfy the demands of Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, the English preacher, President Taft has been snubbed by Winona assembly, the Presbyterian gathering at Winona Lake, Ind.

The president will not speak at Winona Tuesday, Aug. 30. His name appears on the printed program for that day. Dr. John Wesley Hill of the Metropolitan temple, this city, obtained the consent of Mr. Taft, but Dr. Morgan refused to speak from the same platform with the president because the latter is an avowed Unitarian. Dr. Morgan is a Presbyterian.

Winona assembly, it is said, has lacked noted speakers since the withdrawal of Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman. It is said that Dr. Dickey and his associates regarded Dr. Morgan as a more permanent attraction than the president.

AERONAUT FALLS AND GRANDSTAND COLLAPSES.

New York, Aug. 22. — Eugene Raymond, a young balloonist, while descending in a parachute in a park on the New Jersey Palisades, Sunday afternoon, crashed into a tree, fracturing his skull. He probably will die. Five hundred persons were watching the descent when the grand stand collapsed, piling the crowd in the debris. Nine were injured, one seriously.

W. H. SHACKEL

Of Duluth succeeds Alfred J. Emptage of New York as vice president of Eclipse Consolidated Investment company, and trustee of Aurelia Crown Mines corporation, both of Seattle. Mr. Emptage was found dead in his room at Pittsburg, June 26th, having died of heart failure. The Eclipse and Aurelia companies owe much to the untiring work of Mr. Dahl and Mr. Emptage, who so successfully handled these companies through the troublesome period of 1907-8. Mr. Shackel will succeed Mr. Emptage as trustee of the Aurelia company and Mr. K. B. Birkeland of Minneapolis will succeed Mr. Emptage as trustee of Eclipse. Mr. Shackel has been auditor for the Dahl interests for the past year, previous to which time he was with the Remington company nearly eight years as accountant and manager. He has sold his home on Eighteenth avenue east and will spend much of his time out of the city, but will keep a summer home at 3324 Park Point. Both Mr. and Mrs. Shackel have been prominent in church work at First M. E. church and recently at Endion M. E. church, where Mr. Shackel is superintendent of the Sunday school.

MARINE

FOURTH LOCK IS CONSIDERED

Engineers Believed to Be Against the Proposed Improvement.

The project of constructing a fourth lock at the Soo is being considered at the present time. The matter came up at a meeting of the engineers in charge of the Soo district, which was provided for in the rivers and harbors bill.

President William Livingstone of the Lake Carriers' association is heartily in favor of the construction of the lock, and was one of the first to urge the necessity of it. However, it is generally believed among the vessel men of the Great Lakes that the army engineers will decide against the advisability of the construction of the fourth lock.

HARBOR LINE IS CHANGED

Notice has been given by the local United States government engineer's office, that the harbor line in Howard's pocket, which is across from the Superior entry, has been changed to conform with a petition of the property owners and also the Wisconsin & Northern Railway company.

In their petition the property owners and also the railway company asked that the harbor line be advanced a few feet from the old line, which restricted the projection of buildings, etc. The request was taken up by Lieut. Col. Graham D. Fitch, and after an investigation of the facts in the case, he recommended to the government that the petition be granted. The government has just announced that this has been done.

The government office here has received word stating that the wrecked steamer Manhattan, which lay in the shallow water of Grand Island harbor, Ind., and was an obstruction to shipping, has been removed to the deeper waters, and that no longer do mariners have to avoid the vessel.

It is also stated that a contractor has left for Vermilion point to remove the wrecked steamer Hurlbut, which has been at that point for some time past.

FALLING OFF IN COAL CHARTERS.

Coal charters are falling off at the lower end of the lake. The reason is that the docks here are not demanding so much coal at the present time. Some of the boats returning from upper lake ports are experiencing trouble in securing cargoes.

SCHOOLCRAFT BEACHED AFTER COLLISION.

The small wooden steamers Schoolcraft and Amazon collided off Grosse Pointe, in Lake St. Clair, last Thursday. The damage to the Schoolcraft was such that the steamer had to be beached. The Amazon was not seriously damaged. The collision is believed to have been caused by the suction of the steamer J. M. Bartow, which brought the Schoolcraft around in front of the Amazon.

NEW TUG FOR WORK IN LOCAL HARBOR.

The Onekana, a tug which was recently purchased by George Barney and Capt. Edward Haasen, will be brought to Duluth for work in the Duluth-Superior harbor.

The tug was formerly owned by Traverse City, Mich., parties. She is not a new boat, but is a staunch little craft. She carries a steeple compound engine and cylinders 9 inches, 14 inches and 12 inches in diameter. She is 65 feet long and has a 14-foot beam.

Capt. Haasen, who commands the boat, left some days ago for Traverse City, where he will take charge and pilot her to Duluth.

MILITIA OF TWO STATES TO FIGHT

Sham Battles About Fort Riley Scheduled for This Week.

Junction City, Kan., Aug. 22.—The National Guard from Kansas and Nebraska probably will get their first taste of fighting at the Fort Riley maneuvers this week, as battles between the two armies will be prominent among the problems, if the weather is favorable.

Some of the most interesting problems in recent years have been the attacks on and defense of Fort Riley. The attacking force is sent out early in the morning, the defenders having only a general knowledge of its whereabouts At a given time both detachments send out scouting parties and larger forces in an attempt to locate and capture if possible a portion of the enemy's troops.

Night maneuvers will be another feature.

NEW SCALE WILL WEIGH UP TO 300,000 POUNDS.

The largest scale in the city has just been installed in the yards of the Iron Range Railroad company at Fifteenth avenue east.

The smallest man in Duluth can be weighed with accuracy and it is capable also of weighing anything up to 300,000 pounds. A weight of even four or five pounds is sufficient to tip the beam.

YOUNG FAWN SWIMS RIVER

The novel sight was witnessed by the passengers on the steamer Newsboy, which was taking a holiday crowd to Fond du Lac.

The fawn entered the water at a point near the Spirit lake branch of the Duluth Boat club.

In crossing the river the fawn was almost run down by the boat. It crossed directly in front and if the speed had not been slackened, it probably would have been killed. The 300 passengers crowded the bow of the boat and cheered the little animal as it continued its way to the island.

NEW CHURCH DEDICATED

Congregation Subscribes Nearly $6,000 Toward Paying Off Debt.

The formal services of dedication of the new Swedish Baptist church at Twenty-second avenue west and Third street were held yesterday morning, afternoon and evening at the new church edifice. The feature of the day's program was the liberal response from the members of the congregation who subscribed $5,780 towards paying off the church debt, at the afternoon service.

The morning service commenced with a brief Sunday school session in the assembly room which was followed by an organ prelude by N. E. Erickson. A solo by Mrs. Carl Hagberg preceded the dedicatory sermon by Rev. O. Bodien, pastor of the First Swedish Baptist church of Minneapolis, the address being in Swedish.

Dr. Frank Peterson addressed the afternoon meeting, and his talk was followed by the formal turning over of the keys by contractor Richard Hanson, the reading of the dedication service by pastor and congregation, the soliciting of subscriptions, and a beautiful solo by Mrs. Gideon Nylander.

A sermon on "Personal Service and Consecration," by Rev. G. A. Hagstrom, pastor of the First Swedish Baptist church of St. Paul was the feature of the evening meeting.

The large new auditorium was packed at all of the services and they were conducted in a manner which made them especially impressive. The visiting pastors were enthusiastic in their praises of the work of the pastor, Rev. Swaney Nelson, in securing the erection of the magnificent new place of worship, and in the consistent support accorded him by his congregation in his efforts. It was pointed out that the character of a city is evidenced by the character of its buildings and that the effect upon the impression a visitor received from a visit to the western part of the city from so fine a building as the new church, could not but be for the best.

The subscription of nearly $6,000 received last night leaves the congregation with a debt of but a little over $7,000. The new edifice was erected at a cost of approximately $25,000, $12,000 of which had been raised prior to July 1, of this year.

Today the congregation and their friends took the steamer Newsboy at the Fifth avenue dock and went up the river for a picnic at Fond du Lac where an informal sport program is planned.

COMMERCIAL CLUB IS DEAD

Secretary Says Attendance Does Not Warrant Calling a Meeting.

Has the West End Commercial club died a natural death? The answer to this question is puzzling West end residents, and while friends of the organization say that it is due simply to apathy attendant upon hot weather and summer vacations, it begins to look as if the club would need reorganization, at least, before it is resurrected.

When asked when he would call the next meeting, this morning, Secretary George M. Jensen said that he did not know when he would do so. A meeting is due Friday of this week, but Mr. Jensen said that as he had issued calls for the past two meetings and no one had put in an appearance but himself, he had decided that it was not worth while sending out notices.

So, in spite of the fact that there are a number of live questions to come up before the organization, there will in all probability be no meeting this week. The West end "white way" and the West end public market will have to wait until some decided interest is show by the merchants and there is a general demand for a club meeting. There has got to be a lively interest shown between now and Friday, according to Mr. Jensen, or there will be no meeting of the club.

This is in spite of the fact that the club has before it a second offer of lots for a public market. Friday, A. M. Miller, Jr., made an offer of lots on West Superior street, and close on the heels of Mr. Miller's proposition comes an offer from Henry Gujer, a former West end dry goods merchant, of two lots at Twentieth avenue west and First street for a similar purpose. The terms of both donors are substantially the same, including the removal of existing buildings as soon as the club gets ready to erect market booths, and the reservation of the right to recall the gift at any time after one year.

IS RECOVERING.

Hattie Hanson, Injured By Fall, Is Improving Steadily.

Hattie Hanson, the 15-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Christ Hanson, who fell from a balcony in the rear of her home, 107 North Twenty-seventh avenue west, Saturday morning, was reported doing fairly well this morning and her chances of recovery are considered excellent.

The little girl struck her head on the corner of a cement walk fifteen feet below and was rendered unconscious until nearly noon. Saturday night her condition was regarded as very critical, but her improvement was steady all day yesterday, and Dr. W. A. Coventry, who, with Dr. J. W. Eckblad, attended the case, stated this morning that she would probably recover.

TRUSTEES TO MEET.

Officers of Norwegian-Danish M. E. Church Will Review Finances.

A meeting of the trustee of the First Norwegian-Danish M. E. church will be held Thursday evening at the church. The matter of arranging to pay off the remaining $5,500 of the church debt will be taken up at this time. The past year has been a successful one for the church in financial as well as other aspects, as the organization has paid off over $1,500 of the debt, leaving $5,500 unprovided for. This will be the last meeting of the church year.

The same evening the ladies' aid of the church will give an entertainment and program at the church, Twenty-fourth avenue west and Third street. Refreshments will be served.

Rev. Edwin Erickson, pastor of the church, will leave next Monday for Chicago, where he will attend the annual conference. He expects to be gone about three weeks.

Alumni Will Organize.

The reunion of the students of Gustavus Adolphus college will be held tomorrow evening at the Bethany Swedish Lutheran church. If sufficient interest is shown and the attendance warrants such action, officers will be elected and a permanent organization formed. It is thought that as there are a considerable number of graduates from the school in the West end, there should be no difficulty in effecting a strong organization.

IMPORTANT MEETING.

Adams Athletic Association Will Elect Football Manager Tuesday Night.

The regular meeting of the Adams Athletic association tomorrow evening will be an unusually important one, as the selection of a football manager for the coming season is in prospect. The members of the association are unusually secretive as to the probable candidates for the position, but it is understood that a warm fight is in prospect. The association is planning to put a fast team in the field this fall and hopes to land the city title.

Convention in West End.

The district convention of the Luther league will be held Sept. 4 and 5 at the Bethany Swedish Lutheran church. The district includes Duluth, Superior, Two Harbors, Ashland and the range towns. At least thirty delegates are expected. Matters pertaining to the work of the league in the district will be discussed.

Larsdotter Funeral.

Mrs. Maga Greta Larsdotter, 79 years of age, died at the home of her son-in-law, Alfred Johnson, on the Hermantown road yesterday. The funeral will be held at 11 o'clock today from the residence and at 2 o'clock from the Midway Lutheran church, Rev. J. A. Krantz officiating. Interment will be at Midway cemetery.

West End Shortrails.

W. W. Smith of Chicago will give an illustrated lecture on "The Prodigal Son," Wednesday evening at the Norwegian-Danish M. E. church, Twenty-fourth avenue west and Third street. This lecture takes the place of the regular weekly prayer meeting.

Mrs. W. L. Bernard, 212 Exeter street will leave tomorrow for a three weeks' visit in the Twin Cities.

Rev. and Mrs. Frank Peterson of Minneapolis, and Rev. G. A. Hagstrom of St. Paul are guests at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Swaney Nelson, 2212 West Third street.

Mrs. C. J. Marsh and daughter, Eleanore, of 2631 Courtland street, returned this morning from a three weeks' visit in Bayfield, Wis.

PRESIDENT RYAN'S VIEWS ON COPPER

Arriving in Butte Amalgamated Head Discusses Red Metal Outlook.

Butte, Mont., Aug. 22.—Reiterating the opinions he expressed in New York recently on his return from Europe, John D. Ryan, president of the Amalgamated Copper company, who has arrived here after an absence of several months, said:

"All the copper-consuming countries—England, France and Italy—are now at their maximum in the use of copper—they are using more than they ever used before. We are exporting at the rate of 750,000,000 pounds of copper a year, which is practically half of our production. If we were getting a fair price for our copper—say 2 cents more per pound—it would make a balance of trade in favor of this country of about $15,000,000 a year without stifling consumption at all.

"In spite of the great consumption the production of copper has been used and the foreign consumers have gotten most of the benefit of the low price, which has consequently prevailed. I think the desire to make an excessive production of copper has been a mistake on the part of American producers and has been disastrous to the mines. I think all the producers realize that this is the case, and while there is no decision arrived at as to curtailment, and there will be no important curtailment, yet efforts to make record-breaking outputs will, in my opinion, be over for the present.

No Curtailment in Butte.

"The Butte mines are producing over 20 per cent of the American production of copper and 17 per cent of the world's production. There will be no curtailment of production that will affect Butte materially, because all the producers recognize that there has been a slight overproduction and they are not forcing production as they have in the past. Other districts are not producing as much. So far as Butte is concerned there will be no curtailment of an extent to affect the community in any degree. If we can obtain a little better price for our copper we can then increase, instead of decreasing, our tonnage from our mines by taking out lower grade ore, and that will make it necessary to employ in reality more men instead of less men and the general industrial conditions of this district will be better.

"There is no reason for any one to believe that in time Butte will lose its position as the greatest of all copper districts and no district is making such strides as is Butte in the direction of economies and improvements in handling the output of the mines.

RAIN

Yesterday was a broiler. The highest temperature was only 82 deg., but the humidity made the heat more uncomfortable than a dry heat registering several deg. higher would be. Duluth sweltered, but the rain last night was a relief. This morning is rather warm and threatening and rain is promised for tonight.

Fair weather prevailed a year ago today.

The sun rose this morning at 5:14 and it will set at 7:07, giving thirteen hours and fifty-three minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"During the last forty-eight hours a low pressure condition has moved from Alberta to Lake Superior, the principal result of which was high temperatures Sunday throughout the Rocky mountains and Missouri valley and light to copious showers in the vicinity of Lake Superior. Cooler weather prevails in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, the Dakotas and Wyoming in consequence of a decided increase in pressure over these districts. Areas of high barometer overlie Oregon and Washington and North Atlantic states. Another disturbance appears to be developing over British Columbia. The easterly movement of the Lake Superior depression will probably cause light showers at the Head of the Lakes this afternoon or tonight.

General Forecasts.

Chicago, Aug. 22.—Forecasts for twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m. Tuesday:

Wisconsin — Unsettled, probably showers tonight or Tuesday; cooler Tuesday and in extreme west portion tonight.

Minnesota—Partly cloudy tonight and Tuesday; cooler tonight and in east portion Tuesday.

Iowa—Partly cloudy tonight and Tuesday; cooler Tuesday and in west portion tonight.

Upper Lakes—Moderate to brisk southwest shifting to northwest winds; unsettled weather with showers tonight or Tuesday.

NEW MEDICAL INSPECTOR

Dr. J. B. Weston Engaged to Work With Dr. Schroder in Schools.

The medical inspection staff in the public schools of Duluth will be doubled this year, Dr. J. B. Weston having been appointed an inspector in addition to Dr. C. H. Schroder, who acted in that capacity during a part of the last school year. Another nurse will also be engaged to work with Miss Theresa Beattie.

The extension is in line with the avowed policy of the board to add to the inspection staff each year until the schools of the city will all be included in the number to be regularly inspected. Last year Dr. Schroder and Miss Beattie gave their time to five schools, and Dr. Weston and the nurse to be engaged will have charge of an equal number during the coming year.

The inspection, which was inaugurated about Feb. 1, has had excellent results, in the opinion of the members of the board, and it will be extended to include all the schools as rapidly as possible.

GOPHER CREW MAY GO EAST

Duluth Boys Invited to Take Part in New York Regatta.

If any way can be devised of financing the trip, the crack gig crew of the Gopher may participate in a regatta to be conducted by the New York naval militia on the Hudson river Sept. 24.

Commander Guy A. Eaton has received an invitation from the New York militia and the officers of the Minnesota militia are considering it. The Gopher crew has for two successive years easily defeated the other gig crews in the Great Lakes squadron and the boys would gladly visit New York to represent the Great Lakes naval militia in the regatta. The appropriation for the naval militia will not cover the trip, and it is doubtful if the Duluth boys will be able to make the trip on that account.

WARM PRAISE FOR MILITIA

Governor Eberhart Commends the Work of Naval Reserves.

Governor A. O. Eberhart, who inspected the U. S. S. Gopher Saturday afternoon and later embarked on the vessel with his staff for a trip to Isle Royale, is an enthusiastic admirer of the Minnesota naval militia. Speaking of this branch of the service, Governor Eberhart said he realized that the people at the Head of the Lakes were almost the only ones in the state who appreciated the work being done by the naval militia. He added that people in other parts of the state are beginning to estimate the value of this service at its true value, just as they are learning the truth about this part of the state in other ways.

"I was deeply impressed with what I saw on board the Gopher and look forward to an extremely interesting and enjoyable trip on the naval militia boat," he said. "Commander Eaton's command is one that deserves the commendation of all who are interested in the preservation of peace by preparedness for war, and the enthusiasm of the members of the company is warrant for the belief that should they be called upon for actual service in the event of war they would respond to a man. No small part of the credit for the good work that has been done belongs of right to Commander Eaton, whose inspiriting influence has been a strong factor in the upbuilding of the service. The officers associated with him are entitled to praise for their good work, as are all the members of the company.

"The state of Minnesota will gain much by the maintenance of a naval militia. The maneuvers of the Great Lakes squadron in Lape Superior next summer will attract a great deal of attention to our state as a state that possesses a great port, and from a military point of view these maneuvers will be of great value, I believe."

"STICKY" BUT NOT VERY HOT

The Mercury Did Not Get Above 82 Degs. Sunday.

It was warm in Duluth yesterday, but not so warm as many thought. The thermometer between 2 and 3 o'clock registered 82 deg.

There was, according to the weather bureau, humidity to the amount of 90 per cent in the atmosphere. This is what caused your clothes to stick to you and make you think it was a great deal warmer.

The rain last night did not amount to much. There was a rather brilliant display of lightning and it looked at first like a severe storm, but it finally passed over.

Today the weather man promised showers. He says also that it will be cooler.

If it was warm in Duluth yesterday, it was hot in Minneapolis and St. Paul. Twin City folk made a mad rush yesterday for the cooling places and they proved to be cooling in name only.

Don't fail to see annual exhibit of 1910 styles, Albrecht furs, at Spalding hotel, all this week.

FIND BODY IN THE HARBOR

The body of Andrew Anderson, 44 years of age, who disappeared Aug. 8, was found floating in the bay at the foot of Lake avenue Saturday afternoon. He was a plumber and was last employed by John Sheehan. The body was identified by papers found in the pockets.

It is not known whether his death was the result of an accident or of suicide. He is thought to have a family at Industrial. Little is known of him here. The body was taken to the undertaking rooms of Flood & Horgan and efforts are being made to locate his relatives.

About 400 miles northeast of Edmonton, in Alberta, Can., is an oil field which it is hoped will prove sufficiently productive for operation. The Canadian government has already expended about $30,000 in investigating the prospects. CROWD MAD AT OFFICER

Came Near Lynching Chisholm Policeman Who Wounded Mining Man.

James Moore, Victim of the Shooting, Near to Death at Hibbing.

Hibbing, Minn., Aug. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—James Moore, engineer at Whiteside mine, near Buhl, who was wounded by Officer Sconer of Chisholm at Longyear lake Saturday, is near death in a local hospital with a bullet hole through his back. The officer is under arrest at Chisholm and is being closely guarded to prevent his being lynched as several threats to that effect have been made.

Moore and George Alguin were driving across the bridge going from Chisholm to Buhl when their horse became unmanageable and began to plunge. About this time Officer Harley Sconer told them to slow down on the big bridge. They tried to tell him they could not control the horse and the officer began to shoot. One bullet struck their horse and another struck Moore in the back. The wounded man was hurried to Buhl, then brought here to the hospital, where with the aid of an x-ray it is hoped to locate the bullet. The wounded man is in dangerous condition today. He is 29 and has a wife and three children. If he should die a murder charge will be preferred against Sconer.

VIRGINIA'S PARK WELL PATRONIZED

First Sunday in New Pleasure Ground Draws Many People.

Virginia, Minn., Aug. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The opening of the new Olcott park yesterday afternoon was attended by several hundred people and although the day was very warm and sultry everybody present had a good time. The City band played concert at the park. the music of which was greatly enjoyed by all.

The band cleared about $125 from its dance last Friday night and the members are much pleased over the result.

Quite a large number of Virginians attended the picnic given at Swan Lake by the Hibbing Red Men yesterday, going over on the Great Northern, also a goodly number of Virginia and Chisholm teams.

Wild Bear Visits Park.

A wild bear caused quite a commotion in the vicinity of the Olcott park Saturday afternoon. Men and boys with sticks, clubs and other weapons chased the animal for some time, but it finally succeeded in making its escape into the woods. Several bear have been seen in the outskirts of the city of late and it is said that the scarcity of food in the north woods is the reason of their appearance in this vicinity.

CHAUFFEUR GOT SCARED.

Turns Machine Against Horse, Causing Injury to Boy.

Virginia, Minn., Aug. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Harry Rooney, the 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Rooney was riding one of his father's work horses Saturday afternoon when an automobile frightened the animal. The driver of the machine undertook to pass the horse but the animal plunged towards the machine and was hit by its rear end, throwing the horse and rider to the ground and in the mixup the boy fell under the horse and machine. In the fall the boy received a fraction of the right leg in two places below the knee and the shin bone was also badly lacerated. Charles Anderson was the chauffeur and it is said in the excitement lost control of the machine, being unable to steer it away from the frightened animal.

Wise Picnickers
Take Along
Grape-Nuts FOOD
Ready-Cooked, Delicious and Nourishing.

In making up lunch for picnickers, some form of substantial food that can not easily be injured in transit, should be supplied, and the most ideal article for that purpose is Grape-Nuts. This food comes in a 15-cent package, is already thoroughly cooked and can be used either dry or with the addition of some milk or cream.

Grape-Nuts food is used by some epicures in frying fish, for its adds a delightful flavour and is naturally superior to the ordinary crumbed crackers or corn meal for this purpose.

In addition to the convenience of Grape-Nuts food, its highly concentrated food value should not be lost sight of.

The Miller & Kakela pool room was also raided as well as several other places until thirty-two were arrested. Nearly all were able to give bail when arraigned before Judge Prince, but some were not and were sent to jail.

REV. T. S. OADAMS IS GIVEN PRAISE

Popular Two Harbors Minister Is Unanimously Invited to Remain.

Two Harbors, Minn., Aug. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The fourth quarterly conference services were held in the First Methodist church of this city last night, Rev. E. K. Copper of Duluth preaching the sermon.

The reports of committees showed that the church is closing a successful year. The work of the pastor, Rev. T. Stanley Oadams, was highly commended and he was unanimously invited to remain for a second year. The pastor responded in words highly appreciative of the loyal support given him by the people of his church.

A resolution recognizing the faithful service rendered by Rev. E. K. Copper, district superintendent and expressive of the pleasure afforded the church by his visits, was also unanimously adopted. A resolution of sympathy was extended to Mrs. Lizzie Boston, the only surviving member of the church and for many years one of its most loyal and devoted supporters, who lies dangerously ill at her home in this city.

A new pipe organ is to be installed in the church costing $2,100, for which the money has been raised, the contract having been previously awarded to an organ company.

POUNDMASTER BADLY NEEDED

Stray Stock Doing Much Damage to Fine Coleraine Lawns.

Coleraine, Minn., Aug. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The village recently passed an ordinance prohibiting the running of cattle and horses at large. Some fine boulevards have been started and upon the completion of the new cement walks and curbing, for which contracts have been let, many more boulovards will be completed in the residence section of town. Notices have been posted relative to the stock ordinance, but a poundmaster has not been appointed. Horses are still running loose at night and a large herd of cattle from neighboring places make daily pilgrimages through the streets and pasture on the freshly seeded boulevards and some of the best lawns. A poundmaster will doubtless soon corral these wandering animals in the baseball park.

TWO DELIGHTFUL PERFORMANCES

Mrs. Fiske's Manhattan Company a Splendidly Balanced Organization.

One little feature of the program used by Mrs. Fiske for "Pillars of Society" and "Becky Sharpe" gives an insight into the standard of her work. The program did not give the list of players, followed by "AND MRS. FISKE" in large black type. Her name appeared down near the bottom of the program in type the same size as that used for the names of the other players.

Mrs. Fiske buried her personality, as far as she could, in the same way. It was not Mrs. Fiske who appeared as Becky Sharpe, but Rebecca Sharpe, herself. Not in years has a more nearly perfect company been seen in Duluth than the Manhattan company of Harrison Grey Fiske. Every member of it was a delight. They were not merely "support" for a star, but they all seemed to feel that they were a necessary part of the company, and their work showed it. Mrs. Fiske, of course, was the attraction that brought the greater part of the audience to the theater, but Mrs. Fiske was not one whit better than a score of other members of the company, and that is not said in depreciation of her work. She forgot she was a star long enough to be Becky Sharpe and Lona Hessel, and two of the most delightful performances Duluth has been privileged to witness in many months was the result.

As Thackery's well-known characters stepped on to the scene, one by one, at the evening performance, every person in the audience who had read the book gave a little gasp of pleasure. The characters seemed to have sprung bodily from the pages of "Vanity Fair."

The curtain went up with old Miss Crawley, Florine Arnold and Briggs, Mabel Reed, occupying the stage. The fiery, selfish, vulgar, old aunt, as portrayed by Miss Arnold, was delicious, and Briggs could not have been more lifelike.

Henry Stephenson was the strutting, swaggering, blustering, weak Rawden Crawley to the life, and Wilfred Buckland seemed to ooze the sanctimonious hypocrisy of his brother Pitt. It seemed that there would have to be a weak spot some place, and that some disappointment would follow, but when old Sir Pitt Crowley limped on, the dirty old miser of "Vanity Fair" seemed to live again. Edward Mackay caught just the spirit of George Osborn with his weak conceit, delightfully, and William Dobbin, the nearest to a hero in this heroless tale, was splendidly portrayed by Sheldon Lewis. Alice John was Amelia, the sweet clinging vine, and Mrs. Fiske a delight as Becky. It was a little hard to appreciate Becky in the first act, for, it must be admitted that it was hard to imagine Mrs. Fiske as the youthful Becky of the early part of the tale, but she more than made up for it in the last two acts, showing Becky during her London successes, and in the last chapter of her life. There was no difficulty in recognizing Thackeray's Becky then.

One of the cleverest tricks of stage craft shown, was in introducing Joseph Sedley and the Marquis of Steyne in the second act, by way of a stairway at the back center of the stage. When Harold Russell blustered in, everyone who had read the book knew before he spoke, that it was Joseph Sedley of Bogleywollah, India, gourmet and coward. The entrance of Holbrook Blinn, the Marquis of Steyne, was equally effective, perhaps even more so. Holbrook Blinn will be remembered as Mrs. Fiske's leading man in "Salvation Nell." He is one of the most finished and effective actors that Duluth has seen in recent years, and his Marquis of Steyne stood out even in such a company as that with which Mrs. Fiske is surrounded.

"Pillars of Society," Ibsen's least gloomy drama, was no less delightful Mrs. Fiske herself, was probably even more satisfying as Lona Hessel, than as "Becky," but the roles are so entirely different that a comparison is impossible.

The thoroughly artistic manner in which even the details of the two productions were carried out, is shown by the incidental music, and that this was appreciated was shown by the applause with which the orchestra selections were greeted both afternoon and evening.

The house was completely sold out for the evening performance, and there was a good attendance at the matinee.

MOST MODERN OF THEATERS

Chicago Architect Says New Orpheum Ranks With the Best.

J. E. O. Pridmore, the Chicago architect, who planned the new Orpheum theater, is in the city for the opening performance tonight.

"The construction by G. G. Hartley of the new Orpheum theater gives to Duluth a playhouse which will rank among the most up to date in this country," said Mr. Pridmore today.

"It embodies many unique and original features which have been used with marked success in some other theater, notably the College and Cort theaters in Chicago.

"First among these innovations may be mentioned the system of construction used in the balcony and gallery double cantilever style (one cantilever on another) as first used in the Cort theater, Chicago; this with the object of total elimination of interior columns and obstructions and the concentration of the seats stageward, or as near as possible to the action on the stage permissable with perfect sight lines.

"Another entirely novel feature is the plan and alignment of the boxes, also on the cantilever system and so built that every succeeding row of seats is higher than the row in front of it. These boxes are claimed to be the most perfectly constructed for sight lines in any theater in this country and are a revelation to any one who has sat and craned his neck and profaned the air in the conventional theater box seats. No more craning, no more profanity.

"The ground plan of the theater and auditorium is the ultra American type evolved during the last ten or fifteen years from a renewed study of the Greek classic plan.

"One feature which has been installed is the patent safety ventilating apparatus designed to protect the audience in the emergency of a stage fire by drawing the flames away from the auditorium and up to the stage roof. This apparatus works automatically and is always in readiness. The building has been designed in strict compliance with the most stringent building laws in force in any city of the United States, and indeed, whereas usually the board of underwriters regulations are not lived up to only so far as the city laws require, in this case the most exacting requirements of the insurance underwriters have been complied with.

"The accostic properties and the sight lines have been given very considerable attention and the results will prove a huge delight and pleasure to the Duuth citizens.

STOCK COMPANY CLOSES SEASON.

The last performance of the "Gilded Fool" by the Forbes Stock company was given at the Lyceum theater last night. Immediately after the performance some of the actors left the city on the night trains for various points.

Most of the company will go with Mr. Forbes to Brooklyn, N. Y., where they will play in stock at least a part of the coming theatrical season.

The present season has been successful and Mr. Forbes announces that he will be back with Duluth people next summer.

"THE SQUAW MAN" OPENS ENGAGEMENT.

H. E. Pierce & Co.'s Associate Players, who open a week's engagement at the Lyceum tonight in "The Squaw Man" arrived in the city this morning over the Northwestern road, twenty-five strong, from Eau Claire, Wis.

Never in the history of that city has the theater going public been given the chance of seeing the latest productions put on by a stock company consisting of such prominent players as during the past week's engagement of this company. Not only have H. E. Pierce & Co.'s Associate Players broken all records for attendance during the past week, but they also built up a large following there.

This organization of well known stock players will present for the first time in this city, at popular prices, Edwin Milton Boyle's well known play, "The Squaw Man." Will Jossey has been attracting considerable attention for his fine portrayal of the character of Jim Carston, the ranchman hero of this play. Miss Blanche Douglas, a leading woman of great promise, will doubtless make many friends by her performance of Lady Diana in "The Squaw Man," the part created by Julie Opp. H. E. Pierce & Co., under whose personal direction this company is appearing, have surrounded these two stars with a large and capable company, many of whom are well known here Notwithstanding the unusually heavy expense attached to the putting on of a production of this magnitude by a stock company the same reasonable scale of prices that has been the rule at the Lyceum all during the present summer will continue throughout this engagement.

GAME ENDS IN ROW.

Negaunee and Ishpeming Fans Nearly Come to Blows.

Negaunee, Mich., Aug. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Sunday's game between Negaunee and Ishpeming ended in a row, the game being called the first half of the eighth inning by Umpire McLaughlin, who gave the game to Negaunee. The umpire called a local player safe at a base but the Ishpeming fans could not see it in that light. Disgraceful quarrels, nearly resulting in fist fights between mine officials and the captains of the respective nines were frequent during the game. Negaunee won from Ishpeming Saturday by the score of 3 to 2. Marquette beat Crystal Falls, 3 to 2.

SKELETON OF MAN FOUND

Mystery of Disappearance of William Langen Three Years Ago Solved.

Wandered Off Into the Woods From Camp and Perished.

The skeleton of William Langen, inspector of the health department, who disappeared Sept. 14, 1907, was found in the woods two miles from the end of the Woodland car line Saturday, by John Walsh and J. B. Peterson.

Identification was positive because of a health officer's star found with the bones in the locality where the inspector was last seen alive.

The skeleton was face downwards, with the finger bones sunk deeply into the moist soil, indicating that he had died either in a fit of delerium tremens or, in a last effort to drag himself along on his hands and knees. It is said that he suffered from alcoholism some time previous to his disappearance.

Langen, with J. C. Woodward, Alfred Olson and George Smart, went to the end of the Woodland car line for a day's outing. He lay down for a sleep and, according to the story told by others in the party, left in a fit of anger when he was awakened by being struck in the leg with a beer bottle. It was stated that he announced his intention of going back to the city and started off at a rapid gait through the brush. He failed to return and several searching parties failed to locate his body or find any trace of him.

The men who found the skeleton were clearing land in the vicinity. They immediately notified the coroner, who ordered the remains sent to the undertaking rooms of Flood & Horgan. No marks of violence were apparent. A gold watch was found in one of his pockets.

Langen was commonly known as "Billy Bugs," and was active politically in city affairs. He is said to have relatives at Columbus, Ohio, and a brother at Houston, Texas, but efforts to locate them since the discovery of his skeleton and at the time of his disappearance, proved futile. Several former friends in the city have volunteered to contribute towards his funeral expenses. He also had about half a month's pay coming from the city.

CONCERNING WOMAN.

The following social item from the Los Angeles Examiner of Sunday will be of interest to many Duluthians, as the bride, who was formerly Miss Marie Frederick, is well known in Duluth where the family lived for many years. The Examiner says:

"Miss Marie Burtus Frederick, daughter of Charles Louis Frederick of 2113 Oak street, was married Friday afternoon, Aug. 12, at 3 o'clock, in Christ church, the Rev. Baker P. Lee officiating. None but immediate relatives were present, including Mr. and Mrs. Drew Dunn of Pasadena, Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Vandeveer of Los Angeles, and the groom's mother, Mrs. Rosalind Beasley. The bride, who was gowned in white cloth, with large black picture hat covered with black willow plumes, was attended by her sister, Mrs. Roy Penniwell, as matron of honor. Mrs. Penniwell was herself a bride but a little over a year ago. Mr. Penniwell acted as best man.

"Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Beasley left for a wedding trip. They will return about Oct. 1. The bride, who was formerly a resident of Duluth, Minn., is an accomplished musician, having mastered the piano and violin. For several years in New York she was a pupil of Valenza, and is the possessor of a coloratura soprano voice of sweetness and charm. Mr. Beasley is connected with the Amalgamated Oil company of this city."

TRY THIS DINNER

Liver Soup.

One-half pound of liver, three or four young carrots, two onions (small), a good sized turnip. Cut the liver into strips and fry in butter; when done, take it up, and in the same pan fry the vegetables, cut small: Put all in a saucepan (with the liver), add three pints of weak stock; a seasoning of salt, pepper, a small bunch of herbs, a piece of lemon peel, all tied in a piece of muslin, and simmer for three hours. Take out the bag of herbs and strain the soup through a sieve or colander. Return it to the pan; boil up once, and thicken with flour made into a thin paste with cold water. Stir till thick, and serve with strips of toasted bread.

Baked Mackerel.

Four mackerel, some forcemeat, about three ounces of butter. Clean the fish and take out the roes. Make a forcemeat with a mixture of minced bacon, or cold cooked meat; a little finely minced suet; some savory herbs, including parsley; a little grated lemon peel; some minced onion; a seasoning of salt, pepper, cayenne, mace and nutmeg, and add a beaten egg. Mix all this with bread crumbs, divide equally, and fill the four fish and sew them up. Dust them with flour; put them in a buttered baking dish with the roes and bake for half an hour, basting them with the butter at frequent intervals.

Vegetables.

New potatoes cut into strips and fried crisp and brown in boiling fat.

Gooseberry and Rice Pudding.

Two pounds of gooseberries—put them into a colander and pour water through them. This will free them from any dust or impurity. Butter a pie dish, put in a layer of berries, sprinkle some sugar over them; add a layer of a quarter of a pound of rice, boiled; then more berries, sugar and rice, till the fruit and rice is used. The top layer should be rice. Scatter bread crumbs over the top and put little dabs of butter over it. A little water may be added. Bake in a moderate oven until the fruit is cooked.

THE EVENING STORY

LOVE AND LOGIC.

By Julia Masterson.

"Do you know why I love you, William?" she said. "It is because you are so logical."

And as for William, he kissed her fondly and he tried to look as full of wisdom as the limitations of nature permitted.

"You know," she said, "father always says that if I had been a boy he would have made me a lawyer, too. He says I have the legal temperament."

And as for William, he kissed her again with the air of a man of intellect.

"If there is one thing I admire," she said, "it is intelligence."

(William looked as gravely intelligent as he could.)

"For, after all, everything is founded on reason. William, I have been thinking over a few things. You don't mind if I ask, do you?"

"Certainly not," said William.

And he leaned back in a sort of a judicial attitude and prepared himself to pass judgment upon any little points that she might care to submit to his superior intellect.

"Now, when we first loved each other," she began, "you wrote to me every day. Last week I didn't get a letter. Now why is that, I wonder?"

"Well, you see, I've been so busy lately, and besides, I call so often, and I know you know I love you, and think about you all the more, besides."

"H'm. You have been so busy lately. But, William, weren't you quite as busy a year ago?"

"Oh, dear, no!"

"In what respect are you busier now?"

William fidgeted a little.

"Are your hours any longer at the office?" she asked.

"No-no."

"So, really, then, William, you are not busier than you were a year ago. Let us now take up a second reason. You say you call so often now."

"Three times a week,' she repeated. "But didn't you call as often as that a year ago?"

"Did I?"

"Did you! William! Don't you remember?"

"Come to think of it, I suppose you're right."

"So you see, that disposes of the second point. You say, though, that you know I know you love me, and I told you I loved you, too. Wasn't that sufficient? What more could there be?"

"I wasn't sure," said William, with some hesitation.

"But you had no reason to doubt me had you?"

"N-no."

"So that disposes of that. And, finally, you say you think about me all the more. Is that true, William?"

"Yes, yes! If you only knew how much I think about you now."

"But, William, a year ago you told me that all your thoughts were filled with me."

"So they were."

"If that is so, and I do not doubt you, William, how can you think of me more now than you did then?"

William breathed hard.

"It was all true what you said a year ago, was it not, William?"

'Certainly."

"And your thoughts were filled with me?"

"Yes."

'Then how can you think of me more now?"

"I don't know."

"So you see, dear, there is really no reason why you shouldn't write to me as often now as you did a year ago, is there?"

'No."

She looked at him with a melancholy triumph.

"Well, William," she said, "what have you to say?"

"Nothing," gasped William.

"Dear William," she said, "you mustn't take it so much to heart. We mustn't quarrel, you know. Kiss and be friends."

'What sense of logic is there in a kiss?" asked William then, recovering himself.

"What sense?"

"Yes, what sense?" And, straightening himself up in his seat, he assumed an air of determination, and said, "Katherine!"

"Yes, William."

"You have said you have a legal temperament. I think you have. But is there, do you think, any romance in any musty volume of the statutes?"

"Why, no."

"Would you expect to find a lover in the law reports?"

"N-no."

"Then why do you argue with me? You can argue with everybody, but you can't love everybody. Not very well! Hereafter, shall I greet you with an algebraic formula, or shall I greet you as I have always done?"

"Please, William!"

"Instead of singing together, shall we discuss the difference between law and equity?"

"No, William."

"Instead of sending you flowers shall I write you what you would consider logical essays? What logic is there in flowers?"

"Oh, William!"

He made a grand gesture.

"Shall I now proceed to explain logarithims to you?" he demanded. "Or—and his voice fell to the lower register—"or shall I tell you how I feel when the moonlight gleams upon your hair?"

"Oh, tell me how you feel," she whispered, "when the monlight gleams upon my hair."

And there the duologue ended.

THE DOCTOR'S ADVICE

Value of Forty Winks.

The first sleep is the soundest—after the first hour the intensity of sleep slowly diminishes—hence the value of forty winks after dinner in quickly recuperating shattered powers. Temperature and vitality are lowest at about 2 a. m., so that two hours' sleep before midnight are worth four thereafter. Nature has no rule as to the length of sleep, except that men need less sleep than women, since women are the more sensitive creatures, and a woman's heart beats five times more a minute than a man's. Sleep should be just so long that when you wake in the morning a stretch and a yawn only are necessary to land you in a daytime of vigor.

Ingrowing Toenails.

For ingrowing toenails you have to blame ill-fitting shoes. The trouble is liable to occur if the nail is cut away too deeply at the angles. Wear roomy shoes with broad toes, and cut the nail square, and don't pare or curve the sides. When the soreness is present, pack twice a day a small piece of oiled cotton wool between the nail and the overhanging flesh with a probe or the edge of a clean knife. Increase the quantity of wool gradually till the edge of the nail is uncovered, and it should then be inserted under it until a cure has been effected.

What the Dyspeptic May Eat.

Toast should be eaten in preference to bread, but brown bread is often beneficial. White fish, eggs, nourishing soups, and milk pudding should be largely used; spinach, French beans, boiled celery, butter, cream, olive oil, most fruits, except the very acid ones, provided they are stewed but not sweetened too much, will be found to agree with the dyspeptic. There are cases, however, in which certain ordinarily digestible articles of food do not suit the patient, who must make up his mind to leave them alone. Potatoes are sometimes productive of indigestion, but not always; they are best baked. Where there is a dyspeptic the frying pan should not be used, as fried foods are the most difficult of digestion. The following is a simple diet table for anyone who suffers from dyspepsia due to gastric incompetency:

Breakfast—An egg, toast and butter, tea or a cup of beef tea.

Dinner—Soup, boiled fish with some simple sauces, roast beef or lamb, or chicken, baked potatoes and any vegetable except cabbage. Toast or stale bread. Salad. Fresh fruit or milk pudding.

Tea—Very little meat, bread, a green vegetable, but no potato; stewed fruit or custard.

ABOLISH THE HONEYMOON? NEVER!

By POLLY PAGET

Many wise and elderly authors and authoresses have written learned exhortations on the necessity of the abolition of the honeymoon. Honeymoons are a mistake, we are told. They are a frivolous preparation for the humdrum of married life. The bride is spoiled for the toilsome round of housekeeping; the bridegroom is bored by having nothing to do all day long but bill and coo.

The reformers take a special delight in attacking old conventions and customs, purely because they are old and conventional. And the honeymoon is a very old institution — as old as marriage. But it is possible to approve of many old customs without necessarily being hide-bound.

It is not pig-headed to like eating when you are hungry; and sleeping when you are tired. The honeymoon is nearly as instinctive as these. The man and the woman who have just mated want to go away and be alone, partly because they know they will garner a store of golden memories for the future.

The world is a hard place, and plenty of couples, looking back on their honeymoon, look back on the brightest and sweetest adventure of their lives.

The memory is a priceless one, and both cherish it—wisely. It is not that the work-worm wife says, "Our life isn't now what it was when we were honeymooning," or that the husband is always secretly comparing his faded wife with his blushing bride. Married people aren't like that, whatever cynics may say.

True, married life isn't a long-drawnout honeymoon. No sane person wants it to be, or expects it to be. The honeymoon is a beautiful and decorated title-page to the book of matrimony. The book could do without the title page—but the title page makes it seemly.

There are silly honeymoons, of course—honeymoons too extravagant and luxurious, too, much given up to display and ostentation. The bridegroom takes his bride to a costly hotel, the like of which she will never inhabit again. They live an artificial, stagey existence for a week or two, posing as plutocrats, and feverishly acting an untruth, not only to the onlooking world, but to each other. This is a fatuous beginning for any journey that is to be taken seriously; and when the bride is transferred to a poky little suburban semi-detached cottage, or it may be a Harlem flat, she may be inclined to turn up her nose at it—and also at hubby. But that exaggerated type of honeymoon is dying out.

In this particular respect, indeed, it may be admitted that love actually is becoming "sensible." Lovers are not fools; they are magnificently reasonable. Their love is not a pretense, and needs no pretense aids, such as the costly hotel, the expensive dresses, and the Blue Hungarian orchestra at dinner. These ornaments are only an insult to their love.

Honeymoons are not going to be abolished in a hurry, be sure of that. It is the idle and weary and rich who want to abolish honeymoons — and, even so, they only want to abolish other folk's honeymoons, not their own. The workers know that the honeymoon custom is a right and fine custom, and hubby and wifey, starting hand-in-hand, would as soon abolish themselves as their honeymoon.

TAFT NOT TO MAKE REPLY

Rumors of Breach Between Beverly and Oyster Bay Are Ignored.

President Is Preparing Papers That Will State His Position.

Beverly, Mass., Aug. 22.—It is becoming more and more apparent that no direct answer will be made here to the reports of a break between President Taft and Col. Roosevelt, and the charges alleged as a foundation for the rupture.

Although the silence of the last few days is strictly maintained, it is believed now that President Taft intends to make his position clear in the letter he is preparing for the Republican campaign committee hand book and the speech he is preparing for the conservation congress at St. Paul.

Mr. Taft has been working on these two documents almost cintinuously for the last two days. He realizes the importance of what he may have to say at that time, and is devoting more care to the letter and the speech than to any public utterances he has made since his inauguration.

Will Stand By Results.

With the important work he has in hand, Mr. Taft evidently has concluded that this is not the time to enter into a newspaper controversy with any one. As to his administration, what it has accomplished in fulfillment of the party platform pledges and what it intends to do in the future in the way of recommendations to congress, President Taft will soon make clear, and it is said he is willing to stand or fall by what he has to say.

That the president is still intent upon bringing about a situation in the Republican party as closely allied to harmony as possible, is evidenced by the fact that his campaign committee letter is reported to contain a declaration that there is no desire on his part or on the part of any one closely identified with the administration, to read any person out of the party.

No Fight With Insurgents.

This is taken here to mean that the president has no fight with the insurgents, but is glad to welcome them as Republicans. During the last session of congress, the president clearly defined his position as to what constituted a Republican. He held that all men who were willing to support measures which clearly were willing to support measures clearly were framed in compliance with pledges in the party platform, were entitled to be regarded as members of the party, no matter what their position might be as to the house rules or the speakership. It is also said here that President Taft will point to the fact that all of the legislation he has recommended and which has been enacted has been in line with the progressive policy he outlined at the beginning of his administration.

So far as he consistently can do so, the president will endeavor to placate all factions of the party. He believes the party already is moving ahead and he wants all its members to "pull at the oars."

POSTCARDS TO ADVERTISE CITY

Northern Pacific Recognizes Duluth in Its Advertising Matter.

The Northern Pacific Railroad company has finally seen the light.

Postcards descriptive of Duluth have been issued in connection with the company's advertising matter. There are twelve cards in the collection, and one of them is a view of Duluth's harbor.

Duluth people have had a feeling for some years that the railroad companies have neglected the city in their advertising matter. Up until a short time ago when the Commercial club got busy on the subject, Duluth was hardly mentioned even in the ordinary railroad pamphlets.

Some of the roads have recently given the city more publicity and the fact that the Northern Pacific has taken the matter up is a fair indication that other roads will follow suit.

MINE WORKERS CLOSE SESSION

Lewis Faction's Filibuster Wins Changes in the Resolutions.

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 22.—The special international convention of the United Mine Workers adjourned sine die early Sunday, after adopting the substitute report with two amendments, and practically all of the delegates with the exception of the international executive board have returned home after being in session here ten days.

The substitute report, submitted by William Green, former president of the Ohio district, with the two amendments, provides for an assessment of $1 per week on all miners working; the indorsement of all strikes; the dismissal of international organizers, and a criticism of the international board.

By filibustering, the Lewis faction kept the substitute from coming to a vote until all of the strikes had been indorsed and the assessment included in the provision.

Lewis Uses Pruning Knife.

Before taking a vote, President Lewis announced that all points in the substitute conflicting with the constitution would not become law. He declared the dismissal of the organizers, and the section criticising the international board, which, he said, had not exceeded its authority in Illinois, were unconstitutional.

It is estimated that the convention cost the miners of the country close to $100,000.

AMERICANS ARRESTED IN THE ISLE OF PINES.

Havana, Aug. 22.—Eight Americans, names unknown, were arrested on the Isle of Pines Sunday morning on the charge of homicide and arson, the particulars of which were not made public here. Great excitement followed the arrest, the American residents of the Isle of Pines threatening resistance to the authorities and the forcible release of the prisoners.

THREE ATTEMPTS TO WRECK TRAINS

Man Is Arrested at Waukegan and Sleuths Have Battle With Others.

Chicago, Aug. 22.—With the arrest of Patrick Zanetta at Waukegan, Ill., it has become known that three attempts were made during last week to wreck trains on the Chicago & Northwestern road between here and Milwaukee.

Zanetta was arrested by railroad detectives just as he was placing ties on the track near Waukegan, half an hour before a fast train was due from Minneapolis. The detectives, who had been in hiding near the track, overpowered Zanetta. Just as they placed handcuffs on him three men jumped from bushes near the track and began firing. The detectives returned fire and the men disappeared.

The first attempt to wreck a train was discovered Tuesday night when an employe found a pile of ties and scrap iron on the track just before a train was due.

On Friday night another pile of ties was found on the track in a lonely spot, just as a train was due. Since then detectives patrolled the tracks south of Waukegan.

Zanetta refuses to make any statement as to his purpose in placing the obstruction on the track.

KNOWS PART OF MONKEY TALK

Prof. Garner Says He Has Learned Nine of Their Words.

New York, Aug. 22.—Prof. Richard L. Garner, who believes that monkeys have an articulate language, returned last night by the French liner La Touraine from four years study among the chimpanzees and gorillas in the depth of the African wildernesses.

"Much that I have said," cautioned the professor, "has been misquoted, therefore please be conservative. I have tabulated twelve or fourteen sounds which I believe to be words used by monkeys in communicating with one another, and I believe they have in all twenty or more such words. Nine of these I believe I know. I have taught one monkey the French word for fire—feu. When I would light a match she would call 'feu' as soon as the flame showed, but would remain silent when a burnt match was shown. A hot cinder would bring the word feu, and so would a camp fire."

Brought Susie Back.

Prof. Garner brought with him a female chimpanzee named "Susie," one of the most intelligent of his pupils, which he will submit to the psychological department of the University of Pennsylvania if the desire is expressed. To show the chimpanzee's intelligence, Prof. Garner asked Susie for a piece of orange she was eating, and she surrendered it. A passenger held out a piece of gum. Susie started to put it in her mouth.

"Don't eat that," commanded the professor. Susie gave the gum back.

"Susie," said the gratified professor, "love your pop."

BREWERS LEAVE FOR THEIR HOMES

The Northwestern Association Holds Regular Monthly Meeting in Zenith City.

After having held their August meeting in Duluth, the out-of-town members of the Northwestern Master Brewers' association left yesterday afternoon and last night for their homes. The meetings are held monthly in the different cities of the Northwest.

The business session was held Saturday night at Eagles' hall. A large delegation of master brewers and their wives came up from St. Paul and Minneapolis Saturday in a private car.

The Duluth brewers acted as hosts, and August Fitger delivered the address of welcome. President Neubert of Minneapolis responded. There was but little business of importance transacted at the meeting held Saturday. The visitors were anxious to get it over that they might give over their time to sightseeing.

A automobile trip was made around the boulevard. Yesterday the whole party was taken up the river in motor boats. They landed at a point below Fond du Lac where lunch was served under the trees.

DREXEL'S HIGH FLIGHT GIVEN OFFICIAL O. K.

London, Aug. 22.—The stamp of scientific approval has been placed upon the world's altitude record for an aeroplane, 6,752 feet, established by J. Armstrong Drexel, the American aviator. The Kew observatory, after testing the barograph carried by Drexel, issued a certificate of its accuracy and the correctness of the figures. The flight was accomplished the evening of Aug. 11, when Mr. Drexel ascended from Lanark, Scotland, passed far above the clouds, and after two hours steady climbing descended near Cobbinshaw loch, twelve miles from Lanark. He suffered severely from cold at the extreme altitude.

JOHN ERNIS BEATS WESTON'S WALK RECORD.

Sacramento, Cal., Aug. 22.—Seventy-eight days out of New York City by actual walking time and three weeks ahead of the coast-to-coast walking record of 105 days set by Edward Payson Weston. John Ernis, aged 68, arrived in this city at 4 o'clock Sunday morning and rested prior to continuing his walk to San Francisco. He expects to reach there Wednesday morning, thus making a new walking record of 81 days across the continent.

PASTOR STEALS FROM STUDENTS

Says He Needed Money---He Expects to Learn Trade in Prison.

Zanesville, Ohio, Aug. 22.—Rev. A. Huberch, pastor of the Miltonburg, Ohio, Lutheran Evangelical church, was arrested Sunday charged with the theft of seventeen watches and other jewelry valued at $300 from students of the Eden Theological seminary at Clayton, Mo., where he was on probation. The pastor said he stole because he needed money and that on account of the suspense he was glad he had been caught. He said he would learn some trade in prison so as to be useful upon gaining liberty. He expects to be expelled from the ministry.

DIRECTORY OF NURSES.

According to a directory of Duluth nurses there are 140 of them in this city. About ninety are so-called "regular" nurses, having been graduated from a hospital. The nurses have little difficulty in keeping themselves employed. Their sphere of activity embraces Western Minnesota, Northern Wisconsin and the Mesaba range.

TWO OHIO BANKERS END SIX YEARS IN PRISON.

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 22.—O. C. Lilley and C. M. Travers, former Cleveland bankers, were released from the penitentiary Saturday after completing terms of six years for violation of the federal banking laws. They left for Cleveland.

ACCUSED OF BURNING WIFE.

Georgia Man Charged With Pouring Gasoline on Her.

Macon, Ga., Aug. 22.—William Walker is under arrest here charged with the murder of his wife, Alma, on whom, it is alleged, he poured gasoline today while she was starting a kitchen fire.

A negro woman who was with Mrs. Walker before her death, says Mrs. Walker kept saying "Will did it—Will did it." Walker maintains his wife's burning to death was an accident.

IRON AND STEEL REVIEW

New York, Aug. 22.—Business in iron and steel products is steadily contracting. Specifications as well as new orders for finished steel are smaller. The steel corporation is now producing pig iron at the rate of 70 per cent of total capacity. This means that the corporation is turning out steel at the rate of about 11,700,000 tons annually and pig iron about 1,000,000 tons less. Independent steel interests are operating about the same proportion of capacity. These figures indicate a decrease of 3 to 5 per cent in the last few weeks. It is probable that the decrease in the total production of pig iron by all interests this month will be less than in July, probably slightly under the rate of 25,400,000 tons annually, while consumptive requirements are estimated at the rate of 24,000,000 tons annually. Stocks are still being carried on furnace books aggregating 1,800,000 tons. It is thus evident that the readjustment in pig iron has not been completed.

In finished steel productions, the wire trade is the only one displaying any real activity. The railroads are still placing only mandatory orders for equipment. The New York Central railroad has not yet awarded the contract for its New York terminal, requiring 10,000 tons of steel, but it will probably be placed with the American Bridge company before the end of the month. Steel building works is light and may continue so throughout the month. Last week total contracts for fabricated steel aggregated only 15,000 tons, of which the American Bridge company booked only 3,200 tons. The principal contract was 2,000 tons for the Connecticut river bridge, awarded to the Pennsylvania Steel company; the plain material to be furnished by the Eastern Steel company. Bids have gone in on 2,900 tons for the Sloane building on Fifth avenue.

The principal feature in pig iron is the negotiation by the largest cast iron pipe manufacturers for 19,000 tons of southern iron. Steel making iron in the Central West has declined 25 cents per ton.

SIX KILLED IN WRECK ON CENTRAL VERMONT.

Northfield, Vt., Aug. 22.—Six men were killed, one was probably fatally injured and seven others were badly hurt as the result of a head-on collision between two freight trains on the Central Vermont railroad at Northfield Falls, two miles north of here, yesterday. All the dead and injured belonged to the train crews.

Save the Babies.

INFANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twentytwo per cent., or nearly one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirtyseven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen!

We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save a majority of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium, or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestions, sickness, death. Castoria operates exactly the reverse, but you must see that it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. Castoria causes the blood to circulate properly, opens the pores of the skin and allays fever.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. A. F. Peeler, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria in many cases and have always found it an efficient and speedy remedy."

Dr. Frederick D. Rogers, of Chicago, Ill., says: I have found Fletcher's Castoria very useful in the cure of complaints of children.

Dr. William C. Bloomer, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: In my practice I am glad to recommend your Castoria, knowing it is perfectly harmless and always satisfactory.

Dr. E. Down, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria in my practice for many years with great satisfaction to myself and benefit to my patients."

Dr. Edward Parrish, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria in my own household with good results, and have advised several patients to use it for its mild laxative effect and freedom from harm."

Dr. J. B. Elliott, of New York City, says: "Having during the past six years prescribed your Castoria for infantile stomach disorders, I most heartily commend its use. The formula contains nothing deleterious to the most delicate of children."

Dr. C. G. Sprague, of Omaha, Neb., says: "Your Castoria is an ideal medicine for children, and I frequently prescribe it. While I do not advocate the indiscriminate use of proprietary medicines, yet Castoria is an exception for conditions which arise in the care of children."

Dr. J. A. Parker, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria holds the esteem of the medical profession in a manner held by no other proprietary preparation. It is a sure and reliable medicine for infants and children. In fact, it is the universal household remedy for infantile ailments."

Dr. H. F. Merrill, of Augusta, Me., says: "Castoria is one of the very finest and most remarkable remedies for infants and children. In my opinion your Castoria has saved thousands from an early grave. I can furnish hundreds of testimonials from this locality as to its efficiency and merits."

THE CITY ASSESSMENT.

After quoting an editorial published in The Herald Aug. 3, 1908, approving the action of the county board of equalization in reducing the real estate assessments in the city of Duluth, a correspondent in the Open Court Saturday evening asked: "Will you kindly indicate the reason for change of opinion over two years ago, and, with reference to the proposed increases by the county board, let us have a definite report as to wherein the city will be benefited."

The Herald gladly answers that question. In the first place, there has been no change of opinion on its part to be accounted for. Two years ago certain city officials wished to make radical increases in the total assessment of the city in order to raise more revenue for city purposes. The Herald protested against that plan, stating that it meant adding a large amount in state and county taxes to the burden upon the taxpayers of Duluth. In spite of general opposition to the plan, the city assessor carried it out. The county board of equalization, discovering the situation, restored the real estate of Duluth to a generally fair basis, though it was admitted that there were many individual injustices which could not be corrected because the assessor's books were much belated, and did not reach the county board in time to receive thorough overhauling. The Herald approved the reductions made by the county board because, while generally speaking a fairly reasonable uniformity was maintained, the city was saved from assuming an unjust share of state and county taxes.

It is a very different case this year. The issue now is not the total assessment, but the correction of many amazing discrepancies between individual assessments. Lots of equal value, lying side by side, are assessed differently. Lots of lesser value are often assessed more than lots of higher value. The street railway's property was reduced by the assessor $200,000 below the figures on which taxes were willingly paid last year.

What the county board must arrive at, if it is possible in the short time given it to act, is a reasonably equality between taxpayers. It ought not to be necessary to argue the benefits to Duluth from such corrections as make for equality of assessment. Where there is inequality, the man who is over-assessed pays part of the taxes due from the man who is under-assessed. If, in reaching this desired equality, the county board increases the total assessment, no harm is done providing the total is not out of proportion to assessments in other communities. What was proposed two years ago was an assessment of Duluth property at a higher percentage than that imposed in other cities, which would have subjected Duluth to the necessity of paying more than its fair share of state and county taxes. In its way that was as unjust as the present condition under which some Duluth property-owners are assessed at higher rates than other Duluth property-owners.

Lack of funds may be an excuse for not making a thorough revaluation of the city, but it is hardly a good excuse for maintaining old injustices as between property-owners, and for creating many new ones.

All Duluth property should be assessed on exactly the same basis as property in other communities. To assess it higher is unjust to Duluth. To assess it lower is to act dishonestly with the state and the county. But beyond that, as nearly as may be every Duluth property-owner should be assessed on the same basis. Some should not be assessed high and others low. The task of the county board this year is to readjust the assessment so that those who have been assessed too low may be raised, and those who have been assessed too high—if there be any such—may be lowered, to the end that all, great and small, rich and poor, shall stand on the same level.

A MUNICIPAL TELEPHONE SYSTEM.

Hull, England, has a municipal telephone plant which is described by Walter C. Hamm, United States consul at that place, in a letter to the state department. It appears that it is not only working to the satisfaction of patrons, but that it has accomplished the desired object of paying for itself while reducing tolls.

Municipal ownership of telephone systems is hardly a live issue in this country, yet if it is possible, by eliminating private profit, to provide cheaper service to the patrons, why not that as well as municipal water and light plants? The experience of Hull with its city telephone plant, therefore, has interest.

The Hull system is only five years old. It was put into operation against great opposition, but it has already saved to the people of that city in telephone rates the cost of its instalment, besides making a profit each year. All told the plant has cost the city $293,522.94, and after paying all charges there now remains in the sinking and reserve fund $59,201.80. The city began its operations by cutting the rates of the National system almost in half, and it not only maintained these rates but has compelled the National system to meet them or quit the city. The municipal rates are as follows:

Unlimited number of calls, business places	$30.65
Unlimited number of calls, residence	24.33
Five-party line, covering 720 calls	14.59
Unlimited calls, residence, two-party line	19.46
One thousand calls, exclusive line	24.33

These rates are much below those charged in this country in cities of similar size. Hull is a city of 240,000 people.

The establishment of the municipal telephone plant was fought openly by the city council and the business interests. The people insisted on the project, however, and today, according to Consul Hamm, its former opponents are loudest in its praise. The profitable experience of Hull with its city telephone plant has aroused the interests of many other cities in England, and several are seriously considering the plan of starting up telephone systems of their own on the theory that the people might as well get the profits of the business as well as the private company which conducts the National system.

However, American city governments will have to be placed on a more business-like basis than they usually are conducted on to make such enterprises a success in this country. The spread of the commission plan of city government, with its elimination of party and the spoils system, should tend to enlarge the possibilities of municipal ownership of public utilities.

A PREDICTION.

Immigration Commissioner Welch was quoted in The Herald Saturday as follows: "Within fifty years the agricultural population of Northeastern Minnesota per square mile will be greater than in any other part of the state, even in the most fertile counties of the Mississippi valley."

This prediction follows several years of careful study of the soil, climate and market possibilities of this section of the state. It is true, and it is important. It means more to Duluth than all the new factories that can be secured in the next ten years—because with such a development the factories will follow of necessity.

SMOOTHING THINGS OVER.

President Taft is writing a letter. It will sound a formal campaign key note. He is going to say that, the Winona speech to the contrary notwithstanding, he has no intent to read anybody out of the party. This, obviously, follows the discovery that to read out of the party the followers of the insurgents means to leave but a scant handful in the party membership.

Also, to quote the Associated Press report, "so far as he can consistently do so the president will endeavor to placate all factions of the party."

It would be easier to placate the differences between the Republican party and the Democratic party than it would to unite the two chief factions in the Republican party. There is no kinship between the standpatters and the real insurgents; no common ground of agreement. The possibility of unison is no greater than that of producing dulcet harmonies from a duet between good and evil.

President Taft's pathetic hope of reconciling the irreconcilable is an illuminating commentary on the breadth of his conception of the situation.

THE DAY OF SMALL FARMS.

Sir Gilbert Parker, in the current National Review, gives some of the results of what is known as the "small holdings movement" in England: During the last year various county councils have bought or leased large estates and sublet them to farm and market garden tenants.

Briefly, the results are increased production and the comfortable support of a larger number of people.

For instance, the former occupant of one farm used to employ fifteen people. That farm is now cut up into twenty-four holdings, and forty-six men are in permanent employment. In the harvest season this number is doubled. In other words, a tract that used to support sixteen men now supports forty-six, and its yield for the market is largely increased. These farms rarely exceed fifty acres, and they run down to market gardens of seven acres.

While admitting the benefit to agriculture in the small holdings and in the activity of the county councils to help tenent farmers to get them, Mr. Parker believes that the tenants would better buy the lands themselves and pay interest, because almost uniformly the rents now charged are more than enough to cover the interest on the purchase price. His conclusions are as follows:

> The distribution of the land in small farms will produce the same result in England as abroad—stimulation of energy, intensive culture, larger employment. Co-operation is essential to the success of any scheme of small farming, whatever the form of tenure. Education must be more practical. Under a well-devised scheme of land purchase, the occupiers can become owners of the land on terms as easy or more easy than they now have as perpetual rent-payers.

Smaller farms, more employment, more intensive cultivation—these items form a key to the solution of the problem of cost of living that this country cannot much longer ignore.

A month or so ago The Herald quoted George H. Maxwell as urging acre homes for factory workers, and as expressing the belief that half a day on the home acre will yield more to the worker than his half day in the factory. He hopes to see the time when every factory will be surrounded with these home acres, and he believes that the results will be better living, better health, more contentment, and better output from the factories. His idea is no idle dream. It is real, practical, and should be taken up everywhere and encouraged.

The more people there are set at cultivating small tracts, for their own support and for the markets, the better off the country will be.

Therefore anybody who gives his energies to the splendid work of putting city workers upon the land is doing a signal public service.

There is room around Duluth, on good, fertile soil, for thousands of small farmers and market gardeners and poultry-raisers and dairymen. All could be placed within each reach of the market, and arrangements can be made for facilitating the marketing of their products. Such arrangements, indeed, already are practically made.

The market is large and profitable, and will grow larger and more profitable. The soil is rich, climatic conditions are ideal, and the difficulties in the way of opening up the lands are very small in comparison with the profits in sight.

Whether the city workers gets a small tract to which he can give part of his time, or one to which he will give all of his time, his way to prosperity and contentment lies through the soil. On the other hand, the way to prosperity and growth for Duluth lies through the settlement of that soil. The quicker every available acre near Duluth is being tilled for the Duluth market, the better for Duluth and for those who shall till these rich acres and sell to this rich market.

THE OPEN COURT.

(Readers of The Herald are invited to make free use of this column to express their ideas about the topics of general interest. Letters should not exceed 300 words—the shorter the better. They must be written on one side of the paper only, and they must be accompanied in every case by the name and address of the writer, though these need not be published. A signed letter is always more effective, however.)

DULUTH SHOULD BE HOST.

To the Editor of The Herald:

I would suggest that when the naval militia fleet comes to Duluth next year, the city of Duluth profit by the example of Buffalo this year and not depend too much on the jackies to provide entertainment to Duluth people at the sacrifice of Duluth's reputation for hospitality.

It is all very well to have the fleet boat races held here and to provide entertainment for the officers of the fleet, but the boys in blue should not be forgotten. I would suggest that when the committee begins to arrange its program, a parade of men from the fleet be included and perhaps a big dinner for the boys at the Armory. Sufficient conveyances should be provided for the trip around the boulevard and Duluth should do everything to make the boys feel that they are the guests of the city, not that they are here to enterain Duluth people only.

Buffalo failed in its duty as a host and Duluth should not do the same.

A NAVAL MILITIAMAN.

Duluth, Aug. 21.

Parties That Quarrel.

New York World: Grattan once told his fellow countrymen that they must tolerate each other or they would be compelled to tolerate the English. The increasing bitterness of insurgents and regulars in the Republican party has brought them to a point at which many of them on both sides find more to admire in Democrats than they do in each other. Senator Aldrich has voiced this sentiment very sharply. Others have expressed or revealed the same feeling. In both factions animosity is so fierce that its first impulse is to drive the enemy out of the organization. The fact that the disagreement is in some respects geographical makes these projects difficult of accomplishment.

It is true of party quarrels as it is of wars in general that once started no one can tell where or how they will end. The old Federal party was torn to pieces by the feud between Adams and Hamilton. The old Whig party was killed by compromises with slavery. The old Democratic party was split first by slavery and secession and later by free silver.

Federalism was strong in New England after it had perished elsewhere. Before Whiggery disappeared it had almost as many meanings as there were states. The Democracy at one time stood for union in the North and for disunion in the South. A generation later it was for gold in the East and for silver in the West.

These conditions grew out of local organizations, and the local organizations, hostile as they were to each other, managed in one way or another to co-operate nationally. Insurgency may intrench itself in this fashion in various states and so continue for a long time to exercise a powerful influence upon a national organization which it cannot fully control. By concessions and by disaster at the polls the disagreement may be made less keen. By victory a contest within the party may ensue that will lead to open rupture.

In a country so extensive as this, parties are never so much in danger as when they are seemingly most powerful. The Democrats got along very well after the war until they came into power. The Whigs never recovered from the disappointments that followed the election of Harrison and Tyler. There are so many different kinds of Republicans today that agreement among them is almost impossible. Defeat may be good for them as well as for the country.

Fatness and Temperament.

London Telegraph: "Let me have men about me that are fat." So Caesar, who plainly believed that fatness was a question of temperament and soul. It is, indeed, one of the things which the most of mankind vaguely believe—that fat people are, on the whole, easy-going, comfortable and good to live with. But, says the Family Doctor, if we are to follow Prof. Lyde, it is all a mistake to suppose that fatness and temperament are connected. What makes people fat is not, as the adage has it, laughter or good temper, but climate. "From one end of Denmark to the other," says Prof. Lyde, "you would not find a really thin man," which sems rather a huge generalization even for a professor. But it is supported by reasons. The people, we are told, live in warm buildings and feed on milk and cereals. Moreover, the climate of the country has not the weight-reducing influence of warmer and drier lands. So that the men "get so lazy that they will not take the trouble even to cut up their food." We have an idyllic picture of Denmark as a country where every one spends all his time eating sandwiches. It sounds cloying and thirsty.

Restrict Sale of Weapons.

Philadelphia Press: The sale of weapons has been urged, in the reports of successive chiefs of police for twenty years past, as a fit subject for rigorous restriction by law and ordinance. The repeated use of the pistol in the streets last week, almost every day having its example, shows the necessity of limiting the sale of pistols.

German Consumers Combined.

New York Press: In the German empire 28,000 co-operative societies, with 4,000,000 members! This, with their families, represents one-third of the population of Germany. The Central league, one of the general bodies of federated branches with about 1,000,000 associated consumers, did $91,000,000 of business last year. Think it over, Americans!

The Absurd Conservation.

Puck: Once more unto the breach, dear friends! A church paper out in Ohio staggers one with the statement that had "the Creator intended that man should inhabit the air or fly like the birds He would have furnished them with wings." The argument is a sockdologer, but with the passage of time it has lost a little of its original force. The ecclesiastical stand-patters have employed it with rather disheartening results against every new means of locomotion since invention began, starting with the ox-cart and coming down the corridors to the stage coach, the steam engine, the steamboat, the balloon, the velocipede, the belt line and rubber heels.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

He Likes His Home Town.

Pequot Enterprise: This is just the right size town to settle down in and enjoy life. Everything for the comfort of life can be bought here and $10 will go as far as $25 will in the large cities. When you want to leave the farm, come to our town and build a nice comfortable home and be among the best people in the world.

Has Certainly Made Good.

Long Prairie Argus: Frank Day, the Democratic leader, intends to quit the political game and go back to his printing office in Fairmont. Mr. Day has certainly made good as a political manager.

What the Farmer Does.

Bemidji Pioneer: An exchange says that the farmer moves the earth. If the editor had said the farmer moves the world he would have made a statement of broader sense and just as far from contradiction.

Hilarity of the Twins.

St. Cloud Times: Is there any question in the mind of any sensible citizen of Minnesota as to which of the two men would give this state the best administration, John Lind or A. O. Eberhart? The majority, regardless of party, would say that they would rather pin their faith to John Lind. Then why this hilarity on the part of the Twin City dailies at the bare thought that Lind might refuse to allow his name to go on the ticket?

Just a Bit Different.

St. Cloud Times: John D. Rockefeller this week pleaded guilty to exceeding the speed limit in his automobile. He was fined $5 and costs which he paid. John D. was fined something like $29,000,000 before for exceeding the speed limit in boosting the price of kerosene, or something like that, but as we recall it he neither pleaded guilty nor paid the fine.

When They'll "Come Back."

Bemidji Pioneer: This "can't come back" idea will receive an awful blow some one of these fine days. Keep your eyes opened and wait, the longer you wait the more interesting the "come back." Wait until Editor Roosevelt and Editor Bryan disagree about some big topic, as digging a well or shingling a house, and you'll hear all about "coming back."

Range and the Governorship.

Eveleth News: We look forward to the time when the range will reach forward and grab the governorship of this state. And at that we give notice the News editor has never been noted for idyllic peregrination.

"Agin" the Conscience.

Little Falls Transcript: The time is near at hand when the dear public will be exhaustively informed as to the shortcomings of all the candidates for office; and when the disloyal party voter will smash his party's ticket to smithereens because of the uprising of his great and mighty conscience. It is truly somewhat pitiful to listen to the wall of the one with the high bred conscience just previous to election time.

A Woman's Last Word.

Let's contend no more, Love,
Strive nor weep;
All be as before, Love,
—Only sleep!

What so wild as words are?
I and thou
In debate as birds are,
Hawk on bough!

See the creature stalking
While we speak!
Hush and hide the talking,
Cheek on cheek!

What so false as truth is,
False to thee?
Where the serpent's tooth is Shun the tree—

Where the apple reddens
Never pry—
Lest we lose our Edens,
Eve and I.

Be a god and hold me
With a charm!
Be a man and fold me
With thine arm!

Teach me, only teach, Love!
As I ought
I will speak thy speech, Love,
Think thy thought—

Meet, if thou require it,
Both demands,
Laying flesh and spirit
In thy hands.

That shall be tomorrow,
Not tonight;
I must bury sorrow
Out of sight:

Must a little weep, Love,
(Foolish me!)
And so fall asleep, Love,
Loved by thee.

—Robert Browning.

County Option.

Life: There are some things that are almost as bad as drink. For example, Newark is in Licking county, Ohio. Ohio has the form of deprivation called county option. Licking county went dry, but the county decision was not well enforced in Newark, which probably has a local majority that is still indulgent to rum. The drys in Newark clamored for enforcement of the county law and got in outside detectives to compass it. Along with them came Dry Detective Etherington, a lad of 17, who in helping to close up an unlawful saloon impulsively shot through the head, its keeper, a popular citizen. On that evening, or the next morning, a company of 500 citizens took poor, impulsive young Etherington out of the jail and hanged him—a prodigious scandal. Next, Governor Harmon swoops down and suspends the mayor and the inefficient sheriff. Next will come the grand jury, who will look into the matter of the lynching and may possibly make trouble for some of the 500 lynchers.

Watch this case and see what, if anything, comes of it, and observe, finally, whether the result is favorable or otherwise to county option in Ohio.

Laws that provide drastic liquid restrictions for communities in which a local majority is opposed to them are apt to make trouble. They are very hard to enforce and demoralizing when violated. That is the objection to state prohibition and in a less degree to county option.

Ohio's Sad Example.

Chicago Post: The Republicans of Ohio, representing the president's state, have repeatedly declared their intention of setting an example to the other mid-western commonwealths in the present campaign. The manner in which they live up to this promise is puzzling to the outside observer. For instance, the boasted "harmony in the ranks" is revealed in the following roll call:

Senator Burton has called Congressman Longworth a "snob."

Boss Cox has called Chairman Wade Ellis of the state central committee "the district rat in the Republican party."

Senator Burton has called Boss Cox "unfit to speak to a gentleman."

The only people who seem to have held their tongues and their tempers are the Garfield Progressives, and even they are calling themselves names for not winning the convention.

Where is the good example that was promised us by Ohio? The present proceedings seem to spell not harmony, but Harmon.

Mother's Visit.

Atchison Globe: An old-fashioned woman from the country recently packed some fried chicken, bread and doughnuts in a market basket and went to see her daughter, who lives in a big city. She was scandalized when the family stayed up till 11 o'clock, and decided that she wouldn't tell Pa about it when she wrote home next day. "He might think we have fallen into evil ways," she said to herself as she was going off to sleep. She awoke at her usual time, 4 o'clock, and the house seemedstrangely quite. "Town folks do get lazy," she thought, "and they probably don't get up till 5. Not a sound; then she waited till 6, and at 7, between hunger and alarm, she was almost crazed. "They've been murdered in their beds!" she yelled at 8 o'clock from the front steps, and soon the house was filled with people rushing in to see what had happened. The family were surprised and indignant when police, gardeners, newsboys, etc., rushed into their bedrooms and woke them up, and this explains why the old-fashioned woman came home that day. "I never expected," she sobbed to Pa, "that any girl would talk to her Ma as Jane talked to me."

Kissed by the Sun.

Gee whiz,
Do you know what sunburn is?
Have you been out on the salty wave
That rolls in from the sea
While you let your boat
Go fast or float
As you shouted out your glee?
Away from the city,
With its high, hot walls,
To the great wide open
Where the sunshine calls.
Have you stretched your length upon the sands
Where the briny billows run,
And laughed to dry,
Beneath the sky,
Your white skin in the sun?
Have you been away
To the fields of hay,
To the hills and shady streams,
And with no care
Of what you wear,
Lay down to sunkissed dreams?
Oh, say,
How many in this town today
Have been doing it that way?
And how many tender skins cry out
In anguish at a touch?
How many cans of vasaline
Would not be half too much
To soothe the pain
Of Misses and Misters
All bloated and red
With assorted blisters?
One little dream of sunshine
Away from the heat and the din
Of the sweltering town and there follows
A nightmare of sensitive skin;
One little lingering sun kiss
On arms or necks or backs,
And there follows a blister that feels like
It was chuckful of red hot tacks.
Gee whiz,
Do you know what sunburn is?
Well,
Ain't it hot stuff?

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: A woman can excuse a poet even for eating raw onions.

The thing that scares every girl is what if she had been born ugly.

The way to get a man to look bored is to have him travel with his family.

The row most of us hoe is when what's in it is going to be somebody else's afterward.

An extra cautious man 364 days out of the year usually does something wildly reckless on the 365th to make a fair average.

A Labor-Saving Device.

New York Tribune: Dr. Simon Flexner, the chief of the Rockefeller Institute, referred, at a dinner in Philadelphia, to the increasing number of clean-shaven doctors.

"It is cleaner, safer, to be clean-shaven," he said. 'Certainly, as far as physicians are concerned, there was more truth than poetry in the dialogue of the two little boys on the street corner.

"Don't you hate to have your face washed?" said the first little boy.

"'Oh, don't I, though!' the other answered. 'You bet, when I grow up I'll wear full whiskers.'"

An Impression.

National Monthly: Two city pastors exchanged pulpits. One was a handsome young minister, the other an elderly one. The organist at the elderly minister's church was an ambitious young lady who wished to make a good impression on the young visiting pastor.

Now the sexton who blew the organ for the young lady was in the habit of stopping when he thought the voluntary had been long enough. To avoid such an awkward ending on this occasion, she wrote him a little note and handed it to him. Supposing it an announcement for the pulpit, the sexton, in spite of the young lady's frantic gestures, handed it to the young pastor.

This is what he read: "Will you kindly keep blowing away this morning until I give you the signal to quit."

Thankful.

New York Times: "Finished at last!"

The joyful parents of the beautiful young girl gathered around her with every seeming manifestation of extreme joy. It seemed almost too good to be true.

"And so, dear," said the mother, "you are indeed educated."

"Yes, indeed, mamma dear," replied the young girl, her eyes beaming. "See! Here is my diploma."

Papa was more cautious. His practical business career made him slow to accept.

"I feel that it must be so," he said, gayly; "still, I must be sure. My daughter, can you speak French?"

"Like a native of Washington."

The parents exchanged proud looks.

"And have you studied psychology?"

"I know all about it."

"And physiology, zoology, biology, geometry, physics and chemistry?"

"Yes, indeed."

"And civics?" asked papa, his voice trembling.

"I took it two terms."

"And music?"

"Wait. I have improvised a piece of my own."

The happy papa turned to the equally happy mamma.

"Let us not only praise heaven," he said, "that she has acquired such an education, but that I have money enough left to support her in ease all the rest of her life."

The Manly Art.

There are three charges that may be brought against the "manly art of self-defense":

1. That it is not manly.
2. That it is not an art.
3. That it is not necessary for self-defense.

As man is essentially a too-using animal, the manly thing in the line of corporal injury is to use an artificial weapon of some sort, such as a pistol or dagger or poison, rather than the natural weapons, the fists.

The art comes not so much in using the weapon as in inventing it and fashioning it.

The self-defense comes in being a law-abiding citizen and in keeping away from the manly artists of the pugilistic type, or, if unable to avoid them, to hang your troubles upon the brass buttons of a policeman.

A MOMENT WITH THE WITS.

Detroit Free Press: "Did she marry the man who rescued her?"

"Yes, and now she's discovered that her life was the only thing he ever saved."

Punch: Farmer (to the lady who has taken rooms at the farm for the summer)—Tidy crop of hay, mum.

Lady—Beautifully tidy—and—er—let me see—when do you thrash it?

Baltimore American: Miss Oldgirl—Here are some new pictures I had taken, but they are perfect frights. The photographer I went to is no flatterer.

Miss Pert—No; but he is conscientious.

Washington Star: "That magazine writer says he is going to print an absolutely truthful and impartial analysis of your career."

"Absolutely truthful and impartial!" echoed Senator Sorghum. "Great Scott! I wonder what I have done to offend him!"

Judge: Prosperous Publisher—Do you write before or after eating?

Life: Guest—Where's Mrs. Frost tonight?

"Husband, scandal or children?"

Birmingham Age-Herald: "Does Winks take any magazines?"

"All he can get. I don't dare to leave one lying around."

Chicago Daily News: Browning—Did you sell your automobile for as much as you paid when you bought it?

Greening—Well, I sold it for as much as it was worth when I bought it.

The Revolution.

New York Evening Post: California insurgency differs in some respects from the Kansas article, but it won a sweeping victory in yesterday's primary. The nomination of Hiram Johnson, the insurgent Republican candidate for governor, by a plurality of 50,000, shows how deep was the feeling against the regular party organization. Johnson's success appears to have carried along with it that of the other insurgent candidates for state offices, as well as that of at least two insurgent congressmen. National issues were involved in the contest, Johnson having openly avowed his sympathy with the Republicanism of Dolliver and Cummins and La Follette, but the main fight, after all, was against boss domination and corporation politics in California. "Smash the bosses!" was Johnson's constant appeal to the voters, varied by denunciations of the long standing and pernicious activity of the Southern Pacific in state affairs. The result not only is a great triumph for independence in California, but is symptomatic of the way in which the fountains of the great deep are being broken up in the Republican party all over the country. Insurgency has now fully reached the status of successful revolution. It can no longer be sneered at; it must seriously be reckoned with. Even at Beverly this is now distinctly perceived. And the smashing of the California bosses by means of the direct primary helps to explain why the New York bosses dread it as the devil does holy water.

A Resolve.

To keep my health!
To do my work!
To live!
To see to it I grow and gain and give!
Never to look behind me for an hour!
To wait in weakness and to walk in power;
But always fronting onward to the light,
Always and always facing towards the right,
Robbed, starved, defeated, fallen, wide astray—
On, with what strength I have!
Back to the way!

NEWS AND VIEWS OF POLITICS AND POLITICIANS

W. E. McEwen Prominently Mentioned for Governorship Should John Lind Do the Unexpected Thing—McKnight and His Candidacy for Congress—John Nelson of Cohasset in the City—Auditor Halden's Illness and His Campaign.

William E. McEwen Groomed For Governorship.

With John Lind continuing in his role of the silent one and all the other Democrats of Minnesota eagerly waiting for the word that will answer the question everybody is asking, discussion of the possibilities that hinge upon what Mr. Lind will say, has been renewed. Word comes from St. Paul that down there the talk, though touching many personalities, is beginning to veer around often to William E. McEwen of Duluth as the proper man to put at the head of the ticket in the event that John Lind refuses to be the candidate.

Mr. McEwen was in the city last evening, en route from Fond du Lac to his office at St. Paul. He insisted that John Lind will be the candidate and he would not seriously consider the possibility that Mr. Lind may eliminate himself from the field.

"I am for John Lind for governor," was all Mr. McEwen had to say on the subject.

As state labor commissioner Mr. McEwen has made an enviable record, his first aim always being to protect the interests of the working man, but never at the cost of injustice to the employer. He has made the labor department of the state a model for other states and has become one of the dominating figures in the public life of Minnesota. Commissioner McEwen is a native of Duluth, and in this city there is no more popular man than "Billie" McEwen.

McKnight Sets a Lively Pace

Alex McKnight has plunged into the fight for the Republican nomination for congress with characteristic enthusiasm, determined to win if there is any possibility of doing it. He spent several days on the range last week and set out again this morning on a tour of the district. At his headquarters in the Manhattan building Dick Jones is busily engaged in preparing and sending out campaign thunder calculated to frighten the Miller following into assuming the defensive. On the wall are placards giving quotations from speeches made by Mr. Miller two years ago. Mr. Miller's slogan of that distant day is emblazoned on the McKnight wall: "Let the Voice of the People be Heard."

Another card reads:

"Miller said he would NOT vote for Cannon.

"Miller DID vote for Cannon."

The Pipestone Star prints the following concerning Mr. McKnight's candidacy:

Pipestone people were interested and somewhat surprised to read in the city papers Sunday morning that Alex G. McKnight of Duluth, has filed as a candidate for the Republican nomination for congress from the Eighth district.

Mr. McKnight is a former Pipestone boy and a son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles McKnight of this city. Since going to Duluth some years ago, to practice law, Mr. McKnight has forged rapidly to the front in politics. He served as an alderman of Duluth and there was talk recently of running him for the state senate, but now he is out as a candidate for Clarence B. Miller's seat in congress.

The entrance of McKnight into the race, makes it a three-cornered fight for the nomination, according to the Minneapolis Journal, the other candidates being Congressman Miller and Carl Taylor of Aitkin. The latter is not expected to show much strength, but McKnight is expected to prove a very lively opponent for Miller. McKnight has started upon a tour of the district.

The many Pipestone county friends of Mr. McKnight will wish him success in his campaign for congress, and if he should be nominated and elected, they will expect to see him make a splendid record in congress for honest and able service.

John T. Armstead, chairman of the McKnight campaign committee, is taking an active part in the work that is being done, seconded by Watson S. Moore, treasurer of the committee, who is a strong advocate of the nomination of Mr. McKnight in the cause of reform in the national house of representatives.

Itasca County Man Fights Typhoid

John Nelson of Cohasset, who has been in St. Mary's hospital for some time suffering from an attack of typhoid fever, will leave that institution this evening or tomorrow. Mr. Nelson is one of the most prominent men in Itasca county politics and possesses a talent for friendship that makes his influence as strong as that of any other Republican in the county.

Mr. Nelson is a strong supporter of Senator D. M. Gunn of Grand Rapids, candidate for renomination and re-election, and is expected to take a hand in the game in Itasca county when he recovers his strength.

Mr. Nelson owns and manages a hotel at Cohasset.

About St. Louis County's Auditor.

Gilbert Herald: "County Auditor Odin Halden, in spite of the fact that the primary election campaign is opening up, is tied to his home by a severe attack of rheumatism, which has kept him in severe pain and vexatious inactivity for two weeks. He is slightly improved at present, though his doctors do not promise him that he will be able to get into the campaign until pretty close to the finish. However, his splendid record as a county official and as a public-spirited citizen of St. Louis county is doing a pretty good stunt of campaigning for him, and his multitude of friends are doing the rest. In spite of his illness, reports are that Mr. Halden is still cheerful and confident. While he has an opponent for the Republican nomination, his friends do not expect the result to be anywhere near close. Nevertheless, they are working to make that result as decisive as possible in order to roll up a majority for Halden that will help banish the pains of old Mr. Rheumatism."

Biwabik Times: "Odin Halden has been too ill of late to make a visit to the ranges. Since his attitude in the state treasurer's contest is fully known he will receive a royal welcome."

In Benton county a man is running for office on a platform that pledges him to abstain from profiting by reason of the fact that if he is elected he will be on the public payroll. C. F. Callahan, candidate for the Democratic nomination for auditor, in his formal announcement to the voters, says that he will, if elected, turn the salary over to a son of the late A. E. Kasner, as he has been doing since he wa named by the board of county commisioners to fill the unexpired term of the late auditor. Also he pledges himself to keep J. E. Kasner in office as deputy auditor.

John D. Sullivan of St. Cloud, who is J. E. C. Robinson's opponent for the Democratic nomination for state senator from the Forty-seventh district, will be supported by the Republican Foley Independent, which expresses keen regret over the fact that no Republican has filed for the office. The Independent attacks Mr. Robinson's record, blaming him particularly for his vote against Senator Sageng's resolution requiring senate committees to report all bills within fifteen days from reference.

ments are particularly interesting. The levies were authorized at the last city election and they will be made in Duluth this fall for the first time.

The first amendment authorizes a levy of not to exceed 2 mills with which to pay for the paving of street intersections and storm sewers. Mr. McCormick allows a levy of 1 mill, or $40,000, for this fund. The full levy of 2 mills would create a fund of $80,000.

The third charter amendment, a subsidiary of the wheelage tax, allows a levy of not to exceed 1 mill for a street maintenance fund. For this a levy of ¾ mills is allowed, or $30,000. The full levy would be $40,000. All money raised by the last must be applied to the maintenance of the streets and avenues in the city limits.

The charter limits the entire levy, exclusive of the first three funds, to $320,000. The comptroller's estimate calls for $310,000, giving the conference committee $10,000 on which to work. The committee also has $50,000 which has not been included in the levies authorized by the charter amendments, giving a total of $60,000 which has not been spent in the comptroller's estimate.

All Estimates Cut.

In every instance the estimate submitted by the comptroller is lower than that asked for by the various departments in the estimates which they have submitted to him. The fire department, which asked for $149,320 is allowed $124,500 by the comptroller. The department levy for the present year was $137,000.

The police department asked for $92,689.60. The comptroller allows the department $83,500, as compared with the levy of $81,000 for 1910.

The board of public works asked for $124,375. The comptroller cuts this to $90,000 in his estimate. The big difference is due to the fact that the money raised under the levies authorized by the new charter amendments for street maintenance will lighten the burden on the works fund considerably. The estimate for the board of public works contains that of the city engineer and the building inspector. The comptroller allows the engineering department $23,000 and the building inspector's office $3,800, which leaves $63,200 for the board of public works.

The health department asked for $15,600 and the comptroller allows it $14,500. All the expenses for contagious diseases, which come under the direction of the health department, are paid out of the general fund.

The library board asked for $19,100 and the comptroller gives the board $14,500. The additional sum was asked largely because of cost of maintaining the proposed new Carnegie library at West Duluth.

The park board asked for $25,082 with a view to making considerable improvements in the city parks the coming year. The comptroller put the park board down for $16,000, the same as was allowed for this year.

The comparative statement of the comptroller follows:

PRISONER IS SUICIDE

Virginia Man Drowns Himself in Bathtub at the County Jail.

Ano Wallancse, a "short term" prisoner at the county jail committed suicide late Saturday night, by laying face downward in about three inches of water in a bathtub.

Wallancse was on the hill for a term of thirty days only, and had served but a few hours of the time. He came from Virginia, where he was sentenced.

On his arrival Friday he was placed in a cell with two other prisoners. He developed signs of delirium tremens and as he shouted continually, the other prisoners were unable to sleep. Saturday night he was given a cot in the corridor between the cells where he would be more comfortable and he could be watched more closely.

When the lights were turned off for the night, he turned in and apparently went to sleep. About 10 o'clock he got up and made his way to the the bath room. Shortly afterward one of the other prisoners found him there lying face downward in the water. He immediately called for help and the jail attendants and the other prisoners did all in their power to bring the unconscious man to his senses.

Every known method of resuscitating drowned persons was used, but they were of no avail.

Little is known of Wallancse except that he was of Finnish descent and was employed at one of the mines near Virginia. He was 35 years old.

HUMAN LIVES PREY TO FIRE FIEND

yesterday and last night, destroying a number of foothill ranches.

At Stevensville, the fire on Kootenai creek is moving toward the railroad property on the west side of the river, but has assumed no alarming proportions.

The railroads can handle 2,000 people with the equipment now on the lines into the stricken territory. Refugees are still pouring into all cities outside the danger zone, with tales of distress, and many children are reported separated from their parents.

All along the Great Northern and Northern Pacific tracks between Spokane and Helena numberless fires are known to be raging fiercely, but definite reports cannot be secured as the telegraph and telephone wires are all down.

Libby, Mont., in Danger.

Before communication with Libby, Mont., ended, it was reported that every male resident of the town was working with 200 paid fire-fighters to divert Flower creek to the south side of the village as a protection against the flames driving up from that direction.

In the Clearwater forest reserve in the hills east of Lewiston, Idaho, new fires create no excitement as the settlers have fled from the claims throughout the district, and Forest Supervisor Fenn has refused to send any more fire-fighters in unless he can get pack trains to aid in getting supplies to them. A train of twenty-five horses turned back yesterday afternoon in an attempt to reach a force of sixty-five men near Peck, which is known to have but two days' rations.

At Coeur d'Alene Lake.

Five fires are burning on the shores of Coeur d'Alene lake. One was threatening the village of Sunnyside, three miles from the town of Coeur d'Alene at midnight. Many summer homes on the beach have been destroyed.

Refugees from burned districts poured into Spokane last night. Seven hundred from Wallace crossed Lake Coeur d'Alene by boat and came to Spokane by electric line.

Fall Asleep Fighting Flames.

Portland, Or., Aug. 22.—The forest fire situation in the Crater Lake national forest grows steadily worse. Numbers of the present inadequate force of fire fighters are nearly exhausted, many falling asleep on the fire lines and only saved by friends from death in the flames. Two hundred and fifty soldiers from Cosgrove, Wash., under command of Maj. Martin will arrive at Medford this morning and it is hoped that the situation can be handled.

sides today, was strongly reminiscent of the days of the Hinckley disaster.

Travelers on the lake yesterday observed thousands of birds winging their way to the south in advance of the wall of smoke that threatened their destruction by suffocation in the country west of here. Countless numbers of feathered denizens of the woods joined in this sudden exodus.

Dr. Stocker and others well versed in bird lore tell of a great migration of night hawks that was observed last night, thousands of them passing over the city. They were so numerous that they blacked the sky.

Here in Duluth some superstitious folk feared that the yellow pall was a portent of calamity, and on the ranges many of the foreign residents were almost panic-stricken without knowing why.

Lee Parvin, advance man for the H. E. Pierce Company's Associated Players, who is a resident of Wallace, Idaho, the city that is in the center of the fire zone. He has no doubt but that the peculiar condition here is caused by the forest fires far to the west of Duluth. Mr. Parvin talks interestingly of Wallace, saying the town, which has a population of five or six thousand, is surrounded by sheer mountain walls. Near by are two smaller communities, up on the mountain sides. Their residents are miners. On Sunday the miners, who have no church in their hamlets, get aboard hand cars and coast to Wallace, where they attend church. They hitch a horse to the car and are hauled up on the return trip.

H. W. Richardson, local weather observer, said that there are no meteorological disturbances indicated and that the condition of the atmosphere can be explained only by the existence of the great fires in the West. Mr. Richardson was at Parkersburg, W. Va., at the time of the Hinckley fire and he said today that on that occasion the same atmospheric conditions prevailed there as was observed here today.

William M. Hillis of the county treasurer's office said that he was in Western Pennsylvania in 1872, when the Chicago fire occurred, and he remembers that the sky was overcast then much as it is here today.

Charles E. Wachtel of the Iron Range road office staff was in Maryland at the time of the Chicago disaster, also remembered the circumstance.

GAME WARDEN A FIRE-FIGHTER

Looking for "Sooners" Discovers House Burning, Saving Part of Property.

Crookston, Minn., Aug. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—While scouting for "sooners," Game Warden Munich discovered the farmhouse of Edward C. Garciu, in Polk Center township, Red Lake county, ablaze Sunday afternoon, and, driving at break-neck speed, he got Grain Buyer Schmidtzing of Wyle and together they fought the flames for three hours, saving the granary and ten wheat stacks, but the house machine shed, barn and pig pens were burned.

They saved some things from the house, got all the stock from the barn and most of the machinery from the shed. The Garciu family were absent at church. The loss is $5,000, partly insured.

ARRESTED ON FRAUD CHARGE

John F. Teetzel Alleged to Have Swindled Duluth Firms.

John F. Teetzel, 50 years old, a traveling salesman, was arrested yesterday on complaint of the Kelly Hardware company on the charge that he has obtained checks under false pretenses.

The allegation is that he represented himself as an agent of the Acme Electrical Manufacturing company of Pittsburg, Pa., and had sole right to handle the "Eddiphone," telephone ear attachment in several Northern Minnesota counties. It is claimed that he obtained an order from the Kelly Hardware company, which wired to the address given as his headquarters and to one of the men named by Teetzel as a reference, with the result that nothing was known of Teetzel. The company then stopped payment on the check for $43.50 which it had given him. The same thing is said to have happened with the Hall-Kreidler Music company. C. V. McCoy, Teetzel's attorney, states that Teetzel is being done an injustice and that he is a man of good character.

His examination was set for Friday morning.

News of the New Autumn Fabrics

Facts That Will Interest the Fashionable

The Heavy Stuffs

The two extremes are the very prominent features in fabrics for Autumn wear—for Suitings very heavy looking—(you might even call them coarse) materials are very popular—Homespuns, Basket Weaves, Sackings, Cheviots, Matelasse Weaves, etc., are very popular.

You'll have to be very careful in choosing these weaves, however, if you do not want to be disappointed—not every manufacturer knows how to make them.

The Color Range

They're so liable to pull out or slip badly. We know that none of the cloths we are offering will do that, so you are safe if you come here.

There's a big color range again this season—we believe you will appreciate the unusual and the artistic combinations which we show.

The Sheer Stuffs

A great many sheer silk materials will be used—Marquisettes, Chiffons, Silk Voiles, Crepes and Voiles will be very much used. They are shown in plain and fancy designs—many very handsome effects can be had from them. The plain in combination with fancy designs and combinations of our fancy designs as for instance a Persian chiffon made up over a Pekin striped silk are superb.

Persians and Florals and Crepes

Persian effects, floral designs and stripes are very popular in these weaves. Some very rich crepes are being shown in a new effect—the crepe look is quite pronounced. Black satins for gowns, coats, wraps and trimmings are being taken in Eastern cities right now. Colored satins and messalines are also very good.

You'll Agree to This.

Never before have we shown such an extensive range of fabrics, which is only another way of saying that the largest and most complete stock that has ever been shown at the Head of the Lakes awaits your choosing here.

The Grandest 75c Serges You Ever Saw

Compare them with any serges offered hereabouts. Ask our salespeople to show you these extra value 75c serges. 75c 75c

HIGH SCHOOL GYMNASIUM

Quarters for Physical Training in New Building Well Equipped.

For years the athletic teams of the Duluth Central high school have been handicapped in their preparation for contests by the lack of a gymnasium in the school. They have been forced to depend on the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A. almost entirely in the matter of athletic instruction and the basketball team was barred from the big gymnasium of the Y. M. C. A. for interscholastic contests.

The need is supplied this year for the new gymnasium in the Washington grade and manual training is almost as large as any in the city and will be fully as well equipped. By the time school opens, the gymnasium will be entirely completed, the equipment will be installed and the athletic directors will be able to begin their work at the same time as the work in other branches is begun.

The gymnasium is located over the main entrance to the new building and is at the top of the building, being slightly elevated so that light may be obtained from all four sides, a condition that is not true of any other room in the building. It is 40 by 80 feet in size, somewhat smaller than the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium, which is 45 by 95 feet, and larger than the Y. W. C. A. gymnasium, which is about 22 by 63 feet. The cork covered running track is elevated above the main floor of the gymnasium and is twenty-seven laps to the mile. It is built in saucer shape and is wide enough for all purposes. Besides its value as a running track, it will serve as a gallery for spectators during athletic contests.

The equipment for the gymnasium has been ordered from the Narragansett Machine company and is expected to arrive in a few days. It will cost about $2,000 and will include all articles and devices desired by the athletic directors for carrying on their work.

Separate locker rooms for boys and girls have been provided in the plans of the gymnasium and each locker room will be supplied with shower baths.

The work in physical training will be in charge of M. E. Alletzhaeusser among the boys and Miss Ethel E. Smith among the girls. Mr. Alletzhaeusser has been connected with the Duluth schools for some time as athletic director and Miss Smith was formerly physical director of the Y. W. C. A. here.

While the Duluth Central high school has always figured in athletic contests, the general physical training of pupils has been neglected on account of the lack of a gymnasium, which was not regarded as an essential part of an up-to-date high school when the Central high school was built. When the plans for the Washington building were drawn, the board of education took steps to remedy the defect, and F. G. German, the architect, took pains to plan the gymnasium and equipment and locate it where the best results could be obtained.

LA FOLLETTE'S SUPPORTERS DISCUSS HIS CAMPAIGN.

Madison, Wis., Aug. 22.—Confident of the success of Senator La Follette at the primaries, but fearing that the majority of the legislature may disregard the result of the advisory vote, was the principal point made by speakers at a conference of La Follette supporters from around the state, held here Saturday. The meeting was addressed by Chairman C. H. Crownhart of the La Follette congressional campaign commission, Senator Thomas Morris, candidate for lieutenant governor; Senator W. C. Owen of Maiden Rock, Secretary of State Frear and others.

Senator Morris made a characteristic, impassioned speech, in which he impressed on those present the necessity for thorough organization work during the remaining two weeks of the campaign, especially in the doubtful legislative districts. He charged that William D. Connor, chairman of the Taft Republican campaign committee, was bending his efforts to the end that he might be chosen in La Follette's place.

The entire delegation went to Senator La Follette's farm at Maple Bluff. Such definite plans as will be made as a result of the conference will not be made public, a they will be mapped out by Chairman Crownhart personally with the workers from the various districts.

It is clear the absence of Senator La Follette from the campaign is a source of worry. Chairman Crownhart told the workers that while the senator is not physically prevented from making speeches it is the judgment of physicians that he keep out of it.

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST

HOLLANDERS WILL REMAIN

Colony Near New York Mills Gradually Catch Onto Ways.

Consider Trees as Sacred in Old Country, Dislike Cutting Them.

New York Mills, Minn., Aug. 22.—The colony of Hollanders that was located near here last spring is gradually becoming acclimated. Although at first many of them were homesick and pined for the fatherland, as was to be expected, the sturdy people are adjusting themselves to new conditions and promise in time to make useful citizens.

Nearly all of them have land to clear and while the men are strong and industrious the axe is a new instrument to many of them. They burned coal in Holland and to cut down a tree was a crime there.

Land Company Helping Them.

The Johnston Land company, which was largely instrumental in bringing them here, is doing everything possible to assist them in starting properly in their new environment. The company has established the best equipped farm in Otter Tail county in the midst of the settlement, supplied it with all the latest improvements and conveniences and introduced the latest and most scientific methods of farming. It has also brought in a large herd of high grade stock.

The company planted five acres of tobacco this year and the crop developed in a remarkable manner. It has thriven amazingly, notwithstanding the dry weather, and it will not be at all surprising if experiments that are being made will result in tobacco culture becoming general in this country.

The Hollanders are not showing any disposition to leave, and will doubtless become acclimated in course of time; but many were homesick at first.

LIGHTNING'S WORK IN NORTH DAKOTA

Home Near Kenmare, N. D., Struck, Joliette School House Burned.

Kenmare, N. D., Aug. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Two beds in which A. Oppitz, Sr., and Mr. and Mrs. A. Oppitz, Jr., were sleeping, were completely wrecked by lightning which struck the residence of the latter near here. A. Oppitz, Jr., suffered bad burns. A. Oppitz, Sr., and Mrs. Oppitz, Jr., were both stunned, but neither was hurt.

The two beds were smashed to kindling by the bolt. Mr. Oppitz, Jr., found that his trousers, lying at the foot of the bed had been torn to shreds, while his shoes had also been torn up.

It seems that the bolt of lightning traveled through the entire house, not a single room but what was damaged in some manner by the force of the aerial messenger.

Pembina, N. D., Aug. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Lightning struck the schoolhouse at Joliette, this county, set it afire and completely destroyed the structure. A high wind menaced neighboring buildings and the entire populace was out fighting the spread of the flames. Enough rain fell to materially assist in this work. The loss was about $3,500.

HOME IS DESTROYED.

Fire Wipes Out Residence in Locality of Sandstone.

Sandstone, Minn., Aug. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The house and contents of Clifford Dutton, on the A. J. Hall farm between Sandstone and Groningen, was totally destroyed by fire Saturday afternoon. It is supposed the fire originated from a defective chimney. Mrs. Dutton was engaged in washing and was at home alone at the time with her baby. As the building was so dry it burned like tinder and little furniture was saved. The sparks also set fire to the grass in the nearby bog. There was some insurance on the property.

LONG JOURNEY FUTILE.

Minot, N. D., Aug. 22.—When Marcus Bunce of Groveland, Mass., arrived in this city expecting to meet his prospective bride from Ryder who had assured him of her love after answering an advertisement in a matrimonial journal, he found her the wife of another. Arrangements had all been completed by letter. Bunce had sent his prospective birde a handsome diamond ring, and had even sent a substantial check with which to pay for her wedding outfit. Upon his arrival in Minot he called for his fiancee at her place of employment, only to find that she had two days before become the bride of a poor but hard working young man in this city.

Grand Forks, N. D., Aug. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Two minutes before his brother arrived at his bedside, having been called from the family home near Hannah, Oliver Skoene died Saturday night. His brother was in a hack just three blocks distant after having traveled for several hours to reach the bedside when the end came.

A. L. Woods, Long Prominent in That State, Victim of Heart Failure.

Grand Forks, N. D., Aug. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—A. L. Woods, candidate in the recent primary election for the Republican nomination for superintendent of public instruction, died at 3 o'clock Sunday morning at his home here of heart failure. He had been in apparently good health during the evening and retired without any complaints as to his condition. Awakening some time later he experienced slight pains and within a short time he was dead.

A. L. WOODS.

Mr. Woods was prominent in the Masonic lodge of the state, being past grand lecturer of the grand lodge. He became a resident of the state in 1887 and first came to prominent public notice as superintendent of schools in Walsh county. In 1901 he was deputy superintendent of public instruction of the state under J. M. Devine, while he was private secretary to Governor Frank M. White. With E. H. Pierce, he was the founder of the Grafton Record at Grafton, Walsh county.

CONFER WITH PEOPLE.

Northern Pacific Would Change Its Line Near St. Cloud.

St. Cloud, Minn., Aug. 21.—General Manager Slade of the Northern Pacific and several other prominent railroad officials were in the city recently conferring with the land owners along the Northern Pacific right of way near Watab, where improvements are being made. The company wishes to abandon its old line through old Watab and run over the new tracks which have been laid nearer the river and give a much straighter track from Sauk Rapids to Rice. In order to do this it was necessary to notify all of the property owners in that vicinity and let them file objections if they so desired.

The company intends to give the shippers a station at Watab and the change will make very little material difference to any one so no objections were made at the meeting. The work on the new tracks is now practically completed and the roadbed between here and Rice has been very much improved.

DISPUTE OVER BRIDGE.

Grand Forks and East Grand Forks Have Little Difference.

Grand Forks, N. D., Aug. 22.—Joint maintenance of the Red river bridges by Grand Forks and East Grand Forks is a question that will shortly come up for consideration here as a result of the declaration by Grand Forks that the DeMers avenue bridge, the main traveled bridge, is unsafe. East Grand Forks has heretofore refused flatly to contribute toward the upkeep of the bridges, the entire burden falling on Grand Forks. Just what steps will be taken in the matter of securing joint action is uncertain.

Ode of Manvel, this county, were brought to an end in the Grand Forks county district court when a divorce was granted to the wife, cruel and inhuman treatment being the grounds on which she secured a separation. They have thirteen children, eight of them still living, four being minors.

He was unkind towards her mother, a woman aged 83 years, and referred to her as the "old harpey." Low Water Closes Plant.

East Grand Forks, Minn., Aug. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The extreme low water in the Red river has occasioned much inconvenience in this city and Grank Forks, not the least of which is the closing down of the big plant of the Grand Forks Lumber company. The mill has been operating throughout the summer but the water has now fallen so low that it can no longer run. Pine River—The creamery has been closed and will not run any more this season unless a deal now on foot is carried out successfully, and that is an effort on the part of the business men to organize and run it on the co-operative plan. A list was circulated last week and $600 was raised in half an hour, which indicates that it will be a go.

Lundberg's stay in the latter city he carefully selected a very complete and serviceable outfit of furniture and tools with which to supply the manual training department to be opened in the Fosston public schools this year.

Roseau—Every indication points to that the Roseau county fair, Sept. 26-28 will be the most attractive ever held in the county. In matter of premium list for live stock great changes have been made over previous years, first prizes ranging from $3 to $5 more this year than before.

Pine City—The Pine County Agricultural society has had a crew of men at work on the fair buildings on the north side of the river for the past couple of weeks building additions, painting and repairing. The society expects to have the best fair ever held in Pine county.

S.S.S. DRIVES OUT MALARIAL POISONING

Malaria is a systemic blood poison, a disease which gradually destroys the richness and nourishing elements of the blood. When the malarial poison begins to absorb the rich, red corpuscles of the circulation we see pale, sallow complexions, and a general impairment of health. But Malaria means more than this, and as the blood becomes weaker from the poison, the appetite fails, digestion is disturbed, chills and slight fever are frequent, and in aggravated cases boils and eruptions, liver spots, and even abscesses break out on the flesh. To sum it all up, Malaria means blood poverty, and the only way to cure the trouble is to enrich and purify the blood. Nothing is equal to S. S. S. as a blood purifier and it is specially adapted to the cure of malarial troubles, because it contains no harmful minerals, and while ridding the blood of the malarial poison, S. S. S. builds up the entire system by its fine tonic effects. If you are suffering with malaria, begin the use of S. S. S. at once, and by cleansing the blood, rid yourself of this wasting disease. Winona, Minn., Aug. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—In a 10-inning game filled with sensations and the best baseball seen in the city the present season, Winona yesterday defeated the Duluth White Sox by the score of 1 to 0.

But one lonely hit was secured off the stellar pitching of Frank Baillies, while the locals gathered but five widely scattered blows off the delivery of Blancke and Worman.

In addition to his holding the White Sox hitters to a lone bingle, a double by Holstrom, Baillies struck out ten of the Sox. In the inning Holstrom hit for two bases, a double play ended what chances the White Sox might have had of scoring.

In the eighth the visitors had two men on bases with two gone. O'Brien came to bat and a hit meant two runs. The Orator hit an easy infield chance.

In the tenth Goodman hit for three bases, and with Stark at bat the squeeze play was worked, scoring the only run of the game.

TUESDAY WILL BE BOOSTERS' DAY

Get out and boost!

Tomorrow is the big day of the season—every fan of the city is wanted at the Athletic park to give a welcome to the White Sox.

Wausau and the Darby O'Brien team will play tomorrow afternoon on the home grounds, and the occasion will be made one to show the members of the team that the fans of this city appreciate the great ball the team has been playing on the trip, even though a majority of the games have been lost.

Duluth at the present time is playing as good baseball as any team in the league—much better than Superior, by the way—and every game lost on the present trip has been lost by the narrowest margins.

The management of the team has done, and is doing, everything possible to give the people of Duluth the best team in the league. With the present players in the lineup next season, and some new blood added, the team that represents this city will be one of the best since the old days of the Northwestern league.

Tomorrow afternoon the team will line up against the strong Wausau Lumberjacks, and the way the Sox are going augurs for a great contest. It is expected that the return of the White Sox will be greeted by far the largest week-day crowd of the season. The Booster day idea has spread among the fans and among the business men of the city to such an extent, that almost all of the special Booster day tickets have already been disposed of.

There is not a member of the team who has not made friends among the fans by the splendid showing of the team after the early season discouragements. There is a chance for the Sox to climb higher in the race, and the fans can help the team mightily right at the present time.

It is the belief that the fans can give the members of the team the greatest incentive for playing the best baseball of their careers, that started the idea of Booster day. Once the idea was suggested, it grew in instant popular favor, showing that the fans appreciate the work of the team.

Large numbers of tickets have been sold to the business men of the city, and the members of the board of trade have taken a large block. The indications are for a large crowd when play is called tomorrow—and a crowd that will make more noise than any gathering of the present season.

RECORD ESTABLISHED MANY YEARS AGO BROKEN.

Chicago, Aug. 22.—F. Holmes of Chicago, a member of the American Olympic team beat the world's record for three standing broad jumps here yesterday at the track meet of the Gaelic association, making 36 feet, 3½ inches. The record which has stood since 1876 was 35 feet, 9 inches and was held by W. S. Lawton.

JUNIORS BY SCANT FOOT

In the greatest finish ever seen at the Duluth Boat club, the Duluth junior eight Saturday evening defeated the eight composed of the bantam four and the pick of the squad substitutes, by a scant foot.

The race was for the cup offered by the club, which must be won three successive years to become the property of any eight. Last season the cup was won by the juniors, the win of Saturday evening being the second time the cup has been won by this crew.

Starting a length ahead of both the seniors and juniors, the bantams were overtaken by the juniors in the first 100 yards. From that point to the finish of the race it was a neck-and-neck contest between the juniors and bantams. The seniors struggled gamely, but after the first half mile several of the gallant crew became near-passengers, and the men so fervently anxious to "come back" steadily lost distance.

One hundred yards from home a wave knocked the oar out of the hands of one of the junior men. Here the fast-coming Walker crew caught and passed the juniors. From the 100-yard mark to the finish the race was the prettiest ever seen on the waters of St. Louis bay.

Within ten yards of the finish of the race the juniors responded to the shouts of Capt. Simon Forgette, fairly lifting their boat out of the water in the last few strokes. The spurt of the heavier men did the business, for the junior boat caught and passed the "banties" within ten yards of the finish, winning by a foot.

The race of Saturday evening has left undecided the question of supremacy between the two crews. The seniors have demonstrated beyond doubt that they cannot "come back," but the open and burning question of superiority remains unsettled between Walker's and Forgette's crews.

To settle this doubt, the two crews will hold the final race of the series Tuesday evening. The race promises to be one worth traveling miles to witness, as there is considerable rivalry between the two crews.

Word has been received from Commodore J. C. Otis of the Minnesota Boat club, stating that there is little doubt but that the members of the St. Paul club will agree to the proposed plan of holding an eight-oared race between the Duluth Boat club and the Minnesota club Labor day up the St. Louis river, the occasion being the club picnic.

The officials here will take the matter up, and it is probable the preliminary arrangements will be completed the present week.

DICK SCHELL WINS MEDAL

C. d'Autremont, Jr., Romps Away From Rivals in 40-Foot Class Race.

Dick Schell's C. d'Autremont, Jr., the fastest thing in the motor boat line that has beeen seen at the Head of the Lakes this or any other season, Saturday had a picnic in the open 40-foot special race over the five-mile triangular course of the Duluth Boat club.

With the Dingle Capitol and the Dingle Doman as the only serious contenders, the Schell craft was never pushed during the four laps of the contest.

Mack Cook's Dingle Capitol might have made the race more interesting, but for the fact that the engine was working badly. An hour before the race Cook and the mechanics up from St. Paul had the Capitol's engine apart. The boat was not in good shape for the race, and would undoubtedly have made a better showing, under more favorable circumstances.

While the crowd, the largest of the season, was disappointed over the forced pulling out of the Little Bob, it was given some idea of the great speed of the big motor fliers. Once the Schell engine was opened near the throttle limit, and the way the boat kicked her figurative heels through the water, made the crowd open its eyes in astonishment.

The Schell boat jumped into the lead as the starter's gun sent the boats away. It was never headed and romped through the twenty miles of the race. The Buster started, but owing to an accidental collision was also forced to withdraw. The Hydro, a new model Superior boat, which is reported to be very fast, did not start, owing to the rough sea.

With a true sportsmanlike spirit Mr. Schell suggested that the race of last Saturday be made simply a tryout; and not for the special cup offered by the Kelly Hardware company. This suggestion was made by the owner of the C d'Autremont, Jr., after he had learned that the Little Bob and the Dingle Capitol were in no condition for racing.

The officials of the club recognized the courteous action of Mr. Schell, and consented to follow his suggestion only on the ground that a gold medal be put up by the club.

The special race will therefore be contested next Saturday for the handsome cup offered by the Kelley Hardware company.

Mechanics are at the present time at work on the Cook boat, while the new wheel for the Little Bob will be put on the present week. Every boat promises to be in working order for the cup race of next Saturday, and the contest promises to be the most interesting event of its kind ever held at the Head of the Lakes.

The finish of the boats in Saturday's contest:

C. d'Autremont, Richard Schell	58:40
Dingle Doman, Frank Wade	63:35
Dingle Capitol, Mac Cook	64:07
North Butte, J. D. Mahoney	69:20
Clipper, Fred Holmberg	79:28

DOUBLE-HEADER IS DIVIDED

Hibbing, Minn., Aug. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Hibbing and the St. Paul Colored Gophers divided a double-header yesterday, the visitors taking the first game 7 to 1, and the second being won by the locals in ten innings, 6 to 5.

In the first game, Johnson held the locals to three hits and struck out eleven men. Jensen started well and the game was close up in the seventh inning, when the Hibbing pitcher exploded, his teammates were unnerved and the Gophers scored six runs. Marshall contributed to the gaiety of the colored cohorts by rapping out a homer with the bases full.

Jensen also started the second game for Hibbing, but he threatened to blow up again and Williams was substituted. The game was a see-saw affair, Hibbing pulling out a victory in the tenth on Calligan's single and Carroll Booth's long hit. The scores:

Gophers ....0 0 1 0 0 0 6 0 0—7 7 2

Batteries—Jensen and Carroll; Johnson and Armstrong.

Gophers ....2 1 0 2 0 0 0 0 0—5 9 2

Batteries—Jensen, Williams and Carroll; Davis and Armstrong.

SPANISH YACHTSMEN ARE BADLY BEATEN.

Marblehead, Mass., Aug. 22.—The Spanish Sonder yachtsmen went out of the harbor today for the final race of the international series. The three challengers, Chonto, Papoose and Mosquito II, were so decisively beaten by the Americans last week that after the Harpoon had won the President Taft cup the only boats left in the contest for the Governor Draper cup were the Beaver and Cima. There was very little hope that any of the visitors would be able to capture a single trophy as a souvenir of their American visit.

CASS LAKE WINNER OVER BAGLEY NINE.

Cass Lake, Minn., Aug. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Another scalp was added to Cass Lake's long string of victories when the locals defeated the Bagley team here yesetrday by the score of 7 to 1. The game was fast at times, when, with men on bases and good chances to score, fast work and fine pitching prevented them from crossing the pan. In the fifth inning the visitors had three men on bases and no one out, but Schmidt tightened up and struck out the next three batters. Five hits were collected off his delivery, but they were well scattered. Sixteen of the visitors fanned the air, while nine of the locals went out by the same route. The Cass Lake boys had on their batting clothes and touched up McKaig for a total of twelve safe drives.

LUMBERMEN ARE SHUT OUT

Fitwells Win Fast Game From Cloquet By 3 to 0 Score.

Visitors Are Unable to Bunch Their Hits on Talbot.

Yesterday afternoon at Athletic park the Fitwells of this city demonstrated their superiority over their ancient rivals, the Cloquet baseball team, defeating the lumber men by the score of 3 to 0 in a game that was fast and exciting from the call of play until the end of the ninth inning.

The game was witnessed by one of the largest crowds that has ever attended an amateur game in this city. Cloquet sent about 300 rooters and the friends of the Fitwell aggregation were out in force, making more noise than the loud-voiced boys from Cloquet could produce at any stage of the contest.

Ed Talbot was on the mound for the Fitwells, holding the Cloquet bunch to six scattered hits. Bonville was on the hill for the visiting lumber men, and he succeeded in holding the clothiers to precisely the same number of hits as his hurling opponent.

Talbot had the better of the argument, from the fact that he kept the hits of the visitors scattered throughout the game. In the fifth the locals got to Benville plenty, all of the Fitwell runs being scored in this frame.

In the fortunate fifth Swanstrom hit one that Sanstrom failed to get his digits on, going to second on the blow. Nelson's Texas leaguer fell into safe territory, Swanstrom going to third on the play and Nelson taking second on the throw in.

Young worked the squeeze, getting first and Swanstrom scoring. Gunderson hit a sacrifice fly to left, which scored Nelson. Boyle hit a sacrifice fly to Sanstrom, Young scoring the third run of the inning. Wicklund tripled to the left field fence, but was marooned at third when Talbot hit nothing more substantial than the sultry afternoon air.

The game was fast all the way through. Some sensational fielding behind Talbot kept the Cloquet efforts at zero, and also lifted the Fitwell pitcher out of several deep and dangerous holes.

Tommy Doyle leaped into the afternoon air and pulled down a line hit from the bat of Sanstrom. The Cloquet outfielders also performed very much after the manner of some of the men employed by the Ringling brothers on several occasions.

AS SEEN FROM THE SIDE LINES

(BY BRUCE.)

Why Is It?

Why Is the Game of Prize Fighting Going to the Bow Wows?

Because—

A bunch of gamblers are out to fleece the dear old public—

Fights are faked to suit the fancy of the wise money—

The gate receipts are the biggest consideration; the fight the least—

Fighters are becoming afflicted with getrichitis" and think more of advertising and rich purses than of fighting and giving the public a square deal—

The Jeffries-Johnson alleged fight was the biggest swindle ever perpetrated on the American public, and a fake and sham that won't be soon forgotten—

Fighters have joined hands with the gambling element, and are out to do the public, first, last and always.

A story in the current issue of one of the standard magazines, gives a jolt straight from the shoulder to the decadent game of prize fighting. The story, written by a writer who has taken the proper slant at the present fight situation, states that the American public, loving square and honest sport, will not tolerate the crooked game that is being played at the present time by the gambling profession.

We Americans are, after all has been said, a race that loves ideals. You can talk about conditions over on the other side all you please, Bill, but when it comes down to loving something that is on the square and above board, there is no nation on this old mundane sphere that can make the American straighten out the proud arch in his neck.

Prize fighting in the past has been a great old game. There were men in the game in the days that have gone in the passing procession at whom the finger of suspicion was never pointed. "Yours truly, always on the level, John L. Sullivan," was one of this class of fighters. Lion-hearted Jack Dempsey was another. These men never pretended to be anything but fighters. They never tacked "Gentleman" after their names and with this byword of respectability to their "repertory," so to speak, went out to deliberately fake and humbug the public.

For the past decade people have asked: "Do you think the fight will be on the square?" There you have it. Many times the fights of the past few years have not been on the level.

One could refer, simply to refresh your memory, to the Corbett-McCoy fiasco of Madison Square Garden, New York. James J. Corbett was known in those days as "Gentleman Jim." Well, he didn't hesitate in the least to trick the public and cheat honest men who had wagered on what they thought would be an honest and square fight.

There was the Gans-McGovern clean-up in Tattersall,s, Chicago. The word was quickly passed along to plunge on McGovern. It was a fixed affair and those who bet on Gans, who could have undoubtedly won had the fight been on the square, never had a run for their money.

Coming down to two fights of more recent date. In the Johnson-Ketchel battle the public was lied to in regard to the weight of both. Ketchel was reported to weigh in the neighborhood of 180 when, as a matter of fact, he scarcely scaled over the middleweight limit.

Johnson let Ketchel stay until, maddened by a chance blow on his cocoanut-shaped bean, he went in and put the middleweight champion out with a couple of well-delivered punches.

There was the case of Kaufmann. He never had a chance with Johnson. The man who was angling for a fight with poor, old physically worn-out Jeffries, permitted this slow and awkward never-waser to stay ten rounds because he did not desire to show his hand to the public.

We will never learn how much money was cleaned up on the Jeffries-Johnson fight. The public, as usual, paid the money to the manipulators of the biggest fight fraud of the age. The American people won't stand for that kind of a game very long, and today the area where fights can be held is being restricted to the desert of Nevada.

Just the other night in Philadelphia, Sam Langford, a colored fighter who has grown prosperous of late on the money paid by the public, deliberately threw the public down and crawled out of a fight. They do say that the colored gent came to Philadelphia without taking the trouble to train seriously for a day.

The game is dying, and there are those whose mental grasp is so small that they cannot see the true significance of the outcry against the game.

The governor of California put a stop to the Jeffries-Johnson frameup in California because it is commonly supposed that it was on the cards for Jeff to win through the laying down of the black. There are those who believe that Johnson would have lost—ha, ha—if the fight had been held in Jeff's native state.

True it is that there are a great many conditons that need reform quite as much as prize fighting. It isn't the game that has brought down the falling bricks of protest from every section of the country, but the methods of the gamblers and crooks, who have made the game an institution for the coining of illegitimate gain.

The American people love the great old game of baseball and we also flock in thousands to the great college game of football. Why? Because the public knows that here are two games that are inherently on the square.

Baseball managers are too wise ever to attempt to bamboozle the public. No one has ever presumed to credit a college man with even desiring to throw a football game.

The fight game is on rather wobbly legs, and when the reason for the groggy condition of the game is looked for, it may be found in the class of conscience-scarred short sports who think it a test of cunning and finesse to skin the public. The public will laugh last.

The New Rules.

At last we have the secret of the new rules. The labor of the committee on rules has been long and arduous, one would gather from the revolutionary changes that have been made in the game. Interference, as we knew it, in the sweet and flagrant past, is no more, and the flying tackle has also been chased from the fray.

When a player tackles the coming season, he must see to it that one of his Trilbies is planted solidly on Mother Earth. No more can a player bring applause from stands and bleachers, by making one of those sensational flying lunges through the air at the shoestrings of a charging opponent.

No more will sister or loving parent or doting sweetheart gasp: "That's George." George will have to anchor himself to the ground and wait with straining impatience until the man with the ball comes to his little territory.

The present season the player whose side has possession of the ball cannot kindly aid his team mate through the lines of resistance that are so stoutly maintained by all well trained teams. The new rules forbid aiding a player with the ball by placing hands or arms on him, and giving him an aiding shove or an encouraging lift.

Again, the forward pass is resstricted. Fewer players, by the nature of the rules, can handle the ball, and the ball must pass the neutral zone, which is a space of twenty yards beyond the line of scrimage.

The game is divided into four periods, a rest of three minutes being taken between the first and second and third and fourth periods. Between the second and third periods a rest of fifteen minutes is provided for.

Players can leave the game and return, when they feel that they will be further interested. Thus substitutions can be made with reckless abandon.

Just how the new rules will work out, is an experiment that many followers of the game will anxiously look forward to. The game may lose that intense interest that formerly marked it; again, it may be improved by the purity bath. It will be of interest to watch the progress of play under the new regime.

How About the Pirates?

Those experts on baseball, general habitat, New York and Chicago, and occasionally Boston, have delighted these past two weeks in picking Chicago in the National and Philadelphia in the American to cop the calico.

We'uns on the plebian porch humbly point to the progress of that smoky crew from Pittsburg. The Clarke band has made progress in the battle the past week, and at the gait the stogies are going at the present writing, they may soon be within tagging distance of the Cubs.

Here in Duluth there are many of us who desire devoutly to give three cheers at the end of the season for the Cubs. But we are afraid, honest to goodness we be. Those Pirates are a pesky tribe, hiting triples and two-basers with reckless abandon when hits are needed. Chicago can't let down and win, and Pittsburg may upset the dope of the experts.

BINGHAMS SLAUGHTER DULUTH HEIGHTS TEAM.

At Superior yesterday afternoon the Bingham Hardware team of the Duluth-Superior league defeated the Duluth Heights team of this city by the score of 10 to 1, putting the Duluth team out of the running for the league pennant and tying with the Oak Halls of this city for first place in the Duluth-Superior league standing.

As a result of the game of yesterday the Oak Halls and Binghams will play a series of games for the league championship.

Olson was in great form and held the Duluth team to five hits and struck out fifteen men. Danielson was easy for the Superior sluggers. Besch was the only Duluth player who could fathom the deep curves of Olson, getting four clean hits. Score:

Binghams ....2 1 1 2 1 0 1 2 x—10

Batteries—Danielson and Harwood; Olson and Hussey.

PERSECUTED BY WORKMEN

Young Austrian Lad's Superstition Made Him Butt of Fellows.

Could Bear Jokes No Longer and Arrest Follows Assault.

A superstition brought to this country from Austria, coupled with the tendency of a number of his fellow-workers at the Carbolite works to annoy him, caused the arrest of Joe Kotaj, a young Austrian, this morning, and incidentally brought out a story involving not a little pathos when Kotaj was arraigned before Judge J. B. Flack this morning in justice court.

The superstition which is said to be generally prevalent in Austria is to the effect that when a cuckoo rests on the ridgepole of a house, death or other serious misfortune is due to fall upon its inmates. Kotaj said this morning that a year ago his family was living happily on a farm in Austria. A cuckoo alighted on the house, and within six months his mother, father, brother and sister were dead and he was left alone in the world. He seemed to regard the catastrophe as the natural result of the bird of ill-omen and its visit.

Seeking his fortune, young Kotaj came to America. Drifting to West Duluth, he secured employment in the Carbolite works. While there the young fellow's story became known to his fellow-workmen, and the humorous side of the superstition appealing to them, they commenced to tease Kotaj about it, imitating the call of the bird and joking him about it.

According to the story of a couple of witnesses who appeared this morning, Kotaj stood this as long as he could, and with the memory of what dire results had been visited upon his family as a result of the bird's visit still fresh in his mind, the boy broke down and wept several times, which only added to his persecution. He appealed to the superintendent, who ordered the practice stopped, but the men took it up again this morning, and as a result Kotaj attacked one of them. The others joined in, but the sturdy Austrian was a match for them, and came out of it with merely a cut on the lip, while several black eyes decorated his opponents' faces. One of them swore out a warrant for Kotaj's arrest, and at the hearing this morning he told his story.

Judge Flack decided that Kotaj was not the principal offender and dismissed him.

SECOND FIRE AT BOX FACTORY

Proprietor Believed That the Blaze Was of Incendiary Origin.

A fire believed to have been of incendiary origin started last night in the yards of the Riekhoof box factory in New Duluth and before it was checked did damage approximating $1,500. There has been no positive evidence of the incendiary origin of the blaze, but from the fact that it so quickly succeeded the fire of last Saturday night, W. H. Rieckhoff, proprietor of the factory is convinced that some one is trying to injure him.

The blaze of last night was fought by the department aided by a large number of volunteers and extinguished after a three hours' fight. The total damage from the two fires is placed at close to $6,000 by the proprietors.

"I know of no one who would have any special motive in injuring us,' said Mr. Rieckhoff this morning, "and I have no suspicions as to who set the blaze, but I cannot see how any other explanation can be offered."

The places where the two fires started are about a block apart.

Steel Plant Workers Near Sixty-Ninth Avenue Sign Petition.

A petition is being circulated today among the people resident in the vicinity of Sixty-ninth avenue west asking that the Northern Pacific erect a flag station at the Sixty-ninth avenue crossing. The flag station is for the benefit of residents in the vicinity employed on the steel plant site, who now have to come clear down to the West Duluth station and then go back over a mile to their homes.

They want an arrangement so that the local trains to Fond du Lac will stop there when signalled. It is said that a large number of people are inconvenienced by having to come to West Duluth every morning and evening, and as the train has to slow up for yard switches at Sixty-ninth avenue anyway it should be very little trouble for the company to establish the station. They claim that it will be a necessity in the near future, as the number of persons working at the plant is increased.

TO CONSIDER REQUEST.

Commercial Club Looking Up Conditions in Canadian Northern Yards

The West Duluth Commercial club at its Friday meeting will consider the request of the Canadian Northern for vacation of Bristol and Roosevelt streets between Sixty-fifth and Sixty-ninth avenues for yard purposes, and a committee is looking up the situation this week. The road's petition has been submitted to the council and referred to the board of public works. It is probable that some action will be taken by the council a week from tonight. It is not expected that the club will raise any serious objection though they may ask for the retention of a right-of-way across the yards somewhere near this point.

PIANO MORE ATTRACTIVE THAN SEWING MACHINE IN SOME WARDS

There are many peculiar features about the city assessor's books.

Listen: In the First ward there are, according to the assessor's books, 635 sewing machines, and 742 pianos. Music is more important in the First ward than frills and tucks and pleats. With those 742 pianos and as many young voices, the hum of the sewing machine sinks into insignificance. The piano is usually located where the assessor cannot fail to see it, while the sewing machine reposes in a dark room usually located in the rear of the house. It is a cinch that the old machine is not used as much as it used to be, but the sewing machine usually precedes the piano in every home.

In the Fifth ward there are 209 sewing machines and 237 pianos. Music seems to predominate in the Fifth ward also.

In all the city there are only 683 more sewing machines than pianos.

There are no sheep in Duluth. In all there are 46 hogs, of the four-legged variety, scattered fairly evenly throughout the city. They are valued at $181.

In the Third ward there are 5 cows and but 32 in the Second. The other 1,749 bovines are scattered throughout the city.

Diamonds Scarce.

The Sixth ward boasts only $95 worth of diamonds. In all the city the diamonds owned and shown by local shops are valued at $46,399. One family alone in the East end is said to have that much money tied up in precious stones. The stones in the First ward are valued at $37,710. The Second ward is second richest in precious stones with $4,240. The amounts of the several wards then come down to the Sixth, which admits $95 worth.

There are 610 dogs in Duluth. One man says there are more than that number right around his house. They are valued at $3,222.

There are but 5,977 watches and clocks in the city. This number includes those on hand in the local jewelry shops. According to the assessor's books many people "haven't time."

There are 257 automobiles. This figure includes all other power vehicles. That means bicycles.

Again, in the Second ward there are a great many wagons, but there are not nearly enough horses to draw them. The wagons outnumber the horses and are not considered nearly so valuable.

Land Along Birch River and Tributary Streams Is Withdrawn.

Notice of the first water-power site reserve set aside in this district by President Taft under the law approved June 25, giving the president power to withdraw from entry land suitable for water-power sites, was received at the United States land office here this morning.

July 29 President Taft withdrew from entry 3,578 acres of land in towns 62-11, 61-12, 61-13 and 60-14, along the Birch river and tributary streams, setting it aside as water-power site reserve No. 148.

The land withdrawn is included in the tracts applied for by the Minnesota Canal & Power company. The first application was filed by the company April 1, 1904, and the profile was rejected by the war department. Recently the application was reinstated and it may now be acted upon.

Mr. and Mrs. Dill will be tendered a banquet at the Holland hotel by the members of the company after the performance of "The Squaw Man," in which they will appear tonight.

TESTIFIES IN BRIBERY CASE

Representative White Is First Witness in Browne's Trial.

Chicago, Aug. 22.—Taking of testimony in the second trial of Lee O'Neil Browne for alleged bribery in the election of William Lorimer to the United States senate, was expected to follow the presentation of the state's case today before Judge Kersten in the criminal court. State's Attorney Wayman has intimated that witnesses who did not testify at the first trial will be called to the stand for the state. Special care was observed yesterday by the officers in charge of the jury.

Both the prosecution and the defense are lining up their forces for a strenuous contest in which no legal technicality will be overlooked. Representative Charles A. White of O'Fallon was the first witness. White's charge that Browne paid him $1,000 to vote for William Lorimer was the basis of the indictment against the minority leader in the lower house.

The state's attorney's address occupied only one hour, and Representative White was called as the first witness for the prosecution. Judge Kersten, following the precedent set by Judge McSurely in the first trial, stated that testimony relating to the alleged "split" of a "jackpot" at St. Louis would be admitted.

Martin Beck Comes From New York and M. Meyerfeld From Frisco.

M. Meyerfeld, Jr., Martin Beck and others identified with the management of the Orpheum circuit of vaudeville theaters, are in the city to attend the opening of the new Orpheum in Duluth.

Mr. Meyerfeld of San Francisco, is president and Mr. Beck of New York, general manager of the Orpheum company. In the party are Herman Fehr of Milwaukee, a stockholder; C. E. Raymond, manager of the Minneapolis Orpheum; Patrick Casey of New York, a booking agent; and F. T. Matthews of New York, who inspects all the houses and has found the new Duluth playhouse right up to scratch.

These gentlemen were guests of Mr. Beck at luncheon in the Spalding palm room today and when asked if the interests they represented were responsible for the condition of the sky as a sort of press agent stunt signalizing the advent of the Orpheum forces in this city, Mr. Beck shook his head.

"No, not that. I consider that it is the torch of wisdom, which began to shed its rays over the city upon the advent of Mr. Meyerfeld, whose massive intellect is excuse enough for such a phenomenon as you now have an opportunity to observe."

Mr. Meyerfeld turned to hide his blushes.

The members of the party talked of the new playhouse here, saying that while it is much like the other Orpheum theaters controlled by the organization, it was right up to date in every respect and possessed some very attractive features. Mr. Meyerfeld was particularly pleased with the side lines, which he considers especially graceful.

Recently President Meyerfeld and General Manager Beck completed a two-months' survey of the European field and garnered large packages of new attractions, which will be on the Orpheum circuit this season. The "turns' will be featured on both sides of the Atlantic in the houses controlled by the Orpheum circuit.

Another new house is being built at Winnipeg and Mr. Beck said it was planned to open it in a month or two.

Mr. Beck and Mr. Meyerfeld are two of the most important figures in the theatrical business of the country at the present time.

VALUES SAG IN A DULL MARKET

Red Metal Situation Weaker—Pressure Is From Inside Interests.

Weakness in the red metal situation, political clouds and offerings of stock apparently from inside interests sent values downward today. Trading was dull and the undertone was weak. The selling started at the opening and the pressure was concentrated, Amalgamated responding most sharply to the liquidation. The entire copper list was affected. Toward noon shorts took profits and the market reacted slightly but when this class of support was withdrawn values sagged to the close which was weak. Trading was light both here and in the East.

The buying movement which took around 200,000,000 pounds of the red metal has subsided. The prevailing quotation for electrolytic is 12¾c. Business is extremely small in comparison with the trade in the latter part of July and the fore part of the current month. Producers are hopeful and look for an advance in the quotations. The supply of copper metal is expected to show a shrinkage in August.

A favorable feature of the market situation is the improvement in the bond situation, which has been dull for several years. Investors appear to be returning to conservative securities and collateral founded on business long established and of financial soundness.

Trading here was dull. The opening was weak, but toward the close the tone showed improvement, as there were few offers. Both prospective buyers and sellers were averse to entering the market in the face of the extreme dullness and the declining market in the East. Copper Queen sold at 29c, Shattuck at $22.50, Warrior at $5.75, Amazon-Montana at $3.50 to $3.62½, Calumet & Montana at $1, Calumet & Corbin at 45c and 46c, Calumet & Sonora at $12.50 and Mowatza at 77c. Mowitza was one of the strongest stocks on the board on account of favorable news from the property.

Amalgamated sold at $65.50, $64.87½, $65.12½, $64.75 and $64.87½; Butte-Ballaklava at $11.25, $11.50, $11 and $11.12½; Calumet & Arizona at $61; Giroux at $7 to $6.75; North Butte at $29.87½ to $28.25; Ojibway at $6.50; Greene at $7.50 to $7.62½.

Walker's copper letter in Saturday's Boston Commercial said:

"Copper is strong and the market is active. Lake is 13 cents, and electrolytic is 12¾ cents a pound. The volume of business done recently has been very large, and the amount of copper held by producers and selling agencies has been reduced in some cases 60 to 75 per cent. The actual advance in price from the low for all grades slightly exceeds ½ cent a pound. Producers have been meeting consumers in a fair spirit and supplying them with copper without demanding any considerable advance in prices, and consumers have responded by purchasing quite freely for September and October delivery. As a result of this the statistical position of the metal is undergoing a very decided improvement Both domestic deliveries and exports should show large increases for at least two or three months to come, and both the domestic and foreign surpluses should be greatly reduced During the first half of August the foreign visible supply showed a further decrease of 5,626,880 pounds, and is now smaller than at any previous time since last October. This month's exports promise to exceed those of July by 40 to 50 per cent.

"In discussing the outlook for the metal, there is a general disposition to place too much stress upon the real, or rather assumed, business depression in this country. For eight or nine months past a coming business reaction in the United States has been predicted freely on every hand, but so far it has failed to materialize. Merchants everywhere have reduced their lines of goods to the minimum, and yet their purchases have compared quite favorably with those of the first seven months of 1909, a period in which it was generally conceded that business was very good, and, so far as I am able to learn, commodities of all kinds are moving quite freely now."

A message today from the Mowitza property said that a crosscut which has been driven ninety-six feet is in the lime bedding of the formation which is an indication of the presence of mineralized ground. The crosscut has encountered evidences of mineralization and the management believes the vein sought will soon be encountered.

The drift on the fourth level south of the shaft of the Red Warrior was driven ten feet in one day recently, indicating that the development work is in soft sand carbonates. The drift is showing up a large tonnage of ore. On the 400-foot level north a winze has been sunk twenty-three feet. It is in soft carbonates and the mineral matter is considered highly satisfactory. The management is busily engaged in blocking out ore and proving up the extent of the ore bodies.

PREFERS TO TALK FISHING

J. M. Hannaford Dodges Railroad Topics and Discusses the Brule.

J. M. Hannaford, second vice president of the Northern Pacific Railroad company, is in the city today, en route to St. Paul from the Brule, where the railroad official has been rusticating since the second of the present month.

When asked about railroad affairs in general, and the crop situation in particular along the line of the Northern Pacific, Mr. Hannaford replied that he felt as if he was not connected with the railroad, he had been away so long.

Instead, therefore, of discussing railroad affairs and the present condition of traffic, the railroad official fell into a discussion of the fishing situation at the Brule.

"There are so many people there at the present time that the fishing is not what it was in the old days," said Mr. Hannaford. "It was about twenty-two years ago that a few of us first went up to the Brule. We have been going there every season since.

"In the old days the fishing was the very best in the country. Now you find so many people living there, so many canoes on the stream all the time, the the trout fishing is nothing like it used to be. There is still some very good fishing at the Brule, but in those good old days we had the very best fishing in the world," and at this point the railroad man permitted a sigh to escape him.

Mr. Hannaford left this afternoon for St. Paul.

CHEADLE IN THE FIELD

City Clerk Files for Senate in the Fifty-First District.

H. W. Cheadle has formally declared himself a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the state senate from the Fifty-first district by forwarding to the secretary of state the necessary declaration and fee.

Mr. Cheadle will run against Senator Laybourn, who is expected to be unopposed for the Republican nomination. Mr. Cheadle is one of the strongest Democrats in this part of the state and may be counted upon to make it an extremely interesting campaign in the Fifty-first.

SHALLENBERGER CHARGES FRAUD

Latest Returns Indicate Less Than 200 Majority for Dahlman.

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 22.—On the face of the returns from the Democratic state-wide primaries which are nearly complete in unofficial form, Mayor Dahlman has won the gubernatorial nomination by less than 200 majority over Governor Shallenberger. The announcement was made last night that should the official returns corroborate these figures, Governor Shallenberger will contest the nomination in the courts. He charges fraud in the vote in Omaha, which gave Dahlman nearly 6,000 majority.

Drank Whiskey in Des Moines

For More Than Twenty Years Cured By The Neal Three Day Treatment.

"State Senator Bruce,
"Atlantic, Iowa.

"As everybody in Des Moines knows, I was an awful drunkard. One cold night last January, a lawyer friend of mine found me drunk and unconscious in my office. In my drunken bewilderment I had "blowed" out the gas, and was not far from dead. Major Illsley of the Volunteers of America took me to the Neal Institute, and I was there twenty-four hours before I knew where I was. The Neal cured me perfectly and since taking the treatment I have gained 43 pounds. My mind and body is in a better condition today than it has been for 20 years.

(Signed) "———."

The Neal is an internal treatment, without hypodermic injections, that cures the worst case of drink habit at the institute or in the home in three days.

No Cure, No Pay.

It is the moral duty which every person addicted to the drink habit owes to his family, relatives, friends, society and the public, also every one who is interested in or knows of one who is addicted to the drink habit, to call upon, write or 'phone the Neal Cure today for free copies of their guaranteed Bond and Contract, booklet, testimonials, endorsements and bank references, which will be cheerfully furnished. MANY AMUSING INCIDENTS CAUSED BY ATMOSPHERIC PHENOMENON

A man came down the stairs that lead to a rooming house on Superior street. It was about 9 o'clock this morning. The man was obviously in a mood to sympathize if not to sing with the Sultan of Zulu on the morning after. He stepped out on to the sidewalk. His uncertain glance suddenly became an intent one and he shuffled his feet uneasily. He looked at the sky; then he looked at the passersby. There was an expression of haunting fear in his eyes, until he noticed that others, too, found something odd about the appearance of the roof of the world. Then he rubbed his rather tired looking optics and headed for a bracery.

A little girl toddled along Superior street ahead of her mother this afternoon, dividing her attention between the sky and the pretty things in the shop windows. A painter's wagon passed in the street and the little girl's attention was arrested by it. Then she asked, wonderingly:

"Don't you 'spose, mama, that maybe God tipped over his paint pail?"

"From Idaho? This smoke? Ye'r crazy," was the petulant remark of a man who asked an acquaintance how he accounted for the hue of the sky. That's impossible. More than that, it's improbable."

Among the many stories that were started on their amusing way as a result of the peculiar appearance of the sky today was one that cropped out at the Commercial club. Someone suggested that the end of the world was at hand, and A. B. Hostetter, who has been living, breathing and sleeping over plans for the St. Louis county exhibit at the state fair, remarked: Well, we'll take a good exhibit with us."

"Take it from me, Cull, this ain't no forest fire smoke. It's sure enough Halley's comet. You know, the high brows told as how the tail of the comet was fan shaped and very thin stuff. Then they failed to locate said fan-shaped tail. It's my belief that this here yellow stuff is the lost tail of Halley's comet. Being out on its own hook, it probably got ambitious and grew some, or spread out more so as to cover more territory. Now it's just wandering around, friendly like, and taking a peek at us. How'd you like to ride an aeroplane up there in that yellow stuff. If I had one o' them machines I'd go up, just fer fun, and demonstrate the soundness of my theory."

And then, for fear some one might offer him an aeroplane, the Halleyite wandered away.

THE FINEST IN THE WORLD

Prof. George Groat Pays High Compliment to Northern Minnesota.

Not Excelled Any Place for Dairying and Agriculture.

According to Prof. George Groat of the department of animal husbandry of the Minnesota school of agriculture Northern Minnesota and Wisconsin, especially the territory immediately in the vicinity of the Head of the Lakes is the finest country in the Northwest for dairying and other agricultural purposes. Mr. Groat is now engaged in a week's inspection tour of the vicinity about Duluth and vicinity and he is unreserved in his praises of the conditions of the crops. Better pastures are to be found in this vicinity according to Mr. Groat than anywhere in Minnesota or Wisconsin. The clay soil has retained moisture much better than the sand of the southern and central portions of the state and as a result pastures are looking better, herds are in better shape and farmers are feeling the dry spell less than anywhere else in Minnesota.

Mr. Groat was unreserved in his praise of the Sebenius dairy at Lakeside.

"Mr. Sebenius is making every effort to run a dairy as it should be run," said Mr. Groat this morning. "And I do not hesitate to say that it is he most sanitary, up-to-date dairy in the Northwest. It excels anything that I have ever seen anywhere. Milk from there will test higher in butter fat and lower in bacteria than anywhere else in Minnesota. We are taking a great interest in Mr. Sebenius and he is embodying all of our suggestions. As a result he has one of the finest dairying plants anywhere.

"I also visited Mr. Snively's dairy and found excellent conditions, and the Singleton brothers have a fine herd. I expect to visit Hartley's island farm up the river before my return.

"We are recommending Guernsey cattle for Northern Minnesota, as they are peculiarly fitted for the climate here. Also they yield a 5 per cent test for butter fat as compared with the average herd's 3.8 per cent average and the Holstein 3.5 per cent average. That may be a surprise to some, but it is true that Holstein's average only 3.5 per cent, barely passing the legal test limit.

"In the southern and central part of the state they will have to use corn fodder to get through the winter with their cattle. From several fine stands of clover seen here, I doubt whether that will be necessary here.

"I have been paying considerable attention to your vegetable gardens since I came here and find that they, too, have withstood the drought in much better state than those of the more southern localities. They are the best I have seen since last spring.

"I have been much gratified to hear that the Jean Du Lhut farm has put in a large herd of Guernseys this summer. I have been purchasing some Guernseys for Mr. Sebenius on this trip.

"An illustration of the difference between the land here and that in the southern part of Wisconsin and Minnesota is the condition of the clover crop in the different sections. In the southern counties, the clover has not caught very well this year but here I saw a splendid catch of clover which will make good pasturage this fall. As a rule, though, we do not recommend pasturing on the spring seeding as it is liable to injure succeeding crops.

"The clover around Duluth is the best I have seen anywhere since early this spring. I am surprised to find that it grows so well the first year. I am informed that a yield of a ton and a half the first year is not at all unusual on a spring seeding and that is remarkably good.

"In my experience I have found very few places where clover does as well as it does here. The soil and climate seem to be particularly adapted for it and diversified farming. Where clover and corn will grow as well as they do in St. Louis county, there need be no fear for the future so far as agriculture is concerned. The clover is valuable because it takes the nitrogen out of the air and fixes it in the soil, so that the soil becomes richer from being used for clover.

"While in this vicinity I also saw some smut nose flint corn growing to the height of seven feet. Considering the dry weather we have had, this is remarkable. I also saw some fine Minnesota King corn. This is an earlier crop than the other variety, but it does not stool as much. I was told that from the eight acres of smut nose flint and Minnesota King corn eighty-five tons of ensilage is expected. Considering the difficulty which farmers throughout the Northwest are meeting to find forage for their stock, this corn fodder will help out greatly, especially in places like St. Louis county, where the yield is so great.

"On the farms there were some tomato vines which will yield half a bushel to the vine. With tomatoes selling at 52 cents a bushel, there should be a handsome profit on them. There was also some corn that was planted on July 9, which was already more than knee high. If the frosts do not come too soon, this crop will make fine fodder."

COME AFTER THEIR "PLANT"

Officers' Long Wait Beside Stolen Flour Is Successful.

Peter Vander, a foreman for the Pittsburg Coal company, and his son, Charles, were arrested by Detectives Terry and Toewe this afternoon as they drove up to a "plant" to haul away some flour which they had hidden.

The flour was stowed away in a shack at the corner of Third avenue east and the railroad yards. The "plant" had been discovered by the officers, who had been in waiting for some time for the culprits to show up.

For some time past flour has been stolen from the cars in the railroad yards. The detectives have been on the lookout for the thieves. When the stolen flour was located, the officers waited for the thieves to come for their booty.

MOTHER MARY OF THE DESERT.

Rosary Magazine: There passed away recently in New Orleans one of the most remarkable women who ever left their impress on the community. This was Mother Mary of the Desert, for over half a century superior of St. Mary's Boys' Asylum and for more than sixty-five years a member of the Order of Marianites of the Holy Cross.

She was in her eighty-fourth year. Just before dying she placed in the hands of one of her companions the diary which she had kept for sixty-five years and which will form a valuable document for her community in France and America.

Mother Mary of the Desert was the only living member of a little pioneer band of Marianite nuns who nearly sixty years ago came to Louisiana from France. The congregation to which she belonged was founded in Le Mans, France, in 1841, to establish and maintain hospitals and asylums, industrial schools, reformatories and creches; also to direct the Christian education of young women.

Mother Mary was born in France in 1825 and entered the order in 1846. She was professed at San Laurent, Canada, in 1847, and went to New Orleans in 1852, during the yellow fever epidemic. Her heroic service during the time of plague, publicly commended by the city officials, is still remembered in New Orleans.

She first had charge of the girls' orphanage and twenty-five years ago was made superior of the boys' asylum, where she was eminently successful. Many of the most prominent lawyers, physicians, pharmacists and other professional and business men of New Orleans were trained by Mother Desert and are proud to be known as Mother Desert's boys.

IT DOESN'T GO.

George Ade, at a dinner in New York, talked about American humor in England

"If we draw our American characters like comic valentines," he said, "the English think us funny. The characters were all comic valentines in 'Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch,' you know, and that play ran a year in London.

"Our own native humor they don't quite understand over there. So never try to be funny in London, for it's like making faces in church—hardly anybody smiles, while a host of good people are annoyed and shocked."

Duluth Board of Trade, Aug. 22.—Wheat was dull and lifeless today and there was more interest in the peculiar phenomenon resulting from the Idaho fires than in the wheat market. Cash markets were dead and there was no Eastern or export business. September wheat closed unchanged and December was without change. December was dead and the closing quotation was on a parity with Saturday's close.

Flax was moderately lively at the opening, but after a small volume of trading interest died out. September lost 6c; October 2½c; November 2½c, and December 2c.

Cash wheat was on a parity with the September contract; oats lost ⅜c; rye declined ½c and barley closed unchanged; Durum slumped 1c.

Trading was dull and there was little interest after the opening either in future options or spot business. Receipts in the Northwest continued moderately heavy and arrivals at country stations were said to be liberal. The grain went into store, however, and very little was offered on sales to arrive, said reports. Thrashing returns came from localities where the yields were moderate to good, and these gave many shorts courage to wait for a further decline.

At the opening some shorts covered and played for a reaction. The upturn was short lived, however, and toward noon values sagged to the opening. Cables were lower and statistics were moderately bearish. The visible wheat increase was 3,780,000 bu and Broomhall estimated that the stocks of wheat are 152,000,000 bu less than at this time last year, a shortage which is offset by the increased carry-over. World's shipments increased from 11,120,000 bu week before last to 12,940,000 bu last week. There was a slight decrease in the amount of wheat on passage.

Flour sales were reported to be moderate but scattered, and were chiefly to small buyers. The mills were not in the market today and the cash market was weak and dull. There was no export business and no stuff was sold for Eastern account.

Foreign news was moderately bearish. The weather in Southwestern Russia is favorable and a large amount of new wheat is expected at ports this week. The quality of new wheat is increasing. Markets are easier. The government's report on Prussia showed a lower average for spring and winter wheat in that country. France reported that it would need 100,000,000 bu of foreign wheat. This estimate merely repeated a former figure.

There was some trading in flax around the opening. A little stuff was sold to arrive from the country, some shorts covered. There did not appear to be any buying by crushers except a slight amount from Minneapolis. One crushing interest sold.

Broomhall cabled: Wheat opened under pressure of increased offerings prompted by lower American cables Saturday and heavy world's shipments, particularly from Russia and the Danube and values were ¾d lower. Following opening a firm undertone developed as offerings became lighter and shorts covered which caused an advance of ⅜d to ½d on unsettled weather in United Kingdom. Later in session selling pressure developed and values again showed a slight recession on outside liquidation and a poor inquiry for both cargoes and parcels. At this time the market was easy ¾d to ⅞d lower than Saturday.

Corn at opening was affected by the lower American cables and prices eased ¼d. Later this decline was recovered and the undertone developed some firmness on the scarcity of spots.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Opens With Slight Loss But Recovers Quickly.

Chicago, Aug. 22.—Wheat opened unchanged to ¾c off, but quickly recovered the loss in spite of weaker foreign markets and continued heavy world's shipments. There was a noticeable lack of selling pressure. Many traders took the position that receipts from the wheat country will decrease in volume in the next few days. September opened unchanged to ⅜c off at 98¼c to 98⅝c, and in the first hour worked up to 98⅞c, resting near to the top. December opened with a similar range at $1.02¼@1.02⅝ and climbed to $1.02¾@1.02⅞.

The market continued firm through most of the session. Selling pressure was felt in the last hour after the needs of the shorts had been met. The close was firm with September ⅜@½c to ½c higher at 99⅛c. December closed ⅜c to ⅜@½c up at $1.03@1.03⅛.

A general inclination among the shorts to cover gave the corn market the same tone and course shown by wheat. The opening figures were unchanged to ½c off and light offerings together with a fair demand crowded prices moderately up. September opened ¼@½c off at 59⅞@59⅝c, and moved slowly up to 60¼c. December opened unchanged to ⅜c down at 57¾@57½c and climbed to 58⅛c.

Fluctuations were within narrow limits. The close was steady with September ⅛c off at 60c. December closed ¼@⅜c to ½c up 58⅛@58¼c to 58¼c.

Oats started steady, ⅛c up to ¼c down and with a fair commission house demand and small selling pressure took on a little strength. September opened unchanged to ⅛c off at 36¾@36⅞c and advanced to 37c.

Stockyards houses were busy buyers of provisions, inspired by higher live hog prices. The market advanced from 5 to 40c, pork leading the van. Opening figures for the September products were: Pork, $21.75, 40c up; lard, $12.12½ 10c up; ribs, $12.65, 17½c higher.

THE MINNEAPOLIS MARKET.

Wheat Is Weaker on News and Grain Movement.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 22.—Weakness abroad, pressure of new spring wheat, heavy world's shipments and a big increase in the visible supply were all factors in a weaker opening today. Local elevator stocks decreased 25,000 bu for two days. Minneapolis today received 654 cars of wheat against 445 cars a year ago; Duluth 47 cars against 2, and Winnipeg, 57 cars against 72.

WALL STREET CLOSES WEAK

Reading Is Conspicuous in Decline at the Finish.

Prices Average Lower and Speculation Liquidation Is Seen.

New York, Aug. 22. — Trading was heavy in tone at the start, but offerings of stock were light and losses were confined to fractions except in Louisville & Nashville, which lost a point. St. Paul, Reading, Union Pacific and United States Steel as well as other leaders were down from a ½ to ¾.

Losses were increased throughout the whole list. Professional operators sold freely on the absence of any concerted support. St. Paul was hammered down 2 points. Then Reading was successfully attacked for a loss of as much and the whole list began to run off in a brisk manner. International Pump lost 1@, Union Pacific 1⅜, Northern Pacific, Southern Pacific, Baltimore & Ohio, Rock Island, United States Steel, Amalgamated Copper, American Smelting and Brooklyn Transit 1 to 1¼.

New developments were not sufficiently important to affect prices but the market nevertheless was depressed from 1 to 2 points below last week's closing with the selling of St. Paul, Union Pacific, Reading and United States Steel seeming urgent at times. Heretofore moderate recessions had uncovered a sustaining demand but today's decline failed to disclose any evidence of organized support. Bear operators made the most of their opportunities and gunned for stop-loss orders. Noon prices were a trifle above the lowest. Bonds were lower.

The market closed weak. Intermittent selling depressed the market again with Reading conspicuous in the decline. Prices averaged lower than before and there was some liquidation of speculative accounts. Reading sold 3¼ below last week's close and losses of 2 points or more were numerous in the representative stocks.

The Cotton Market.

New York, Aug. 22.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 21 points on August which was influenced by a renewal of the covering movement and of 11 points on later months, owing to the strength of old crop, better cables than expected and weather reports showing no rain of consequence in the Southwest over Sunday. August soon sold up to 16.53 or 26 points over Saturday's final, and new high for the season, but later positions were barely maintained owing to the absence of aggressive bull support, scattering liquidation and private wires reporting the showers of last week in the central belt had helped the Texas crop outlook.

Futures closed steady. Closing bids: August, 16.39; September, 14.28; October, 13.57; December, 13.47; January, 13.44; February, 13.45; March, 13.59; May, 13.53; June, 13.50; July, 13.51.

William Chappel, aged 75 years, formerly of Laporte, Ind., for many years prominent in Grand Army circles in the West, died near Boston, Aug. 20, of apoplexy at the home of his son, Joe Mitchell Chappel, the publisher and author in Dorchester. William Chappel, who was English by birth, was the father of the naval militia of Wisconsin, holding the rank of lieutenant junior graduate. He was commander on the staff of Corporal Tanner while the latter was commander-in-chief of the Grand Army. The body will be taken to Laporte for interment.

George M. Tibbs, head of the mercantile house of Tibbs, Hutchings & Co., formerly of St. Paul, but removed a few months ago to Minneapolis, is dead at his home at Minnetonka beach. Mr. Tibbs' health had been failing for upwards of a year, but up to a short time ago hope was entertained for his recovery. Mr. Tibbs was born on Long Island in October, 1858. He was educated in the common schools, and in 1873 became an office boy with Noyes, Smith & Co., New York City. In a short time he became one of the firm's general salesmen.

In 1881 Mr. Tibbs went to St. Louis. He remained only a short time, leaving to go to St. Joseph, Mo., and take a department with the John S. Brittain Dry Goods company, in which capacity he worked for five years. From St. Joseph he went to Omaha.

In 1891 Mr. Tibbs came to St. Paul and, associated with H. E. Hutchings, bought a controlling interest in the Powers Dry Goods company, changing the name to Tibbs, Hutchings & Co.

Mr. Tibbs was active in everything that tended to add to the growth and progress of St. Paul. He was one of the leading spirits in the auditorium movement. He was chairman of the committee that raised funds for the new Y. M. C. A. building. He was for two years president of the St. Paul Jobbers' union, a member of the public affairs committee of the St. Paul Commercial club, vice president of the Y. M. C. A., and a ruling elder in the Presbyterian church.

Mr. Tibbs is survived by his widow and two children, George M. Tibbs, Jr., and Anna B. Tibbs.

North Dakotan Accidentally Shot.

Sheldon, N. D., Aug. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Carelessly stepping in front of a young woman just as she fired a 22-calibre rifle with which the party had been shooting, A. F. Murphy received the bullet in the calf of his leg, the wound being extremely painful but not dangerous.

THE MODERN GIRL.

New York Sun: "I don't know what to make of the modern girl," said an elderly woman dressed in mourning. "She is beyond me. I don't know where she gets her nerve, her fearlessness, her command of a difficult situation.

The other day I went to visit a suburban friend out in Jersey. On my return I took a trolley into Newark to take the train for New York. The car was nearly filled with women going to the city to shop or market.

"At a village which we passed through six young men boarded the car and sat down together. They talked and laughed in a loud and offensive manner, made remarks on the women around them and swore so that everybody could hear them. They had no respect for my gray hairs or mourning.

"Suddenly a clear voice caused every one in the car to look at the speaker. She was a young woman, perhaps 25 or 26, apparently neither rich nor poor nor extraordinary in any way. She looked straight at the group of young men and said: I'll have you arrested when I get to Newark.'

"The six looked around at her with mouths open. Deep astonishment was printed on their faces. She faced them all and said again clearly: "I will have you arrested when I get to Newark.' She was perfectly cool and fearless and evidently meant exactly what she said.

"The effect was remarkable. The car became perfectly quiet. The young fellows whispered and tittered together a little, but nothing more was said out loud. On the edge of town before the car reached the general stopping place in the shopping center they all got off.

"Now that girl not only put the fear of judgment into those young men's hearts but she put shame into mine. I felt that I, who was old enough to be her mother, should have protected her, not she me. I felt that I, who have brought up boys of my own, should have had dignity and power enough to have controlled these youths. But the fact was I was afraid.

"The age long feminine instinct to endure annoyance rather than attract attention and draw all eyes upon myself held me silent. That girl by her looks was a nice, womanly, modest girl, and yet she had none of that feminine fear. As I reflected on her act I made up my mind that the old-fashioned shrinking, feminine modesty which suffers long and say nothing rather than endure notoriety bears a startling resemblance to plain cowardice.

"What I want to know is where the girl got the nerve to do a thing which a lot of women old enough to be her mother were afraid to do."

THE FIRST ONE.

A reporter had the honor to be interviewing Thomas A. Edison.

"And you, sir," he said to the inventor, "made the first talking machine."

"No," Mr. Edison replied. "The first one was made—long before my time—out of a rib."

A KNEELING PROPOSITION.

New York Tribune: "Pony" Moore, the once famous minstrel, is dead at the age of 80. He was one of the last of his kind.

"Moore," said a veteran Chicago manager, "used to make up his own jokes. Once when he played here he had his toes run over, and limped on that night with a foot that resembled a white pillow.

"'Ah's ez tendah-hoofed as Liza Johnsing,' he said to the audience with a chuckle. 'Yo' know 'bout Liza? Young Calhoun White, he sez to her proposin':

"'"Whaffo' yo' make a face like dat when I propose, Miss Johnsing?"'

"'"Well, Cal," said Liza, "Ah kain't give yo' offah propah consideration, less'n yo' takes yo' knee off'n mah co'n."'"

RUSKIN COLLEGE THRIVING.

Among the forty new men are miners, railway servants, engineers, one agricultural laborer, a bootmaker, joiners, shop assistants, a brass founder and telegrapher. The students were warmly welcomed by the head, Dr. Gilbert Shaw, who offered to the young men good advice on various points in order to show how they can gain the best possible advantage from their stay at Oxford.

Dear Sir—Beginning with July 30th you ran a For Sale ad for one week for me, the article to be sold being a 35-caliber Remington Automatic Rifle. Through the medium of the ad, I sold the rifle O. K., and could have sold two more, as well as one, as I heard from three buyers, either one of whom would have bought the gun. Many thanks,

Respectfully yours,

BUTTE-BALLAKLAVA COMPANY DEFENDANT IN SUIT FOR $1,100,000

Anaconda Mining Company Claims Ownership of Apexes of Veins.

Claimed to Be Another of the "Crimes of Amalgamated."

Duluth Men Claim It Is Plot to Secure Control Cheaply.

The Anaconda Copper Mining company brought suit today against the Butte & Ballaklava Copper company for $1,100,000 for ore alleged to have been unlawfully extracted from veins, the apexes of which are claimed in ownership by the Anaconda company, which seeks also an order restraining the Butte-Ballaklava company from continuing operations.

Heavy selling followed the announcement of the suit in the various stock exchanges of the country today and the stock broke three points from yesterday's close within less than an hour. It declined from $10.50 at the opening to $8 and then rallied, shorts covering and support coming from people who are most familiar with the property.

Whether or not the suit against the Butte-Ballaklava company is another of the "crimes," of Amalgamated remains to be seen. The Amalgamated controls the Anaconda by the ownership of 75 per cent of its stock and it in reality is the company which has brought the suit.

Secretary's Statement.

John A. Percival, secretary of the Butte-Ballaklava Copper company, said today that the suit was based on the desire of the "copper trust to obtain control of the Butte-Ballaklava company at a small cost." He said the company's offices in this city had not been notified of the suit and that his information was derived chiefly from his interviewer. He gave the following statement for publication:

"The action taken by the Anaconda company, which is in fact the Amalgamated, in bringing suit against the Butte-Ballaklava Copper company, in which claim is laid to ore already mined and being mined in the Ballaklava property, is we believe, unwarranted by existing geological conditions. The best expert opinions we have been able to obtain are to the effect that ore bodies so far opened up are without question owned absolutely by the Butte-Ballaklava Copper company, and the only inference is that the 'Copper trust' has taken this action to create a selling panic among Ballaklava stockholders with the ultimate object of obtaining control of the company at a nominal cost.

"We have the best legal and the best engineering advice as to our rights and should the suit ever be brought to trial, we are convinced that we will be easily able to prove not only that the rich veins in the Ballaklava mine apex on

TEDDY TAKES TO THE ROAD

He Will Travel Over 5,000 Miles and Make Fourteen Speeches.

New York, Aug. 23.—"I am very much pleased with Mr. Taft's statement. It makes the situation perfectly clear. If Nassau county wishes me to go to the state convention I shall go. I regard the issue as clear cut and as far as I am concerned there will be absolutely no compromise."

This declaration was made today by Theodore Roosevelt a few minutes before his departure on his Western speaking tour and followed a short conference with County Chairman Lloyd C. Griscom in the former president's private car Republic.

Oyster Bay, L. I., Aug. 23.—Col. Theodore Roosevelt left here this morning for New York, where he will make his start for his big speaking tour. The colonel's trip to the city was made in a motor car and not a few early risers in the village bade him goodbye as the machine whirled rapidly through the streets.

The colonel was in lively good humor and expressed his delight in the weather. The former president indicated that he would give out a detailed statement later with respect to President Taft's letter to County Chairman Lloyd Griscom of New York on the recent developments in the New York state situation.

From this morning, when he leaves the Grand Central station on the private car Republic, until 9:15 o'clock on the morning of Sept. 11, when the Republic is due back here, Col. Roosevelt will be kept constantly on the move, making speeches, attending receptions and dinners, reviewing parades and traveling. Each day from start to fin-

LEAVES COUNTRY OF WHICH HE WAS CHIEF

DR. JOSE MADRIZ,
Deposed President of Nicaragua.

MADRIZ HAS GONE AWAY

Deposed President of Nicaragua Takes Zelaya's Friends Along.

Brother of Conquering General Temporarily in Power.

Managua, Nicaragua, Aug. 23.—The downfall of the Madriz government, after the decisive defeats administered to the regular army by the insurgent forces of Gen. Estrada last week, was accomplished quietly and was marked by no scenes of disorder in the capital. President Madriz left the city quietly Sunday night, his plans being kept secret, aboard the government gunboat Momotombo, on which it is presumed that he ran down to the western extremity of Lake Managua, where he could board a train for Corinto.

The men who fled with the deposed president into exile are all, with the exception of Gen. Ortiz and Gen. Chavarria, former supporters and adherents of ex-President Zelaya, who could expect no mercy from the new administration.

Jose Estrada in Power.

The administration in the capital still is in the hands of Jose Delores Estrada, brother of the insurgent leader, to whom it was turned over by Madriz upon his flight. The provisional governor has, however, announced his intention of holding the reins of power only until the arrival of his brother, Juan J. Estrada, with his victorious forces.

SEVERE STORM STRIKES CHICAGO

Widespread Damage Is Done By Wind, Rain and Lightning.

Chicago, Aug. 23.—Widespread damage was inflicted by a brief rain and wind storm which broke over Chicago and vicinity early today. The wind reached a velocity of fifty-eight miles an hour and rain fell to a depth of 1.8 inches, the heaviest since last May.

The Monetary Loss Was Small.

Yachts and dredges were torn from their moorings, many buildings were struck by lightning, windows were broken, signs blown down, basements flooded, telephone circuits demoralized, boats and trains delayed, and several persons shocked by electric bolts.

"Sparrows Haven," a grove at Seventy-fifth street and Ingleside avenue where birds congregate in great numbers, lost 200 of its feathery inhabitants. A policeman found their bodies among the shattered trees today.

West Side Hotel Struck.

Guests of the Elite hotel, a West side hostelry, fled into the rain when the building was struck by lightening. A switch shanty was struck and four box cars were unroofed. A number of switchboard operators were severely shocked. Persons injured by trees, falling signs, etc., were numerous, but their hurts generally were not serious.

K. K. G. GIRLS GATHER AT BLOOMINGTON, IND.

Bloomington, Ind., Aug. 23.—By tonight more than 350 of the Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority are expected here for the twenty-fifth annual national convention of the organization, which opens today. All of the sorority and fraternity houses have been turned over to the committee to house the guests. The convention will continue until next Monday. Fraternity men from all over the country are expected in Bloomington for the dance and reception to be given during the gathering.

GOVERNMENT ASKED TO HELP AVERT FLAX FAMINE IN AMERICA

United States Importing Flax and Paint Prices Are Soaring.

Some Farmers Have Lost Money in Spite of Exorbitant Prices.

The present era of high prices for flaxseed is producing several problems of interest and of importance to the public.

As a result of the altitudinous values practically every paint manufacturer in the United States has advanced prices within the last few days from 10 to 33 per cent. The government is about to investigate the flax growing question, at the request of consumers of the seed, in the hope that the production of flax in the Northwest and elsewhere in the United States may be increased, so that this nation may return to an exporting basis and the evil of market manipulation may be minimized.

The flax crop this year will be short, and it appears that another season of unusually high prices is in prospect. Values have been high since last fall, and various farmers in the Northwest who expected the market to decline with the approach of the harvest this year sold the market short, only to be wiped out on succeeding advances. When the "short" bought back the stuff he had sold at lower prices, the seller invariably was another country grower who thought prices were too high. He probably was unable to protect himself in an advancing market, and when he tried to buy back his short flax he had to bid up the market. This pyramiding of shorts has been serious for many farmers, and it has been one of the contributing factors in present high prices. It opens up the question of the manipulation of the Duluth flax market, the quotations of which are the basis of flax values in the United States.

In the infancy of the flaxseed industry in this country flax was grown chiefly in Kansas and the Southwest-

RESTORE 3-CENT RATE IN ARKANSAS

Railroads Announce That They Will Return to It on Sept. 1.

Little Rock Ark., Aug. 23. — After Sept. 1, all passenger travel in Arkansas will be at the rate of 3 cents a mile. An announcement to this effect is made today by the several railroads which agreed to give a 2½ cent rate a trial some months ago. The agreement will expire at the end of the present month and notice is given that the 3 cent rate will be established.

NOMINATED BY THE INSURGENT VOTERS

HIRAM JOHNSON,
Nominated for Governor of California on a Platform Opposed by the "Regular" Faction of Republicans in That State.

BATTLE CREEK, FLINT AND JACKSON, MICH., BIGGER THAN IN 1900

Washington, Aug. 23. — The population of Battle Creek, Mich., is 25,267, an increase of 6,704, or 36.1 per cent, as compared with 18,563 in 1900.

The population of Flint, Mich., is 38,550, an increase of 25,447, or 194.2 per cent, as compared with 13,103 in 1900.

The population of Jackson, Mich., is 31,433, an increase of 6,253, or 24.8 per cent, as compared with 25,180 in 1900.

Why Flint Grew.

Flint, Mich., Aug. 23.—The surprising increase reported today in the population of Flint has been due largely to the development of the industry of making automobiles.

STRICKEN TOWN HEARS OF ITS PROSPERITY.

Washington, Aug. 23.—The population of Wallace, Idaho, which has been devastated by forest fires, was 3,000, when this year's census was taken, as compared with 2,265 in 1900.

WHO SAID BICYCLE RIDING WAS DEAD?

IS CRUSHED BY BOX CAR

Order to Move Car Innocently Given By Lad's Father.

Charles Zander, 18 years of age, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Zander of 422 East Seventh street, was crushed to death betwen a box car and the side of the Pittsburg Coal company's sheds at Fourth avenue east and the lake front this morning.

The young man and his father were arrested yesterday afternoon by Detectives Terry and Toewe charged with stealing two sacks of flour, and were to have been tried the latter part of the week. Theodore Zander is foreman of the coal dock.

Fred Evans, son of Chris E. Evans of the Duluth Cut Stone company, whose place of business is next to the coal company's sheds, had a narow escape from a similar fate. The young men were together at the time of the accident.

It appears that Zander had been unloading coal in a wheel barrow from a box car into the sheds. He desired to have a car moved, it is stated, and didn't know the orders to that effect had already been given by his father. The exact manner in which he was caught between the car and the wall seems to be unknown. Young Evans cannot explain the situation fully.

In some way he got between the wall and the car, presumably standing there for a minute not expecting the engine to start. His chest was crushed in, but he did not die instantly, as he pulled himself up in an effort to get out of the road. But one of his ribs had been jammed through his heart and he died a moment later.

The body was taken to the undertaking rooms of J. L. Crawford, where the remains were examined by Dr. J. A. McCuen, county coroner. The funeral arrangements will not be completed until later.

ADVENTISTS SING ON TENT ROPES

Battle Creek, Mich., Aug. 23.—Shivering in their night clothes, nearly 1,000 campers at the Seventh Day Adventist camp meeting here saved their tents from destruction in a terrific rain and wind storm early today by sitting all through the storm on the heavy ropes of their temporary abodes. Lightning illuminated the strange scene, while the crowd sang hymns and quoted scriptural passages. The storm blew down several tents.

ELECTION FRAUD LAID TO AN EX-CONGRESSMAN

JOSEPH C. SIBLEY.

ACCUSED OF VOTE-BUYING

Ex-Congressman Joseph C. Sibley Arrested on That Charge.

Campaign Expense Account Shows He Spent $4 Per Voter.

Franklin, Pa., Aug. 23.—Joseph C. Sibley who withdrew as a candidate for congress on the Republican ticket in the Twenty-eight Pennsylvania district, was arrested late last night on a warrant charging him with conspiracy to debauch voters. Mr. Sibley was released on his own recognizance to appear before Justice of the Peace Perry at Warren, Pa., Aug. 26.

The arrest of Sibley came a few hours after he had announced his withdrawal from the congressional race. According to his own figures, filed in obedience to the legislative act requiring a public statement of a candidate's expense account, Mr. Sibley spent $17,000 in Warren county to secure his nomination and in the entire district $32,500, which according to population averaged $4 a vote.

In the warrant under which Mr. Sibley was arrested three other prominent politicians in the Twenty-eighth district are also charged with conspiracy to debauch voters. They are Charles Crandall, D. M. Howard and George M. Dunn.

The information against Mr. Sibley was made yesterday before Justice Perry of Warren by Constable Walter Paige of the same city. In the information Frank H. Taylor, secretary to Sibley, is also named as codefendant.

Mr. Sibley denied himself to interviewers today. In a statement issued last night, when he announced his sudden withdrawal from the congressional race, he said that ill-health solely was responsible for his giving up the contest.

It is also said today by close friends of the family that Mr. Sibley is suffering from acute heart trouble and has not left his home for some time.

Is Reputed Millionaire.

Mr. Sibley is a manufacturer and farmer and reputed to be a millionaire. He was elected as a Democrat to the Fiftieth and Fifty-second congress, and as a Republican to the Fifty-seventh and Fifty-eighth congresses, and elected to the Fifty-ninth congress by a large majority. In the Democratic national convention of 1896 Mr. Sibley received the larest number of votes for the nomination for vice president, but wired the convention to withdraw his name.

TWENTY-NINE JAPS TO BE DEPORTED

Eighteen Women and Eleven Men Come Under New Alien Law.

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 23.—Eighteen Japanese women and eleven men are in the detention sheds of the United States immigration service here awaiting deportation as the result of raids in the restricted districts of Seattle and Tacoma conducted by Inspector T. M. Fisher and deputies. They were arrested under the new act, which provides that all immoral aliens may be deported, no matter how long they have been in the country.

BEVERLY REGARDS IT AS A CLOSED INCIDENT.

Beverly, Mass., Aug. 23.—It was stated here today that the Roosevelt-Taft incident is regarded as closed. The president continued work on his St. Paul conservation speech today. Comparatively few callers are expected here during the next ten days. The president leaves for St. Paul on Sept. 3 and goes from there to Washington for ten days.

GALE FANS THE FLAMES

Big Sections of Country Are Ablaze--Hundreds of Men Needed.

St. Paul Train in Northern Idaho Is Burned--Passengers Rescued.

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 23.—Three hundred fire-fighters of a total force of 600 which has been battling the flames in the burning white pine forest of Northern Idaho, are unaccounted for today. Government Forest Supervisor W. R. Weigle at Wallace today declared his belief that nearly all of this entire number had perished.

Hope that last night seemed but a forerunner of the subjugation of the fires sweeping through the Pacific Northwest was swept away this morning by the rising of a gale that is fanning the flames in parts of the stricken territory to new activity.

Elk City Safe.

Elk City, Idaho, is safe—and it is due to the heroic work of the women within the town that it is not among the list of ruined places—but the territory for miles around it is a mass of flames and conditions are growing worse with every hour that passes. Entire Iron Mountain is a hill of seething fire.

The fire on Squaw creek is worse today than at any time since the conflagration began.

The American river district is a gigantic furnace for miles in extent.

Many outlying districts, from which the inhabitants have fled in terror, are certain of destruction, and it is reported that the plant of the American Eagle mine, one of the largest in the district, is burning.

Whole Country Ablaze.

Conditions throughout the entire region are epitomized in the following message from Forest Ranger Porter to Assistant Ranger Brown, at Grangeville, Idaho:

"Situation desperate. Whole country ablaze. Must have help to save property. The fire in Clearwater reserve, Idaho, according to advices received late last night by Maj. Fenn, is absolutely beyond control, and all hopes of subduing the flames until it rains have been abandoned."

How many are dead in the fires is nothing but conjecture. Reports from all points are contradictory, and until rains have put out the worst of the fire nothing definite can be known. In addition to the death list are many instances of loss of sight and even of reason among the fire-fighters and the panic-stricken inhabitants.

Hundreds of Men Needed.

Hundreds of men still are needed to fight the fires. The following is part of the report from Wallace, Idaho, where half the town has been burned, but the remainder seems to be safe:

"Among the injured in the Wallace hospital are the following: B. M. Britton, Palmero, N. D.; P. W. Sullivan, Republic; William Christensen, Racine, Wis.; R. Coombs, Buffalo, N. Y.; Frank Hickman, Lead, S. D.; Charles Ryan, Herbert Brown and Frank Moore, Chicago; C. W. Fanning, Ahnwick, N. D., and Jacob Fenn, Aberdeen, S. D."

The fire on Old Man creek and the one on Selway, near Camp 2 have united and no further efforts will be made to control them.

Better in Montana.

Missoula, Mont., Aug. 23.—The forest fires which have raged along the Coeur d'Alene branch of the Northern Pacific during the last few days are gradually being subdued, according to reports received by the railroad officials here today. High winds which prevailed yesterday died down last night and in nearly every burning district the fighters were able to make progress against the flames.

St. Paul Train Burned.

Helena, Mont., Aug. 23.—A Northern Pacific train reached Helena today from the West, the first in three days. Passengers relate they had thrilling experiences. All day yesterday they were in fear lest they could not get through. They report the burning of a St. Paul train in Northern Idaho, the passengers having been taken aboard the train reaching here today. Passengers report the destruction complete along the Clarks Fork valley.

The fire situation in this vicinity today is not improved. Two new fires are reported, at the head of Buffalo creek, ten miles south of the city, and the other in Sanborn gulch, sixty miles north. There is also a fire burning near Gould, but the famous Jay Gould mine is not regarded as in danger.

Wallace, Idaho, Aug. 23.—The loss of life in the forest fires that swept over Couer d' Alene Saturday and Sunday is now reported here at eighty. Forestry officials received word that thirty-four forest fire fighters had burned to death on Big Creek and thirty had met death on Superior lake.

Six men were killed in the Placer Creek fire, three miles from Wallace, three near Mullan and three at Wallace.

The whole country from here to the St. Joe river, a distance of twenty-five miles, has been burned over.

The loss in Wallace is estimated at $1,000,000. One hundred buildings were destroyed. The hospitals are full of injured, a number of them being blind.

Statement From Washington.

Washington, Aug. 23.—Forest service officials here issued a statement today summing up reports from agents in the field concerning the fire situation in the West.

The situation in Missoula district has improved and the winds are less violent today, says Associate District

Anaconda Mining Company Claims Ownership of Apexes of Veins.

Claimed to Be Another of the "Crimes of Amalgamated."

Duluth Men Claim It Is Plot to Secure Control Cheaply.

The Anaconda Copper Mining company brought suit today against the Butte & Ballaklava Copper company for $1,100,000 for ore alleged to have been unlawfully extracted from veins, the apexes of which are claimed in ownership by the Anaconda company, which seeks also an order restraining the Butte-Ballaklava company from continuing operations.

Heavy selling followed the announcement of the suit in the various stock exchanges of the country today and the stock broke three points from yesterday's close within less than an hour. It declined from $10.50 at the opening to $8 and then rallied, shorts covering and support coming from people who are most familiar with the property.

Whether or not the suit against the Butte-Ballaklava company is another of the "crimes," of Amalgamated remains to be seen. The Amalgamated controls the Anaconda by the ownership of 75 per cent of its stock and it in reality is the company which has brought the suit.

Secretary's Statement.

John A. Percival, secretary of the Butte-Ballaklava Copper company, said today that the suit was based on the desire of the "copper trust to obtain control of the Butte-Ballaklava company at a small cost." He said the company's offices in this city had not been notified of the suit and that his information was derived chiefly from his interviewer. He gave the following statement for publication:

"The action taken by the Anaconda company, which is in fact the Amalgamated, in bringing suit against the Butte-Ballaklava Copper company, in which claim is laid to ore already mined and being mined in the Ballaklava property, is we believe, unwarranted by existing geological conditions. The best expert opinions we have been able to obtain are to the effect that ore bodies so far opened up are without question owned absolutely by the Butte-Ballaklava Copper company, and the only inference is that the 'Copper trust' has taken this action to create a selling panic among Ballaklava stockholders with the ultimate object of obtaining control of the company at a nominal cost.

"We have the best legal and the best engineering advice as to our rights and should the suit ever be brought to trial, we are convinced that we will be easily able to prove not only that the rich veins in the Ballaklava mine apex on

He Will Travel Over 5,000 Miles and Make Fourteen Speeches.

New York, Aug. 23.—"I am very much pleased with Mr. Taft's statement. It makes the situation perfectly clear. If Nassau county wishes me to go to the state convention I shall go. I regard the issue as clear cut and as far as I am concerned there will be absolutely no compromise."

This declaration was made today by Theodore Roosevelt a few minutes before his departure on his Western speaking tour and followed a short conference with County Chairman Lloyd C. Griscom in the former president's private car Republic.

Oyster Bay, L. I., Aug. 23.—Col. Theodore Roosevelt left here this morning for New York, where he will make his start for his big speaking tour. The colonel's trip to the city was made in a motor car and not a few early risers in the village bade him goodbye as the machine whirled rapidly through the streets.

The colonel was in lively good humor and expressed his delight in the weather. The former president indicated that he would give out a detailed statement later with respect to President Taft's letter to County Chairman Lloyd Griscom of New York on the recent developments in the New York state situation.

From this morning, when he leaves the Grand Central station on the private car Republic, until 9:15 o'clock on the morning of Sept. 11, when the Republic is due back here, Col. Roosevelt will be kept constantly on the move, making speeches, attending receptions and dinners, reviewing parades and traveling. Each day from start to fin-

DR. JOSE MADRIZ,
Deposed President of Nicaragua.

MADRIZ HAS GONE AWAY

Deposed President of Nicaragua Takes Zelaya's Friends Along.

Brother of Conquering General Temporarily in Power.

Managua, Nicaragua, Aug. 23.—The downfall of the Madriz government, after the decisive defeats administered to the regular army by the insurgent forces of Gen. Estrada last week, was accomplished quietly and was marked by no scenes of disorder in the capital. President Madriz left the city quietly Sunday night, his plans being kept secret, aboard the government gunboat Momotombo, on which it is presumed that he ran down to the western extremity of Lake Managua, where he could board a train for Corinto.

The men who fled with the deposed president into exile are all, with the exception of Gen. Ortiz and Gen. Chavarria, former supporters and adherents of ex-President Zelaya, who could expect no mercy from the new administration.

Jose Estrada in Power.

The administration in the capital still is in the hands of Jose Delores Estrada, brother of the insurgent leader, to whom it was turned over by Madriz upon his flight. The provisional governor has, however, announced his intention of holding the reins of power only until the arrival of his brother, Juan J. Estrada, with his victorious forces.

SEVERE STORM STRIKES CHICAGO

Widespread Damage Is Done By Wind, Rain and Lightning.

Chicago, Aug. 23.—Widespread damage was inflicted by a brief rain and wind storm which broke over Chicago and vicinity early today. The wind reached a velocity of fifty-eight miles an hour and rain fell to a depth of 1.8 inches, the heaviest since last May.

The Monetary Loss Was Small.

Yachts and dredges were torn from their moorings, many buildings were struck by lightning, windows were broken, signs blown down, basements flooded, telephone circuits demoralized, boats and trains delayed, and several persons shocked by electric bolts.

"Sparrows Haven," a grove at Seventy-fifth street and Ingleside avenue where birds congregate in great numbers, lost 200 of its feathery inhabitants. A policeman found their bodies among the shattered trees today.

West Side Hotel Struck.

Guests of the Elite hotel, a West side hostelry, fled into the rain when the building was struck by lightening. A switch shanty was struck and four box cars were unroofed. A number of switchboard operators were severely shocked. Persons injured by trees, falling signs, etc., were numerous, but their hurts generally were not serious.

All of the sorority and fraternity houses have been turned over to the committee to house the guests. The convention will continue until next Monday. Fraternity men from all over the country are expected in Bloomington for the dance and reception to be given during the gathering.

GOVERNMENT ASKED TO HELP AVERT FLAX FAMINE IN AMERICA

United States Importing Flax and Paint Prices Are Soaring.

Some Farmers Have Lost Money in Spite of Exorbitant Prices.

The present era of high prices for flaxseed is producing several problems of interest and of importance to the public.

As a result of the altitudinous values practically every paint manufacturer in the United States has advanced prices within the last few days from 10 to 33 per cent. The government is about to investigate the flax growing question, at the request of consumers of the seed, in the hope that the production of flax in the Northwest and elsewhere in the United States may be increased, so that this nation may return to an exporting basis and the evil of market manipulation may be minimized.

The flax crop this year will be short, and it appears that another season of unusually high prices is in prospect. Values have been high since last fall, and various farmers in the Northwest who expected the market to decline with the approach of the harvest this year sold the market short, only to be wiped out on succeeding advances. When the "short" bought back the stuff he had sold at lower prices, the seller invariably was another country grower who thought prices were too high. He probably was unable to protect himself in an advancing market, and when he tried to buy back his short flax he had to bid up the market. This pyramiding of shorts has been serious for many farmers, and it has been one of the contributing factors in present high prices. It opens up the question of the manipulation of the Duluth flax market, the quotations of which are the basis of flax values in the United States.

In the infancy of the flaxseed industry in this country flax was grown chiefly in Kansas and the Southwest-

RESTORE 3-CENT RATE IN ARKANSAS

Railroads Announce That They Will Return to It on Sept. 1.

Little Rock Ark., Aug. 23. — After Sept. 1, all passenger travel in Arkansas will be at the rate of 3 cents a mile. An announcement to this effect is made today by the several railroads which agreed to give a 2½ cent rate a trial some months ago. The agreement will expire at the end of the present month and notice is given that the 3 cent rate will be established.

Washington, Aug. 23. — The population of Battle Creek, Mich., is 25,267, an increase of 6,704, or 36.1 per cent, as compared with 18,563 in 1900.

The population of Flint, Mich., is 38,550, an increase of 25,447, or 194.2 per cent, as compared with 13,103 in 1900.

The population of Jackson, Mich., is 31,433, an increase of 6,253, or 24.8 per cent, as compared with 25,180 in 1900.

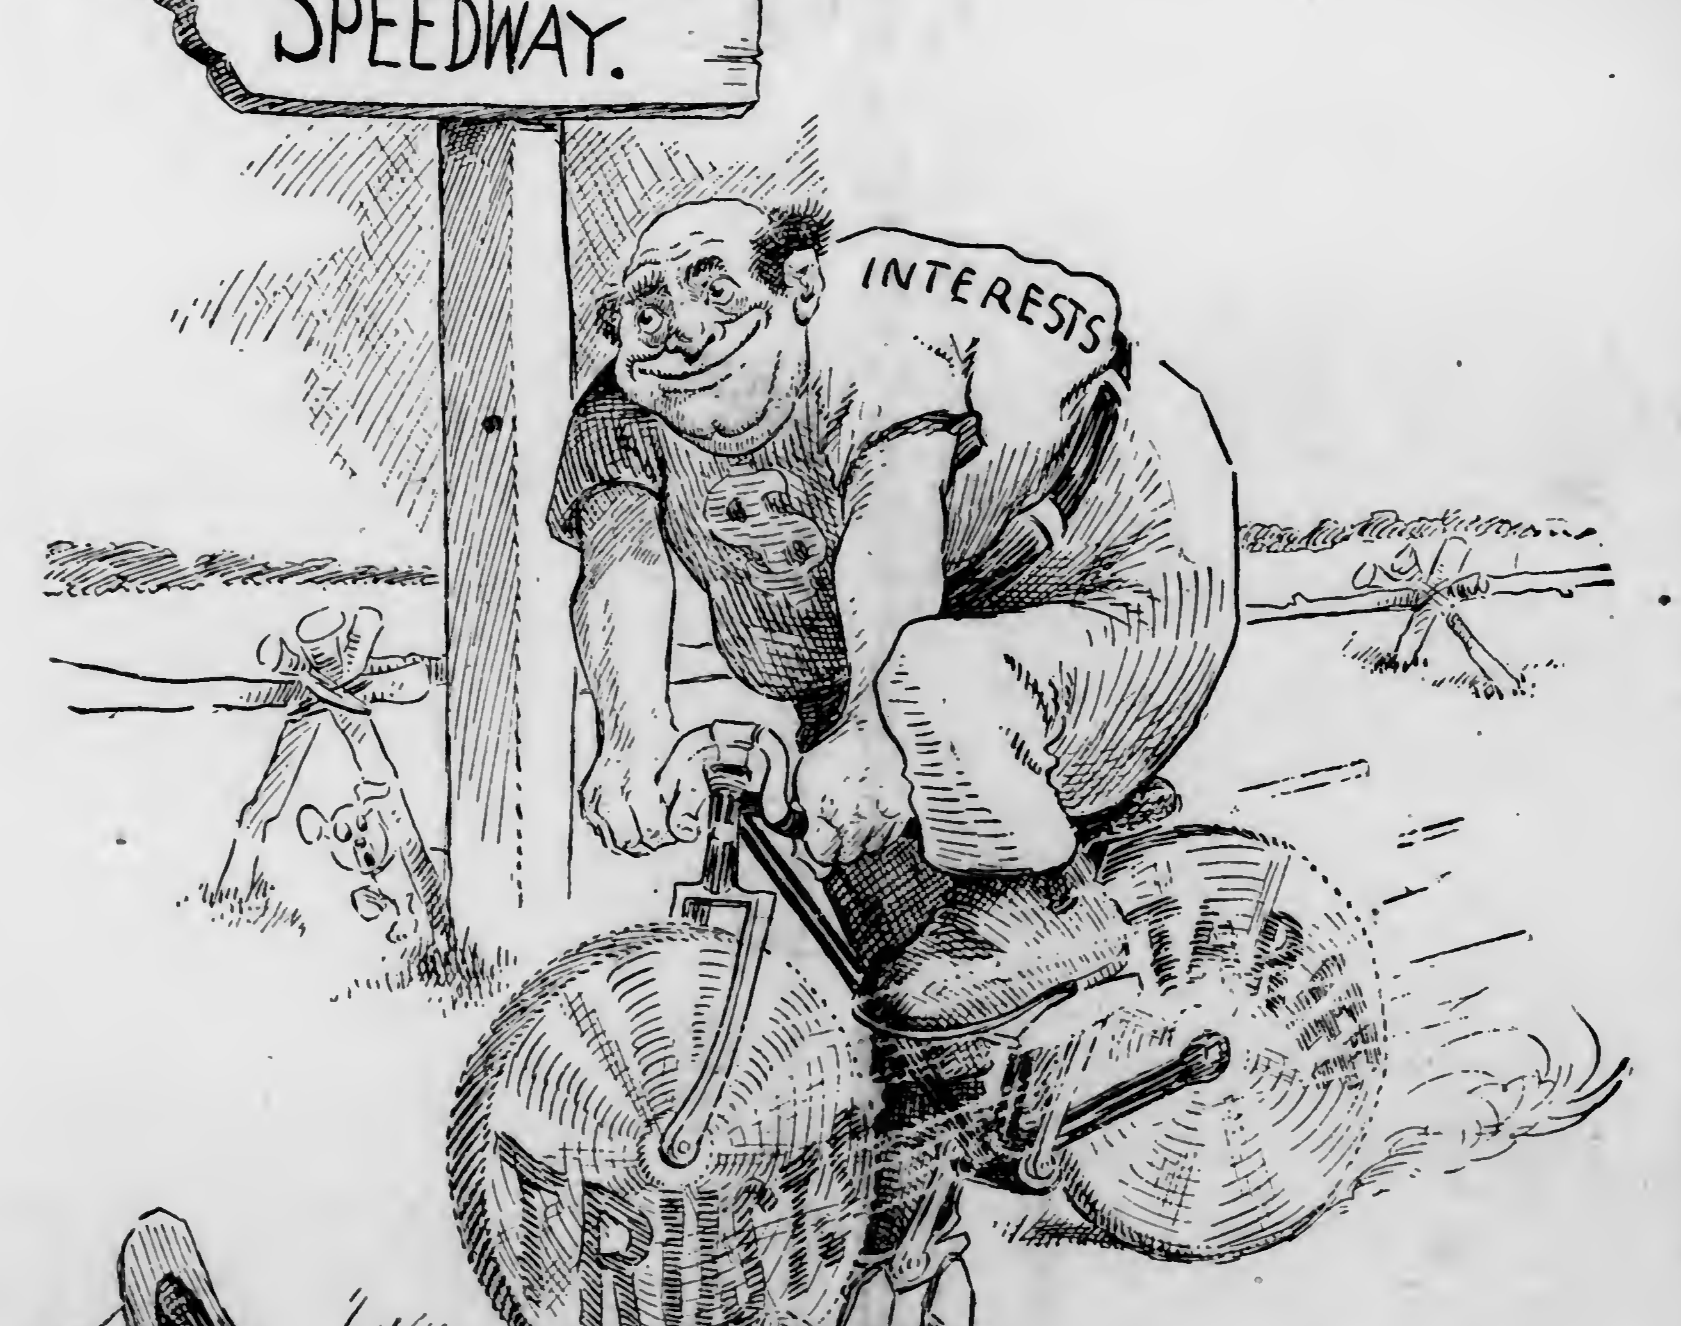
Why Flint Grew.

Flint, Mich., Aug. 23.—The surprising increase reported today in the population of Flint has been due largely to the development of the industry of making automobiles.

STRICKEN TOWN HEARS OF ITS PROSPERITY.

Washington, Aug. 23.—The population of Wallace, Idaho, which has been devastated by forest fires, was 3,000, when this year's census was taken, as compared with 2,265 in 1900.

WHO SAID BICYCLE RIDING WAS DEAD?



IS CRUSHED BY BOX CAR

Order to Move Car Innocently Given By Lad's Father.

Charles Zander, 18 years of age, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Zander of 422 East Seventh street, was crushed to death betwen a box car and the side of the Pittsburg Coal company's sheds at Fourth avenue east and the lake front this morning.

The young man and his father were arrested yesterday afternoon by Detectives Terry and Toewe charged with stealing two sacks of flour, and were to have been tried the latter part of the week. Theodore Zander is foreman of the coal dock.

Fred Evans, son of Chris E. Evans of the Duluth Cut Stone company, whose place of business is next to the coal company's sheds, had a narow escape from a similar fate. The young men were together at the time of the accident.

It appears that Zander had been unloading coal in a wheel barrow from a box car into the sheds. He desired to have a car moved, it is stated, and didn't know the orders to that effect had already been given by his father. The exact manner in which he was caught between the car and the wall seems to be unknown. Young Evans cannot explain the situation fully.

In some way he got between the wall and the car, presumably standing there for a minute not expecting the engine to start. His chest was crushed in, but he did not die instantly, as he pulled himself up in an effort to get out of the road. But one of his ribs had been jammed through his heart and he died a moment later.

The body was taken to the undertaking rooms of J. L. Crawford, where the remains were examined by Dr. J. A. McCuen, county coroner. The funeral arrangements will not be completed until later.

ADVENTISTS SING ON TENT ROPES

Battle Creek, Mich., Aug. 23.—Shivering in their night clothes, nearly 1,000 campers at the Seventh Day Adventist camp meeting here saved their tents from destruction in a terrific rain and wind storm early today by sitting all through the storm on the heavy ropes of their temporary abodes. Lightning illuminated the strange scene, while the crowd sang hymns and quoted scriptural passages. The storm blew down several tents.

ELECTION FRAUD LAID TO AN EX-CONGRESSMAN

JOSEPH C. SIBLEY.

ACCUSED OF VOTE-BUYING

Ex-Congressman Joseph C. Sibley Arrested on That Charge.

Campaign Expense Account Shows He Spent $4 Per Voter.

Franklin, Pa., Aug. 23.—Joseph C. Sibley who withdrew as a candidate for congress on the Republican ticket in the Twenty-eight Pennsylvania district, was arrested late last night on a warrant charging him with conspiracy to debauch voters. Mr. Sibley was released on his own recognizance to appear before Justice of the Peace Perry at Warren, Pa., Aug. 26.

The arrest of Sibley came a few hours after he had announced his withdrawal from the congressional race. According to his own figures, filed in obedience to the legislative act requiring a public statement of a candidate's expense account, Mr. Sibley spent $17,000 in Warren county to secure his nomination and in the entire district $32,500, which according to population averaged $4 a vote.

In the warrant under which Mr. Sibley was arrested three other prominent politicians in the Twenty-eighth district are also charged with conspiracy to debauch voters. They are Charles Crandall, D. M. Howard and George M. Dunn.

The information against Mr. Sibley was made yesterday before Justice Perry of Warren by Constable Walter Paige of the same city. In the information Frank H. Taylor, secretary to Sibley, is also named as codefendant.

MASKED MEN HOLD UP CARS

Two Traction Company Vehicles Scenes of Robberies at Wilkesbarre.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Aug. 23.—Two masked highwaymen held up two cars of the Wilkesbarre Traction company shortly before midnight and robbed the terrorized passengers and employes Detectives are searching for the daring thieves.

The car leaving this city for the town of Parsons was the first held up. John Elliott, the conductor, ran ahead to look for approaching trains. The bandits boarded the car and covered the motorman, Thomas Williams, with their revolvers. They took his watch. The conductor gave up his gold watch and $19. The only passenger in the car, Thomas Tretaway, was compelled to hand over his $50 gold watch. After firing several shots, the men disappeared in the darkness.

Panic Followed Shots.

Twenty minutes later the car on the Miners Mills line was held up by the same men. The scene was three-quarters of a mile away from the first hold-up. There were many women aboard the car and the highwaymen fired several shots, causing a panic. The robbers did not fare so well on this car. Conductor Hebner struck one robber with a brake iron. The men then became alarmed and fled in the darkness.

SANITORIUM SITE CHOSEN

Tuberculosis Hospital Will Be Erected in Town of Midway.

Eighty Acres of Land Suitable for the Purpose Obtained.

The new tuberculosis hospital will be located on eighty acres of land in the town of Midway.

The county sanitorium commission, after having inspected several sites and bringing the choice down to two or three, decided on the Midway site some days ago, but have kept the matter dark owing to the necessity of looking up the title to the land.

The site of the hospital will be easily accessible from Duluth as well as all other nearby points, as it lies near the county roads and is but a short distance from the new line of the Canadian Northern railroad. The Northern Pacific road is also but a short distance from the site.

It is understood that the deal is all but closed. This means that the county will be called on soon for its donation and that the buildings will soon be erected.

The site is said to be suitable for the purpose for which it was selected. Special attention has been paid to the slope, sunshine and view. It is naturally protected from the northeast winds.

The commissioners have been working for some time on the matter of a location. They have inspected nearly all the land in other directions about Duluth. Some of the proposed sites were very favorable, but the price was too high. There were other difficulties which kept the matter up in the air for some months past.

According to Dr. Hart, who will be superintendent of the hospital, the institution will be on the village plan and the same scheme that has been so successful will be carried out fully in the planning of the St. Louis county institution.

It is understood that the land selected was secured at a very reasonable figure.

DAHLMAN ASKS RECOUNT, TOO

Nebraska Primary Election Results Not Yet Finally Fixed Up.

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 23.—The Omaha World Herald says this morning that complete returns from all counties in the state, two-thirds of which are official, give Mayor Dahlman of Omaha a majority of 225 over Governor Shallenberger for the Democratic nomination for governor. It is also claimed that the canvass of the vote in the city of Omaha, which is about half completed, has already increased Dahlman's majority 153. This is not, however, considered in the above figures.

It is announced that Mayor Dahlman's campaign committee will today supplement Governor Shallenberger's request for a recount in thirteen counties of the state with a request for a recount in twenty-two other counties in which it is alleged that Populist votes for Shallenberger were erroneously counted in the Democratic column.

DUMPS CASKET INTO THE RIVER

Old Hearse Horse Runs Away With Surprising Results.

New York, Aug. 23.—A sleepy old Dobbin which had drawn a West Side undertaker's wagon for years in most approved funeral pace, imagined a vain thing today and ran away, causing a strange accident.

After a wild flight of several blocks the horse and wagon plunged into the Hudson river. The doors of the wagon flew open and a casket containing a body floated down stream. The driver managed to save himself.

The night watchman of a pier swam out in the tide and towed the casket ashore. The horse and wagon were finally brought ashore.

CRUISER'S HULL POUNDING ROCKS

Waves From Typhoon Prevent Salvage of British Naval Wreck.

Tokio, Aug. 23. — The hull of the British armored cruiser Bedford, which ran ashore on Samarang rocks, southwest of Quelpart island, Sunday, was still hanging on the jagged ledges when dawn broke today. She was pounding heavily in the high seas left in the wake of the typhoon which last week swept across the eastern sea, just grazing the region of the wreck and which yesterday and the day before prevented any attempt at salvage by the fleet of English and Japanese war vessels standing by.

The weather today gave promise that the sea would soon go down.

WANT PICTURES OF STRIKE BARRED

Washington Union Starts Campaign Against Their Production.

Washington, Aug. 23.—A campaign against the display of motion pictures of strikes and strike breaking scenes was opened last night at a meeting of the Washington Central Labor union. Resolutions of protest against such pictures being shown were adopted unanimously. Copies of the resolution will be distributed throughout the country and the American Federation of Labor will be asked to indorse the movement. The labor leaders hold that the pictures put their cause before the public in a false and damaging light.

DEMOCRATS AT GEORGIA POLLS

Governor Brown and Hoke Smith Clash for the Second Time.

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 23.—Joseph M. Brown, governor of Georgia, and Former Governor Hoke Smith, political rivals and personal enemies, matched forces today for the second time in a Democratic primary for the gubernatorial nomination. The polls opened generally at 7 o'clock this morning and in the cities will close at 7 o'clock tonight.

The closing hour in the country precincts range from 3 to 6 o'clock.

Little interest has been shown for other state offices. The fight, however, has more or less heated in this congressional district between the incumbent, Congressman Livingston and William Schley Howard, and the result is in doubt. Representatives Hardwick, Bartlett and Lee have been hard fought.

The weather is fair throughout the state.

MARINE

SEAMEN FEAR YELLOW HAZE

Apprehension Caused By Peculiar Pall Hanging Over Lake.

Smoke Is Not So Hard to See Through as Fog.

Captains of lake steamers, which have come up the lake the past two days, report that it was impossible to see more than three or four miles ahead, owing to the thick, yellow pall of haze that hung like a hood over the lake.

They report that it was not so difficult to see as it is in a fog, because of the peculiar half light. At first many of the crew of La Belle, a freighter that reached port today, did not understand the significance of the peculiar conditions, some of the crew becoming alarmed.

Some of the passengers of the Huronic were somewhat disturbed over the peculiar yellowish-green light, thinking that a great storm was about to sweep down on the vessel. Some of the passengers of the big passenger boat were not entirely relieved of their apprehensions until the boat reached Duluth this morning.

Captains of the freight and package freight boats did not learn, in most instances, of the cause of the peculiar weather conditions until their boats reached here. The wireless was busy on all the boats equipped with it, and the Duluth office was kept busy explaining the cause of the murky atmospheric conditions.

Deck hands on the lake steamers are the most superstitious people in the world. They are firm believers in signs and omens and some of the members of the La Belle's crew believed that the world was coming to an end and made preparations to meet the end with that fortitude that most seafaring men possess.

It grew so dark in Duluth yesterday afternoon that work had to be stopped on a number of buildings which are under construction.

CAPTAIN FINED FOR EXCEEDING SPEED LIMIT.

Collector of Customs L. M. Willcuts has fined the captain of the steamer Matoa $200 for violation of rule one of the St. Mary's river, which forbids a steamer running faster than a speed of ten miles an hour in certain parts of the river.

The violation of the rules was committed on Aug. 14, the violation being reported by the revenue cutter Mackinac.

CROWN PRINCE NOT TO VISIT AMERICA

Frederick William Will Not Make Tour of the World.

Berlin, Aug. 23.—Crown Prince Frederick William will not visit the United States after his trip to India and the Far East, on which he is to start in November. When first announcement was made of his Far Eastern journey it was surmised that he would return by way of the Pacific ocean, rounding out his trip into a tour around the world, but Count von Bismarck-Bohlen, lord chamberlain to the household of the crown prince, replying to an inquiry, stated definitely that he would not return by way of the United States.

The trip will bear an official character, and arrangements have already been made with the British government for his reception in India.

ON THE IRON RANGES

HOLD RACES AT GILBERT

Range Firemen Having Much Sport in Range Village This Afternoon.

Despite Lowering Clouds There Is Good Attendance at Gilbert Meet.

Gilbert, Minn., Aug. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Though the sky was overcast with a thick, dull, yellowish glow, the range firemen's tournament began here yesterday with a large crowd on hand. The team from Aurora, led by a band and accompanied by many supporters, was the first arrival. Shortly after the Proctor team put in an appearance. Late in the afternoon the Biwabik team with a band and some loyal rooters came to town. The other teams are expected today before the races commence in the afternoon.

In the baseball game yesterday afternoon between the Gilbert Giants and the Gilbert city team, the former won before a large crowd in a close and exciting game by a score of 6 to 3. Benson and Stevens were the battery for the winners. Tomorrow the Giants and the Elba team will play. Last night there was dancing at the pavilion, while roller skating was also much enjoyed.

The large crowd which came in this morning for the big day of the tournament witnessed a long parade about 10 o'clock, in which all the firemen's teams, with the Gilbert city band, the Aurora band and the Biwabik band, took part.

Racing This Afternoon.

This afternoon the firemen's races will be pulled off and with the long list of entries some hot races are expected. The prizes for the teams and the medals for the individual members have been much admired in the windows of the First State bank. All the races will be run off on the main street, which has just been graded and macadamized. The stores are all decorated with banners, flags and bunting. The Bailey block has been turned into a hotel for the occasion and will have fifty furnished rooms. All the other rooming places are packed and the restaurants and candy stores are doing a rushing business.

This evening at the high school building there will be a large meeting, which will be addressed by several of the prominent county officials. Biwabik has a strong bunch of supporters here trying to get the 1911 tournament for that place.

RED MEN HAVE GREAT PICNIC

Annual Outing at Swan Lake Sunday Proves Successful Affair.

Nashwauk, Minn., Aug. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Red Men's picnic at Swan Lake Sunday was attended by 200 people who took part in the celebration and the day was passed in enjoyment.

The Great Northern special arrived at 11 o'clock with hundreds of people from the range towns and the D., M. & N. passenger arrived shortly after with many more people.

At 1 o'clock the races were pulled off, which proved very interesting. Among these were a wrestling match, log rolling and swimming contest. After the races the merry-makers enjoyed themselves dancing in the large pavilion until evening. The Hibbing band furnished music for the day. Many were disappointed over the train connections. The Great Northern left the lake twenty minutes before time, thus leaving many people who had to stay at the lake over night.

Picnic Near Aurora Success.

Aurora, Minn., Aug. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The picnic held Sunday by the S. N. P. J. society in the grove west of town was the largest and most successful picnic ever held at Aurora. This society is one of the largest on the range and there were many present from out of town. The firemen after a short practice march in the afternoon marched to the picnic grounds and attended for several hours.

NOTICED BALD SPOT COMING ON HEAD

Interesting Story of Consultation with Dermatologist and Successful Use of Cuticura. Also Case of Severe Ivy Poisoning, Relief of Which by Cuticura was Permanent.

"Nine years ago I noticed a bald spot coming on my head and, as I was only nineteen years old, it did not seem natural, as it was on the side of my head instead of on top. My mother advised my seeing a dermatologist and I did so, one of the best in Boston, and he said it was due to a germ I must have got at the barber's. He couldn't assure a cure, but by treating each hair separately by electricity, he said, the hair might come out white or gray, if it came out at all. He proposed giving me a treatment every month for six months at ten dollars a treatment. When I told my mother she advised using Cuticura and this I did, using Cuticura Soap and Ointment every day. In two months my hair commenced to grow, and in six months one would never have known there had been any trouble, the hair coming out being black, the exact shade of my own. I have never had any trouble since, and feel I can't say half enough for Cuticura.

"Another member of our family was terribly poisoned by poison ivy and every summer for six years the blisters came, bursting and causing great suffering. We tried everything recommended by the best physicians, but with no good result. Finally we tried Cuticura and obtained relief in a very short time which was permanent. She has never had any trouble since, so Cuticura is invaluable to us, you see. G. J. Browne, 1 Remington St., Dorchester, Mass., Jan. 29, 1910."

This letter is but one of hundreds giving proof of the success of the Cuticura Remedies in treating the skin and scalp. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., Boston

YELLOW PALL ON WESTERN MESABA

Monday's Atmosphere Was Also on Freakish Order in That Section.

Coleraine, Minn., Aug. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Yesterday was a day long to be remembered by the inhabitants of the Western Mesaba. There was a lurid or yellowish glow hanging like a pall over the earth all day, shutting out the sunlight. The colors are unnatural. Yellow appeared white, blue seemed black and the green of vegetation had an intensified hue or an artificial green. Business was hindered because of the darkness.

About noon the electric lighting station was put in operation after being obliged to call up the manager of the plant in Duluth. In homes lamps were lighted to see to eat the noonday meal. The electric lights cast a peculiar bluish light, and a lighted match gave a flame that was white. Some of the superstitious Austrian laborers thought the world was coming to an end.

Various theories are advanced as to the cause of the unusual phenomenon. Some attribute it to the pall of smoke from far distant forest fires and others to electrical conditions of the atmosphere.

MOORE'S LIFE MAY BE SAVED

X-Ray Examination Shows Wounded Engineer May Pull Through.

Hibbing, Minn., Aug. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Unless blood-poisoning develops the chances for the recovery of Gilbert J. Moore, the hoisting engineer at the Whiteside mine, who was shot in the back Saturday night by Harley Stoner, a member of the Chisholm police force, are fairly good. The surgeons at the local hospital where Moore is being cared for made an X-ray examination yesterday afternoon that convinced them no immediate danger could be looked for as no vital organ appears to have been shot.

Well Known in Chisholm.

Moore is well known in Chisholm where he lived in the Monroe location until about six months ago when he took the position at the Whiteside mine and moved his family, consisting of wife and three children, aged 4, 2 and 1, to their new home near Buhl. He always bore a good reputation and his Chisholm friends continue very angry at Officer Stoner for firing upon him. Better judgment is prevailing and the indications are that Stoner, who is being held in the Chisholm jail will have a fair trial on whatever charge is preferred against him. He will not be released until the extent of Moore's injury is determined. Stoner claims he fired because Moore ignored his orders to drive slower across the Longyear bridge, but that he had no intention of hitting Moore and feels worried over the act.

EVELETH MINISTER IS GIVEN PRAISE

Trustees of the Presbyterian Church Laud Him for Law Enforcement.

Eveleth, Minn., Aug. 23.—(Specian to The Herald.)—The board of trustees of the First Presbyterian church is standing with Rev. Philip A. Schwarz, Jr., the pastor, in his fight for law enforcement, and proposes to lend him every encouragement in his fight for better observance of the laws. As Mr. Schwarz was the prominent figure in the raid of the gamblers early Sunday, and he has received anonymous and threatening letters, the action of the board of trustees is a source of much gratification to him and his friends.

The board last night adopted the following: At a special meeting of the trustees of the First Presbyterian church of Eveleth, held Aug. 22, 1910, it was resolved that the board of trustees extends to its pastor, Rev. Philip A. Schwarz, Jr., their sincere, unanimous support, and commend him in the position he has taken and his efforts along the line of law and order.

"We heartily indorse and co-operate with him in upholding the law. We condemn the action of certain individuals in trying to intimidate him through anonymous letters. We unanimously accept responsibility with our pastor and stand with him that law shall prevail."

The resolutions were signed by H. Owen, C. E. Bailey and A. G. Kingstrow, trustees.

HURT PETTING COLT.

Farmer's Wife Near Chisholm Sustains Serious Injury.

Chisholm, Minn., Aug. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Petting a colt proved a serious experience for Mrs. Anna Lauder, wife of a farmer living about twelve miles north of here as she is in a local hospital with two legs broken and a fractured arm.

The colt was in a coral with a rope attached to its neck. Mrs. Lauder picked up the rope and the young horse giving a plunge broke away from her, the loose end of the rope becoming entwined about Mrs. Lauder's legs. Before she had a chance to disentangle herself, the frightened colt had dragged her about the corral and finally jumped over the bars, Mrs. Lauder striking against them, resulting in her injuries. She was brought to the hospital and the limbs were set yesterday afternoon. While her condition is serious, the doctors say she will recover.

RED NOSES CLEARED.

Effect of Poslam, the New Skin Remedy Is Immediately Perceptible.

"I have been troubled with red nose and eczema for nearly eight years until I discovered poslam, the new magic cure. My face was a sight, and I was ashamed to be seen on the street. I was surprised to see the improvement after a month's treatment and I have once, clear complexion from which the pimples and my red nose disappeared like magic," says Charles F. Slutter, Wilkesbarre, Pa. "My nose would be like a boil," says Carl D. Steinhoff, Columbus, Ohio, "not only painful but embarrassing. I have given poslam a thorough trial. My face became smooth and fair. My nose is a natural color and does not get sore."

Poslam is the new skin remedy, naturally flesh-colored, which heals and hides all skin imperfections. THREE HUNDRED BELIEVED TO BE DEAD IN FIRES

Forester Silcox in a dispatch received here.

Thirty-three fire fighters are known to be dead in the Lolo and Coeur d'Alene region, and two more are reported to be fatally hurt. These figures cover only the lives of the fire fighters and no attempt is made to estimate the total loss of life. The summary of the situation is contained in the telegram received at the bureau this morning from Associate District Forester Silcox at Missoula. Following is the text of the message:

"The known dead of fire fighters in Lolo and Coeur d'Alene region is now 33, with two more reported fatally hurt. Several large crews not yet heard from are in danger. All towns in the St. Regis and Saltese regions burned. Wind less violet today, and hope to get rescue and fire fighting parties started tomorrow.

Better in Missoula.

"Situation also better in Missoula, where fire burning ranches is under control, but other fires are burning. Fires in Gallatin and Bear Tooth forests north of Yellowstone National park also under control. Supervisor Skeels reports three days of high wind. Town of Troy now in grave danger.

"Entire Fisher river watershed on fire and hundreds fighters forced to abandon tools and supplies to escape with lives. Sylvanite destroyed and Yakt river watershed a fire for miles. Upper Fisher, Yakt and Pipe creek fires have been abandoned and crews can probably get out safely. Nothing known of situation on Flathead and Blackfoot forests."

On Colville Reservation.

The fires on the Colville Indian reservation are growing worse and cannot be extinguished without the aid of rain, according to a telegram from Superintendent Webster of the reservation, received at the Indian bureau today. The fires, he says, are proving expensive and are threatening the Indian ranches.

While thus far they have been confined mostly to dead and down timber, under-brush and grass, it is feared that under prevailing high winds the flames may spread rapidly. The guards, he says, report that not more than 1,000 feet per acre of standing timber is being destroyed.

He reports the situation at Republic to be growing worse.

Serious in California.

Three companies of troops to fight the fires which have broken out in the Tahoe National forest in California have been asked for in a message to the forest service. The message, which comes from District Forester Olds at San Francisco, gives the first information that the fires in that vicinity are proving serious. The war department issued orders dispatching three companies of troops from the Presidio barracks, San Francisco, to the Tahoe forest for fire fighting duty.

Pack trains as far distant from the burning forests as Fort Mead, N. D., and Fort Robinson, Neb., are being kept in readiness under orders of the war department, to be despatched to the devastated country should the demand for them arise.

Big Expense to Government.

The expense to the war department in rendering aid in fighting the fires is footing up into the thousands of dollars. An accurate estimate of what the expense will be is not attempted at this time on account of the inability to judge of the time the troops will be required to stay in the fields. It is probable that congress will be aked to make a deficiency appropriation to cover the expense incurred by the department through the assistance rendered to the forest service and the interior department.

FLEE FROM THE WOODS

Hunters and Fishermen Terrified By the Yellow Haze.

Some people in Duluth yesterday haze which hung threateningly over blaze which hung threateningly over the city. The cause of their fear was not the same in all cases. Some believed that the world was coming to an end, others that the poisonous tail of Halley's comet had floated along and had enveloped the earth in its belated course, while by far the great number believed that the woods and settlements of Northern Minnesota were falling prey to the forest fire fiend that even Duluth might be threatened.

Duluth people felt reasonably safe, however. The advocates of the two first-mentioned theories were few and even those who believed in the last theory conceded the fact that the chances of Duluth being wiped out by even a great forest fire, are very small.

When fear invaded the heart of man and wild conjectures were made in Duluth while the city was bathed in the yellow light that penetrated through the nebulous envelope, it is small wonder that there was even greater fear among those in the woods, away from the knowledge of the fires in the West and from the assurance that no dangerous fires were burning in Northern Minnesota. Camping parties awoke yesterday morning to see the earth darkened by smoke and were certain that fires were rushing down upon their camps. They hastily packed their camping outfits and hurried to Duluth, where they were sure they could put out in boats if the worst should come. Week and two week camping parties were blighted in the bud and the frightened ones today are standing the heartless guffaws of their friends.

One valiant fisherman, Henry Dworschak, was never known to run from anything in the woods. He has fished and hunted through Northern Minnesota for these many years and has never confessed to fear until now. He and his son went to Gooseberry river Saturday to camp for a week. Yesterday, certain that the woods of Northern Minnesota were in flames and death and destruction were rushing toward them, they hurriedly caught a train and returned to the city. They will not finish their camping trip.

But Mr. Dworschak was not alone in his wild flight. Scores of hunters and fishermen cut short their outings and hurried home. Those who knew the cause of the yellow haze may laugh today, but it was no laughing matter to the people out in the woods with no means of reassuring themselves. They saw danger in the phenomenon—a danger from which they were not ashamed to flee.

FAMOUS FEUD FIGHTER KILLED

Jackson, Ky., Aug. 23.—John Abner, noted feudist, who took part in the Hargis, Callahan, Deaton and Smith factional quarrels, was shot and killed by unknown persons near the river bridge in Jackson last night. Abner was shot several times and death was instantaneous. Bloodhounds have been called for from Lexington in an effort to trace the assassins.

Abner had been accused of being one of the men employed by Judge James Hargis and others to assassinate Dr. B. D. Cox, James Cockrell and James B. Marcum during the reign of feud murders eight years ago, but in each trial the jury disagreed.

FISH DENIES HE IS TO COME BACK

New York, Aug. 23.—Stuyvestant Fish, deposed as president of the Illinois Central railroad by the late E. H. Harriman, today denied the report which had become current that he was soon to be restored to the presidency of that company.

"There is not the slightest foundation for the report," said Mr. Fish. "And I would like to have it promptly denied."

BOATS MUST HAVE LIGHTS

Complaints That Motor Craft Have Been Running Dark in River.

Collector of Customs L. M. Willcuts and his deputies are investigating complaints that motor boats have been running up the river at night without lights.

"I am disposed to give motor boat owners all reasonable time to comply with the new regulations on motor boat equipment, but I will not be lenient with anybody who runs without lights," said Mr. Willcuts this morning. "People who run without lights are not only endangering their own lives, but are menacing everybody else on the river. If I or my deputies can apprehend the offenders, no mercy will be shown them."

Vigorous steps are being taken by Mr. Willcuts and his deputies to enforce the new law relative to the equipment of motor boats. Two inspectors are stationed at the customs launch, and they are making a thorough inspection of all the motor boats in the harbor, and when the equipment does not conform to the new law, the owners are given a reasonable time to obtain the necessary equipment. If they fail to comply within the time limit, they will be punished in accordance with the law.

Motor boat owners are showing a disposition to obey the new law. They realize that the regulations are imposed for their protection, and they are not complaining, although to some the changing of the entire equipment of boats appears to be a hardship. Once the changes are made, however, the danger in motor boating will be appreciably reduced, and the owners will really be the gainers.

CONCERNING WOMAN.

Mrs. Caroline Bartlett Crane's visit to Duluth in September is of great interest to many, as she will try to arouse public opinion and help local officials carry out reforms already begun. The World's Work for June printed this interesting account of Mrs. Crane's work under the title, "Men in Action:"

"A citizen of Kalamazoo, Mich., threw a banana-skin upon the pavement. Immediately a small boy thrust into his hand this printed slip:

"'Please! The Women's Civic Improvement league has undertaken to keep Main street clean. We ask you to help us. Please do not throw anything into the street; put it in the can at the corner.'

"'Humph!' grunted the citizen, and started on.

"'No you don't,' chuckled a friend. 'I just picked up my envelope and carried it to the can. I know you're stout to stoop, but—'

"The can received the banana-skin. So began the putting in order of one American city by one American woman—for at the bottom of all the league's work was Mrs. Caroline Bartlett Crane.

"She it was who, as pastor of the People's church, discovered that there was more to be done on six days of the week than she could preach about on the seventh. She gave up her pastorate and started the league. Kalamazoo needed clean streets; she not only discovered the fact, but she induced the city council to give her charge of six blocks for three months. On these blocks she installed the system of hand-sweeping, which is vastly cleaner than the one previously in use, and she returned to the city $3.39 from each $8.39 appropriated. School children were enlisted to induce citizens to use the waste-cans. Kalamazoo installed the system permanently, and she became the housekeeper of her city, 'school gardens, window-gardens. The league offered prizes for the best of these. Flower seeds were given away that everybody might compete. Kalamazoo blossomed. But all this was merely putting the city's parlor in order. There was its kitchen to attend to. Where did the food supplies come from? Seven slaughter houses were situated within a mile of the city limits. These she visited; and her report threatened to turn the town vegetarian. A battle ensued and her bill providing for the municipal inspection of slaughter houses was at first voted down, finally was passed.

"She then investigated the dairies, and Kalamazoo now has a properly inspected milk supply. Then followed her 'visiting housekeepers,' who went to the homes of the poor and tactfully suggested improved methods of housework and economy.

"Asylums and almshouses also drew Mrs. Crane's attention, with the result that she gave over her entire efforts for a while to those whom she called 'the forgotten people.' In an almshouse she found a woman of 90 dying, with no care except that given by another inmate, who stole her food; a young man, sick, and in need of an operation, yet utterly neglected. These and similar cases aroused Mrs. Crane to make appeals and in turn aroused the public; Michigan's indigent are no longer 'forgotten people.'

"Twelve cities in Kentucky, three in Pennsylvania and others in Michigan and Tennessee invited Mrs. Crane to make sanitary inspections. As a result, parks and playgrounds have been opened; hospitals, almshouses, workhouses have been improved; meat and milk inspection has been installed; water supplies have been purified, streets have been cleaned and paved. As a board of health officer in Kentucky said, 'She came to make us put our house in order—and she did it.'"

MISSES ZENA AND PHYLLIS DARE.

Still another actress is about to enter the ranks of the British peerage. It is reported, on god authority, that Zena Dare, the leading woman in the Seymour Hicks company, is to marry Lord Esher's son, the Hon. Oliver Bellol Brett, now secretary of the viceroy of India. The only objecting party to the match is the mother of Miss Dare. She thinks a prospective title of viscountess somewhat beneath her daughter. For a long time Miss Zena Dare and her sister, Phyllis, were the most photographed actresses in London.

WHERE THE WIDOW SCORES

By VIRGINIA HARLAN.

It was Tony Weller who, on one occasion, gave the solemn advice to his son, the irrepressible Sam, of "Pickwick" fame, "Samivel, my boy, beware of vidders."

But it is evident, judging from the number of widows who get married every year, that the average man is inclined to pay little heed to old Tony's warning.

This, is perhaps, because widows have improved in character and disposition somewhat since the Pickwickian days, or maybe their wiles and fascinations have become stronger and more irresistible.

Whatever the reason, the fact remains that widows frequently win husbands where spinsters fail, and, according to official returns, there is a growing disposition on the part of the sterner sex to share their homes and fortunes with ladies who have already had some experience of married life.

Probably the fact that a widow's previous knowledge of men and matrimony secures for her an advantage over her single sisters has a great deal to do with this rather surprising state of affairs. Much married happiness is frittered away before the average huband and wife get to understand the vagaries of the opposite sexes.

Undoubtedly men are attracted towards women who understand them, and no one knows this better than the widow herself. What widow, for instance, ever objects to smoking? She knows a man loves his cigar or a pipe of tobacco. Therefore she makes a study of a man in order to gain a knowledge of his likes and dislikes, and never neglects an opportunity of catering to his whims. A widow has the happy knack of being more anxious to please than to be pleased, and, as very many men have a weakness for a little adulation from a pretty woman, she invariably succeeds in her object.

She is wise enough, too, not to argue with the man she would like to be something more than a friend, or if she does, she contrives to convey in a fascinating manner the impression that she is convinced he is right. She is aware that arguments are the crypt of friendship and the everlasting doom of love. She knows that when a man leaves his office or workshop he is desirous of leaving there all the worries and perplexities, with the result that she does not try to force her opinions on him.

It is, however, as a practical woman that a widow appeals most forcibly to a man. He feels convinced that by marrying her he will be sure to have a wife who can manage a home.

CRAFTS FOR WOMEN

By MRS. GEORGE BRANDT WINTHROP.

Wood staining is one of the many arts undertaken by women of recent years that underwent a temporary eclipse by the introduction on the market of work done by incompetent and not properly trained amateurs. The art should not be confused with marquetry, which it much resembles in effect; for, while the latter is an inlay of fine pieces of colored wood to form various patterns, the staining is done by painting the design with different wood stains and outlining it with a pen and lamp black. It is a revival of a very old French method—the results obtained are delightful.

Before the staining is started at all the wood must first be rubbed all over with fine glass-paper to make it absolutely smooth. The objects decorated are usually chairs, tables, boxes, grandfather's clock and so on, though sometimes so large a thing as a wardrobe is undertaken. The woods employed are bass, sycamore and chestnut, and for little things, such as boxes, holly, which is a dead white wood, is used. If there is a tiny scratch on the wood it has to be glass-papered until the surrounding part is on a level with the depth of the scratch, then when the surface is quite level, the design of a vase of flowers or whatever it may be is traced on it. The design is on tracing paper, and if a gray-backed carbon paper is employed and a bone knitting needle for the outlining, the same tracing may serve several times without spoiling the design.

For the coloring, various spirit stains are used. It is usual to begin with doing the cups and centers of the flowers and wings and tails and caps of the birds with satin wood. The leaves are stained green and the flowers are left white and shaded with walnut. The brush must not be wet or the stain runs with the grain of the wood. Finally, the design is outlined as described with a pen and the lamp black, and the background is done with rosewood stain, a white bevel being left all around the edge. One needs to be very accurate, as if two coats of stain have to be put on it roughens the wood.

For a French polish the wood must be covered all over three times with the polish on a camel's hair brush. A day should elapse between each coat. It is then rubbed all over with a pad with a little oil on it. This has to be done very carefully, as if you rub too hard you take off the polish and the process has to be repeated for three consecutive days. But if the worker does not do her own polishing, all her money goes to men to do it.

TRY THIS DINNER

Clear Tomato Soup.

Take a pint of liquor from a can of tomatoes. Put in some scraped onion to taste, some celery seeds, a can of bouillon and two of water. After boiling well for half an hour strain through two thicknesses of cheesecloth, being careful not to squeeze or it may be cloudy. Serve hot or cold.

Meat—Beef Klops.

Run twice through the meat chopper a pound of raw beef, two dozen blanched almonds, an onion and half a cup of bread crumbs. Season highly with pepper, salt and curry powder. Shape into croquets and simmer slowly in stock to cover for fifteen minutes. Drain, thicken the liquid with flour cooked in butter, season to taste, pour over the meat, and serve with a border of finely cut cooked vegetables.

Vegetables—Scalloped Onions.

Boil until tender six large onions, then separate the leaves with a large spoon. Butter generously a pudding dish and put in alternate layers of onions and bread crumbs till the dish is filled, seasoning each layer. Have the top layer of crumbs, dot with butter and sprinkle with milk or water. Bake until brown.

Dessert—Banana Sherbet.

Boil one pint each of sugar and water ten minutes. Stir hot into the beaten whites of two eggs. Add one-half cup of lemon juice and the mashed pulp of six bananas. When cool freeze as any sherbet.

THE EVENING STORY

AN ARTISTIC IDEAL

By H. Grahame Richards.

The Hon. Charles Bathurst was a prominent member of the Aloysius Antiquarian club. He was extremely wealthy, extremely mean, and, of course, he collected. His penchant was for works in ivory; his collection, an accumulation of thirty years, was valued at a fabulous sum, and was mentioned with respect by the curators of all the museums known to the world. Furthermore, he had written voluminous tomes on the style of Tien-Su-San, whose works were to be seen in the Shinto high temple at Marioka, Japan. He was, therefore, regarded as an expert and there were those to whom his word was as the law of Medes and Persians.

Besides he was wont to boast that not once in thirty years had he come out on the wrong side of a bargain.

Among the members of the club was one Bernard Carroll, whose principal object in life was old china, but who also dabbled—as a side issue—in ivories. He, however, could profess no expert knowledge, and so frequently paid huge prices for articles which subsequently proved to be almost worthless. And on such occasions he suffered all the mortification of defeat, plus the biting sarcasm and veiled sneers of Mr. Bathurst.

Mr. Bathurst entered the smokeroom of the club one morning early. It was untenanted, but for the presence of Mr. Carrol, who sunk in an armchair, was absorbed in the columns of a daily paper. On the mantle stood two figures carved in ivory. As a magnet attracts steel, so was the expert drawn towards those two figures. He crossed the room, peered at them closely, and then felt in his pocket for his glasses. He had forgotten them. Afterwards he lifted the figures one after the other and inspected them still more closely and minutely. Over the top of his glasses Mr. Carrol watched him in silence. He observed the represstd eagerness in every line of the expert's face and form and finally the quick, furtive glance in his direction. But for all a very short-sighted man might see Mr. Carrol was engrossed with his paper. At last, with obviously assumed carelessness, Mr. Bathurst turned away and dropped into a chair.

"I think it perfectly disgusting," said he, as though talking to himself, "that the government should permit these flagrant imitations to be sold openly. It is manifestly as fraudulent as forgery itself, and a measure should be introduced to put an end of it."

Mr. Carrol lowered his paper.

"Then I have made yet another mistake?" he asked calmly.

Mr. Bathurst's eyes gleamed.

"That depends entirely on what you paid for them," he said. "They are imitations, worth perhaps $250 a set, executed in 1578 by Pintorelli."

Mr. Carrol rose slowly to his feet, plunged his hands into his pockets and stood gazing at the figures with a well simulated expression of mingled despair and anger. After a time he said slowly:

"And I paid $5,000 for this rubbish."

Mr. Bathurst lay back in his chair and laughed long and loud.

"You have, indeed, been badly bitten this time, then," he chuckled.

"It is, however, conceivably possible that you are mistaken in your judgment." Mr. Carrol's manner was not aggressive, it was rather that of a drowning man frantically clutching at the straw.

"Mistaken?" Mr. Bathurst's mirth vanished suddenly. "I have been handling Venetian ivory for the past thirty years; have purchased perhaps $100,000 worth of it and have never been mistaken so far. It's rather too late for me to begin now, sir."

"Nevertheless I am convinced that you could not buy these figures at $125 apiece," Mr. Carrol's tone was deliberate and decisive. It brought the expert to his feet, red with quick anger.

"You flatly contradict me, sir?"

"One may be premitted to doubt until unquestionable evidence is forthcoming."

"Will you accomopany me to Steinwein's, then?"

"Unfortunately an earlier appointment renders that impossible."

"Naturally."

"Sir?"

It was remarkable that Mr. Carrol had his temper under complete control, and equally so that Mr. Bathurst had not. The former it was who broke the tense silence after a full minute had passed.

"Mr. Bathurst, it seems that we are fated to ever disagree. On your side you have authority and experience, whilst I frankly confess to inexperience and a pronounced proclivity for making mistakes. Yet in the present instance I have good reason to believe that I am correct and the misjudgment yours. It will, however, be quite simple to settle the matter. If, as you are convinced, you can obtain the figure necessary to complete the set for $125, do so, and notwithstanding the fact that I paid $5,000 for these two, you shall have them for $125 each. This is a fair sporting offer in which you stand to loose nothing and I everything. Will you accept it?"

Mr. Bathurst positively trembled with eagerness. He crossed hurriedly to the door.

"I will go to Steinwein's immediately," he said. "You may expect me back in an hour." He opened the door and then glanced back over his shoulder.

"By the way, will you agree to keep this business quiet in case—er—I should be wrong?"

"I have no pressing desire to be held up to ignominy," answered Mr. Carrol, dryly, as he resumed his seat. The expert vanished with a smile.

A quarter of an hour later another member of the club entered the smokeroom. He greeted Carrol effusively, and then glanced towards the mantelpiece.

"So you buoght them?" he exclaimed delightedly. "I thought you would repent at the last moment and change your mind."

"Not at all," smiled Carrol. "I will keep strictly to the terms mentioned in my letter to you. As you have most of Pintorelli's stuff, and I have none, you may as well take those. But I tell you candidly that although I only paid paid $5,000 for them, I will not sell them for less than $7,500. I have dropped considerable sums on ivories and I'm seeking to strike a balance."

The newcomer drew out a check book, filled in a check, and pushed it across the table.

"To my mind they are worth more," was all he said.

"Then you have no doubt, my dear Fellowes, that they are real Pintorellis?"

Mr. Fellowes rose, picked up one of the figures, and drew forth his handkerchief.

"Pure accident," said he, "taught me the one infallible way of identifying his work. As you know, I have a fairly extended collection of Pintorelli's. Well, gazing at them idly one day, a certain, peculiarity, faithfully repeated throughout all his human representations, forced itself upon my attention. In all his models I observed that the forefinger of the left hand stood apart from the other fingers. This led me to think and experiment, with the result that finally I made this discovery. "He dampened his handkerchief, dropped it between the fingers mentioned, and rubbed quickly. Then he produced a magnifying glass and focused it. Mr. Carrol peered closely and was just able to distinguish the Pintorelli sign manual, carved in microscopical characters on the inside of the first phalange of the forefinger.

"I think I am the only person living who has made the discovery," said Mr. Fellowes proudly, as he replaced the figure.

Mr. Carrol thanked him, apologized for his hasty departure, and left the club. He hailed a taxicab, jumped into it, and started off for Steinwein's shop in the city.

Meanwhile Mr. Bathurst, smiling with delight as he anticipated the greatest bargain of his life, had gone in the same direction.

At Steinwein's he was well known, and the assistant treated him with the most profound respect.

Yes, they had three sets in imitation of that particular work by Pintorelli—two by his pupil, Barochetti, and one by an unknown man named Doria, whose touch and finish, however, were exquisite. The figures individually were priced at $250, or the complete set at $650 for three pieces.

Mr. Bathurst made his selection and presented his cheque for $250, "and now," said he, "I want you to do me a great favor. For certain reasons I wish you to make out a receipt for $125, also, should a Mr. Carrol call here today to inquire the price of these figures, kindly say they are selling for $125. Can you do that for me?"

The assistant remained silent, in perplexity. He clearly perceived the necessity for humoring this great man, but, on the other hand, there were contingencies which might result in his losing his post.

"But should the gentleman desire to purchase?" he asked doubtfully.

"In that case I would make good the difference," said Mr. Bathurst promptly. The assistant, dissolved in smiles, made out the receipt, and escorted his customer to the door.

Five minutes later Mr. Carrol hastily entered the shop. The ivories were still on the counter. Without hesitation he pointed to two figures.

"I wish to purchase those," he said. "What is the price?"

"$125 each," answered the assistant, and observed with expressionless eyes the sudden start his customer made. Mr. Carroll seized a catalogue from a pile close at hand, turned over the pages quickly and slammed it down before the astonished assistant.

"Then why are they catalogued at $250 each?" he asked curtly.

The man's confusion was obvious; Mr Carrol's comprehension immediate.

"There are eight figures left," said he. "I will take them all, provided you will buy six of them back in a week's time at the same price." Two of them I must keep."

The assistant became exalted. Visions of promotion, of increased salary, and other things dazzled his mind and left him gasping. His customer's voice seemed to come to him from some far distant place.

"Here, then, is the check. These two figures I will take with me now. Please see that the others are delivered at my address—you have my card—before noon. Good morning."

Hardly had Mr. Carrol arrived back at the club, placed the figures on the mantlepiece, and settled down to his newspaper, before Mr. Bathurst strode in. Beneath his right arm he bore his purchase; in his left hand the receipt. Carefully he stood the figure on the table, smoothed out the receipt, and placed it also on the table. Then he drew back, and with a gesture, magnificently triumphant, said:

"Sir, these await your inspection."

Gravely Mr. Carrol glanced at the receipt and carefully examined the figure. Suddenly he drew himself up with a jerk and swore softly, but not forcibly. Apparently to regain his self control, he strode to the window and stood gazing down into the street, but his shoulders betrayed his emotion. After a long pause, he said:

"I will abide by my offer, Mr. Bathurst; for they are yours."

The expert was already drying his check.

"I have made it out for $250, that, I think, is but fair in view of the trouble you must have gone to in buying these. I cannot say how sorry I am that you should have been so badly hit. But one should remember that no school has been so consistently imitated and faked as the Venetian school of ivory workers."

This unprecedented generosity on the part of one notoriously parsimonious, together with such unaccustomed politeness, rendered Mr. Carrol dumb. He remained gazing into the street.

Mr Bathurst pressed a bell button.

"Good morning, Mr. Carrol," he said politely.

Mr. Bathurst went home restless, almost feverish with delight.

Back in the club Mr. Carrol lay back in his chair and laughed until the tears ran down his cheeks, and the attendants became alarmed. When he grew calmer, he addressed the check to the secretary of a charity organization. Later, as members came drifting in, he related the story in detail, so that before nightfall it was on everyone's lips.

And that is why Mr. Bathurst suddenly departed for China, "in order to gather materials for another masterly work," as the papers put it.

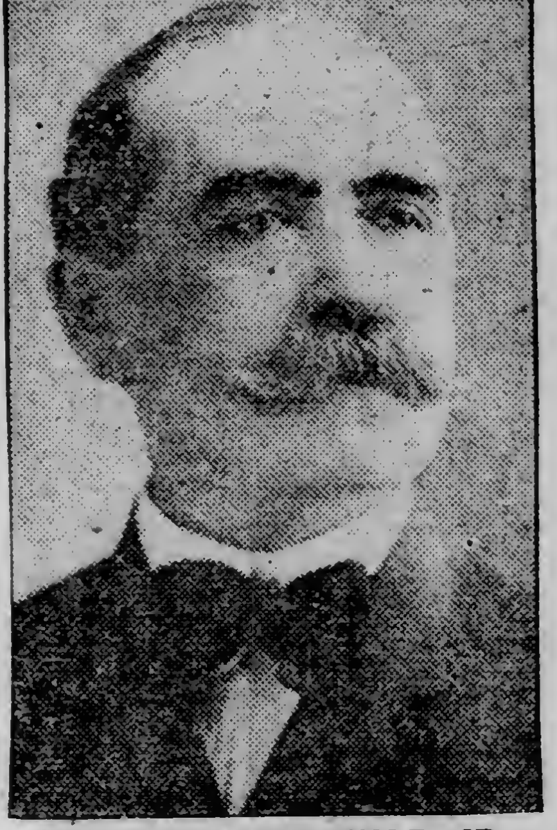
BRILLIANT ASSEMBLAGE AT ORPHEUM OPENING

Fashionable and Enthusiastic Audience Packs Beautiful New Theater.

"You Are Looking Swell," Is Mayor Cullum's Jocund Greeting.



MORRIS MEYERFELD, JR.
Of San Francisco, President of the Orpheum Circuit, Who Was Present Last Evening.

MARTIN BECK
Of New York, General Manager of the Orpheum Circuit, Who Was Present Last Evening.

H. W. PIERONG,
Local Manager of the New Theater.

The Orpheum's debut in the city of Duluth was last night made so auspicious and so thoroughly successful that today there should be no lurking doubts in the minds of the men behind the venture over the success of advanced vaudeville in Duluth.

No event of the recent past has so reflected the progress that it has made in Duluth, for it is doubtful if any city of the West could have produced a more fashionable or more elegantly attired audience than the one that last night helped make the opening of the Orpheum conspicuous and distinctive.

Society did honor to the occasion, and finding a harmonious background in the elegant and artistic theater, the beautiful gowns of the feminine members of the audience that packed the theater from pit to gallery made the picture a perfect one.

Columns have already been written of the exquisite interior decorations of the theater. But those who had read of the artistic interior finishings in reality had no adequate idea of the manner in which the decorator's art had succeeded in making the Dultuh Orpheum perhaps the most cozy and beautiful of all the theaters of that large circuit, with the possible exception of the $1,000,000 San Francisco theater.

There is not an inartistic line or color to mar the perfect blend and harmony of the color scheme. It was to this refinement of color and light and artistic drapery that Duluth gave welcome last evening, with what was probably the most fashionable as well as the most enthusiastic audience that ever attended a theatrical performance in this city.

Long before the time set for the opening overture, by the excellent orchestra Mr. Bradbury has organized, the theater was comfortably filled. Before the lights were lowered for the first number of the bill, there was not a vacant seat in the house. From the front row in the parquet to the last row in the gallery, every seat had its occupant.

"Looking Swell."

Before the first number of the bill, Mayor Marcus B. Cullum stepped before the footlights. There was a burst of applause, a pause of silence, and then the mayor said:

"Friends, you are looking swell."

That slangy and short word was the best for that particular occasion that could be possibly be found. Old Noah Webster could have thought of no more appropriate one. Duluth was in its best bib and tucker, and its good children sure did look "swell."

"Amusement is an institution that has enlisted the greatest minds of the country," said the mayor. "It is a field of endeavor calling forth the most serious thought. Now to amuse the public is a problem that is interesting the president of this country as well as the mayors of the various cities throughout the country. Amusement is one of the great problems of this day.

"If the people who have given to Duluth this magnificent theater have any doubt of the success of their venture here, I believe this doubt has been removed by the reception you have given them this evening. If the Orpheum people give the people of this city clean and wholesome amusement, I don't believe there will be any doubt of their success in the field in which they have been so eminently successful.

"The coming here of the Orpheum and the audience this evening are both indicative of the rapid strides of this city. We have grown to be a big and progressive city, and the audience present on this occasion reflects the culture, stability and prosperity of Duluth."

Mayor Cullum paid a neat compliment to G. G. Hartley for his faith in the future of the city, as made manifest in the beautiful theater, and also to the officers of the Orpheum company for their faith in the future of this city as an amusement center.

The Opening Bill.

Hardly had the applause that greeted the mayor's dedicatory address subsided, when the lights were lowered and the first show of the new playhouse was on.

All patrons of vaudeville are used to the aerial trapeze work. It has become part and parcel of vaudeville. One might think seriously and say that there was nothing new in this strenuous line of amusement. But the Flying Martins drove this conclusion to the discard. Their work last night was about the most daring that has ever been seen in the city, and, also, they had some features that are distinctly novel and new.

The Martins worked so fast that at times they were almost bewildering. They were daring, also, and the grand finale of their act brought a feminine "Oh" from several of those who suffer from nerves.

Following the bill in its order of presentment, it might be said of Fred Duprez that he is a man who is really funny, though he suffered under the disadvantage of being advertised as being funny.

That fact often handicaps a man, or a woman, too. But the members of the audience did not have to look at the assuring fact on their program, to discover that Duprez was really there with the laugh wave talk. He sang several songs, and for encores sang several more. Then he told some incidents of matrimony, both instructive and humorous.

Fred has "such a way," as they say of certain men, you know, and before he left the stage he was thoroughly acquainted with his audience. A monologue is very funny when it is funny, to make a rather cute remark; and last evening Duprez was very funny.

A large scream, and you will have to laugh right out in the open, even if you have troubles that are pulling your countenance into a long, drawn-out solemn blank, are the Rossow midgets.

Their imitation of a prize fight is one of the most hugely funny things that has ever been produced on a vaudeville stage. If you have ever seen a boxing match, you will appreciate the artistic imitation of the Rossow's.

The smallest one has a "haymaker" like Terry McGovern used to carry around before one ambitious youth knocked the lust of battle from his frame. The larger Rossow moves like the lamented Jim Jeffries, slow and coming like the bear, awaiting the opening that will come some time, perhaps.

Several men whom you might imagine had an inside sense of the fine points of boxing, nearly fell from their seats at the burlesque match. The little Rossow kept coming, fighting in all the time, uncorking swings and uppercuts, that would make the repertoire of the average doughnut fighter look like simple and undeceiving.

The little men were productive of several large laughs.

If versatility is an indication of genius, and they say it is, Nellie Nichols possesses that somewhat elusive faculty. She does Yiddish, Italian, German and Irish imitations with equal facility, and she makes you laugh at the characteristics of several faces. Also, Miss Nichols knows how to sing a coon song, and so few really do. The audience couldn't get enough of her work last night. She was encored and then encored, and she stayed on until—well, until she must have been tired.

Vaudeville is ambitious, for the reason that competition forces it to be. "The Leading Lady," a comic opera playlet, is an example of ambitious vaudeville. It is no less than a comic opera boiled down to an entertainment period of twenty minutes. It contains everything that you get in comic opera, and some more. It had songs, humor and pretty music and pretty girls, and these elements have been considered the essentials of comic opera for some time past.

Ralph Lynn is really funny, and so is Ed. Coleman. Marguerite Haney is petite and dainty and fetching—there you have it, or her. She sings and dances her way into the good graces of the audience. Her comedy is spontaneous, and she knows how to be funny and cute without being effected, which is quite an art.

Lyons and Yosco, the harpist and the singer, received the greatest ovation of the evening. Their music is really of a high class, and their mirth is real, true mirth.

They were called back time and time again, for their classical and rag-time playing was something that Duluth audiences have not been used to in the past.

The canine performers of Clown Zertho did some stunts that were astounding in the insight they gave of the intelligence of dogs. Trained dogs are common to vaudeville, but some of the tricks done by the Zertha dogs have never been seen on a Duluth stage before.

There were over seventeen dogs in the act and, it might be said, every one was very much an actor.

The bill was closed by the motion pictures, which were of a very amusing nature.

Present last night at the opening performance were Martin Beck, general manager of the entire Orpheum circuit and who came here expressly to attend the inaugural performance; F. B. Menderson, superintendent of construction for the Orpheum company; George Raymond, general manager of the Minneapolis house, who was chiefly instrumental in securing an Orpheum theater for this city; Morris Meyerfeld, Jr., president of the Orpheum circuit; P. J. Casey, general agent, and Herman Fehr, director.

WELCOMED AT LYCEUM

Large Audience Greets H. E. Pierce & Company's Associate Players.

H. E. Pierce & Company's Associate Players, a Duluth stock company under the management of Duluth men, opened its first extended engagement at the Lyceum last night and was given a gratifying welcome by a crowd that comfortably filled the theater. With William Jossey in the title role, the company gave an adequate production of Edwin Milton Royle's beautiful story of Western life, "The Squaw Man."

The players more than made good with an audience that was critical through its familiarity with the play as presented by William Faversham and the excellent company which appeared at the Lyceum two or three years ago. In his curtain speech after the third act, Mr. Jossey explained that the company will play the Copper & Iron circuit while the road companies are playing at the Lyceum and will return to the Lyceum to appear between the visits of road companies.

Judging from last night's production, Duluth may safely send the players out as a Duluth company. Mr. Jossey and Miss Blanche Douglass are stock stars of the first magnitude and H. E. Pierce & Company have gathered around them a supporting company to which any play may safely be entrusted. "The Squaw Man," requires unusual talent for its production. The characters must be shaded to retain the color of London and the Western ranges and nobody in the cast last night failed in his or her portrayal of the assigned role.

The beautiful story of "The Squaw Man" is well known in Duluth. It is a story that holds the interest from the time the first act reveals the hopeless love of Capt. Jesse Wynnegate for the wife of his worthless cousin to the time the body of Nat-U-Rich is borne on the stage in the arms of her stoical father and laid at the feet of Jim Carston, her husband. There are real heart-throbs in the story and they wring tears from many eyes. There is gun-play, but it is gun-play of the modern melodrama, not of the "mellerdrammer" dear to the hearts of the ten-twent'-thirt' patrons. The characters are the characters of the West of the story books and, though they may not be the characters of the West of fact, they are the men and women most dear to the hearts of Americans, for their virility, their philosophy, their great loves and their great hates.

William Jossey makes Jim Carston all he should be. As the English soldier, as the Western cattle-owner, as the bankrupt; as the husband of Nat-U-Rich, who could have wealth and title, but scorns it when leaving her is the price, Jim Carston holds the sympathy of the audience and by faithful interpretation of the role, Mr. Jossey commands that sympathy.

The role of Lady Dianna does not give Miss Douglas a very great opportunity for the display of histrionic talent, but she does not attempt to make the role more than it is and that fact commends her. She is an actress whom Duluth audiences will like. She is good to look upon, has fine presence and Duluthians will look forward to seeing her in a role, which makes more demands upon her ability.

The role of Nat-U-Ritch is in capable hands in those of Katherine Vanesse. The role which calls for few words often demands the greater acting and Miss Vanesse makes the little squaw a fine character. The difficult character of Tabawana, the Indian chief, is creditably handled by Frederick Monley and Verne Schulte as Little Hal is a child to be reckoned with.

Most of the comedy is furnished by Joseph Kemper as Sir John Applegate and, while the character may be a caricature, Mr. Kemper gives the audience what they have learned to expect in the stage Englishman of comedy. Wallace Ingham is a delightful Big Bill and the other cowboys are virile young men of the ranges. The other parts are well handled by Joe Hartman as the Earl of Kerhill, George Dill as Malcolm Petrie, Charles R. Moore as the Bishop of Exeter, Marie Bonsall as Lady Elizabeth and Alice Mason as Mrs. Chichester-Chichester Jones.

H. E. Pierce & Co.'s Associate Players will appear in "The Squaw Man" all this week with matinees Wednesday and Saturday afternoons.

NEW VAUDEVILLE AT THE BIJOU

Excellent Bill Well Received By Three Very Large Audiences.

Three large audiences crowded the Bijou theater yesterday on the occasion of the first performances of the new bill. The high class vaudeville merited the attendance.

Headline honors seemed to be evenly divided between the one-act comedy, "Two Hundred Miles From Broadway," and the fun and music act presented by Davis, Willis and Guhl. Both acts were thoroughly enjoyed.

"Two Hundred Miles From Broadway" deals with the adventures of a soubrette and a follower of the race track, who find themselves isolated in a New Hampshire country inn on Christmas day. The playlet teems with witty lines and the principals handle them in a capable manner.

Davis, Willis and Guhl start out with comedy and end up with real music. It was with reluctance that the large audience last night allowed them to go.

Sighorina Bea Verera, the "Italian Nightingale," is a vocalist who knows what to sing and how to sing it. She has a soprano voice of very great range and rich quality, which she handles with fine dramatic effect. Her equal is seldom heard on the vaudeville stage.

Bush and Peyser are acrobats. They are original and evidently have seen the advisability of leaving out the time worn stunts, substituting in their stead those of a brand new type.

The three Escardos do tumbling that is to say the least, sensational. The somersault from the high platform to the net and thence to the shoulders of the man borne on the shoulders of another has never been surpassed in the history of such acts in this city.

James B. Adams has a popular song, "Hurrah for the Summer Time," which he sings in an enjoyable manner. The song is well illustrated.

As a whole, the bill this week provides amusement of all kinds and just enough of each to make the audience wish for more. It includes vaudeville of the best and the patronage of the house shows that the efforts of Manager Maitland to give the best that can be had is appreciated. In spite of the Orpheum opening last evening, the attendance was fully as large as usual.

SILVER TICKETS TO STATE FAIR.

There will be one entrance to the state fair grounds this year where the only ticket required will be one of Uncle Sam's regular 50-cent pieces. This is the entrance known as the "Iron Gate" at the corner of Langford avenue and St. Paul avenue. At this point will be installed patent turnstiles, with a mechanical money-in-the-slot contrivance. The visitor to the fair will not be required to fall in line at the ticket window and lose five or six valuable minutes in waiting for his turn to purchase a ticket. Instead, he goes at once to the gate with the needful half dollar in his hand, deposits it in the slot, whereupon the turn-stile swings once around and he finds himself inside the grounds.

This practical application of an old device will be given a thorough trial by the state fair management and if it proves a success other money-in-the-slot turnstiles will be placed at practically all of the entrances to the fair grounds next year. It means a saving to every one—the fair management will not be required to pay for ticket-sellers or ticket-takers, while the patrons of the fair will be spared both inconvenience and loss of time. This feature will in itself add one more to the thousand and one interesting nevelties which have placed the Minnesota state fair so far in advance of all of its competitors.

CASS LAKER LUCKY.

Caught By Sewer Cavein Rescued and Only Bruised.

Cass Lake, Minn., Aug. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Thomas Glidden had a narrow escape from death here yesterday while assisting in constructing a sewer. He was in the bottom of the trench when the bank caved in on one side and covered him with about four feet of sand. He fell in a crouching position leaving a small air space under his body which undoubtedly saved his life. He was rescued in ten minutes. An examination showed his hip and shoulder to be bruised, caused by falling planks, otherwise he was unhurt.

TWO MEN KILLED IN HEART OF MINNEAPOLIS.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Within a block of each other and with not more than fifteen minutes between the accidents, two men were instantly killed by falls in the heart of the Minneapolis down town district yesterday.

John Anderson, a painter, fell from the fourth story of the Lindley block, 620½ Nicollet avenue, and almost struck Mrs. Henry Mallard, a guest at the Rogers hotel. He was crushed almost beyond recognition.

James Riley, a teamster employed by John M. Sullivan, fell from his wagon while delivering coal in the alley by the Radisson hotel, and was found dead. Heart disease is suspected.

MISSOURI RIVER LOWEST OF ALL PREVIOUS RECORDS.

Fort Benton, Mont., Aug. 23.—The Missouri river at this place continues to drop, and it is believed by many that it has never been lower since there was a settlement on its banks. In the ordinary stage of low water, there are several places where the river can be forded, but it is never a safe way of crossing, owing to changes in the current. Yesterday, however, two steam traction engines used with plowing outfits forded a short distance below the wagon bridge, the water being several inches below the fireboxes.

Newspaper Man Buried.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 23.—Funeral services for John W. Fawcett, former Minneapolis newspaper man, who was killed in Chicago, were held under the auspices of the Minneapolis Elks at their lodge rooms, corner of Sixth street and Hennepin avenue, Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The lodge pallbearers were J. Parks Quirk, Charles H. Conner and Frank E. Nimocks. Pallbearers for the press were Adolps Edston, Journal; E. C. Griffith and George F. Authier, Tribune. The body reached Minneapolis Sunday morning.

Aeroplanes.

The practical utilization of the aeroplane depends upon the ease with which it can be launched and landed, and also to a great extent upon the smallness of size that can be attained. Many people agree that for a cool and refreshing beverage for summer use nothing quite equals Golden Grain Belt beer. It pleases the palate and satisfies the thirst. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Duluth branch Minneapolis Brewing company.

Inkster to Celebrate.

Inkster, N. D., Aug. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Trade extension is the aim of local merchants in holding a special day's celebration, Sept. 19, at which time they have secured the promise of Governor Burke to speak.

Chicago Traveling Man Hurt.

Bismarck, N. D., Aug. 23.—C. R. Matson, traveling representative of a Chicago firm, had his collar bone and his left wrist broken, besides sustaining several severe face and body bruises in an auto accident late Saturday evening. A tire blew up while the party of which Matson was a member was motoring near Fort Lincoln, and the machine turned completely over, alighting on its wheels again. None of the others was injured.

Eats Game, Then "Peaches."

Linton, N. D., Aug. 23.—John Fahrenwald, a farmer northeast of here, finds that prairie chickens come rather high at this season of the year, having paid over $18 for one. Mr. Fahrenwald is said to have killed the chicken with a pitchfork, and what is still funnier, he claims the party who had him arrested was a guest at his house that day, and took an active part in the devouring of the festive hen.

ROUGH TRIP FOR GOPHER

Governor and Party Were All Seasick Off Isle Royale.

Boat Returns to Get More Coal and Adj. Gen. Wood.

Gen. Fred W. Johnson of New Ulm, a member of the governor's staff and brother of the late John A. Johnson, accompanied by his wife, came to Duluth today on the U. S. S. Gopher from Toben's Harbor, Isle Royale, and will return to his home. The other members of the party that went with Governor Eberhart to Isle Royale remained there with him, enjoying the pleasures afforded on the island.

The Gopher, manned by members of the Duluth naval militia, had an eventful voyage after it left Duluth last Saturday night at 11 o'clock. The lake behaved badly a part of the time and the members of the governor's party were almost unanimously afflicted with seasickness at one stage of the cruise.

In the first place Commander Guy A. Eaton was given sailing instructions that took the Gopher to the wrong place. The naval militia vessel steamed to Washington Harbor instead of to Toben's Harbor, where it was expected, and got there Sunday night.

Monday the Gopher headed for Toben's. The sea was heavy and the Gopher rolled and tossed like a child with the colic. Practically everyone aboard became sick and the pitching of the vessel caused the breakage of all the dishes on the boat.

The situation became alarming in the extreme and it was feared that calamity would overtake the Gopher and its distinguished human cargo, but the good ship rode out the peril and came safely to Toben's Harbor.

Yesterday afternoon the Gopher left Toben's for Duluth for coal and to get Adjt. Gen. Fred B. Wood of the staff, who has been absent from the state on official business. She will leave Duluth Thursday and carry the adjutant general to Isle Royale, where he will rejoin the party which he brought to Duluth last Saturday.

Mr. Johnson said that in all the trip was a very enjoyable one and he regretted that he was unable to continue with the party. Business interests call him back to New Ulm, however, and he was forced to leave when the opportunity presented itself.

COPPERS FIRMER; TRADING LIGHT

Flurry in Butte-Ballaklava Is Not Felt By the General List.

The copper market opened dull and moderately weak but good buying in North Butte and Amalgamated caused a reaction in most issues and the decline was stopped. The market closed slightly higher than yesterday. The volume of trading was light and the public was not interested in the general list although it took a lively interest in two or three of the specialties, especially Butte-Ballaklava.

The liquidation in Butte-Ballaklava which started with the tap of the opening gong, was caused by a suit against the company, details of which are explained elsewhere. The stock closed with sales at $11 yesterday and at the opening today sales were made at $10.75 and $10.50. The market quickly dropped to $8 under heavy pressure. Liquidation lessened and there was some support around $8, values taking on a show of strength. The stock advanced to sales at $8.50 and at the close was $8.75 bid with no offerings under $9.

The market was unsettled early in the session by the slump in Butte Ballaklava but values soon recovered and the action of Butte Balalaklava was confined entirely to that stock. The effect was felt more keenly in this market, however, than in the East as the stock of Butte-Baallaklava is largely held here. Amazon, which is controlled by the Butte-Ballaklava crowd, did not feel the effects of the flurry in Butte-Ballaklava. It sold at $3.50 and there was no pressure on the stock.

Mowitza showed some strength and sold at 80c. Red Warrior was firm at $2.62, Shattuck sold at $23, Butte-Alex Scott full paid at $5.75, Butte-Ballaklava at $8.62½ and $8.87½ here, Calumet & Montana at $1 to $1.06¼, Cactus at $1.87½, Denn at $3.31¼ to $3.12½, Carman at $1, Keating at 87c, North American at $3.

Calumet & Arizona sold at $61.50 to $62.50, Giroux at $6.62½ to $6.50 to $5.62½, Superior & Pittsburg at $11.50, North Butte at $28.37½ to $29.37½, Greene at $7.37½ to $7.50 and Amalgamated at $64.37½ to $65.37½ and then to $65.

Hayden, Stone & Co. says of Greene-Cananea: Comparatively little regarding this property has appeared recently in the press, but the management, from the figures of production, seem to have been making good progress. The July output, 4,500,000 lb, was the largest the company has reported since the assumption of control by present interests, and exceeds the July, 1909, output by 1,000,000 lb.

For the first seven months of 1910 the company produced nearly 29,000,000 lb., as against 26,000,000 lb. in 1909. Doubtless this has been accompanied by some reduction in expense, a thing much to be desired, as last year Greene-Cananea's cost was very close to 12 cents a pound, and it was accordingly able to earn but $500,000, or 20 cents a share. This program will now be somewhat interfered with by the reduction policy. It is therefore doubtful if, for the full year, Greene-Cananea will show results appreciably different from those of 1909.

Thompson, Towle & Co. discuss the copper situation as follows: The producers of copper are working to get the metal upon a 15-cent basis, and they anticipate that they will be successful in their efforts before present curtailment plans are called off. That the plan of curtailment has already stimulated buying of copper is no longer a theory, but a condition, and prices of electrolytic brands have increased from 12¼ cents to 12¾ cents per pound. This ½ cent per pound increase in profits is a factor of no small moment, for it increases profits of the copper producers about $600,000 per month, and every 1-cent increase in the price of copper adds to the profits about $15,000,000 per annum.

Duluthian Strikes Oil.

M. C. French, formerly of Duluth and now of Okmulgee, Okla., is interested in a rich oil well, which was struck recently near that town. He and his associates in the firm of Rossiter, Shock & French struck a fine flow of oil at a depth of 1,897 feet and have now ordered tanks to develop the well. In letters to Duluth friends, Mr. French says that he and his associates are well satisfied with the showing on their property and they are in a fair way to fortune. Okmulgee is a growing town dependent on oil and gas for its prosperity and several good strikes have been made in the vicinity recently, that of Rossiter, Shock & French not being among the least important.

"Booster Day" Postponed on Account of Non-Arrival of Team.

A telegram from Carl Bond, manager of the Wausau team, to the effect that the team missed connections at Ashland and could not arrive in Duluth this afternoon, caused the postponement of "Booster Day" until tomorrow.

The telegram was a deep disappointment to the owners of the Duluth club. Many tickets had been sold and they were looking forward to one of the biggest days in the history of baseball in Duluth. The band had been engaged and was just ready to go out in a tally-ho to advertise the game when the telegram was received.

Tomorrow will be "Booster Day," however, and the officials of the club hope it will be as big a success as the affair today promised to be. The "booster" tickets will be good for tomorrow's game and it is expected all of them will be out. The postponement of today's game will probably result in a double header during the visit of Bond's Lumberjacks to Duluth.

ELECTION OF McCAMUS LEGAL

Judge Cant Makes Decision in Brookston Election Contest.

According to a decision handed down this morning by Judge William A. Cant of the district court, Rowe McCamus was legally elected and is at present the legal clerk of the town of Brookston, Minn.

The allegation was made in a suit in district court some time ago that a number of votes cast in favor of McCamus were cast by men who were not legal voters.

At the election McCamus and W. C. Garland were contestants for the same office. There were 19 votes cast for McCamus and 15 for Garland. It was claimed in the suit that several who did not reside at Brookston cast votes there.

TORNADO DOES MUCH DAMAGE AT LUDINGTON.

Ludington, Mich., Aug. 23.—Damages estimated at a million dollars was done by a tornadohere last night and the small steamer Golden Age carrying Mrs. J. Boyd and son, said to be of Grand Rapids, Mich., is thought to be lost on Lake Michigan.

Fruit trees suffered much damage, and many buildings were unroofed. Charles Carlson, a farmer, was struck by lightning and probably fatally hurt. His home was destroyed. The cottages on Epworth Heights, a summer resort, were blown from their foundations.

The storm swept all through Western Michigan.

WILL NOT TURN MONEY OVER TO CONSUL.

Judge Middlecoff in probate court, yesterday afternoon, refused the petition of the Austrian consul at St. Paul to have turned over to him the $2,350 belonging to John Dragonvich, a minor, who received the money in settlement for injuries inflicted by accident while in the employ of Butler Bros. The court held that F. J. Pulford, the guardian appointed for the boy, is a responsible person in every way, that he is fully bonded and there is no reason why the money should be turned over to the consul. Emanuel Charlich was the first guardian appointed by the court, but a recent order of district court substituted Mr. Pulford and directed Charlich to turn the money over to him.

The killing of Mrs. Prosser's husband on the Oriental Limited when it was drawing into Libby last June, was one of the sensations of that month. The woman had filed suit for divorce, Mr. LeBosky being her attorney, but she was infatuated with her husband and followed him on the train. They were together in his stateroom, when a shot was fired and he was found dead.

BRILLIANCY OF RUSSIAN COURT.

Strand: The Russian court has extreme brilliance, and goes one better than any other court in Europe in the way of luxury and an almost barbaric magnificence. The season is in the winter, and lasts until Easter. Several court balls take place, and an invitation to one of these is an imperative command, to which only illness or the deepest mourning can be given as an excuse for absence. On such an occasion the Winter palace is a dream of fairyland. The state rooms, which are among the finest in Europe, are richly gilded and furnished with much magnificence. And, with an outside temperature below zero, the malachite saloon and the vast halls and galleries are filled with rare flowers that bloom in a hothouse atmosphere. All the men wear ribbons and orders, and splendid uniforms are seen—the officers of the Imperial Guard resplendent in white and gold, the Lancers in scarlet, the Hussars in green and the Cossacks in silver. The only black coat is that of the American ambassador. And nowhere else can be seen such gowns, jewels and decorations. Russian court ladies wear a special court dress, a glorified edition of the national costume. Black gowns are disallowed as in Berlin. The ladies "of the portrait" wear a miniature of the empress set in diamonds, and the maids of honor have her initials in diamonds on a blue ribbon worn on the shoulder.

A court ball begins at 9, and every one must be present before the entrance of royalty. The ball opens with a dance called a polonaise, led by the emperor and empress. The emperor dances with a grand duchess and the empress with an ambassador. Quadrilles and valses follow, and a national dance known as the mazurka. Less splendid but even more choice are the smaller and more intimate dances, called the bals des palmiers. When these are given, the long gallery is transformed into a tropical forest, with flowers, plants and tree ferns, and among the scented greenery are set little tables with supper for 500 persons. At the bigger court balls as many as 3,000 guests are served at the same time with supper.

H. W. RICHARDSON,
Local Forecaster.

The yellow haze, which hung over Duluth yesterday, was the cause of more concern than atmospheric conditions and the weather man says that neither he nor the forces over which he exercises sway had anything to do with the unusual condition. Though there was no sunshine, the day was bright and the temperature comfortable. Rain is predicted again for tonight.

Threatening weather conditions prevailed a year ago today.

The sun rose this morning at 5:16 and it will set at 7:05, giving thirteen hours and forty-nine minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"Low pressure areas overlie Manitoba, Southwestern Iowa and Northeastern Kansas. During the last twenty-four hours these disturbances caused showers over Alberta, Saskatchewan, the lake region and over scattered parts of South Atlantic and Gulf states. Heavy rainfalls occurred at stations on or near Lake Michigan. High temperatures prevailed yesterday in Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Tennessee, Louisiana, Texas, New Mexico, Colorado, Utah, Arizona and Nevada. Much cooler weather prevails in Northwestern Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, South Dakota and Montana. The North Pacific high pressure has increased in intensity and is causing a further drop in temperature in the extreme Northwest. Conditions favor showers at the Head of the Lakes during the following thirty-six hours."

General Forecasts.

Chicago, Aug. 23.—Forecasts for twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m. Wednesday:

Upper Michigan—Showers tonight or Wednesday; cooler.

Wisconsin—Unsettled, with showers tonight or Wednesday.

Iowa — Unsettled, with probably showers tonight or Wednesday; cooler tonight in southern and in extreme east portion.

North and South Dakota and Nebraska—Partly cloudy tonight and Wednesday.

Montana—Generally fair tonight and Wednesday.

WEST END

THREE CLUBS MAY UNITE

The Reorganized Commercial Club Will Be a Stronger Body.

Hillside and Sixth Ward Clubs Will Form Main Organization.

In an effort to again bring the West end Commercial club into being, and render it an effective aid to the interests of that portion of the city, a meeting will be held early in September to consider the consolidation of the present Commercial club, the Sixth Ward Business club, and the Hillside Improvement club in one organization to be known as the Commercial club.

It is thought that the fact that West end interests were thus divided between three organizations is partially to blame for the decline of the Commercial club this summer and that by getting all the West end residents working together under one organization more can be accomplished than was accomplished by the Commercial club, even during the period of its activity.

It is said that the members of all three organizations are in favor of such an consolidation, the Sixth Ward Business club realizing the advantages of consolidation and the Hillside Improvement club having accomplished its chief end in securing the Piedmont avenue extension from the street railway company.

Through the combined efforts of the three organizations it is hoped that during the fall they can secure the adoption of some definite policy on the part of the council in regard to the removal of the Point of Rocks, provide a "white way" for the West end business district and get the West end public market established and ready for a big year's business next year.

STROMBERG WILL TALK.

Professor in University Will Address Gustavus Adolphus Alumni.

At the meeting of the alumni of Gustavus Adolphus college to be held at the Swedish Bethany Lutheran church this evening, Prof. A. A. Peter Nehlin of Virginia, Mr. Bergquist of Bovey, and Mr. Sundquist of Carlton will also speak. Miss Martha Levin of Minneapolis, known as the "Blind Singer," will attend the meeting and render several solos.

From the eager support given the movement so far it is regarded as practically certain that a permanent alumni association will be formed this evening.

ENJOYABLE PICNIC.

Second Day of Dedication Exercises Is Spent at Fond du Lac.

The second day of the dedication celebration of the First Swedish Baptist church was spent in a picnic up the river yesterday by about 300 members of the congregation and their guests. Frank Peterson and Rev. M. Berglund were features of the day.

This evening Rev. O. Bodien will give a stereopticon lecture under the auspices of the Young People's society on a trip through Sweden.

Fire Rumor Spreads.

Considerable excitement was caused in the western part of the city yesterday afternoon by the report that the smoke pall was caused by the far western fires and the rumor of the destruction of one of the near-by towns gained general credence.

ern states. New soil was being broken and the seed was sown on the new breaking. Crushers built plants in Kansas to manufacture oil. Prices of flax in those days were far under one-half of present values. Farmers were fortunate to get 10 or 11 bushels an acre, and 7 to 9 bushels comprised a moderately good crop. Kansas tired of flax, and as the plains of the Northwest were broken by settlers, flaxseed was sown and the Northwest soon became the chief flaxseed producing area in the United States.

As the pioneers pushed westward in North and South Dakota the acreage of flaxseed increased and the volume of production advanced correspondingly. A thoughtful statesman who wanted the agricultural vote got a tariff of 25 cents a bushel on flaxseed, although this country was then on an exporting basis and the farmers had little competition from India, Argentina or Canada. The production of linseed oil, the chief product of flaxseed, increased as the acreage of flaxseed decreased. The farmer turned from flax to wheat and other grains. The Northwestern farmers, especially the agriculturists in North and South Dakota, have never pursued the plan of crop rotation. If prices were favorable, they espoused the cause of one crop and grew others chiefly for purposes of feed. From a production of 35,000,000 bushels a year the yield in the United States has dwindled to about 20,000,000 bushels.

Small Increase in Acreage.

At the beginning of last season prices were high and it was expected that the flax acreage in the Northwest would be increased. The increase, however, was small and marketings of flax in the Northwest amounted to about 18,000,000 bushels. The crusher was forced to import 4,000,000 bushels of seed. Prices continued to advance. With values of flax seed twice the prices of wheat the farmer held aloof from the former crop. New ground was broken this year in Montana and the acreage was greatly increased, probably to 300,000 or 350,000 acres, but in the three leading Northwestern states the increase was small.

The American farmer has been given a duty of 25 cents on flax. He has been importuned by crushers to plant more seed, but he has been deaf to their pleadings. In the olden days, crushers, in order to stimulate the production of flax seed, bought the Kansas crop in advance and the farmer sold his crop at advantageous prices before it was planted. Between 1896 and 1910, according to the "Paint and Varnish Record" of Chicago the price of flax seed has advanced 142.4 per cent. The government has been asked by crushers and paint manufacturers to instruct the farmer in scientifically preparing his soil for the reception of flax seed. In India flax seed has been raised for centuries and crushers deplore the limiting of flax planting in this country to new breakings. It is imperative that the production of flax in the United States shall be increased and the government is about to assume the role of instructor with the farming element in the Northwest as its student.

Paint Prices Soar.

The advance in paint prices has been general. Heath, Milligan & Co., in its latest bulletin, announces an advance of 20 cents a gallon in its best paint. Prices on all special paints have been withdrawn until values can be revised. The Enterprise Paint Manufacturing company under date of Aug. 10 announces the withdrawal and revision of its prices. The Sherwin-Williams company has re-figured its costs, advancing values. This company makes the pertinent statement: "Since this date one year ago the flax seed from which we produce linseed oil in the manufacture of our paints and varnish had advanced in price $1.05 per bushel, causing an advance in the price of linseed oil of 36 cents a gallon. During the same period turpentine has advanced nearly 20 cents per gallon." The Martin-Senour company and W. W. Lawrence & Company have withdrawn for revisal their prices on nearly all brands of paints. Other manufacturers have followed a similar procedure.

Manipulation.

The question of manipulation of the narrow flax seed market on the Duluth Board of Trade opens up an interesting discussion which has many angles and many phases. The opinion of an impersonal spectator of the flax seed market is inclined to place the blame on the shorts who repeatedly have sold what they did not own and with no intention of delivering the seed. Whether this is more flagrant than buying what the buyer believes cannot be delivered is a question for the consideration of moralists and not for a reviewer of economic and commercial conditions.

At this time last year the flax crop in the Northwest was placed at around 30,000,000 bu. A few astute crushers learned early that the yield would be greatly reduced, and when they began to buy flax they caught the entire crowd on the local board of trade short. A large part of the crop had been cornered by these interests before the trade awoke to a realization that they had sold a curtailed crop short. They were severely punished in buying back the stuff which they had sold before owning it. The distribution of seed to the Duluth market was admirably regulated. The controlling interests not only held the Northwestern crop under their control, but they bought heavily in India and Argentina and they stood pat until they received a fat price for their seed. The crusher early last fall was forced to advance the market by buying seed against heavy sales of linseed oil, the demand for which was enormous. On this trading the crusher undoubtedly lost money, but his losses were recouped and he cleared an enormous profit by his corner of the flax crop. He forced the shorts to pay an unusually high price for seed and the singular spectacle was witnessed this summer of crushers selling seed at a time when stores were depleted and the outlook indicated a reduced crop this fall.

Gambling in the flax seed market has not been confined to crushers which to a large extent have been forced to speculate on their supplies. The new crop trades, the selling of new flax by farmers to arrive in this market at a future date, have been largely speculative because of the short crops in the Northwest. This year many farmers sold flax against their prospective crops. The season was disappointing. A farmer became frightened and tried to even up his trade. Crop conditions were serious and when he went into the market to buy back the stuff that he had sold, seed that had not yet been grown, he found few sellers and was forced to bid up the market to find sellers. By this time prices were so much higher that other farmers believed them to be attractive and they sold flax seed to arrive in this market at what they believed to be exceptionally high prices. Crop conditions did not improve and as the long interest bid up the market the farmer either had to increase his margins or get out of the market at a heavy loss. The farmer in many instances was unable to margin trades. This condition of affairs was proven unusually serious to the new settlers in the country recently broken, as their financial position is not so secure as that of the farmers in the longer settled country.

Tariff Helps Speculator.

The tariff of 25 cents a bushel on flax aided the manipulator. The flax production of Canada is rapidly increasing and a large part of it is available to the markets of the United States yet a duty is imposed to protect the farmer on this side of the international boundary so that he will raise a crop which he is yearly showing less of a desire to grow. If the duty were removed it is likely that the farmer would regard it as another reason why he should discontinue the growing of flax. This would force crushers to buy more heavily abroad and prices would be forced up on the other side. That is what the protectionist argues, but the protectionist theory of growing and manufacturing everything for local consumption and selling the surplus at a profit to somebody else is not working out in the problems attaching to the Northwestern flax crop, its sale and its manufacture into oil.

One feature that has added fuel to the speculative aspect of the local flax market is the heavy margins demanded of country sellers. The Northwestern crushing interests, having a large working capital, are not handicapped for lack of money when they desire to move values artificially. But the farmer who desires to take advantage of high prices before harvest and who wishes to sell a part of his crop to arrive must advance a stiff margin of from 20 to 30 or 50 cents a bushel on his trade. There are not many farmers who can stand this pressure, consequently in a market bare of offerings that is being manipulated by a long interest the farmer is not usually in a position to take advantage of excessive prices. This makes it easier for the controlling crowd to push up prices, squeeze the shorts and establish what is known as a "corner."

Sold in Good Faith.

Flax seed for September delivery has been selling at a price probably greater than that for which flax seed could be imported in December. While the farmers generally hesitated to sell against their growing crop after those who had sold were severely punished, it was easy for speculators to hold up prices. Many farmers have lost every cent that they have made this year because they tried to avoid speculation by selling against their growing crop. They fully intended to deliver the actual seed, but they were unable to furnish the margins demanded on sharp advances and they were sold out to their financial ruin.

The coming crop will be short. The crusher has very little linseed oil and flax seed, the paint maker's supplies of linseed oil and paint are almost exhausted and the paint dealer's shelves are nearly bare of stock. This country has been producing one-fourth of the world's crop and the time appears to be rapidly approaching when it will not yield one-tenth of it. The crushers are forced to go abroad and if anything happens to blight the foreign yields this year it is likely that this year's high prices on flax will be thrown into the shade by values on the next crop.

HOW TO FIND OUT

Fill a bottle or common glass with urine and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling usually indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys. Too frequent desire to urinate, scanty supply, pain or dull ache in the back, should also convince you that the kidneys or bladder are out of order.

What To Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, fulfills almost every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold urine, and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate.

The mild, pleasant and extraordinary effect of Swmp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful results in the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine, you should have the best. Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.

You may have a sample bottle of Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, and a book that tells all about it, both sent absolutely free by mail. Address, Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing be sure to mention that you read this generous offer in The Duluth Daily Herald. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

THEORIES VS. PRACTICALITIES.

The embarrassing situation in the tax assessment of this city has given rise to a multitude of arguments, including the purely academic as well as the practical—with a strong leaning to the former.

For instance, our old friends the Single Taxers, who have battled faithfully and valiantly for years against heavy odds, and have despaired not though their numbers remained scant and their influence all but negligible except indirectly, have come to the fore in person and through those who have acquired a vague smattering of their cult. They and their echoes are pointing out the impossibility of equality under the personal property tax, and the injustice of taxing improvements.

These matters have practically nothing to do with the situation, which involves inequalities in the land assessments more than inequalities in assessments of personal property which everybody has come to take for granted. Nevertheless, what they say may be admitted.

It is unfair to tax improvements. It is unjust to penalize development by taxing improved property more than unimproved property. The difference is only one of degree between taxing the home, the factory building and the business block, and taxing windows and doors. When an idle lot and an occupied lot stand side by side, and the idle lot is taxed less than the occupied lot, it is as unjust, relatively, as it is to tax the donkey by which the poor man gains his living, and to leave untaxed the fancy steed in the rich man's stable.

It is all true. But what are you going to do about it?

Our ebulliently enthusiastic local contemporary suggests that it is possible, under the present taxation provisions of the Minnesota Constitution, to take up the Single Tax plan, and that Duluth ought to be one of the first cities to experiment with it. In point of fact it ought to be the last to suggest it.

How can Single Tax experiments be tried in this state? By making local option in taxation possible. That can be done only by eliminating all direct state taxes. The elimination of direct state taxes can be achieved only by providing all the state's revenues through indirect taxation. After its recent experience with an attempt to raise a large sum for state purposes by a specific tax upon one of St. Louis county's industries, a proposal that threatened stagnation to its chief industry and demoralization to the communities whose revenue comes mainly from that industry, Duluth will hardly be expected to encourage the process thus indicated.

Nor, academic taxation theorists to the contrary notwithstanding, would it be a good thing for the state at large. On the contrary it would be a very bad thing.

Admitting the injustice of taxing improvements, which is penalizing progress; admitting that it would be an interesting experiment to try taxing only the land: still it would be bad to do away with the direct state tax, because that would do away at once with the state's interest in local assessments, and with the citizen's interest in the disposal of state funds. He would still provide all those funds, though indirectly, but he wouldn't realize it as he does when he provides them through a direct tax. Indirect taxes would heap the state treasury full, would invite extravagance and corruption, and generally would produce a crop of evils vastly greater than those from which the Single Taxer would have us fly.

MISLEADING ARGUMENTS.

A correspondent wants to know how tariff reform advocates get around this argument, which is circulating industriously through the Republican country press:

> In 1896 it took only 21 pounds of coffee to buy 10 bushels of corn, and now it takes 70 pounds of the same grade of coffee to get the same 10 bushels of corn.
> In 1896 it took only 8 gallons of New Orleans molasses to buy 10 bushels of corn. Now it takes 16 gallons of molasses to get the same amount of corn.
> In 1896 it took only 59 pounds of sugar, while now it takes 151 pounds to buy 10 bushels of corn.
> In 1896 it took 146 pounds of barbed wire to buy 10 bushels of corn. Now it takes 268 pounds of the same kind of barbed wire.
> In 1896 it took only 95 pounds of 8d. wire nails and now it takes 337 pounds to trade for 10 bushels of corn.
> In 1896 you could get 10 bushels of corn for 519 common bricks. Now it takes 1,040 bricks.

The argument is, of course, that since the tariff has fixed it so that the farmer's corn buys so much more coffee and molasses and nails than it did in 1896, the farmer ought to continue to be for a high protective tariff.

How do we get around that argument? Just as we would get around any other flubdub put out to deceive the voters by persons interested in continuing the shameful iniquities of the tariff graft: by exposing its falsity.

What makes it possible for the farmer to buy so much more with ten bushels of corn than he could buy fourteen years ago?

The fact that the price of corn has gone up from something like 20 cents a bushel in 1896 to 60 cents a bushel in 1910.

What has the tariff had to do with this increase in the price of corn? Absolutely nothing, according to no less an authority than President Taft, who carefully explained in his Winona speech that the prices of grain are fixed in the world's markets, and that because this country is a large exporter of corn and other grains, the tariff cannot affect their prices.

If it could be shown that the tariff had raised the price of corn so that its purchasing power is so much greater, there would be something to that argument from the farmer's viewpoint, though it would give the consumer another club against the protective tariff.

But since the tariff obviously had nothing to do with the increase in the price of corn, the argument falls to the ground.

But in the meantime, while natural conditions have brought about the increase in the prices of farm products that has brought wealth to the farmer, the tariff has been raising the prices on nearly everything the farmer buys, thus robbing him of a substantial part of his profits from the increase in prices of farm products.

According to President Taft, the tariff does not help the farmer by affecting the price of what he sells. According to facts, the tariff does affect the farmer seriously by increasing the prices of everything he buys.

Therefore the farmer ought to be for tariff revision, and the results of primary elections in the farming states indicate that he is for tariff revision.

THE CITY TAX LEVY.

Last evening The Herald published City Comptroller McCormick's estimate of the expense of running the city of Duluth next year. His figures are only tentative, and are subject to the action of the conference committee and later of the city council. However, they afford a basis to figure from, and they should have the careful study of every citizen who is interested in bringing about the lowest possible tax rate that is consistent with efficient public service.

Also, when the conference committee begins fixing the tax levy, which it will do shortly, it should have the advice and counsel of the public, or of semi-official representatives of the public such as the Commercial club. The meetings of the committee will be open to the public, it is said, and suggestions, protests and complaints will be given careful consideration.

The average citizen who complains that his taxes are too high usually postpones his criticisms until the taxes are due, when it is too late to do anything more than complain. Then he usually complains to the collecting officer, who had nothing whatever to do with levying the taxes. The time to make sure that taxes are levied properly is when the budgets are being made up. When the levies are made and the taxes are due it is too late to do anything except appeal to the courts, a course which most people shrink from.

Four factors enter into the tax rate paid by the citizens of Duluth: the state tax, with which they have little to do; the county tax, which is fixed by the board of county commissioners; the school tax, which is fixed by the board of education; and the city tax, which is fixed by the city conference committee and the city council. Their relative importance is indicated by the fact that of last year's total tax rate of 38.10 mills, 44 per cent was for the city, 41 per cent for the schools, 8 per cent for the county and 7 per cent for the state.

The city tax rate and the school tax rate, therefore, are the ones that count most, and the ones to be watched closest. The city is spending each year about $800,000, and the school district more than $500,000, all of which comes, directly or indirectly, out of the pockets of Duluth taxpayers, besides more than $200,000 more for state and county purposes.

These items are worth watching, not in any spirit of distrust of public officials, but in such a spirit of vigilance as any business organization would display even over its most trusted employes.

THE NEW PLAYHOUSE.

We are glad to hail the auspicious opening of the Orpheum theater as an event of importance, signalizing another step in the growth and progress of the city which places it in a select class of thirty-nine live communities where good entertainment is appreciated and patronized. The Orpheum circuit is a dependable purveyor of good, wholesome amusement, and its admission of Duluth to the "wheel" is a tribute to the city's prosperity and discernment.

And the new playhouse is most admirable. Its appointments are excellent, and they compare favorably with those of any theater in the land. It is a comfortable and pleasant place to sit in during a couple of hours of engaging distraction. The decoration scheme is uncommonly harmonious and attractive, artistic good taste showing itself on every hand.

Duluth is glad to welcome the Orpheum circuit, glad to be a spoke in the "wheel", glad to have a pleasant place to go where competent performers may take its mind off its daily cares for a few hours.

The new theater is a great credit to G. G. Hartley, who built it, and who, while he was doing it, did it "right."

THE BAR AND POLITICS.

Last evening The Herald printed a report of a meeting of the Eleventh judicial district bar association, at which Judge Homer B. Dibell and Judge Martin Hughes were indorsed for re-election as district judges.

The bar indorsed these men because it is interested in keeping up the standard of the district bench, and because they are the sort of men best fitted to keep it up to its present high level.

It is only an incidental fact that Judge Dibell is a Republican and Judges Hughes a Democrat, while the bar association is composed of members of both parties, as well, perhaps, as members of some other parties. The element of partisanship is only incidental, and had nothing whatever to do with the association's act; yet that very fact makes the incident important and interesting.

For that is the way judges ought always to be picked—because they are fitted for the bench, and not because they are Republicans or Democrats. Both Judge Dibell and Judge Hughes are excellent judges, and with Judge Ensign and Judge Cant form what Duluth is proud to declare the best district bench in this state. Though they affiliate personally with one political party or another, nobody would ever know it from anything that happens when they are presiding in court, and their party affiliations ought to have no more to do with their election as judges than they have with their decisions as judges.

THE OPEN COURT.

(Readers of The Herald are invited to make free use of this column to express their ideas about the topics of general interest. Letters should not exceed 300 words—the shorter the better. They must be written on one side of the paper only, and they must be accompanied in every case by the name and address of the writer, though these need not be published. A signed letter is always more effective, however.)

A NATIONAL DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH INEVITABLE.

To the Editor of The Herald:

There has been, and is now being, waged a fight by some "interests" against the establishment of a national department of health. This fight is just as natural as the wolf's fight to retain his prey, the highwayman's fight for his plunder or the grafter's fight for the continuation of graft. As the beasts of prey pursue their campaigns along hidden paths, so it is with the "interests" who are trying to frustrate this measure. It has been stated that about $25,000 a day is being spent to defeat the Owen bill (Senate 6,049), which provides for a national department of health, and yet there is no visible or admitted source from which this money comes.

Every dollar being spent by opponents of the national department of health is helping to make such a department inevitable! The very fact that there is strong financial opposition to such a universally approved and beneficent measure is sufficient proof that it is a necessity.

A national department of health is inevitable because:

1. It would encourage more uniform health and sanitary protection throughout all the states in the Union.
2. It would enforce the laws passed on matters of health and sanitation with more unity of purpose than is now possible.
3. It would educate the people upon the preservation of health and control of disease, as they are now being educated upon agricultural questions by the department of agriculture, through literature and otherwise.
4. It could conduct a national school of sanitation for doctors.
5. It would conduct and encourage scientific study of disease along broader and more valuable lines than is now possible.
6. It has been shown that at least fifteen years could be added to the average duration of life in the United States by the application of known methods of control and prevention of disease. This a national department of health could accomplish.
7. Human life has a money value (vital assets), which, in the United States, is, by actual computation, five times greater than the nation's physical assets. It is certainly wise to appoint a special, competent and well trained guardian over our most valuable assets.
8. Both the Democratic and Republican national platforms contained planks promising benefits which a national department of health would insure.
9. It woud not limit, in any way, freedom in medical practice.
10. It would not interfere with any honest and legitimate industry, business or practice.
11. It would not interfere with the jurisdiction of any state, county or city authorities, medical or otherwise.
12. Nearly all of the recognizedly best thinkers and educators throughout the Union, regardless of profession or occupation, as well as a vast majority of the people at large, who know anything about the proposed measure, are heartily in favor of a national department of health.

CHARLES B. SLADE, M. D.
New York City, Aug. 20.

AN ELEVATING (?) SPECTACLE.

To the Editor of The Herald:

It is pleasant to contemplate the enjoyments and pleasures of this blase old world, reassuring to perceive that people still enjoy themselves in innocent diversion and banish dull care by seeking the simple life in the open where the song of nature is attuned to the melody of the soul and the weary wayfarer doesn't care whether the cows come home or not.

This graceful simile touching upon the home-coming of the lowing kine is especially apropos, Mr. Editor, for I would discuss the gathering of the members of the butchers' union, who will make merry on the greensward of Lester Park—fairyland of enchantment—next Thursday afternoon.

In can picture how, in elfin glee, gentlemen of corpuosity will race lightly from the refreshment stand to the merry-go-round and back again. There will be a 100-yard dash for ladies. There will be a ladies' ball-throwing contest in a barrel, which should be interesting from the standpoint of the metaphysical if not from the physical. A lady in a barrel, Mr. Editor, is a sight to make a poet tear his hair in a frenzy of inspiration. A lady endeavoring to hurl a ball from a barrel—why, the possibilities of poetical inspiration descend upon one like a ton of brick and overwhelm the soul.

Anyway I should like to be there, Mr. Editor, for one will see the largest union butcher family and the youngest married couple "on the grounds," which indicates that there will be no giving of prizes by proxy, and last, but not least, as the poet says, there will be a "professional sheep-killing contest and an apprentice sheep-killing contest."

Mr. Editor, I cannot fancy anything more elevating, more artistic, more instructive than the deft slaying of a helpless sheep. I hope, as I full expect, that every union butcher who is so fortunate as to have offspring will station his young hopefuls in the van of the eager spectators so that they may learn from their skilled fathers where best to insert the razored-edge and twist it gracefully around. When the appealing eyes of the dying sheep turn upon the multitude, Mr. Editor, let us hope that these future butchers will resolutely thrust thumbs downward and bid the noble gladiators proceed with the glorious slaughter.

Several years ago I witnessed a bull fight at Juarez, Mex., and it was so edifying that I do not care to see one again. It was so ample in its educational qualities that I have no desire to learn anything further about the gentle art of killing a beef or a sheep. So, Mr. Editor, I will not be there, after all. I shall seek out one of the wild-eyed children who will witness that spectacle of valor and prowess at Lester Park next Thursday and I shall learn from his prattling lips what he thought of his father as the paternal arm, bared and bloody, withdrew the crimson knife from the quivering flesh of a helpless sheep. It would be more interesting, Mr. Editor, to have a negative of the impressions recorded on the brain of that youth. It would be most interesting to learn what effect the touching scene may have on events in the after-life of that butcher's son.

But I am willing to forego all of these pleasures, Mr. Editor, because I believe the program of the butchers' union should be censored by the humane officer and anyone else with authority to prevent the senseless spectacle that has been arranged for the edification of women and children at Lester Park next Thursday.

EAST ENDER.

Duluth, Aug. 23.

The Bill.

Bluejacket: The tradesman had rendered his bill, waited a month and then wrote.

"Please, sir, I want my bill."

Back came the bill, with these words:

"Certainly, here it is."

The bill was returned, and in a month the tradesman again wrote:

"Kindly send me the amount of my bill."

And the answer came, promptly and politely:

"Certainly; it is $104.26."

The third month and the tradesman again wrote:

"Will you send me a check for the amount of my bill?"

The answer came, with a blank, unsigned check:

"Certainly; here is the check. I have kept the amount of your bill."

The fourth month the tradesman wrote:

"I want my bill paid."

And the answer came back: "So do I."

Then the tradesman gave it up.

A VISIT TO BRIGHAM YOUNG.

Charles F. Browne (Artemus Ward): In a private conversashun with Brigham Young, the Mormon, I learnt the follerin fax—It takes him six weeks to kiss his wives. He don't do it only onct a yere, and sez it is wuss nor cleanin house. He don't pretend to know his children, there is so many of um, tho they all know him. He sez about every child he meets calls him par, and he takes it for granted it is so. His wives air very expensive. They allers want suthin & ef he don't buy it for um they set the house in a uproar. He sez he don't have a minit's peace. His wives fite amung theirselves so much that he has bilt a fitin room for their speshul benefit, & when two of em get into a row he has em turned loose into that place whare the dispoot is settled a cordin to the rules of the London prize ring, sometimes they abooze hisself individooally. Thay have pulled the most of his hair out at the roots & he wares many a horrible scar Occasunly thay get mad and scald him with bilin hot water. When he got any ways cranky thay'd shut him up in a dark closit, previsely whippin him arter the stile of muthers when thare offsprings git onruly. Sumtimes when he went in swimmin they'd go to the banks of the lake and steal all his close, thereby compellin him to sneak home by a sircootius rowt, drest in the skanderlus stile of the Greek slaiv. "I find that the keers of a married life way heavy onto me," sed the Profit, "and sumtimes I wish I'd remained singel." I left the Profit and started for the tavern whare I put up to. On my way I was overtook by a large crowd of Mormons, which they surrounded me & statid that they were goin into the show free.

"Wall, ses I, "ef I find a individooal who is goin round lettin folks into his show free, I'll let you know."

"We've had a Revelashun biddin us to go into A. Ward's show without payin' nothin!" they shouted.

"Yes," hollered a lot ov femaile mormonesses ceasin me by the cote tale & swingin me round very rapid, "We're all goin in free! So sez the Revelashun!"

"What's old Revelashun got to do with my show!" sez I, gettin putty rily. "Tell Mr. Revelashun," sed I, drawn myself up to my full hite and lookin round upon the ornory crowd with a proud and defiant mean. "Tell Mr. Revelashun to mind hiz own bizness, subject only to the Konstitutshun of the United States!"

"O, now let us in, that's a sweet man," sed several femailes, puttin thare arms rownd me in lovin stile. "Becum one of us, Becum a preest and have wives sealed to you."

"Not a seal!" sez I, startin back in horror at the idee.

"O, stay, sir, stay," said a tall, gawnt femaile, ore whoose hed 37 summers must have parst, "Stay and I'll be your Jentle Gazelle."

"Not ef I know it you won't," sez I. "Awa, you skanderlus femaile awa! Go & be a nunnery!" That's what I sed, jes so.

"And I," sed a fat chunky femaile, who must have wade more than 200 lbs. "I will be your sweet, glidin star!"

Sez I, "I'll bet two dollars and a half you won't!" Whare ere I may Rome Ile still be troo to thee, O Betsy Jane! (N. B. Betsy Jane is my wife's Sir naime.)

"Wiltist thou not tarry here in the Promist land?" sed several of the miserable critters.

"Ile see you all essenshally cussed be 4 I wilst!" roared I, as mad as I cood be at thare infernal noncents. I girded up my lions & fled the Seen. I packt up my duds & left Salt Lake, which is a second Soddum and Germorrer, inhabited by as theavin & onprincipled a set of retchis as ever drew breth in any spot on the globe.

What Does He Think?

Omaha World Herald: If it be true that President Taft has decided to dip his colors to insurgency we wonder what he thinks of his own record?

What does he think of the cabinet he appointed, in which progressive Republicanism has not a single representative?

What does he think of the running mate he chose in preference to Senator Dolliver—"Sunny Jim" Sherman?

What does he think of the part he took to compel the house to re-elect Cannon speaker and adopt the Cannon rules, when it was called together in special session?

What does he think of the fulsome indorsement he gave Senator Aldrich as a pure and unselfish patriot and "the leader of the senate?"

What does he think of his praise of the Aldrich-Cannon tariff as "the best tariff law ever passed?"

What does he think of his official exculpation of Ballinger as fixed up by Oscar Lawler and of the antedating of the Wickersham opinion?

What does he think of his action in discharging Pinchot and Glavis?

What does he think of his action in swinging the patronage club over the heads of those same insurgents he is now anxious to placate and of the fight his administration has made, and is still making, against La Follette in Wisconsin?

What does he think of the stab he administered to the income tax?

What, in fact, does he think of his entire record as president, from his inauguration to the present date?

How can he repudiate Aldrich and Cannon and Ballinger without repudiating also himself?

In the language of our most versatile man of letters, Jack London, "we are curious to know—we are curious to know."

Insurgents in the East.

Providence Journal: Senator Bristow thinks that the progressive movement is just as strong in New England as it is in Wisconsin—which is saying much, for Wisconsin is one of the hotbeds of insurgency. The senator, however, is probably right. Many Republicans in this part of the country are ready to break with the party this year. Thousands of them are seriously dissatisfied with the domination of the organization by the old guard; and even the stories of a belated desire on the part of the administration to divorce iaself from the suspicion of reactionary sympathies do not altogether allay this dissatisfaction. They see with regret that, while many representatives of progressive policies continue to stream in at Sagamore Hill, scarcely any one from this important wing of the party visits Burgess point; and from this they argue not unreasonably, that insurgency is still under the administration's ban. Mr. Taft approves the placing in the capitol at Washington of a statue in honor of Gen. Robert E. Lee, but he has so far been hostile to all rebellion within the Republican party, even when it has acquired, as in Kansas and Iowa, belligerent rights.

The difference between Eastern and Western radicalism, however, is the difference between an informal and unorganized sentiment and the same sentiment thoroughly organized. In New England the more radical Republicans have not gone to the extent of attempting to control party caucuses and conventions, except possibly in isolated instances. Indeed, it is not likely that the present year will see much of an advance made in this direction; the party machinery is too strongly in the hands of the old-time leaders. But the day of the sympathizers with insurgency will come at the polls. Deprived of the opportunity of voting for Republican nominees who are opposed to legislation in behalf of class privileges, they will scan with unusual interest the lists of Democratic nominees; and it is presumable that the Democratic vote will be greatly augmented in consequence.

Straight Talk.

Springfield Republican: If Mrs. Alice Longworth has replied to the zealous reformers in the West who have begged her to stop smoking cigarettes, the fact has not been announced, but the letter addressed to her has been published, and is enough to drive a spirited woman to Pittsburg stogies. The passion for reforming other people is a craving that needs to be held sedulously in check; it easily develops into a worse vice than smoking tobacco, which at least does not breed self-righteousness, intolerance and the habit of meddling with other people's private affairs.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

In the matter of the appeal of the St. Paul & Duluth Railroad company from the payment of delinquent taxes, Judge Stearns holds that the dock property on Fifth avenue west occupied by the Northwestern Fuel company's coal dock is subject to taxation. The judge says: "If the railroad company can build a coal dock and rent it to wholesale coal dealers on which to carry on their business, although it be on terms that add to the business of the railroad company, I don't see why they can't build hardware, grocery or dry goods stores and rent the same to wholesale dealers on substantially the same terms and thereby exempt themselves from taxation. I don't think it can be done"

Joel Heatwole, chairman of the Republican state central committee, is in Duluth. His time was fully occupied today with secret meetings with local politicians, and the legislative slate, so it is said, was made out at a meeting attended by John B. Sutphin, G. G. Hartley and others.

Pat Killen of St. Paul and Joe Sheehy of Hurley, Wis., have signed articles for a fight to a finish at St. Paul five weeks hence for $1,000 a side, the winner to take all.

The laborers on the upper ore docks at Ashland, Wis., have struck for an advance in wages. They are now receiving $1.60 and $1.70 a day and strike for $2. About 100 men are involved.

Mr. and Mrs W. W. Spalding gave a party in honor of Mr. Spalding's sister, Mrs. Cattelle of Princeton, Ill., last evening.

Hulett Merritt, son of T. J. Merritt of Hazelwood, was the recipient of a birthday party Wednesday. About thirty-five friends enjoyed themselves, and "Hu" showed himself to be a model entertainer.

"Yes; to get a separation."

Mrs. Casey—Praise the saints! Now ye won't be gettin' licked again trying to lick the felly that hit ye.

Chicago Record-Herald: 'Are you going to spend your vacation with your country relatives this summer?"

"No, I can't afford the clothes that would be necessary if I expected to make a proper appearance among them now."

Washington Herald: "What kind of cigars will you have?" asked the dealer. "Light, medium or strong?"

"Strong ones, by all means," said the blushing damsel. "Strong enough not to break in the young man's pocket, you know."

Sir Wilfrid Learns About the Tariff.

Springfield Republican: The Canadian premier, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, having reached Vancouver on the Pacific coast this week, has had an unusual experience during his transcontinental journey in sampling the sentiment of the population concerning a protective tariff. At Vancouver he was welcomed by a board of trade that called for the maintenance of a protective policy. The Pacific side of the dominion thus showed sympathy with the Atlantic side, which is the seat of Canadian manufactures. But the great central part of the continent the premier found to be strongly for free trade. He was frank enough to refer to this fact in addressing the business men of Vancouver, saying that the interior provinces were "urgently and unanimously" for entire freedom of exchange consistent with the requirements of the government for revenue.

The Grain Growers' Association of Manitoba presented the premier with an address whose salient passage was this:

"The Western farmers do not want any protection for their products. In other words, they are willing that all farm products should be placed on the free list. Nor do they look with favor on any fiscal or preferential tariff that will have the tendency to enhance the cost of living to British artisans and laborers, but rather that every possible facility be given for the free exchange of the food products grown on the prairie farms for the products of British congested factory districts. We submit that duty should be levied only for the purpose of creating revenue for the necessities of government."

Sir Wilfrid Laurier in his response displayed personal sympathy with the free trade idea. "I am a free trader," he said, amid cheering. The Canadian tariff would be revised by a commission, which would consult the Western grain growers. And this commission, the appointment of which was in his hands, would aim, "having in view the common wealth of our common country to go as far as may be justifiable toward the trade policy of England, the shining example of the world, although it cannot be expected that we can accomplish in one or two generations what it took in England eight centuries to arrive at."

The free trade West of the dominion is growing more rapidly than the other parts of the country. By 1912 the population of the three prairie provinces will have increased so much that they will be entitled to forty members of the dominion house of commons. This gain in political power means evidently increased political strength for the free trade idea in the dominion, and it is a fact not without significance to American statesmen. Our own West is becoming militant for a lower tariff; and, with the American West and the Canadian West headed in the same direction on this issue, some of us may live to see a change revolutionary in its fiscal and continental results.

Sweet Peas.

They danced beneath my window,
  The live-long day through;
Graceful, tall and slender,
  In gowns of every hue.

To the strains of a weird music
  That the harp of the winds played low;
The wonderful, beautiful company
  Went tripping to and fro.

Their tiny fingers clasping,
  Each lightsome partner fair,
The sweet perfume of their garments
  Floating out on the evening air.

Without one thought of sorrow,
  They dance till the day is done,
And begin again on the morrow,
  With the first peep of the sun.

I would that the Great Creator
  Had fashioned me as they,
With sufficient strength and courage,
  Just to live today.

Had Him Treed.

Chicago Tribune: He had never fished before and his rod was new and shining with resplendent varnish. Faultlessly attired, he was whipping a trout stream when, by some odd chance, he got a bite. The fisherman had hooked a one-pounder, from the way the line strained.

He was not playing the fish at all. With rod held straight ahead he was slowly and steadily reeling him in. How he managed to hold the fish was beyond me.

Presently the fish was directly below the end of the rod. Did he stop? No—he kept on reeling the fish in, and just as I reached the water's edge the fish's head touched the tip. The man even tried to pull him through the ring.

Just then he saw me standing on shore waving my arms. He turned to me with a bewildered look and said: "What shall I do now?"

"The only thing you can do now," I said, "is to climb up the pole after him."

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

No Better Than Cannon.

Long Prairie Argus: It was predicted that in case Speaker Cannon retired from public life, James A. Tawney would take his place in the speaker's chair. But recent events have decreed that a more progressive man shall be next speaker.

Why Not Be Consistent.

Park Rapids Enterprise: It is not probable that Vice President Sherman will receive the Republican nomination for the presidency.

Had Nothing to Do With It.

St. Cloud Times: Bob Dunn says that with the possible exception of Attorney General Simpson not a single one of the present Republican state officials had a thing to do with this much talked about state tax reduction. It is the legacy of what has been wrought before.

Too Fast for Mr. Stork.

Winona Independent: Down in Kansas they're complaining of a decreased birth rate since the people of the state have taken to automobile traveling. We often read of children being born on board steam cars, but has it ever come to your notice that a child was born in an automobile? Maybe they have just cause of complaint.

Alice and Some Other Folk.

Rochester Bulletin: Some good and true woman of the country are sorely stirred because Alice Roosevelt Longworth smokes cigarettes. They hope by adopting resolutions and sending a polite request to the lady that she will desist. Wonder what the sons of these same earnest people are doing while they are attempting to regulate Alice?

That's Up to the Actresses.

Winona Independent: If it were not for the Goulds and the Pittsburgers, who'd marry all the actresses?

G. O. P. Does the Worrying.

St. Cloud Times: Perhaps the Democrats are getting some advertising too out of the guessing contest that the Republican papers of the state are conducting as to whether Lind will accept or not. It is noticeable, however, that the Republicans are doing most of the worrying.

They'll Have to Hurry.

Moose Lake Star-Gazette: The report that Minnesota has millions in the state treasury that it cannot spend is said to be causing a commotion among Pennsylvania politicians who are looking for new locations.

The Light Bearers.

I saw, within a shadowed realm of dream
Swift shapes unnumbered passing in the dark,
Each holding high aloft a lovely spark,
Some like a candle with dim fluttering gleam;
Still others like Sirius with a beam.
That all the boundless universe might mark.
And as they hurried onward wild and stark,
Like waves phantasmal of a ghostly stream
Some stumbled and fell headlong down to doom;
Some burned themselves with their own
  quenchless flame.
And I who watched them sinking, sage and youth,
Wept for the dreamers dead. Then in the gloom,
I heard the voice of mine own soul:
  "For shame—
Hail souls that live; hail bearers of the

NEWS AND VIEWS OF POLITICS AND POLITICIANS

Democrats Really Going to do Something in the County This Election—McKnight Rapped by Friends of Miller, but Gains Support—Meining Sure He'll be Nominated—McGarry Visits Duluth.

Democrats of the County Out to Win.

It is beginning to be realized that the Democrats expect to land right side up and in office this fall in St. Louis county. The candidacies of Charles Jesmore for sheriff, E. A. Lindgren for treasurer and T. J. McKeon for probate judge are not being pushed at this time, of course, as they are sure to be nominated without opposition, but Democrats are united in backing these men for the offices to which they aspire. After the primaries they will make a strong and determined fight against the Republican nominees.

Discussing Democratic hopes, the Aurora Times says:

The political situation in St. Louis county is really regarded hopefully by many of the leading Democrats.

Basing their hope somewhat on the vote of two years ago, they believe that on several offices they have a good fighting chance to win. An analysis of the situation as it exists does not justify their confidence, however.

The recent nomination of W. J. Smith for state treasurer healed many of the political wounds and cured much ill feeling between Duluth leaders and range voters. This is certain to benefit the dominant party, even though conditions throughout the country are decidedly Democratic.

Possibly the strongest hope of the Democrats is based upon notable dissatisfaction with the present Republican congressman, who has seen fit to so act that he has won the opposition of the principal faction on the range that assisted in his nomination two years ago. But those opposed to Mr. Miller will not necessarily cut the Republican candidates for county office.

At the present writing the Democrats seem to feel certain that they will win the office of judge of probate, for which T. J. McKeown of Duluth will be their nominee. They also have strong hopes of landing Charles Jesmore for sheriff. Mr. Jesmore is a good man and would make a good official.

Mr. Lindgren is being enthusiastically supported for the treasurership by many friends in Duluth and on the ranges. He is especially well known outside the city, but his circle of acquaintance here is exceptionally large as well.

Mr. McKnight And His Candidacy.

Alex McKnight's candidacy for congress continues to attract much attention, some of it not very complimentary to Mr. McKnight, who is accused in some quarters, as he might have known he would be, of serving as a stalking horse for Judge Jaques, the Democratic candidate. The Floodwood Broadaxe makes the misstatement that news of Mr. McKnight's candidacy first appeared in a Democratic paper and it concludes from that premise that Mr. McKnight is in the field because "the Jaques bunch" needed some one to offer up as a sacrifice, to the end that Jaques will get 'a handsome sore-head' Republican vote."

That Mr. McKnight is making some progress is indicated by the following from the news columns of the Virginia Enterprise:

What for a time loked like a fluke on the part of honor and truly progressive Republicanism on the part of Eight district voters, has been given a decidedly different tinge during the week by the filing of Alexander G. McKnight, a prominent Duluth attorney, for nomination for the congressional seat now occupied by Clarence B. Miller.

And recognizing that his entry into the fray is somewhat late and realizing that his campaign must demand immediate attention, Mr. McKnight already shows the brand of a winner by getting acquainted with voters, having visited various places in the district and spending today in this city.

Mr. McKnight is an insurgent Republican of the stamp receiving the support and endorsement of voters throughout the country—the stamp which insurges at Washington as well as during a primary campaign—and in conversation with the Enterprise scribe outlined his policy.

There is little question but the voters will do the rest, as the stand outlined by Mr. McKnight is entitled to and will receive the respect and support of every honorable voter in the district.

The Virginian, while expressing the opinion that Mr. McKnight will play Jeffries to Mr. Miller's Johnson, says that evidently he is a fighter, as indicated by his promptness in taking the aggressive.

Mr. McKnight is now making a swing around the district, getting acquainted wherever he is not known and talking insurgent doctrine to the voters. Mr. Miller is expected to return from Oklahoma in about a week and he will then begin to try his hand at fence patching—or rather rebuilding.

Judge Jaques is quietly going about his business, taking advantage of opportunities that present themselves in his law practice to make trips here and there in the district. He is satisfied with the situaton as he has found it and says he is confident that he will be elected.

Meining's Friends Sure He's A Winner.

John R. Meining, who is campaigning for the Republican nomination for sheriff, believes that he has W. J. Bates beaten. Mr. Meining is one of the most widely known men in the county, being a traveling salesman whose territory is the ranges. He has been a resident of Duluth for twenty years or more and is popular throughout the city. Traveling men are enlisted in the cause of Mr. Meining and they say that their fellow traveler has a fine chance to land the nomination this time.

Being on the ranges every week, Mr. Meining has opportuniites to work politically as a side-line from his commercial efforts, and it is said that he has been camping on the trail of that nomination ever since the last primary campaign, with the result that he is convinced he'll get it this time.

Sheriff Bates, naturally, doesn't take this view of the situation. He was up on the range last week and said when he returned that he couldn't see where he was in danger.

McGarry Of Walker Visits Duluth.

P. H. McGarry of Walker, candidate for the house of representatives from the Sixth congressional district, was in Duluth yesterday. Mr. McGarry is opposing Charles E. Lindbergh for the Republican nomination and is making a thorough canvass of the district, with the result that he has stirred up the Lindbergh camp to action, which it was freely predicted at the beginning that he could not do. Now the Lindbergh men are beating over the ground that Mr. McGarry has covered looking to see what they may of his political woodscraft.

Mr. McGarry was a member of the lower house of the legislature two years ago from the Fifty-second district. He fought ceaselessly and consistently for Northern Minnesota's interests and entrenched himself strongly in public favor.

However, Mr. Lindbergh is a big proposition and in going against him the Walker man has tackled a job that is likely to prove a bit too big. That is what is indicated by advices from the district.

Fifty-second Has Lively Contests

George E. Godfrey of Ballclub, Cass county, who is the candidate for the house from the Fifty-second district, is running against Charles W. La Du for the Republican nomination. Both men have their ardent advocates and the race is likely to be an extremely lively one. Mr. La Du has been identified with the development movement in Northern Minnesota for years and is widely known, as is Mr. Godfrey, who was chairman of the Cass county delegation to the Republican state convention last June.

Both candidates are solidly for reapportionment and all the planks contained in the Crookston declarations and either of them is qualified for the place, according to available information.

Mr. Godfrey is a marine engineer and has built steamboats on the Mississippi and Leech Lake. While a resident of Hennepin county he was a state boiler inspector.

Volstead States Attitude On "Jim."

Representative Andrew J. Volstead of the Sixth district, one of the almost-insurgents, refuses to pledge himself not to vote for James A. Tawney for speaker of the house if he has a chance. He makes this known in a formal reply to a query put to him by a number of progressive constituents, contending that he should not tie his hands on the proposition because Tawney may be the progressive candidate for speaker. He says:

It is evident that you believe that but one answer can be made on this question, but I can readily see that circumstances may arise where such a promise would force me to vote against the very reforms you seek and for the methods and practices which you oppose. If the Republicans are in control of the Sixty-second congress, the members of the Middle West who nearly all belong to the so-called "progressive element," will no doubt try to secure a speaker that will help carry out their views. In this move I expect, if elected, to take an active part. Now suppose that the Middle West should conclude to support Mr. Tawney as the most desirable of the candidates for speaker, do you believe if I should vote against Mr. Tawney under such circumstances the district would approve of it, even though Mr. Tawney may not be its choice?

It must be remembered that if Mr. Tawney is a candidate his principal rivals will no doubt be men like Payne, Dalzell, Currier, Olmstead or Crumpacker. Would you prefer to have me vote for one of them or throw my vote away on someone that could not possibly be elected? In a contest like this I have but little patience with the theory that you must get just what is right or refuse to take anything. To me it is evident that you have not fulfilled your duty unless you have done the best you could under the circumstances.

You will, of course, say that Mr. Tawney cannot get the support of the progressive element. If that is so, he stands no show of being speaker. He must get his support in the Middle West. The "progressive element" is there. He has opposed appropriations for the East too often to be a favorite there. Then the East has a number of candidates of its own. If he was known in the house as he is often represented in the newspapers, he could not get a single progressive vote, but many members of the house believe that President Taft and Senator Nelson are not mistaken when they place a very high value upon his public services. From my knowledge of your attitude in this matter, I believe that we have the same object in view. This being so, may I ask you, who would you suggest as a proper person for the speakership, and what would you do if a situation such as I suggest should confront you?

In the Fifty-sixth district politics is so strenuous that a man broke his leg while running for office. O. E. Hogue of Benson, candidate for the Reupblican nomination for the house, fell off a sidewalk and suffered the injury, with the probable result that he will withdraw from the race, it is said.

Aurora News: "This talk of Billy McEwen as the Democratic candidate for governor puts St. Louis county on the political map with Minnesota Democrats. And to add to its importance, Frank Day visited Duluth a few days ago to consult leading Democrats of that place as to the approaching campaign. This section will yet be recognized as part of the great state of Minnesota."

ish he has mapped out almost to the minute, and Col. Roosevelt will have few of his waking hours to himself.

Of Political Significance.

Although Col. Roosevelt has made it clear that he is not going West to talk partisan politics, his trip is regarded as of political significance. He is to make fourteen speeches, most of which will deal with public questions which figure in party platforms, and will declare his beliefs in repard to them. During the trip he will also hold many conferences with political leaders.

Col. Roosevelt is to make the first speech of his trip today at Summit Park, near Utica. Instead of leaving the train at Utica, as had been planned, he will go direct to Oriskany, nine miles from Utica and proceed by automobile to Summit Park, a mile away. There he will speak to the farmers of Herkimer and Oneida counties, who are holding a picnic at the park today. He will spend the night at the country home in Mohawk, Herkimer county, of Douglas Robinson of New York, his brother-in-law, remaining there until he leaves Utica at midnight tomorrow night.

Second Speech at Cheyenne.

Then he will proceed, with no stops of length, to Cheyenne, Wyo., where he is to make his second speech, at the Cowboys' carnival. During the entire trip he will travel 5,493 miles.

Along the entire line of travel elaborate preparations are being made to receive Col. Roosevelt. At many towns and cities where no stops are scheduled beyond the regular stops of the train, committees have been appointed to receive Col. Roosevelt, who is expected to make numerous speeches from the rear platform of his car. Some complications are expected to result from such arrangements as Col. Roosevelt's car during most of the journey will be attached to regular trains.

Many Newspaper Writers.

Mr. Roosevelt accompanied by William B. Howland, Ernest Hamlin Abbott, Harold J. Howland and Frank Harper, his secretary, will travel in the private car, Republic. A car filled with newspapermen starts with the Republic from New York and carries seventeen representatives of news agencies and newspapers. Another newspaper car will be added at Chicago.

"Like Old Campaign Days."

New York, Aug. 23.—Col. Roosevelt was in his happiest mood this morning as he edged his way through the crowd at the station and smilingly remarked to one of his business associates that it seemed like old campaign days. Mrs. Roosevelt, Congressman and Mrs. Longworth and Quinten Roosevelt came to the station to bid the colonel a farewell. The colonel was disinclined at first to discuss politics. When told that it had been reported that he was expected to make a detailed statement this morning regarding Mr. Taft's letter to Mr. Griscom he laughed and said:

"I am afraid you are of an overtrustful nature. No, I'm not going to say anything; not a word."

Expect Fight at Saratoga.

Politicians believe that he now proposes to go to the convention at Saratoga and make his fight against the "old guard" for the platform and candidates that he thinks most desirable.

On his way to the station the colonel branded as false a story printed recently that he had sent Chairman Griscom to Beverly with an ultimatum to President Taft.

our property but that much ore mined by the 'trust' will eventually be shown to belong to the Ballaklava company.

"We sincerely trust that our stockholders will not permit themselves to be stampeded by this transparent subterfuge, but that they will stand back of us in our fight to protect their interests."

The property of the Butte-Ballaklava Copper company comprices 6.5 acres, composed of the fractional claims known as the Burke and the Ballaklava. The company is capitalized for $2,500,000, the shares having a par value of $5. Of the stock $2,100,000 has been issued. The property is in Silver Bow county, Mont., on the outskirts of Butte. It is entirely surrounded by holdings of the Anaconda Copper Mining company, the Boston & Montana and the Butte Coalition.

The property is 1,860 feet long on the strike of the veins traversing the claims. Owing to its peculiar shape it carries the apex of five veins of an average width of twenty-five feet and with an average of about 3,600 feet of their strike. The veins are the famous Speculator and Edith May of the North Butte, the Old Joe, Mountain Chief and Sioux Chief. As these veins apex on the Butte-Ballaklava property they can be followed to any depth desired so that the property for mining purposes is considerable larger than its surface of 6.5 acres indicates.

The Butte-Ballaklava claims are 640 feet from the North Butte property and carry the extension of both the Speculator and the Edith May veins of the North Butte. The Mountain Chief mine of the Butte Coalition is immediately to the north of the Butte-Ballaklava. The Modoc and the Modoc Extension claims of the Anaconda, which are immediately to the south, carry the largest ore body in the Butte district. The Butte-Ballaklava is directly west of the Leonard and north of the Colusa. These are the principal mines of the Boston & Montana and are only 1,000 feet distant. These properties are owned by the Amalgamated, as that company controls practicaly the entire stock issue of the Boston & Montana.

Want an Injunction.

The Amalgamated owns two fractional claims directly north of the property of the Butte-Ballaklava. These are known as the Right Bower lode claim and the Mountain Chief claim. The Anaconda company in its suit alleges that two veins of these mines unite at a depth of 1,000 feet on property owned by the Anaconda. It is claimed that the Butte-Ballaklava has removed high-grade ore from these veins on all levels from the 100 to the 900. The Anaconda seeks a restraining order to prevent the Butte-Ballaklava from continuing operations and it wants $1,100,000 for the ore alleged to have been illegally removed. The mining law of Montana holds a company liable for double damages, however, when it can be shown that mineral matter has been willfully removed from veins to which the operator did not have legal access. Whether this feature will be invoked is not known. The hearing has been set for Sept. 3 in Butte.

Secretary Percival of the Butte-Ballaklava said that the company is sure of its position. He declared the company has expended about $200,000 in proving its ownership to the apexes of veins which it has been mining and that it has made a thorough study of its property. He asserted that the Butte-Ballaklava has not mined any ore belonging to the Anaconda, but that the Anaconda has taken ore from the property of the Butte-Ballaklava.

The Burke and Ballaklava claims passed into the ownership of the Butte-Ballaklava Copper company in October, 1907. The land was in litigation many years until a settlement was effected, the title being then vested in the Catholic bishop of Helena. He sold the lands to the Butte-Ballaklava Copper company for $400,000 in cash.

The Butte-Ballaklava is a Duluth institution and is controlled here. P. H. Nelson of this city is president; John A. Percival, secretary, and Millie Bunnell, treasurer.

SHOULD SAVE STRAW.

Shortage of Hay Crop Should Make Farmers Careful.

St. Paul Minn., Aug. 23.—The importance to the farmer of saving his straw and cornstalks this year, for use during the coming winter as fodder, is emphasized in the University Farm Press News. "It is believed," says the News, "that the 1910 hay crop is far behind the usual ten-year average, and that next winter will develop prices at which farmers think they can better afford to sell their hay, and feed the cheaper roughage than to feed hay to stock.

"There has seldom been a year when straw, especially oat straw, has been so greatly needed for feed as it will be during the coming winter. Farmers will be tempted by large apparent profits to sell all the hay they can possibly spare. Hence they will find a great advantage in feeding their straw, as far as possible, as a substitute for hay on the farm. The weather has been favorable for stacking grain, and the straw ought to be fresh and bright. When the grain is thrashed a little care will preserve the straw in good condition for fodder."

STATE MAY START SUIT

Against Aitkin County to Settle Dispute Over Ditch Building.

Difference as to When Bonds for Ditches Should Be Issued.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—State officials being convinced of the rightfulness of the state's demands upon the officials of Aitkin county, and the county officials being equally strong in their position that they do not have to issue bonds for incompleted drainage ditches, the chances are that the state will be compelled to sue the county.

"If Aitkin county persists in its refusal to issue bonds," said Attorney General George T. Simpson, "the state will have no other course than to bring an action to determine the rights of the respective parties."

"The state drainage commission," said Auditor S. G. Iverson, himself a member of the commission, "has not inspected ditch No. 86, and to our official knowledge the ditch is not completed. We will not accept the ditch if the work is not up to specifications.

What the Law Provides.

"People in Aitkin county are laboring under a misapprehension. They believe they do not have to issue the bonds until the ditches are ordered. Money is advanced from time to time to the contractor, but he is never paid in full until the work is completed."

Charles Warner of Aitkin, who is in the Twin Cities, says the Aitkin county commissioners have legal advice that they do not have to issue the bonds until the ditch is completed.

"Ditches in the past have not come up to specifications," said Mr. Warner. "The men who built these ditches have been paid and the county commissioners are determined that there shall be no repetition of such a condition."

ONCE WEALTHY, HE DIES ALONE

Sad Ending of Man Said to Have Been Prominent in Chicago.

Pine River, Minn., Aug. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Postmaster J. G. Hermes and Constable William Horner of Hemer, came here Saturday with the body of Rushton M. Dorman. The body was found in the woods near the A. C. Winger home on Wednesday morning about 8 o'clock, by Bert Stenwood, a cruiser of Hill City, who was running out some lines.

Dorman had been missing since the Monday evening previous. Owing to the absence of Coroner Holman and the undisputed evidences of the case he 'phoned a permit for immediate burial and interment was had here Sunday afternoon. Dorman was born in Michigan, was about 61 years of age, and had lived in a shanty by himself in the Remer country about three years. He formerly owned a farm near Brainerd, and it is said at one time he practiced law in Chicago and was very wealthy but family troubles and a divorce made a wreck of the man in his old age. Nothing is known of his relatives.

Justice Jaggard went to Duluth today from there to Baptism river, where he will spend some time fishing.

DUNKARDS ARE HOLDING MEETS

Washing Feet and Other Strange Forms of Worship Being Observed.

Rock Lake, N. D., Aug. 23.—(Special to The Herald.) — The Dunkards, the religious sect which is quite strong in this section, are holding meetings in the open air about Rock Lake that are being largely attended. The services are out of the ordinary, so far as religious exercises are concerned.

One feature of the lovefest is the washing of the feet. The men of the church and the women all go through this form, which includes the washing of the feet of all, the men of the church washing the feet of each other, while the women perform the same service among themselves. The men and women are separated while this ceremony is being carried out.

Several large Dunkard meetings of this nature have already been held and more are to follow.

BLACK BEARS ARE SEEN THESE DAYS

Crookston, Minn., Aug. 23.—Black bears in the rural section are causing the women considerable worry. Last week one was killed at Beltrami and a second was killed at Lockhart the day following. A number of others also have been seen. Sunday at the home of T. Morveau, northeast of the city in Louisville township, a big black bear made its appearance, Mrs. Morvean being attracted by the squealing of a pig. She ran out and saw the bear in the pen. Bruin seized a porker weighing over 100 pounds and jumped over the pen with it.

Mrs. Morveau called to her husband, who ran to the house and secured his rifle, but could not find a cartridge for it. He ran after the animal and hit it a terrific smash over the head with the weapon. The bear dropped the pig, but tore a great chunk of flesh from the animal's neck. The bear got away.

In the town of Andover a bear was shot just a few miles from the city. The bears are all taking to the prairies because of the forest and brush fires in the timber country to the east, and the shortage of the berry crop makes them prey upon anything they get sight of. A bear cannot stand smoke, old cruisers state, and take to their heels as soon as smoke from a fire reaches their rendezvous.

LA FOLLETTE TO REST.

Unless Necessary, He Will Not Enter His Primary Campaign.

Milwaukee, Aug. 23.—United States Senator Robert M. La Follette will not enter the primaries campaign in the contest for re-nomination unless he has to, according to a story printed in the Milwaukee Journal from Madison, which tells about a conference at the La Follette farm between the senator and a number of his adherents bearing on the primary struggle. The only issue in the campaign is that for representative government, according to Mr. La Follette.

"A physical ailment has prevented me from entering the campaign so far," Senator La Follette said. "I have just had a long talk with my doctor, and he advises me to stay out of the campaign for the present, unless it is absolutely necessary for me to enter it. He tells me that before the primary closes I shall be able to make two or three speeches if I have to do so. But unless I am needed in the primary campaign, I prefer to save my strength for the more strenuous fight that we shall have to make after the primary.

"Progressive leaders from all parts of the country have told me to rest until I am strong again, and that they will come to Wisconsin and help us in the primary."

Senator La Follette, during a little talk with his callers, said he wished to say "that there is only one issue in this campaign in the state, and that issue involves the fate of representative government. No other issue has any place in this campaign. The fight is over free government; it is a fight of the few, the selfish and powerful, against the many, the people themselves."

Would Give Government Power to Seize Them at Cost.

Washington, Aug. 23.—In order to have available a large number of automobiles and motor trucks in case of war, Gen. Frederick D. Grant, in his annual report of the Department of the Lakes, submitted to the war department, recommends the enactment of laws that would oblige private owners to turn over to the government upon demand their automobiles at the first cost of the machine.

SPOKANE BANK ISSUES FIRST GERM-PROOF NOTES.

Washington, Aug. 23.—To the Old National Bank of Spokane, Wash., belongs the distinction of circulating the first antiseptic, germ-proof national bank notes. The United States treasury is still experimenting with devices intended to launder dirty bank notes into bright, crisp ones, but the Spokane bank has the first sanitary money on record. Fifty thousand dollars in bills just put out by the bank were signed with an ink which consisted largely of carbolic acid. The result is the bills are saturated with an agency which means death to the most vigorous germs.

PUNISHES MEN WHO TORE AMERICAN FLAG.

Toronto, Can., Aug. 23.—The executive committee of the Argonaut Rowing club has suspended two members who destroyed the American flag on the Buffalo schooner West Wind. The committee will recommend their permanent expulsion at the next general meeting. In making the announcement Secretary-Treasurer Hilgin said:

"It is unnecessary to say that the club regrets that any member should have so far forgotten himself as to act in so unbecoming a manner."

TAFT SAYS HE NEVER WAS OPPONENT OF ROOSEVELT

Writes Letter to Make Peace Over New York Leaders' Action.

Griscom Suggests Ex-President May Yet Be Temporary Chairman.

New York, Aug. 23.—President Taft and Ex-president Roosevelt are again fellow workers in the political field. The threat that they might pull apart has been forfended by a full explanation on one side and an unreserved acceptance on the other.

The president makes it plain in a letter given out here by Lloyd C. Griscom, president of the New York Republican county committee, how the misunderstanding arose. He explains that he never took any part in a committee cabal to defeat Col. Roosevelt for temporary chairman of the coming Republican state convention. On the contrary, he explicitly deplores the result of the committee meeting which chose Cice President Sherman; he rebukes the party leaders who have permitted it to go abroad uncontradicted that the president was behind their factional preferences; he insists that at every opportunity he advised the fullest conference with Col. Roosevelt, and he explains he has been pained by the "columns of unfounded assertions in the newspapers concerning my attitude in respect to the New York situation."

Roosevelt Is Pleased.

For his part, Col. Roosevelt, when he read President Taft's letter as communicated to him at Oyster Bay, said: "I am very glad to see President Taft's letter and am pleased with it."

In the course of the correspondence there comes out a telegram from the president to the vice president, hitherto withheld, but mention of which had nevertheless crept into print. In substance the president informed Timothy L. Woodruff, Republican state chairman, and William L. Ward of the New York county Republican committee "that the thing of all others that ought to be avoided is a controversy in the convention."

The president's letter throughout is temperate though positive.

Mr. Griscom, in his comment on it, was much more outspoken. He did not hesitate to charge that the Republican organization of the state had played politics with the president's name and had misrepresented his attitude. Col. Roosevelt in his statement explains what had been the course of his negotiations with the organization, and how, after his successive rebuffs, he had felt that further overtures could not consistently come from him.

No Statement of Plans.

His future attitude he does not define, because he is as yet uncertain as to what effect on public sentiment President Taft's letter will have when it has been read and digested by the voters of the state.

The following is the letter from President Taft to Lloyd C. Griscom, president of the New York Republican county committee, given out by Mr. Griscom:

"Beverly, Mass., Aug. 20.—My Dear Mr. Griscom: As you know from your telephone conversations with my office, I have steadily refused to admit the propriety or necessity of the president's reply to newspaper statements which are not based on any act or authorized word of his and have no sponsor. I am entirely willing, however, to reply categorically to your telegram of Aug. 19, which has just arrived and which is as follows:

What Griscom Wired.

"'I am informed and believe that several members of the New York Republican state committee who voted for Vice President Sherman over ex-President Roosevelt as nominee for temporary chairman of the state convention were influenced by statements that the vice president's name was presented to defeat Col. Roosevelt in accordance with your wish. A member of the state committee declared to me before the meeting that Mr. Sherman's candidacy had been arranged with you by telephone the previous day.

"'Efforts have been made to create an impression that you favor a particular candidate for election as state chairman. I want you to know that the injection of the name of a high member of your administration into a factional conflict has produced a most complicated situation, and the absence of any authoritative information as to your attitude is seriously misleading many Republicans and impairing a movement for progressive party leadership and clean government in this state. I know you desire us to have a fair field, and hope that this may be made clea rto the public.'

Reply by Taft.

"The suggestion that I have ever expressed a wish to defeat Mr. Roosevelt for the temporary chairmanship of the convention or have ever taken the slightest step to do so, is wholly untrue. I never heard Mr. Sherman's name suggested as temporary chairman of the state convention until I saw in the newspapers of Aug. 16 that he had been selected at the meeting of the committee.

"When you called at my house Saturday evening, Aug. 13, you told me that Mr. Roosevelt intended to go to the convention as a delegate, and you suggested incidentally his being made temporary chairman—a suggestion in which I acquisced. It did not occur to me that anyone would oppose it. This was the first time the subject of the temporary chairmanship was mentioned to me by anyone. After a full dicussion of the New York state situation, I drafted in your presence the following telegram and sent it to Mr. Sherman.

Telegram to Sherman.

"'Beverly, Mass., Aug. 14.

"'Hon. James S. Sherman, vice president, Utica, N. Y.

"'Please say to Ward and Woodruff that Griscom confirms my judgment that the situation in New York may be saved without humiliation to any one, and with victory for the party, by a full conference with Mr. Roosevelt and reasonable concessions with reference to platform and candidates.

"'The thing of all others that ought to be avoided is a controversy in the convention. I am told by Mr. Griscom that such a conference with Mr. Roosevelt might conveniently be had and would be welcomed by him before the state committee meets on Tuesday. Hope you will be able to report satisfactory solution on Wednesday.

"'WILLIAM H. TAFT.'

"On Aug. 15 Mr. Sherman apprised me of the fact that there was a proposal to oppose Mr. Roosevelt for the temporary chairmanship and that with Mr. Root's name. No other name than Mr. Root's was mentioned. I protested against the idea of contest on such a matter, peremptory declined to be drawn into a fight against Mr. Roosevelt and again renewed my urgent advice that there be prompt and full personal conference with Mr. Roosevelt before the committee meeting to secure harmony in the party.

Report Absolutely Untrue.

"In your telegram this morning you state that efforts have been made to create the impression that I favor a particular candidate for state chairman. This is absolutely untrue. I have expressed no opinion on the subject since an effort was made last winter by the New York congressional delegation to secure Mr. Woodruff's retirement, which failed.

"I am very sorry indeed to observe columns of unfounded assertions in the newspapers concerning my attitude in respect to the New York state situation. You know, however, as well as other New York leaders, that whenever my advice or assistance in reaching a satisfactory adjustment of the difficulties arising has been sought, I have urged the necessity for the fullest conference with Mr. Roosevelt by the members of the organization, and with due deference to honest difference of opinion, have expressed the view which I still entertain, that the solution of the direct primary issue can be found in provisions similar to those of the Cobb bill as amended in accordance with the memorial signed by Seth Low, Joseph Choate and other prominent Republicans of New York city.

"Sincerely yours,

"WILLIAM H. TAFT."

Statement by Griscom.

In commenting on President Taft's letter, and the situation which it discloses, Mr. Griscom gave out the following statement:

"The methods used to accomplish the defeat of Mr. Roosevelt when his name was before the state committee now are clear to the public, and may be judged by the public.

"I have not the slightest doubt that the action of the state committee will be reversed, and that Mr. Roosevelt, if his engagements will permit him to accept, will act as temporary chairman of the convention, making the keynote speech. As president of the New York Republican county committee, I shall actively co-operate with Republicans throughout the state who believe it in the interests of the party that this result be brought about.

"Mr. Taft's reply to my telegram discloses that the reports, industriously circulated, of a supposed conflict between the president and the ex-president on New York state matters, are baseless."

Roosevelt's Statement.

Oyster Bay, L. I., Aug. 23.—Col. Roosevelt, after reading with attention the full text of President Taft's letter, issued the following formal statement:

"I am very glad to see President Taft's statement and am pleased with it.

"Before the meeting of the state committee I had repeatedly expressed to various leaders not merely my willingness, but my desire to see them. Since the meeting I have not thought there was any particular object in meeting them, as, owing to their action, the situation had become such as to admit of no compromise, and I had nothing to add to what I had already said. I may add that I have not changed my mind now.

"My position is perfectly definite and I have nothing to change in it. I had never desired the chairmanship, and consented to have my name considered on condition only that, in platform and candidate alike, the party should endeavor to achieve success, making it evident that the Republican party of the state intends in good faith to serve the interests of all the people of the state.

"I cannot speak definitely at the moment of my whole plans, because I do not know how far the situation will be changed by the president's letter, and so I can say nothing more definite now."

Cholera Infantum Cured.

"Something like two years ago my baby, which was then about a year old, was taken seriously ill with cholera infantum, vomiting and purging profusely," writes J. F. Dempsey of Dempsey, Ala. "I did what I could to relieve her but did her no good, and being very much alarmed about her went for a physican but failed to find one, so came back by Elder Bros. & Carter's store and Mr. Elder recommended Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea remedy. I procured a bottle of it, went home as quickly as possible and gave the baby a dose of the remedy. It relieved her in fifteen minutes and soon cured her entirely." For sale by all druggists.

WISCONSIN MAN CLAIMS FORTUNE

Carl Fechner of Sheboygan Says He Is Brother of Dead Woman.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 23.—Carl Fechner, claimant to a fortune of $500,000 left by Laura White, an eccentric woman, has arrived in Pittsburg from Sheboygan, Wis. Fechner claims that he is a brother of Laura White. The latter's body was found in her home last January, and her will, in which she requested that her heart be stabbed thrice before burial, left her fortune to Maj. Robert Hall White, a brother.

Fechner claims he is also a brother and that upon the death of Maj. Robert Hall White, the woman authorized him to use the name. He has photographs of the woman and many letters alleged to be from her and even a check for $500 which he says she sent him some time ago with an injunction not to cash it until her death. He has been unable to cash it, however. Fechner, or "White," is 41 years old and has a wife and several children in Sheboygan.

WARNER NOT UP FOR RE-ELECTION

Senator From Missouri Says His Health Will Not Permit It.

Washington, Aug. 23.—Senator William Warner of Missouri announces that he will not be a candidate for re-election to the United States senate. The announcement is made in a formal statement addressed to the "Republicans of Missouri." It follows:

"I announce that I shall not be a candidate for re-election to the senate of the United States. My health will not permit. The making of this announcement is to me a matter of deep regret, because I feel it will be disappointing to my friends, and more loyal or disinterested friends no man ever had. I made an attempt to convey to them my heartfelt thanks for their consideration in the past. For such an attempt would but reveal the poverty of words at my command."

The senator is in his seventy-first year and for several months has not been in good health. The strain of the tariff session affected him seriously. His term expires March 3 next.

TAFT WILL VISIT THE ISTHMUS IN NOVEMBER.

Beverly, Mass., Aug. 23.—It is now practically certain that President Taft will make his proposed trip to the Isthmus of Panama in November. The trip will be curtailed considerably, however, and the time for the president's absence may be cut to two weeks. In order to do this it is proposed to make the run to the isthmus and back at the rate of twenty-one knots an hour. The speed can be attained by the scout cruisers Chester, Salem and Birmingham, and it is now believed that two of these swift vessels will be used to convey the party.

HURT BY AEROPLANE.

New Jersey Man Demands $15,000 for His Broken Arm.

Asbury Park, N. J., Aug. 23.—What is said to be the first suit for damages alleged to have been inflicted by a falling aeroplane on a spectator has been brought here, against Wilbur Wright, Walter Brookins and the Asbury Park Motor & Aero club. Maurice Goruch asks $15,000 for a broken arm which he says he suffered when Walter Brookins' biplane crashed into the grandstand last week.

WOMAN'S PERSISTENCY STARTS SOME TROUBLE.

Washington, Aug. 23.—Woman's persistency, which got the treasury department to allow gowns remodelled abroad to re-enter this country with payment of duty upon the cost of the repairs has led the customs division into a maze of trouble which threatens to have no end.

Everybody who has a foreign-made product repaired abroad thinks it ought to come back into the United States on the same principle as has been applied to women's dresses. A man who has been having a locomotive repaired in Mexico wants a ruling on the point. Demands for the same privilege on everything from repaired steam dredges to re-set diamonds in rings are beginning to appear.

BRIDGE BURNS WHILE PLATTE RIVER IS DRY.

Grand Island, Neb., Aug. 23.—Five spans of the St. Joe & Grand Island railroad bridge over the Platte river, have burned out and trains are detoured by way of Aurora to Hastings. There was no water in the Platte with which to fight the fire and it was necessary to use the chemical apparatus from this city. Some water was secured from locomotives and a nearby farm to aid the chemical process, but to little effect. An excavation of five feet into the bed of the river failed to secure water.

NATIONAL REPUBLICAN LEAGUE TO MEET SEPT. 30.

Washington, Aug. 23.—The biennial convention of the National Republican league will be held at Carnegie hall, New York, Friday and Saturday, Sept. 30 and Oct. 1, according to announcement made by John Hays Hammond, president. President Taft has declared he will be present. The routine work of the convention includes the election of officers and the selection of an executive committee. Addresses will be made by W. B. McKinley, chairman of the national Republican congressional committee, Representative Longworth and others.

"LORD ASHBURTON" IS ARRESTED ONCE MORE.

Boston, Aug. 23.—Known in every police station in the United States as "Lord Ashburton," Charles F. Richards is again under arrest in this city. This time the alleged bogus nobleman is charged with the theft of $780 from Mrs. Mary McLean, the proprietor of a lodging house. "Lord Ashburton" is 71 years old. He has been many times arrested in England and this country. Several years ago he was pardoned from an English prison in the belief that his death was imminent.

From Sickness to 'Excellent Health."

So says Mrs. Chas. Lyon, Peoria, Ill.: "I found in your Foley Kidney Pills a prompt and speedy cure for backache and kidney trouble which bothered me for many months. I am now enjoying excellent health which I owe to Foley Kidney Pills." Sold by all druggists.

Raise on the Pennsylvania.

Philadelphia, Aug. 23.—Telegraphers on the lines of the Pennsylvania railroad were granted a further increase of 6 per cent in wages. The increase will date from Aug. 1 and makes a total of 12 per cent increase in the wages of telegraphers since the first of the year. Nineteen hundred men are affected.

Cost of Living Bothers.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 23.—The problem of greatly increased cost of living is acute today in Asia Minor, Armenia, Syria, Macedonia, India, Ceylon, China and Japan, as it is in the United States, said Secretary James L. Barton of the American board of commisisoners for foreign missions. The problem has become a serious one with the board in view of its maintenance of some 600 missionaries, 4,500 native preachers, teachers and assistants, and over 70,000 pupils in schools.

ONE KILLED IN LEAP THREE MADE ON WAGER.

Philadelphia, Aug. 23.—William Collins, aged 24 years; James Johnson, 22 years, and William Manner, 25 years, jumped from the Spring Garden street bridge into the Schuylkill river last night. The distance from the bridge to the water is eighty feet. Johnson and Manner struck the water safely and swam ashore, but Collins was partly disemboweled and is not expected to recover. The men took the daring leap on a wager.

Winona, Minn., Aug. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Duluth was shut out in the last game of the Winona series, the Pirates winning yesterday's game by the score of 2 to 0. Wagner held the Sox to three scattered hits, Marion and J. Anderson being the only two White Sox who could solve the delivery of the Pirate twirler.

In the third round Duluth came near putting a run over the plate. Marion tripled and Schwab hit a fly that was too short to try to score on. Blancke hit a long fly to center and big Marion hiked for home. Graves made a perfect throw to the plate, nipping the runner by a foot.

In the fourth Koepping drew a pass, Crangle singled and a wild throw by Altermott advanced both runners. Davey singled and Koepping scored on Goodman's out at first.

Stark drew transportation in the fifth, was sacrificed by Wagner and scored on a triple by Graves.

The game was fast and was marked by almost perfect fielding. But one error marred the play of the visitors, while the Pirates gave the great pitching of Wagner errorless support.

The Sox Deserve It.

This afternoon at Athletic park the fans will show the members of the Duluth baseball team that the efforts of the Sox, in the face of repeated discouragements, are appreciated, and that gameness in baseball is a quality that is respected and admired as much as it is in other games of athletic skill.

On the present trip the Sox have played the best ball of the entire season. The record of the team upon the trip will bear this statement out. Three games have been lost by the score of 1 to 0, and several other games have been lost by the narrowest of margins.

Almost every game lost has shown the goddess of baseball luck with the other team. There is no excuse to offer for the Sox; the statement can stand for itself, when it is said that at the present time, despite the fact that the team has lost the majority of games upon the trip it has shown the best baseball of the season.

Many teams lose heart after a series of defeats. For a while the present season, it did not seem as if the team was ever going to win a game. Then the present players came to the support of the management in its efforts to give this city a team that would be a credit to baseball.

Never have players worked harder to win than the players that Darby O'Brien has upon his White Sox at the present time. There never was a harder worker than the Irish Orator, and if ever a baseball manager has kept his head under difficulties that the general baseball public has wetted not of, this same O'Brien chap is it.

He has gone along and kidided himself when everything looked the darkest. He has refused to quit, and has kept trying all season to put a winner in the field. His gameness has at last met with at least some measure of reward, for he has just now one of the best teams in the league.

There is a chance for the Sox to go higher. Rochester is not playing near the brand of baseball that the Sox are playing at the present time, and when La Crosse hits the road the team is due for a drop in the percentage column. Herein lies the opportunity of the White Sox to pass the Outcasts and to rivet a hold on fifth or sixth position.

This is quite possible of accomplishment. The boys are working for a better standing and no bunch of men has tried harder than these same players during the past few weeks. The fans can do their part in helping the team to a better standing, and this afternoon the opportunity is ripe to show the boys that the fans of this city are with the team to a man, and that baseball of the kind that the team has been playing of late, is appreciated in Duluth.

This afternoon is the proper time for you to get out and boost, for you can help the team climb during the remainder of the season.

The Man Who Pays.

It was when James J. Corbett fought the late athletically lamented James J. Jeffries, that an old and wise follower of fighters, rose and remarked:

"An athlete's constitution is a limited institution. Rowdy times at night and feverish rest during the days, are bound to exact their toll. No matter how good an athlete is, he can't go the pace and last."

Just the other day ring followers were given a distinct sensation. In these days of ring scandals and what not, sensations are as scarce as logic at a suffragette meeting. The sensation was the announcement of the physical-all-inness of Stanley Ketchel, the boy with the sensational wallop.

Here is a boy of 23 years. He has, however, if half the reports be true, crowded a lot of swift and joyous life into that skiddo age number of his'n. At an age younger than the age Fitzsimmons started real fighting, this champion is in such condition that reports have it, he may never be able to fight again.

What is the cause? Some very swift times in the life of the assassin.

When Ketchel burst upon the public with the faucets of the limelight man turned on at their full pressure, we heard some funny rumors of his past. He had been a bouncer in a Butte thirst emporium, and in Butte saloons you are very liable to see the high tide of swiftly moving life.

Then there were other reports of the life of the terrible youngster. Just after his beating at the hands of Billy Papke, it was rumored over the underground news system, that Ketchel had been hitting the dope. There is a sport in this city who swears he has seen Steve hitting the pipe in the Butte bad lands.

Not so very long ago in Pittsburg they nearly had to resort to the straight jacket to quiet the assassin. He burst into a [illegible] cafe with several large bills in his mitt and a wild look in his eye, and wanted to buy for the place. They at last soothed his troubled spirit, but it was with difficulty.

Now it would appear young Mr. Ketchel is paying the bill. The reports of the run down condition of his general health may be exaggerated, yet he apparently is in very poor condition, and dissipation probably caused the middleweight champion to postpone the battles he had planned.

These fellows seem to learn not—so what is the use. There are a lot of others who have gone before and likely, if the fight game continues, there will be a lot of others to come after.

He Does Look Tough.

First pictures of Mister Gama, the geek from far away India, the land of the coral strands, are at hand. It must be said of Get-There-Gama that he is an exceedingly tough looking citizen, even taking into consideration the general mussiness of turbulent India.

He is swarthy and thick limbed, with a chest that is broad and massive. He has that look in his near-earth countenance, which reminds you that you have important business that will take you away. In other and perhaps more explicit words, William, the Gama kid is that tough looking that you could be persuaded to make a noise like Richard Schell's boat upon the least sanguinary move—the word is used advisedly—upon the part of Mons. Gama. After earnestly and thoroughly studying the picture of the terror of India, one is not surprised that peaceable Doc Roller did not ruffle the back muscles of the man. More is the pity, Doc is reported to have lost $1,000 of real coin of the realm. We in this country don't think the "rassler" breathes regularly who can beat our Frank A. Gotch But this Gama person sure does look like the reckless kid with the sturdy legs, to go the Spearmint kid a prop or two better.

BEALS C. WRIGHT IS FAVORITE

Newport, R. I., Aug. 23.—Beals C. Wright of Boston is a top-heavy favorite in his match today with E. H. Whitney, also of Boston, in the upper half of the semi-final round of the thirtieth annual all-comers singles lawn tennis championship of the United States.

Frederick C. Colston of Baltimore and Thomas C. Bundy of Los Angeles are the contestants in the lower half of the semi-final round.

The four players were greeted by clear, cool weather and a large gallery. Tomorrow the winners of today's two matches will meet in the final contest of the tournament, and the victor will play National Champion William A. Larned of Summit, N. J., in the challenge round on Thursday.

Playing in splendid form, Wright of Boston yesterday defeated Maurice F. McLoughlin of California in straight sets in the sixth round of the all-comers lawn tennis tournament for the national championship on the Casino courts here. McLoughlin had been looked upon as Wright's only dangerous rival, and today it appears certain that, barring accidents or a remarkable reversal of form, there will be a repetition of tennis history of 1908, when Wright won the all-comers tournament and was defeated by William Larned, champion then and now. Wright won the championship in 1905.

GOOD CONDITIONS FOR EMPIRE CITY OPENING.

New York, Aug. 23.—Warm, sunshiny weather with a dry track were the conditions which forecasted a successful opening today of the five-day grand circuit meeting at Empire City track, Yonkers. The big event of the day is the $15,000 Matron futurity stakes, in which Native Belle, Colorado E, and other classy horses meet. Native Belle is the 2-year-old record holder. There are big stake events carded for much of the meet.

DULUTH MEN IN "EIGHTS"

Washburn and Kennedy Dispose of Their Twin City Opponents.

Davis and Ingalls Lose in First Match of Doubles.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 23.—Brilliant play again marked the second day of the 1910 state tennis tournament now being held at the Town and Country club here. Washburn, last year's Duluth tourney winner, won his match from Albright of St. Paul by default, and came to the nets with Gill of Minneapolis, winning in the fiercest play of the day and putting himself in the fourth round among the "eight."

D. Loren Kennedy had a snap with Earle of Minneapolis, and put it over him 6-1, 6-2. He then earned his right to be one of the "eight" by beating his own team-mate, Ralph Davis, the latter putting up a fine struggle in the first set.

Kennedy's play was easily the best seen on the courts, and he is talked of as a tourney winner.

The first match in the doubles resulted disastrously for Duluth, Davis and Ingalls going down to defeat before Burton and Lafans, two of the best players in Minneapolis, the first of whom this year won the Minneapolis city tournament.

Dickerman and Amundson are the only two Duluth men in the consolations, which began today.

Men's Singles.

Gill of Minneapolis won from Dickerman of Duluth, 6-2, 6-2.

Davis of Duluth won from Rhame of Minneapolis, 6-3, 6-4.

S. Ordway of St. Paul won from Jordan of Minneapolis, 6-2, 6-2.

Adams of St. Paul won from Graff of Duluth, 6-3, 6-3.

L. Kennedy of Duluth won from W. Sarle of Minneapolis, 6-1, 6-2.

Washburn of Duluth won from Gill of Minneapolis, 4-6, 6-2, 8-6.

L. Kennedy of Duluth won from Ralph Davis of Duluth, 6-4, 6-2.

Men's Doubles.

Burton and Lafans of Minneapolis won from Davis and Ingalls of Duluth, 6-2, 6-3.

DULUTH AND WAUSAU TO MEET

Booster Day Attraction Promises Great Game---New Outfielder Signed.

This afternoon the White Sox will begin a series of games on their home lot that is expected to lift the team from the present lowly position to one in the first division of the pennant race.

Though the team returns in last place, there are three teams but a slight distance ahead of the O'Brien wards, and with strong and consistent baseball upon the part of the Sox during the last spurt for the flag, there is no reason why Duluth cannot finish in fifth place.

To show that the management of the team has not lost faith in the ability of the team, and is making every effort to strengthen the Sox for the hardest fight of the season, it is only necessary to state that Bouchard, an outfielder from Detroit has been signed and will be seen in right field in the game this afternoon.

The new man comes recommended as a sticker. If he lives up to the reputation that was tipped off to the management of the team, he will make the Sox the equal of any team in the league. with the possible exception of Eau Claire.

This afternoon will be the time for the fans to boost. The team needs the support of the fans, and also deseres it. Despite the fact that Duluth returns bruised and battered from the heavy hand of baseball adversity, the O'Brien proteges have played good ball on the road.

There is no need to make excuses for the team. It has lost games, but it required the best baseball that has been seen in any minor league of the country, to defeat the Sox.

It is no exaggeration to state that at the present time the Minny league teams are putting up the best baseball of any Class C or D leagues in the entire country. The games have been of the airtight brand of baseball, many of them errorless and marked with but two or three hits off some stellar twirling matinee hero.

With Hughes, Kramer, Cummings and Blancke right for the biggest effort of the season, and the team playing the same grade of baseball that has been played upon the trip, Duluth should win the majority of the remaining games on the Minny schedule.

The confidence and support of the fans will help a mighty lot.

Cummings will be the mound nomination for the Sox, with Big Dunbar the hill laborer for the visitors.

Big Bob is going mighty sweetly at the present sitting, and with Smiling Al on perfectly harmonious speaking acquaintance with that slippery ball of his, the game should be of the sizzling brand.

GOOD TIME ON NEW ELGIN AUTO TRACK.

Chicago, Aug. 23.—The first official try-out of the Elgin auto course today evinced a speedy track. The circuit of a little over eight miles was made by a number of drivers at a speed of slightly better than a mile a minute. Grant, in an Alco, made the drive in 8:21. Harroun, driving a Marmon; Livingstone in a National, and Mulford in a Lozier, did the distance in 8:23. At one time twenty machines were on the track. Mrs. Mulford, in khaki and the regulation hood, acted as mechanician for her husband.

DULUTH MEN INSURGENTS

Local Sailors Suggest Forming of Minnesota Yachting Association.

Inland Lakes Organization Dominated By Wisconsin Club's Votes.

Is there a mild form of insurrection among the members of the Duluth Boat club, over the fact that the 1911 regatta of the Inland Lakes Yachting association was not given to this city?

The question is asked because of the utterance of a very prominent member of the local club, one of the officials of the sailing department, who stated that it would be a good thing for the Duluth, Minnetonka and White Bear clubs, should they pull out of the association and form an association of their own.

For several years the Duluth yachtsmen, to use the phrase employed by the man in question, "have been jollied and nursed along on hot air." Duluth was practically promised the regatta for next year, and at the last moment the clubs, other than the three Minnesota clubs, voted to hold the regatta on one of the Wisconsin lakes.

Even at the present time there is a tentative arrangement to hold a fall regatta on either Lake Minnetonka or White Bear. The yachtsmen of the Duluth Boat club have received an invitation to take part in a regatta on one of the two lakes, and if the present arrangements materialize, it is very probable that some of the boats of the local club will sail in the proposed regatta.

The Inland Lakes association is very much dominated by the Wisconsin clubs. The three Minnesota clubs have only a very weak minority voice in the affairs of the association. For that reason the suggestion of the Duluth Boat club official, that Duluth and the two other Minnesota clubs withdraw from the association and form one of their own, may be acted upon, if the White Bear and Minnetonka clubs feel as the statement of the Duluth club official would indicate some of the sailors here feel.

There are enough boats on the three lakes to make a regatta, held at Duluth or White Bear or Minnetonka, one of the best ever held in the Northwest. The distance would also favor the entering of more boats. The forming of the new association, it has been suggested here, would also result in greater interest being taken in the different classes.

While as yet there has been no open signs of revolt from the Inland Lakes association, there is an undercurrent of feeling, which this winter, or even this fall, may be fanned into the flame of action.

Here it is admitted, even by those who have given the suggestion little thought, that the forming of a new association, composed of the three Minnesota clubs, would be a better thing for sailing at the Head of the Lakes.

SPANISH YACHTSMEN LOSE LAST RACE.

Marblehea, Mass., Aug. 23.—The Spanish yachtsmen closed their career in American waters by losing another race to the Americans yesterday, and last night they saw the Governor Draper cup, the second important trophy of the international series awarded to Capt. C. H. W. Foster, owner of the Beaver.

The final race was between two American and two Spanish boats, the Mosquito II not participating. The Beaver won after an interesting contest with the Cima, which was only thirteen seconds behind at the finish. The Spanish boats Chonta and Papoose, were far astern when the American boats crossed the line.

SALT LAKE COUNCIL TURNS DOWN RACING.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Aug. 23.—At a meeting of the city council last night a resolution directing the city attorney to draft a resolution allowing thirty days of horse racing in the spring and a similar meeting in the fall, was voted down with only one vote in its favor.

The action of the council, it is believed, will stop racing in Salt Lake City. The members of the Utah Jockey club, which had announced a meeting of thirty-one days, beginning on Sept. 17, have made no announcement as to intentions regarding the meeting.

Kendig Defeats Mansolf.

Frank Kendig won the first pool game with August Mausolf last night, running out 125 points while his opponent was scoring 120. Each player made high runs of 16 points. The match will continue the present week.

BAND PARADE WILL PRECEDE BASEBALL GAME

A band concert and parade by the Third Regiment band will mark the festivities of Booster day.

J. J. Desmond, business manager of the Duluth Baseball association, has secured the services of the crack Duluth musical organization, and riding in a tally-ho, the band will be driven through the down town streets of the city before the game with Wausau.

The band will also play at the park before and during the progress of the game this afternoon.

The advance sale of tickets assures a big crowd this afternoon when play is called between the Sox and the strong Wausau team.

If You Have Not Selected Your Lot in

IDLEWILD DIVISION

DO IT NOW!

IDLEWILD DIVISION IS LOCATED IN THE EAST END, touching Twenty-seventh avenue east on the west, Fourth street on the north, East Second street on the south, and Twenty-ninth avenue east on the east.

Beautiful houses, built at a cost of from $10,000 to $50,000, on large plots of ground, are located on the western boundary of this division. Plans have been made and houses are undergoing construction just north of this Division, that will cost in the vicinity of from $25,000 to $50,000. On the east (with Congdon park, which was lately donated to the city of Duluth by Mr. Congdon, running through the center of same), some of our prominent citizens have platted a large tract of land called Congdon Park Addition, with lots varying from three-quarters of an acre to one and one-half acres in size. This property will be sold to parties who will put up substantial and high-priced residences only, and it is bound to be in the near future, one of our prettiest residence districts.

IDLEWILD DIVISION COMMANDS A MOST MAGNIFICENT VIEW of the city, lake and harbor, and from its commanding viewpoint overlooks the adjacent property, which in the near future will be improved with costly houses surrounded with beautiful lawns, curving driveways, etc. There is no doubt but that in the near future this property will command the highest price of any property now being offered for fine residences.

IDLEWILD DIVISION IS IN what is known as the "Restricted Residence District," that is to say, one house only is allowed to be built on a lot; double houses will not be allowed and the purchasers of same agree that no part of said dwelling house shall be used as a store, hotel, saloon, hospital, etc.; that no house shall cost less than $5,000; that no live stock or poultry shall be harbored on the premises, excepting household pets, horses and ponies for family use.

Fifty-foot lots in IDLEWILD DIVISION are being offered for a sum ranging from $750 to $1,500 each. The terms are $150 to $300 cash, balance in either monthly or annual payments, within one, two and three years.

IDLEWILD DIVISION is located so that CITY WATER CAN BE SECURED AT ONCE without the building of a new reservoir, the pipes being within 200 feet of same. SEWERAGE IS PROVIDED FOR through the new Trunk Line from Woodland, which is located within two blocks of same.

It will only be a question of a year or so before this property is fully improved, streets graded and sidewalks laid. These improvements will be made as the property owners purchasing same dictate.

IDLEWILD DIVISION IS NOT A SUBURB. It is located in our best residence district, and if you are considering the purchase of a lot or lots, upon which you expect to erect your home in the near future, there is no place in the city of Duluth that offers as many advantages, such as commanding a fine view, near two lines of street cars, and adjoining some of our most expensive and prettiest homes and easily accessible as far as sewer and water connections are concerned, and at as low a price as this property is offered in IDLEWILD.

Do not fail to investigate at once. Remember that location means everything and that IDLEWILD has the location.

OWN YOUR HOME We Will Lend You the Money at 5 Per Cent Simple Interest

Money invested in house rent receipts is a poor investment, and one that you will never derive any future benefits from. Anybody can pay rent, but it takes energy, economy and determination to own a home. We will lend you money to buy, build, improve homes or lift mortgages anywhere in the Union. For each $1,000.00 borrowed, you pay us $7.50 per month, together with 5 per cent interest on yearly balances; giving you 10½ years in which to repay loan, with the privilege of taking up all notes or as many as you wish at any time, and by so doing you would get a discount of the 5 per cent interest on all notes taken up before maturity. We allow six months' grace in case of adverse circumstances. Now why do you pay rent when our plan will enable you to own a home with the money you spend for rent? On receipt of this coupon, properly filled out, we will mail you full particulars in regard to our methods of loaning money, or, better still, come to our office and let us explain to you our liberal proposition in detail.

NEW ROAD IS COMPLETED

Proctor People Now Have Good Highway to West Duluth.

Sewer Work on Grand Avenue Will Be Done This Fall.

Work on the road between the Keene Creek bridge and Proctor, connecting West Duluth with Proctor was completed last night and there is now a fine highway between the towns. The work has been done by the board of public works under the supervision of Street Commissioner Joseph Becks at a cost of over $1,200. The job included regrading and gravelling. On the level part of the road beyond Bayview Heights a good crown has been given the driveway insuring a dry hard road at all times, and the grade below Bayview Heights will take care of the water there. The entire surface has been well gravelled, the cost of the improvement being materially reduced by the donation of gravel necessary to be used by the Duluth, Missabe and Northern road from its gravel pits at Proctor.

The crews of men which have been at work resurfacing the three bridges on Oneota street, finished their work last night and were taken off the job. All three bridges are now in first rate shape.

Though the work of paving Grand avenue between Fifty-fourth and Fifty-ninth avenues west will not be commenced until next spring, the sewer work will be done this fall so that no time may be lost next spring. The assessment for this job has been confirmed by the board and the council, but with the understanding that the property owners will not be required to pay until next spring.

MAY ESTABLISH A FREE NIGHT SCHOOL.

The Men's Club of the Merritt Memorial M. E. church, is considering the advisability of starting a free school for young people of West Duluth, who cannot afford to take a business college course A large number of the members of the club are graduates from business schools and competent to teach along these lines, and they have offered to donate their services. Rev. E. F. Stidd, pastor of the church is behind the movement and from a canvass which he has taken through the western part of the city, he says that this would be one of the most worthy charities which the club could take up

Nothing definite will be done in regard to the matter until after the Methodist conference at Fergus Falls, Sept. 20, as until that time it will not be known whether Mr. Stidd will receive another call to this church.

SAYS HUSBAND HORSEWHIPPED HER.

Mrs. Ignace Paulina, an Italian woman living in the ravine between Fifty-sixth and Fifty-seventh avenues west, told a pitiful story of abuse by her husband before Judge Flack this morning. She said that her husband had horsewhipped her, beaten her, threatened to kill her, and was threatening to burn down their home. He had driven her, and her four children who appeared with her, from the house, and she wanted Judge Flack to send a policeman back with her to get her things as she did not dare to go alone.

She vigorously protested that she did not want her husband arrested, but only wanted to get her things. Judge Flack told her that as she did not want her husband arrested he could do nothing, and advised her to get a divorce.

OFFICER ASSIGNED TO STEEL PLANT

Henry Brouillette Will Keep Watchful Eye on the Laborers.

Tomorrow Officer Henry Brouillette will be transferred from his Raleigh street beat and will go out to the steel plant site near New Duluth, where he will assume the arduous task of keeping the laborers there in order. A bicycle of extra heavy construction has been purchased for his use and he will attempt to cover the country between the steel plant and Fond du Lac.

It is not a job which is much to the liking of the average "copper," but Officer Brouillette has been working among the laborers around the blast furnace in West Duluth for the past year and says he expects no serious trouble. He is a big man with a record in police circles as a wrestler and says he can handle the bigget workman on the diggings. He also has a voice calculated to strike terror to the heart of the offender and has marched men to the police station from the "Second street" district, keeping them headed straight by a vigorous use of his vocal cords without laying a hand on his prisoner.

It is no small contract that he is taking in tackling the steel plant labor proposition alone, however, as is shown by the request from Chief Troyer for an extra man to be sent out there to assist him.

No definite action can be taken by the council in the way of sending out an extra man to help out Officer Brouillette until after the report of the conference committee this fall.

SHORTS PUT UP WHEAT

Covering Cause of Sharp Advance---Market Moderately Active.

No Export Trade Reported---Country Receipts Fall Off ---Flax Firm.

Duluth Board of Trade, Aug. 23.—Short covering caused the market to advance sharply today. September wheat gained 1⅞c, December 1⅝c and May 1½c. Trading was active until around mild-day when there was a lull. The market was fairly active at the close which was at the session's high point.

Flax advanced partly in sympathy with wheat and partly because a few buying orders were unable to locate any sellers at opening prices. The short interest in the flax market is small and it has been covering intermittently in the last few days. The short interest which was partly responsible for the big bulge on the last crop will not be in evidence this year, apparently. September flax gained 4c, October 2c, November, 2½c, and December 3c

Oats lost ⅛c, rye closed unchanged, barley lost 3c and durum advanced 1¼c. Cash wheat was on a parity with September.

Wheat advanced sharply at the opening and the undertone was strong during the session, although around noon the market appeared to be wavering. The buying was entirely professional and much of it was in the nature of short covering. Shorts started to buy early after the long decline of more than a week and they took profits, forcing the market upward. On the upturn some eleventh hour shorts were forced to scramble to cover and their exertion accelerated the upward movement. The market was oversold and the rally was generally expected, although, according to most traders, it was overdue.

There was no export business and the mills did not take much stuff. Some of the elevators sold wheat and on the bulge there was some selling from the country. The September option was strong and was realatively firmer than the December contract, in which there was some selling on the advance. Cables came higher, although foreign conditions were generally bearish. Shorts abroad started to cover and the movement carried values higher in practically all markets. Russian and Danubian offers were heavy and the increase in the Europe and visible supply of wheat was larger. The report that France was bidding for cargoes off the coast gave impetus to the advance.

The West Canadian crop of wheat was estimated by the Free Press of Winnipeg at 101,250,000 bu, a report considered bearish in comparison with previous estimates, although bullish with respect to last year's yield. The total Canadian crop last year was 143,520,000 bu and in 1908 134,320,000 bu.

Receipts from the country showed a reduction. Cash markets were not in a healthy position, however, business being light. Thrashing returns from the Northwest indicate that early estimates were much too low and later estimates slightly under the indicated yield.

MARKET GOSSIP

Broomhall cabled—The market at the opening was affected by the steady American cables and values were ¼@⅜d higher. Following the opening an easier feeling developed with general realizing and values declined ¼@¾d with the principal weakness in December. Selling was induced by the pressure of both Russian and Danubian offerings, heavy arrivals of wheat at Black Sea ports and the heavy increase in the European visible. Cargoes in distant positions are easy and freely offered with very little inquiry. Just before midday some reaction took place and values gained ⅜@½d from the low of the day on rumors of France bidding for off coast Australian cargoes. THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Is Unsettled With Fair Buying and Large Receipts.

Chicago, Aug. 23.—The wheat market was unsettled today and opened ¼c down to ¼c up, May showing the greatest initial strength. Early firmness in foreign markets induced some buying which carried September ¼c higher than yesterday's closing figures. There was a fair amount of buying although large receipts were again the order of the day and reports from the Northwest showed favorable weather for harvesting and thrashing. In the first hour prices on all options kept well toward the top. September opened ⅛ to ¼c off at 98⅞ to 99c, and moved up to 99⅜c. December opened unchanged to ¼c off at $1.02⅞ to $1.03 and rose to $1.03⅜.

The market advanced later to 1c above yesterday's closing point. The close was strong and near the top with September ⅝@¾c to ¾c up at 99¾@99⅞c. December closed ⅞@1c to 1⅛c up at $1.04@1.04⅛ to $1.04⅛c.

Light offerings gave an upward impetus to the corn market, prices showing a generous advance in the first hour, prominent concerns buying May liberally. September opened ⅛ to ⅜c up at 60⅛ to 60⅜c, advanced quickly to 60¾c. The more distant uptions took a similar course.

Corn values kept up in harmony with wheat. The close was strong in all the options with September c up to 60¾c. December closed ¼@⅜c to ⅜c up at 58½@⅝c.

The oats market was less nervous and prices kept in narrow limits, pit traders doing most of the buying from scattered sellers. Opening figures were ⅛c off to ¼c up. September opened unchanged to ⅛c down at 34⅝ to 34½c and leisurely moved to 34⅞c. December opened ⅛c down to ⅛c up at 36⅝ to 36⅞c and advanced to 37⅛c.

Provisions were quiet with cash houses and shorts doing the buying generally at a moderate advance. Opening figures for the October products: Pork, $20.95, 10c higher; lard, $12.12½, 2½c down; ribs, $11.85, 5c up.

The Cotton Market.

New York, Aug. 23.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 4 to 13 points on better cables than due, bullish crop accounts from the Southwest, covering by August shorts and trade buying of the new crop months. Private cables indicated that Liverpool had been influenced by a renewal of dry, hot weather in the Southwest and covering of the near months, and foreign houses were buyers here. General demand, however, did not broaden on the initial advance and local traders were sellers for a reaction, causing some irregularity during the early session.

Futures closed barely steady. Closing bids: August, 16.52; September, 14.36; October, 13.63; November and December, 13.54; January and February, 13.53; March, 13.58; May, 13.62; June, 13.59; July, 13.60.

Cloquet, Minn., Aug. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The third death from tuberculosis in this vicinity within the past few days occurred yesterday. Mrs. Frank Manes, an Indian woman living in the Indian village a mile west of Cloquet, died yesterday. A short time ago the same family lost a son from the same cause. Mrs. Manes will be buried today from the Catholic church in the village, Rev. Father Simon officiating. There is considerable tuberculosis among the Indians on the reservation.

EASY CLOSE TO STOCKS

Professionals Withdraw Owing to Narrowness of the Dealings.

Sagging Marks Last Few Minutes and Gains Are Lowered.

New York, Aug. 23.—There was a moderate resumption of yesterday's selling movement at the opening today, but the losses were only of consequence in a few stocks. Among the most active issues declines ran to small fractions with New York Central, Chesapeake & Ohio and Wabash preferred showing exceptional losses of ¾ and Reading 1. Republic Steel preferred and Bethlehem Steel gave way 1½ and American Steel Foundries and Cleveland C. C. & St. Louis 1.

Selling ceased shortly after the opening when the market stiffened gradually until the early sharp losses had been turned into corresponding gains in some cases. As on yesterday the most activity and widest fluctuations were in Union Pacific, Reading and United States Steel. Reading more than made up the opening decline and Union Pacific and United States Steel also sold a large fraction above yesterday's close. United Drygoods preferred advanced 4½, National Railways of Mexico second preferred 1⅜, National Biscuit 1¼ and Western Union 1. Atlantic Coast Line sagged 1½.

The market held pretty firm on the recovery, although there was occasional profit-taking in Reading and several others. The support extended to prices when the market was weak and drove in the short interest to some extent, but speculative operations generally were held in check pending further developments in the political situation. Baltimare & Ohio and American Cotton Oil improved 1. American Sugar preferred dropped 3 points and Texas & Pacific, and Allis-Chalmers preferred, 1. Bonds were steady.

The market closed easy. Professional operators, finding it imposible even to make scalping profits owing to the narrowness of the dealings, withdrew from the market in disgust and trading became more dull and uninteresting. In the last few minutes the market began to sag, Union Pacific and Reading going back a considerable fraction from their best.

Cannon Is Dropped From List of Speakers for the Campaign.

Washington, Aug. 23.—Another blow has been delivered to Speaker Cannon. It has become known here that his "services are not desired" by the Republican congressional committee during the comping campaign and that he will not be given any speaking dates.

The statement was made by a Republican leader who professed to have positive knowledge that Cannon's services have not been and will not be solicited by the national Republican congressional committee. In answer to the suggestion that Cannon might receive many direct invitations to speak and that, in response to them, he would be a busy factor in the campaign, the opinion was expressed that this possibility is not considered likely to upset the committee's plans. The reason given was that the speaker, in his Kansas speeches and in other statements, is devoted to the policy of an open fight on the insurgents.

Let Insurgents Drop.

Other leaders, including President Taft and the congressional committee, it was explained, believe that the less said about insurgents the better it will be for the party. Instead of intensifying differences within the party they believe that the time should be spent in fighting Democrats.

The fact that Representative Walter Smith of Iowa and William E. Humphreys of Washington, two ardent regulars, have deserted Cannon, goes far to strengthen the belief here that he cannot get the support of the majority of his party in the next congress for speaker. Smith was a member of Cannon's personally conducted committee on rules. He is a leading member of the important committee on appropriations and has been one of the leaders in the house. He is a candidate to succeed Cannon and all the present indications are that he will be a big factor in the fight, providing the next house is Republican.

REDEMPTION FUND FOR BANKS IS CUT

Only 5 Per Cent Against Emergency Issues Need Be Maintained.

Washington, Aug. 23. — National banks will be required to maintain only a 5 per cent redemption fund against emergency issues of currency which may be made under the Aldrich-Vreeland act, according to a ruling which the treasury department is about to promulgate. This ruling will reverse the former one made in June, 1908, which fixed the amount at 10 per cent.

Flour Mill For Hillsboro.

Hillsboro, N. D., Aug. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Hillsboro will soon have a flour mill in operation, the Hillsboro Commercial club having taken up the subject. A new organization is to be formed and the mill property, already here, is to be made use of. This section of the state produces wheat in abundance and there is every reason to believe that the project will be successful.

In a circular letter to our stockholders and others, we have offered a guarantee of 7 per cent, and have estimated first year's dividend at 12 per cent. Many have asked for an explanation, and we offer quotations from a letter from our engineer, to support the statements.

"I herewith present a complete statement showing that when you state that Eclipse mine will at least pay 12 per cent the first year, you are taking no chances." "Having allowed another ninety days for reaching the fifth level with the main shaft, the output for the thirteenth month will be 1050 tons per day. By adding the daily output for the first year, and dividing by twelve you will get 375 tons average daily output, which is very conservative."

"Although I expect the ore to average $25.00 per ton, we shall figure it after deducting mining, freight and smelter expense at $11.00 per ton. 375 tons is $4,147.00 profit per day, for 310 working days $1,278,750. This dividend on the actual number of shares outstanding gives 608 per share, which is 67.5 per cent dividends to the investor."

"The aforesaid figures, I think are, enough to show that Eclipse is well named, as I feel quite confident it will eclipse any other stock in the whole country, until Aurelia begins pouring out its wealth from half a dozen of its wonderful deposits."

O. R. DAHL, Mining Engineer.

HEAVY FALL OF SNOW IN MONTANA CHECKS FIRE IN THAT STATE

Rain Also Comes to Relief of Parts of the Stricken District.

Flames in Idaho Are Spreading in Spite of Light Fall.

Only Fifty-Four Are Known to Be Dead---Immense Damage Done.

Missoula, Mont., Aug. 24.—A heavy fall of snow in the mountains and rain in the valleys has done much toward bringing the forest fires under control. The storm has extended over an area of 100 square miles, going as far east as Helena and taking in the Coeur d'Alene district.

Idaho Rangers Safe.

Wallace, Idaho, Aug. 24.—All of the men on the list of government foresters employed in Idaho have reported to the supervisor or are known to be safe.

Fifty-four Known Deaths.

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 24.—Fifty-four persons, and no more, are known to have perished in the forest fires in Idaho, Montana and Washington. A government crew working on the Big Fork of the Coeur d'Alene has been lost, it is feared, and some government rangers in Montana are still in the woods. There is no warrant for reports of loss of hundreds of lives. Among the known dead are:

S. D. ADAMS, Chicago.
A. RENSTON, Hillsdale, Wis.
WILLIAM HEARMOUTH, War Eagle, Minn.

The hundreds of national forest rangers who yesterday were reported missing and probably dead have not all turned up safe, but many of them have. The fire-swept country contains many lakes and streams of water, and by taking refuge in these, the skilful rangers probably saved their lives.

Everywhere, except near the towns, the fires still are spreading. Many companies of United States and state

SAY DISEASE HAS LOW MORTALITY

Infantile Paralysis Is Discussed By Washington Doctors.

Washington, Aug. 24.—Reassuring resolutions touching acute infantile paralysis were adopted last night at a meeting attended by about 150 Washington physicians. The resolutions set forth that the doctors deprecated the undue alarm which has been aroused. "Even in severe epidemics," the resolutions recite, "only about one person per 1,000 is attacked and one death per 1,000 of population is an unusually high mortality."

Varying views as to whether the disease is contagious were expressed. A motion that President Taft be called upon to direct an official inquiry into this point was voted down because of the belief that it would cause undue alarm.

DAYS OF HERMIT KINGDOM NUMBERED---PAPERS SIGNED

Japan Will Annex Korea Before the End of the Month.

Country Over Which Big War Was Fought Will Lose Its Freedom.

Tokio, Aug. 24.—The text of the convention under which Korea is to be annexed to Japan was communicated at 11 o'clock this morning to the representatives of the powers. The document, which, according to now established facts was signed Aug. 22, will be effective when officially promulgated. This will occur, according to some of the ministers, Aug. 29 or 30, when the independent existence of the Hermit kingdom, the struggle for whose control started the Russo-Japanese war, will cease.

At the request of Baron Hirata, minister of the interior, Japanese newspapers will publish nothing regarding the annexation beyond official statement until after the promulgation of the convention.

Some Trouble Expected.

The Japanese government, which has a large number of representatives already in Korea, will be prepared to take over the machinery of administration in Korea without any delay. Sporadic outbreaks in protest against the absorption of Korea by Japan are anticipated, but serious rioting or even widespread objection from the Koreans to the annexation are not expected.

IS NAMED FOR STATE OFFICE IN CONNECTICUT

MRS. ELLA REEVE BLOOR.

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 24.—The Socialist party of Connecticut has named Ella Reeve Bloor of Waterbury for secretary of state. This is the first one of a woman for a state office in Connecticut. She has been a prominent Socialist for some years and has done considerable campaigning. She was a member of the commission appointed by President Roosevelt to inquire into stockyard conditions.

MOROS WANT TO BE MADE PART OF UNITED STATES

Demonstration in Favor of Annexation at Zamboanga.

The Action Follows Address There By Secretary Dickinson.

Zamboanga, Mindanao, Philippine Islands, Aug. 24.—A demonstration in favor of the annexation of Mindanao to the United States occurred here today.

Two hundred Filipinos had presented to Secretary of War Dickinson, who is now visiting the Philippine Islands, a petition asking that the Moro islands be placed under Filipino control and the entire archipelago granted independence. Secretary Dickinson in reply said the government of the United States was not willing to entrust the government of 335,000 Moros to 66,000 Filipinos living in widely scattered regions

Four dattos, or Moro chiefs, representing 40,000 Moros, at this point dramatically tendered their allegiance to the United States and announced that they would fight if the Americans withdrew. A wild demonstration followed and the cry that the province must become American territory

FINDS BODY OF BABY IN THEATER

St. Paul Man Discovers It in Suit Case While Cleaning Place.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 24.—Arthur Erbp, an employe of the Star theater, while at work at the repairing of the building just before noon, discovered a dead baby about 2 days old, concealed in a suit case. Police headquarters and the coroner were notified and an investigation is being made.

Carpenters and painters have been at work for some time repairing and cleaning the theater, and the rear corridor and lobby has been littered with lumber and paper for soveral days. While removing some of the lumber from the rear corridor, Erbp uncovered the suit case. Inside he found the little body. It bears no signs of violence and the manner of death has not yet been determined.

GOES TO BED SMOKING; STARTS HOTEL PANIC.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 24.—A guest at a large downtown hotel went to bed early this morning, smoking a cigar. In a few minutes his bed was afire. An alarm was turned in and guests in the hotel fled panic-stricken into the streets, scantily clad. Frightened women narrowly escaped being run down by the fire horses.

KILL SALMON BY THOUSAND

Big Guns in Artillery Practice Affect Puget Sound Fisheries.

Pacific Coast Packers Will Announce Increase in Price of Goods.

Port Townsend, Wash., Aug. 24—Thousands of dead salmon dotting many miles of the shore line of Lower Puget Sound, are evidence, fishermen of this section assert, that the heavy cannonading over the Sound waters by big guns of Fort Worden, Casey and Flagler is destroying more fish than the fishermen.

Artillery officers are now concluding an annual target practice as required by army regulations. Among the principal exercises applied is the discharge of the 10 and 12-inch mortar and rifle batteries with full service projectiles. For this, the charges of smokeless powder, weighing several hundred pounds, are required. The concussion affects a large area of water and land.

Highest Prices in Years.

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 24.—The highest prices named in recent years by Pacific coast packers will be announced on all grades of canned salmon today or tomorrow. The prices will show an advance of 30 cents on sockeyes, 20 cents on Alaska reds and 20 cents on pinks.

The high prices are said to be due to a marked shortage of the Alaska pack, the greatly increased demand and the fact that the market has been practically bare of salmon for four months

FOURTH DEATH FROM AUTO CRASH

Two and Possibly Three More Are Likely to Die.

New York, Aug. 24.—The death today of Mrs. Bertha Glass, who was injured in the collision between a work train and an automobile in which she was riding at the Merrick crossing of the Long Island railroad yesterday, runs the death list up to four. Of eight others who were injured in the accident, two and possibly three are expected to die.

TEDDY FOR DAVENPORT

Man Whom Sherman Will Not Support Indorsed By Ex-President.

Clash in New York State Politics Comes Out at Utica.

Utica, N. Y., Aug. 24.—Col. Roosevelt today was the guest of his brother-in-law, Douglass Robinson, at the latter's country estate near Jordanville. Mrs. Roosevelt and their son Quentin accompanied the colonel to Jordanville.

Politics formed a fruitful subject of conversation between Col. Roosevelt and his brother-in-law. The ex-president is deeply interested in obtaining renomination for State Senator F. M. Davenport, the Republican insurgent leader of Oneida county. Vice President Sherman and his friends have been dominant in politics here and active warfare is looked for between the Roosevelt and Sherman followers.

During the morning Col. Roosevelt inspected the farming operations of the Robinson estate. Late this evening he will come to Utica by automobile to resume his journey Westward.

Theodore Rosevelt wound up the first day of his pilgrimage into the West by placing himself directly in opposition to Vice President Sherman. Speaking in the vice president's own county, he warmly indorsed Senator Davenport, who is a staunch progressive and whom Mr. Sherman has said that he would not support. Mr. Sherman was out of town and did not see Col. Roosevelt.

Gave Him Warm Greeting.

Before the 10,000 persons who attended the Grange picnic, where the ex-president spoke, Col. Roosevelt greeted the senator warmly. As soon as he began his speech he turned to the senator and said:

"I am glad to see you on the platform, senator. The only kind of politics I care for is the kind of politics in which decency is combined with efficiency. I hold that the only way in which a politician can really serve his party is by helping the party efficiently to serve the people. Because the senator and the men who have acted with him have stood for this principle I am glad to be on the platform with him."

There was more cheering as the colonel uttered these words. When he could be heard again, he added: "You will at least notice that my utterances are free from ambiguity."

Senator Davenport supported the direct nomination bill, and has been a warm supporter of Governor Hughes' policies. Col. Roosevelt's move in indorsing him is regarded as his first step in the New York state fight.

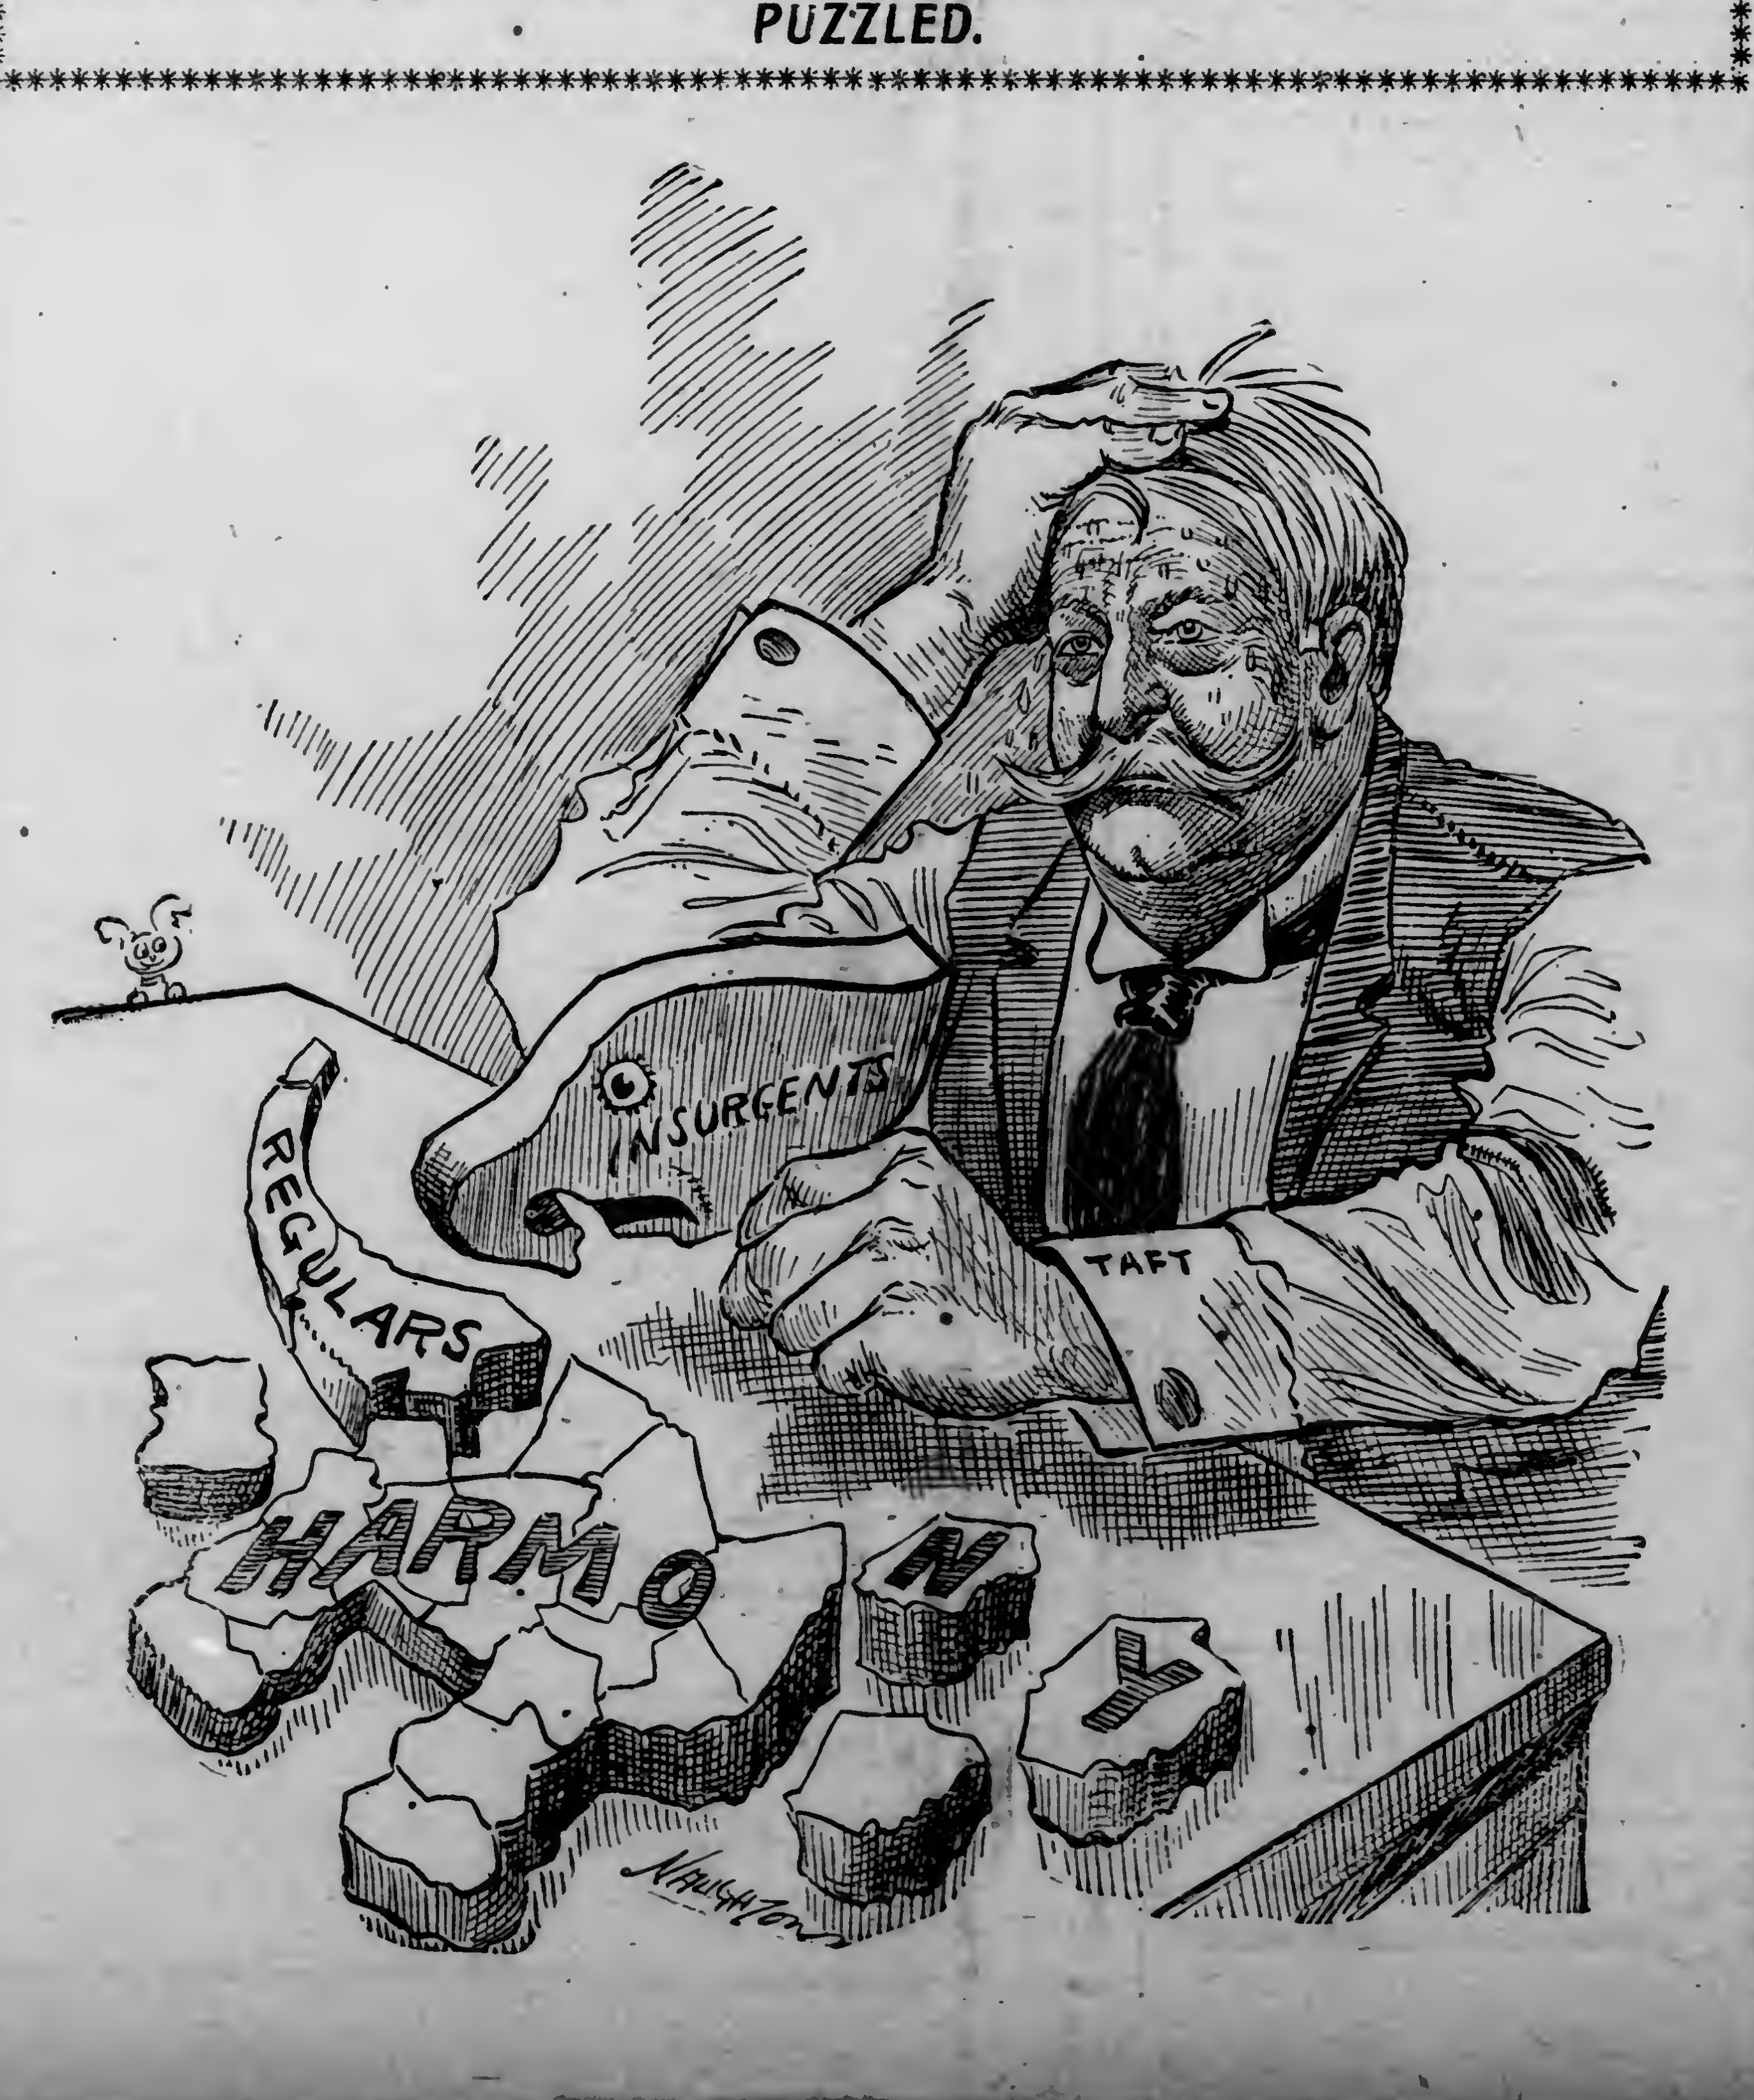
Sherman Is Silent.

Utica, N. Y., Aug. 24.—Vice President Sherman, who returned to his home in Utica early today, declined to break the silence which he has preserved of late in reference to the New York political situation. The vice president will remain in Utica until Friday, when he will start for the West for his campaign speeches in Illinois, Missouri and Oklahoma.

ANOTHER DIVIDEND BY MINERAL POINT BANK.

Washington, Aug. 24.—A dividend of 5 per cent to the creditors of the First National bank of Mineral Point, Wis., has been declared by the comptroller of the currency, making a total of 40 per cent paid since the bank failed on Oct. 11, 1909.

PUZZLED.



CANNON MAN IS BEATEN

Georgia Voters Refuse to Renominate Livingston for Congress.

Hoke Smith Wins Primary Election for Nominee for Governor.

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 24.—Hoke Smith of Atlanta probably will be the next governor of Georgia. One of Georgia's oldest congressmen in point of service, Leonidas F. Livingston, was defeated for renomination in a campaign in which his support of the so-called Cannon rule at the organization of the house last winter was made a principal issue. These were the most notable results of yesterday's Democratic primary.

Early reports from Congressman Howard's district were that he had been defeated by S. J. Tribble, but at noon today the returns made the result in this district, the Eighth, doubtful. Howard's campaign was fought on lines identical with that of Livingston.

Candidates for most of the other state offices were chosen without opposition.

A further count will be necessary to determine the candidate for attorney general, Thomas Felder being in the lead for this office early today over Hawlett A. Hall. For the remaining vacancies on the railroad commission, O. B. Stevens and Joseph F. Gray are leading.

Has Served Twenty Years.

Congressman Livingston has served twenty years continuously from the Fifth district, and Congressman William M. Howard, twelve years from the Eighth. Except for the former, Georgia's congressional delegation probably will remain unchanged.

MORE BOYS THAN GIRLS BORN IN DULUTH DURING JULY, 1910.

There were more boys born in Duluth during the month of July, than there were girls.

Out of a total of 190 births, 103 of them were boys and 87 girls. In 1909 during the same month there was a total of 180 births and 99 of them were girls.

During July there were 74 deaths.

BEGIN SALVAGE WORK ON BRITISH CRUISER.

Tokio, Aug. 24.—Salvage work on the British armored cruiser Bedford, which was wrecked with a loss of eighteen men on the Samarang rocks off Quelpart island, was begun today. The heavy sea hitherto interfered with operations on the ship by the fleet of Japanese warships and salvage vessels dispatched from Japanase ports. The weather is now fair.

Motion for New Trial Denied Sailor By Judge Ensign.

Says "Scab" and "Bowery Tough" Are Proper Epithets.

Jackson McPherson, the proven murderer of his shipmate, Otto Frey, will probably spend the remainder of his days in the Minnesota state prison at Stillwater, for the motion made for a new trial by Attorney W. E. Whipple was denied today by Judge Ensign of the district court.

Last February, the time of the trial, the jury, after being out forty-three hours, decided that McPherson was guilty of murder in the second degree. There is but one punishment for this offense—life imprisonment.

Misconduct Claimed.

In asking for a new trial, Attorney

$10,000,000 PERMIT ISSUED FOR ERECTION OF NEW STEEL PLANT

Company Pays the City Building Inspector $1,415 in Fees.

Permit Calls for Forty-Eight Steel and Concrete Buildings.

Plans on File With Inspector Give Idea of Immense Size.

The building permit for the new steel plant near New Duluth was issued to the Minnesota Steel company this morning by Building Inspector S. M. Kielley.

The cost is given as $10,000,000. The fee paid to the city by the steel corporation was $1,415.

The plans for the steel plant were filed with the building inspector some time ago, showing in detail the location and size of the big buildings which will compose the mammoth industry now under course of construction. The blue print shows forty-eight separate structures, most of them extremely large. The biggest is over 1,100 feet in length and a considerable number have dimensions of 300 to 400 feet each way.

The application for the permit states that the buildings will all be of steel and concrete construction and that all machinery installed will be the best of its kind.

The Blast Furnaces.

The first unit described is the blast furnace, consisting of two steel stacks, eight hot blast furnaces, two casting houses, two hoisting engine houses, one stock house and bins, one gas engine blowing house, one electrical power house, four concrete bins for granulating slag, one pig casting machine building and one ladle house.

The by-product coke plant will have 110 ovens, one condensing house, one coal crusher and mixing house, one coal unloading station, one coal stor-

ELEVEN HURT IN AUTO COLLISION

Cleveland Police Are Looking for Chauffeur and One Woman.

Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 24.—The police are investigating the collision of two automobiles in the downtown district early today in which eleven people were injured, one of whom, John S. McGorray may die.

An operation will be performed today on McGorray, whose skull was crushed. He was the only one taken to " hospital.

The chauffeur of McGorray's machine has disappeared, as has also a woman of his party. Occupants of the machines blame each other for the accident.

EX-SENATOR CALL DIES IN HOSPITAL AT WASHINGTON

Cerebral Hemorrhage Causes Death of Florida Attorney.

Has Record as Confederate Army Officer---Eighteen Years in Senate.

Washington, Aug. 24.—Former United States Senator Wilkinson Call of Florida died here at 9 a. m. today. Cerebral hemorrhage was the immediate cause of his death, which occurred at the Emergency hospital.

Directly after dinner last Saturday night, Senator Call was stricken at his Washington home. He became unconscious at once and he was conveyed immediately to the hospital, where he remained in a comatose state until his death

Senator Call is survived by a daughter, Miss Lucy Call, who arrived here last Sunday. No arrangements have been made for the funeral.

In Senate Eighteen Years.

Mr. Call served in the senate eighteen years, from 1879 to 1897. He was a native of Russellville, Ky., and was 76 years old. He went to Florida in boyhood.

At the outbreak of the Civil war Mr. Call enlisted as a volunteer in the Confederacy and became an adjutant-general of Florida troops. After the war he was elected United States senator, but was not then seated. Thereafter he began the practice of law in Jacksonville, Fla.

He was presidential elector at large in 1872 and 1876; a member of the Democratic national executive committee in 1876, and delegate to the Democratic national convention in 1876. After leaving public life, Senator Call continued the practice of his profession in Jacksonville.

ELEVATOR AND BOAT IN FIRE

Steamer Bennington Damaged in Blaze at Ogdensburg, N. Y.

Ogdensburg, N. Y., Aug. 24.—A fire which burned the elevator of the Rutland Elevator company here this morning with a loss of $200,000 also burned off the hatch covers and woodworks of the steamer Bennington, tied up alongside the elevator. The steamer arrived from Chicago yesterday and the elevator worked until after midnight unloading her. Three hours later the fire broke out.

Burning debris fell across the decks of the steamer, setting it ablaze. The elevator contained 100,000 bushels of corn and oats and was insured for $100,000.

KALAMAZOO HAS GROWN SOME TOO

Washington, Aug. 24.—The population of Kalamazoo, Mich., is 39,437, an increase of 15,033, or 61.6 per cent, as compared with 24,404 in 1900.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

CAN "SHOW" EVEN KALAMAZOO

About a dozen stalks of celery from the Meadowbrooks farms formed an exhibit that attracted much attention at the Commercial club this noon. The stalks were gathered by J. R. Dykhouse of Kalamazoo, Mich., who is taking them home with him to show people in the famous celery district of Michigan "some real celery."

Mr. Dykhouse says the Meadowlands product is as fine as that produced at Kalamazoo. He is at the head of the group of Hollanders who are investing at Meadowlands and has the greatest faith in the agricultural future of that vicinity. His son has been here all summer, in charge of the celery growing at Meadowlands. The longest of the stalks shown at the club today was thirty-six inches in length, and the other specimens were almost as long.

Mr. Dykhouse has been engaged in celery growing at Kalamazoo for twenty-five years and during that time has paid a rental of $25 a year per acre for the land he uses. Therefore he sees in St. Louis county an opportunity to get in on the ground floor and escape the Michigan landlords.

John van Vooven, editor of the Holland American, was here with Mr. Dykhouse, but went away yesterday. Land Commissioner Arnold of the Iron Range road has been showing them around and both visitors evinced the liveliest interest in the posibilities seen hereabout. Mr. Dykhouse has been here before and knows of St. Louis county's prospective and inevitable agricultural greatness.

Weather — Partly cloudy with probably showers tonight or Thursday; slight changes in temperature; moderate northwest winds.

NORTHERN MINNESOTA AND THE STATE FAIR

THE COUNTY'S FAIR EXHIBIT

Panoramas of Duluth Harbor and Stock Farm Will Be Shown.

St. Louis county's state fair exhibit is about ready to be shipped to St. Paul, and it will be a winner.

The exhibit this year possesses several distinctive features. The three panoramas, showing the city of Duluth, the harbor as viewed looking out through the aerial bridge, and the Jean Duluth farm, have been described and they are calculated to give the county's exhibit a most effective background.

Hay in real cocks. Hay is a pretty valuable article this year and the farmers will be taken at once by the sight of these haycocks, which will be of clover and alfalfa and will demonstrate the superiority of Northern Minnesota as a place to grow hay in years of drouth.

Then there will be growing celery, replanted in native soil taken from the Hartley farm and flourishing for the inspection of state fair visitors.

And the evolution of the pea will be shown. The pea as seed and at every other stage of its progression to the state of marketable maturity will be right there to look at.

The grains to be shown are of better quality than ever before. The yields are better and the collection of specimens exceptionally attractive.

A model of the Sebenius farm will add much to the general power of attraction that characterizes St. Louis county's exhibit.

STEEL COMPANY WILL EXHIBIT

Will Show State Fair Visitors Minnesota's Wealth in Iron.

C. P. Craig, superintendent of the agricultural department of the Minnesota state fair, and Maj. J. Uno Sebenius returned this morning from St. Paul, where Mr. Craig was entrusted by the board of managers to deliver to the management of the United States Steel corporation in Duluth, a resolution unanimously adopted by the board requesting the corporation to make an exhibit at the fair this year.

Mr. Craig has been instrumental in bringing this about. The steel corporation officials refused to make an exhibit if by so doing it would be made to appear that it was seeking to advertise itself at the state fair. They declared they could not consent to make any other than an educational exhibit that would benefit the state, and that is what the board has requested them to do. President Olcott of the Oliver Iron Mining company and President McGonagle of the Missabe road, are taking an interest in the exhibit that is to be made, and it will be one of exceptional value.

In view of the fact that thousands of leading men from all parts of the country will be in St. Paul during the fair, for the purpose of attending the conservation congress, it is felt that this year is a particularly opportune time to present adequately in an exhibit the vast mineral riches of Northern Minnesota and the methods by which they are converted into commerce and manufactures.

RUSHING WORK ON SOO DEPOT.

W. C. Ranous, superintendent of transportation of the Soo, is here today inspecting the depot and also looking over the terminals of the road. According to the statement of Mr. Ranous, and also that of George Sherwood, an agent of the Soo at Duluth, the opening of the through line from the Head of the Lakes to Chicago, will be announced within a very short time.

As it is contingent upon the completion of the new passenger depot here, the officials of the Soo are bringing every pressure to bear upon the contractor to have the depot completed by the first of next month.

Mr. Ranous and Mr. Sherwood made a thorough inspection of the depot today. The finishing touches are being placed on the interior of the station at the present time. Work on the train sheds is also progressing very rapidly.

IS STABBED BY UNKNOWN ASSAILANT.

Hjalmar Lindala was stabbed on the arm and body late last night by a man unknown to the police.

Frank Arnio was arrested on suspicion of having wielded the knife, but investigation tended to show that he was not guilty. It seems that the men had some trouble in an attempted robbery, the allegation being that Lindala was cut when he went to Arnio's assistance when he saw some one trying to steal the latter's purse. Lindala's wounds are not serious. He was taken to St. Luke's hospital. The police are looking for the man who fits the description given them by Arnio.

FAMOUS VIOLINS.

Lyceumite and Talent: Stradivarius fashioned his best instruments between the years 1700 and 1720, while the choicest were made between 1709 and 1715. Viotti's violin is from 1704 and is valued at $16,000.

The violin owned by the virtuoso H. W. Ernst, but now the property of Wilma Neruda Halle cost Charles Halle $10,000. Frans Ries had one from 1710 which cost $16,700.

One in the possession of Sarasate is dated 1713 and is owned by the Spanish crown, which has loaned it to Sarasate for life. This is the one he usually plays upon. The other he owns himself and is from the year 1724 and is a gift from Queen Isabella of Spain. The value is not less than $22,000.

Joseph Joachim has three. The most famous is the one called "Pestergeige," which the master uses most frequently. It is from 1714 and cost $20,000. Another one from the same year was given to Joachim by friends in England who paid $15,000. The The third is played by Carl Halir. It is from the seventeenth century and has a small but brilliant tone. Joachim has loaned it to Halir for an indefinite time .

E. Kneisel's violin was formerly owned by Prof. Grun of Vienna and is also from 1714. The famous Rudolph Kreutzer's now belonging to J. Winkler in Vienna is from 1714 and is worth upward of $14,000. The Strad owned by the French virtuoso Alard is from 1715 and is offered for sale by his family in Glasgow. The violin owned by Vieuxtemps was sold from Hamma's in Stuttgart for $10,000. John Lauterbach's from 1719 was sold to Vuillaume, the famous violin maker of Paris, for $9,000. Those owned by Hugo Heermann of Frankfort on the Main and August Wilhelmj are both dated 1729 and are worth from $8,000 to $10,000.

The last instrument known to have been made by the great master is the famous one known as "Schwanengesang," dated 1737. It belonged to Saint Sennoch, and was sold to the Hotel Druot for $15,000. This instrument has an autograph by Stradivarius on which appears "danni 93", that is, the instrument was made when the master was 93 years of age.

If, through some special gift of business clairvoyancy, you could estimate the number of people who during last week should have patronized your store, but who were influenced by the other store's advertising to go there instead, you'd have insomnia.

ALL MAY CONNECT WITH SEWER

Long Controversy Between City Departments Is Finally Ended.

The difficulty over the sewer at Lakeside between Sixty-first and Sixty-third avenues east was finally settled yesterday afternoon to the credit of the city engineering department. Twice the board of public works informed the council that the sewer was too shallow to enable part of the nearby residents to make their connections, although the engineering department did not concur in this opinion.

Yesterday afternoon the board of public works selected three prominent plumbers and went with them to the sewer to make an examination of it. Each of the three plumbers declared that every resident in the neighborhood could make connections. The assessment on the sewer has been held up about two years because of its alleged shallowness.

Cambridge Doctor Dies.

Cambridge, Minn., Aug. 24.—Dr. R. B. Hixson of this place died very suddenly Monday evening of paralysis, aged 36 years. He had been confined to his bed for only about three days, but had not been well since his house burned two weeks ago, at which time he was nearly suffocated in attempting to save his property. Dr. Hixson has been a resident of Cambridge for the past ten years and was one of the best known physicians in this part of the state. He was a member of the A. F. & A. M., K. of P. and M. W. of A.

A PALPABLE HIT.

Senator La Follette said of a notorious financier the other day:

"He got rather a setback in a talk he had last session with one of our men.

" 'Money?' he said. 'Bah! There are thousands of ways of making money.'

" 'Yes, but only one honest way,' our man remarked.

" 'What way's that?'

" 'I thought you wouldn't know it,' was the reply."

Mother Had Left Boiler of Water on Floor While Washing.

Myrtle E. Hall, the 14-month-old child of Mr. and Mrs. August Hall of Midway was scalded to death yesterday. A boiler of water had just been taken from the stove and set on the floor and the child's mother had left the room for a moment when the youngster toddled in and in investigating the steam from the boiler fell over into it.

Frightened by the child's screams the mother rushed back into the house, and medical attendance was at once obtained. The accident happened about noon, and the child lived until late last evening, the burns being so serious that there was almost no hope from the start.

FIRST CALL FOR BREAKFAST.

On a Pullman sleeper about 7 o'clock in the morning, when the passengers were about ready to leave their berths, a baby in the stateroom began to cry lustily, says the Columbia, Mo., Herald. Just at that momment the porter opened the door and sang out: "First call for breakfast." Then everybody laughed.

STRAY SHOT STRIKES BOY

Walter Knight Shot in Hip By an Unknown Person.

Injury Is Not Serious and the Boy Will Recover.

Walter Knight, the 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Knight, was accidentally shot in the hip this morning by an unknown person. He was repairing fences near his home at Forty-first avenue west and Eighth street with a hired man. He states that he heard a shot and then felt the bullet strike him. It is believed that some one shooting carelessly at targets is responsible for the boy's injury.

He was taken to the office of Dr. A. E. Walker, who dressed the wound and sent him back to his home. Unless an infection sets in he will recover. The bullet has not been removed. It is claimed that there is too much promiscuous shooting in the city limits and that something radical should be done to put a stop to it.

WORK MOVES VERY SLOWLY

Zenith Furnace Will Not Be in Operation for two Months.

Work on the repairs at the plant of the Zenith Furnace company is progressing very slowly and it will be probably two months before the big plant is again turning out iron. When the furnace was emptied the brick work above the mantle was found badly burned out and that below was in an even more serious condition. A particularly difficult proposition is being encountered in the mass of iron which has formed below the casting room outlet, called the salamander. This mass is nearly solid iron and is of a tough rubbery nature which makes it very difficult to remove. A crew of laborers is at work on it with hammers and drills but they are producing little effect. It may become necessary to blast out a portion of the salamander later, but it is hoped that this can be avoided as it would result in injury to the steam pipes and other fittings of the stack.

The production of the coke ovens will not be curtailed while the furnace is idle. The coke is being stored, and as the production of the ovens is a little less than the usual consumption of the furnace, it will be disposed of in time.

Work on the new 600-foot extension of the coal dock at the furnace plant is nearing completion. Barnett & Record, who are doing the piling and dock facing work, will complete the contract by Sept. 10, and the American Bridge company will have the new traveling bridge in place and its part of the contract completed by Sept. 15. The Mede-Morrison company, which has the motor power installation contract will not be through until early in October.

The new dock will increase the capacity of the dock at the furnace about 50 per cent. The new bridge, which will be installed will have a capacity of 2,000 tons per ten-hour day, as compared to the 1,000-ton capacity of the old bridge.

The total cost of the dock extension is about $200,000.

PROTEST EXPECTED.

Extra Cost of Trunk Sewer May Rouse Ire of Owners.

A flood of protests is looked for from West Duluth property owners if Comptroller McCormick's letter in regard to the West Duluth trunk sewer is acted upon favorably by the city council. Mr. McCormick wants authorization before sanctioning the payment of about $11,000 to the contractor for extras in the work of the sewer.

There were a number of protests from property owners in regard to the assessment originally, as the assessed district extended over a wide area, and a number of the owners thought that they would derive no benefit from the improvement. It will mean an extra assessment, and is likely to stir up the wrath of some of those affected.

UNION DEPOT IS INSANITARY

Dr. H. E. Webster and Chief Deputy Charles Kitchen of the health department made an inspection of the Union station yesterday.

They declare that it is one of the most insanitary buildings in the city. Conditions are said to be worse there than in any other big bulding in the city. The odors were bad and the equipment far from what it should be.

Dr. Webster has told the officials in charge of what he found and expects to find a big improvement there without loss of time.

WILL HEAR COMPLAINTS

President Magner Calls Special Meeting of School Board.

Equipment for New Normal Training School May Be Ordered.

President W. E. Magner of the board of education has called a special meeting to be held at the board room in the Central high school Friday afternoon, beginning at 1:15.

Complaints have recently been made on conditions at some of the school buildings and the board will hear the complaints Friday so that they may be disposed of before the opening of school Sept. 6.

Petitions are being circulated on Park Point and the people of the Radisson school district will request the members of the board to reconsider their action closing the Radisson school and making arrangements for the transportation of the children from that district to the Whittier school, which is also on Park Point.

Many of the people in the Radisson school district are dissatisfied with the closing of that building. They say the trip to the Whittier school is too far for the smaller children and that by the expenditure of a comparatively small amount of money, the board could make the Radisson school suitable for holding sessions. The matter has been hanging fire for some months and the board will probably dispose of it finally at Friday's meeting.

People owning property near the Nettleton school are also expected to appear before the board and ask that some disposition be made of the mound of earth formed there were the material taken off of Sixth street in grading was dumped on the school property. They say the mound spoils the appearance of the school grounds and also damages their property. The matter has also been under discussion since last spring.

One of the most important matters to come before the board Friday is the selection of equipment for the new manual training school, which will be ready for occupancy Jan. 1. At the last meeting of the board, President Magner appointed a special committee consisting of Dr. S. H. Boyer, chairman; F. A. Brewer and W. M. Evered of the board; J. Geiger, director of manual training, and F. G. German, architect, to investigate the matter and to make a report at the next meeting.

The equipment of the manual training school will entail the expenditure of a considerable amount of money and the board members are going into the matter carefully in order that the best results may be obtained.

Church Anniversary.

The Union Church of Disciples will observe their first anniversary at their hall, at 118 West Superior street, Sunday, Aug. 28, it being just one year on that date since the church was organized.

The church under the leadership of the pastor, Rev. Bruce V. Black has had a very prosperous year, and has had a steady and substantial increase in membership. One feature of the church which is a most commendable one is the fact that all expense of organizing, minister's salary and rents have been paid up-to-date and all with free will offerings only. The church has most of the kindred societies that are common to most churches, such as Sunday school, Christian Endeavor society and the ladies' auxiliary, which are all doing a good work. The Christian Endeavor society adopted an orphan in India and has been supporting it since the first monthly business meeting after the organization of the society, which is only an example of the aggressive spirit shown by the different branches of the organization.

TWO BELIEVED TO BE INSANE

Ohio Lad Imagines He Has Money in Unlimited Quantities.

Information in two insanity cases was filed this morning in probate court.

John Williams, a lad of 19, thinks he has a fortune. He tries to hire every man he meets to go out into the woods and work for him. He has been in the city but five weeks, having come from Bucyrus, Ohio. The state board of control will probably order him back to his native state and county if he is found to be demented.

According to the information filed against Althe Johnson, the biggest proof of insanity offered is that she insists on pulling her husband's hair. She is also said to be unclean about the house.

The examinations will probably take place Thursday morning.

START SALE AT LESTER PARK

Beautiful Home Locations on Otsego Street Available Next Saturday.

The home building movement in Lester Park this season will be greatly strengthened by the opening sale nest Saturday of choice building lots in a beautiful tract on Otsego street, between Fifty-first and Fifty-fourth avenues east and only two blocks north of the street car line. The tract comprises forty-five lots ranging from $175 to $275 each, which will be sold on the easy payment plan, $1 to $3 cash and $1.50 to $3 per week until they are paid for.

These lots are the nearest to the car line of any thus far offered this summer on the easy payment plan in either Lakeside or Lester Park. They are within one block of the Lester Park school, two blocks from a church and within one block of gas and water.

There are other advantages that make the location particularly desirable, namely, every lot is on the upper side of the street, with a lake view, on a graded street with sidewalks within a few blocks of Lester Park and only twenty minutes' ride from the business center of the city.

There is a strong tendency at the present time toward homebuilding in the suburbs where those with children can have all the advantages of the city without its disadvantages, and the Lester Park district is certainly making a strong bid along that line.

Under the terms offered there are no payments to be made when the purchaser is sick, no interest, and no taxes to pay until 1913.

This tract is being put on sale by Richardson, Day & Harrison, one of the city's most conservative real estate firms, one that has handled so successfully the restricted normal school building locations, and which in its twenty-six years of business in Duluth has never offered to the public anything but what was legitimate, with values worth all that was asked. There is a reason to believe that every lot will be sold very quickly. The sale starts at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

BUTTERINE TO BE LOOKED INTO

Federal Grand Jury at Chicago Will Extend Its Labors.

Chicago, Aug. 24.—The federal grand jury which has been investigating the so-called beef trust, will, it was learned today, look into charges of fraud in connection with the manufacture and sale of butterine. This was learned when five witnesses, brought secretly from the federal prison at Fort Leavenworth, appeared in the office of the United States marshal. The witnesses are William Broadwell and Samuel Driesbach, convicted butter "moonshiners," and three others recently convicted at Milwaukee of similar offenses.

Two months ago a grand jury made an investigation of the charges but failed to reach what the government was after, namely, the men "higher up."

HEAR NO RETURNS; ATTEMPT SUICIDE

Two Atlanta Men Get Disgusted With Life When Jailed Election Day.

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 24.—Two prisoners in the county jail here yesterday attempted to kill themselves when denied the privilege of hearing the election returns. They said that to be in jail on election day in Georgia was unreasonable. Both attempted suicide at the same time. A. J. Hammond strangled himself with a knotted handkerchief and Ernest George was found in the act of hanging himself.

BOY "KILLED" BY TRAIN IS ALIVE

Gives Parents Bad Scare By Sighing as They Watch Body.

Pittsurg, Pa., Aug. 24.—Stanley Zonchesky, aged 11 years, who was struck and terribly mangled by a Baltimore & Ohio passenger train yesterday and taken home for dead, caused wild panic in his North side home today when his parents ran from their home shrieking, "Our boy has come to life!"

Young Zonchesky was playing with companions when injured. His crushed body showed no sign of life, according to physicians. The lad's mother and father summoned an undertaker. At an early hour today while the parents watched in the room where their son lay, apparently dead, the lad sighed.

Physicians were immediately called, but little hope is expressed for his ultimate recovery.

"HOLY ROLLER" IS EX-SALOON MAN

O'Neil Also Had Been Baptist Preacher in New Jersey.

New York, Aug. 24. — The mystery surrounding the antecedents of James Irving O'Neil, the "Holy Roller," who died in Los Angeles last Saturday, was cleared today on receipt of advices from Paterson, N. J., to the effect that he had long been a resident of that town, where he had successively engaged in the occupation of liquor dealer and Baptist preacher.

O'Neil disappeared from Paterson in 1908 in company with a woman known as Nellie Boyle, and an 8-year-old girl named Alice Griffin.

One of the doctrines preached by O'Neil was the starving of the body and this, it is believed, was the direct cause of death.

ITALIAN HAS DEVICE TO BALANCE AEROPLANES.

Newburyport, Mass., Aug. 24.—An Italian, dressed in the garb of a workingman, drifted into the aviation station at Plum Island yesterday and laid before the astonished aviators and mechanicians a set of blue prints covering what, it is declared, might prove to be one of the most valuable inventions that has been made in connection with aeroplanes for some time. It consists of two small propellers, operated by the exhaust of the engine, which takes the place of the ailerons for preserving the stability of the machine while in the air.

TO VOTE ON QUESTION

Of Organization of McKenzie County, N. D.

Schafer, N. D., Aug. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Plans for the division of a county that admittedly has never been legally organized were taken when the board of commissioners of McKenzie county allowed the petition of the residents of the western section of the county to vote on that question. The legality of the organization of McKenzie county is a point on which the courts of the state have never passed, but on which attorneys and judges generally are aggreed there is little room for doubt.

McKenzie county has occupied the center of the stage in North Dakota for some time, so far as legal battles are concerned, and with the county division fight on this year it promises to again get to the front.

Organize Ben Franklin Club.

Valley City, N. D., Aug. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Employing printers of the counties embraced in the Fifth judicial district held a meeting at Jamestown, perfecting the organization of the Ben Franklin club. This movement was launched at the recent editorial association meeting in Williston.

WOMEN WANT HEARING.

They Continue to Demand Place Upon Conservation Program.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Private Secretary Ralph Wheelock, who is holding down the lid in the executive office during the absence of Governor Eberhart has been waited upon by a committee from the executive board of the State Womans' Suffrage association, headed by the state president, Mrs. Maude C. Stockwell of Minneapolis. The visit was a pleasant one.

A copy of the resolutions adopted at the recent board meeting was left for Governor Eberhart. The committee waited upon Mr. Shipp, secretary of congress, and left with him a copy of the resolutions, which contain a respectful request for a place for a woman suffrage talker on the program at the conservation congress.

The association purposes bringing to St. Paul to take this place, in case it is granted, either Mrs. Sarah Platt Decker of Denver or Jane Addams of Chicago. Mr. Shipp advised the committee to write direct to President B. N. Baker and promised to forward the resolutions at once.

Mr. Wheelock returns from Salt Lake enthused with the West and reports that Mr. Kellogg's talk to the governors dispelled all clouds. Mr. Wheelock said the matter of the program was not touched upon at all and that the official program will not be given out for some days. He had rather expected the Western executives would ask for the program and was prepared to give it to them. Letters received by Mr. Wheelock from conservation officials are right happy in tone.

MARINE

VIDETTE LEAVES FOR ASHLAND

Government Engineers Will Make a Survey of That Harbor.

The United States steamer Vidette left today for Ashland, where a survey of the harbor will be made with the object of ascertaining where there are some dangerous shoals in the harbor basin.

Several reports have been made by mariners that the harbor basin was in a dangerous condition from the presence of shoals.

If shoals are found in the harbor, it is probable that a large amount of dredging will be necessary before the harbor is in good condition.

Maj. Graham D. Fitch also left for Ashland today, where he will conduct a hearing on the proposition to move the harbor line nearer the shore. Several companies interested in the proposed moving of the harbor line will be heard as will some of the citizens of Ashland.

CALL FOR BIDS ON STONE WORK

Breakwaters at Upper Entrance Will Be Made Much Stronger.

Sept. 23, bids will be opened at the local United States engineer's office for stone work at the breakwaters at the upper entrance of the harbor, which will entail an expenditure upon the part of the government of approximately $50,000.

As soon as the contract for the work is awarded the work of filling in the granite rip-rap against the two breakwaters will be begun. The labor will extend until late in the fall and will be carried on next year until its completion.

The work is for the re-enforcing of the breakwaters and will entail the piling against the breakwaters of an immense amount of rock. It is estimated that the work will extend until late into next season.

BOATS ARRIVE ALL IN A BUNCH

Many Are at Anchor in Bay Awaiting Turn at Docks.

Dock space has been at a premium today and yesterday. The reason for this is that a large fleet came up the lake at the same time, which has compelled some of the boats to wait until the dock space was available.

All the space at the coal docks has been taken since yesterday, and boats are also waiting their turn at the ore docks. There are also a number of freighters anchored in the bay at the present time waiting their turn at the docks.

Although lower lake reports stated that the coal business was falling off, there has been no apparent reduction in the amount of coal being received at the docks here.

MISSING MAN KILLED.

Well-to-Do Montana Stockman's Body Is Found.

Harlem, Mont., Aug. 24.—The body of A. D. Gill, a wealthy stock raiser, who mysteriously disappeared from his home at Landusky four years ago, was found under the floor of an old cabin adjoining his ranch.

Bullet holes in the skull and chest tell the manner in which Gill met his death.

Gill's brothers, who reside in New York state, have followed up clue after clue, and recently received word from Norway that a woman there, a former resident of Landusky, had confessed to the United States consul there that she was an eye witness to the crime.

Gill's partner, Henry Winter, was killed several years ago from ambush by the "Kid" Curry gang.

WAGONS MUST BE COVERED

Open Garbage Carts Will Not Be Tolerated Any Longer.

Henceforth the men in the garbage business will have to use covered wagons.

They have been notified by the health department that the open carts and those which are not water tight will not be tolerated.

The ordinance provides that all wagons shall be lined with metal. Many complaints have recently been made to the department of the use of these open wagons. They are extremely offensive and are generally so foul that they can be smelled a long distance off. They are also very unsightly. Those who do not comply with the provisions of the ordinance will be arrested, notice to that effect having already been served upon those in that business.

CONCERNING WOMAN.

When a person alighted from a car in Hunter's Park last night he was greeted by clouds of smoke, a dull glare, and a gentlemanly youth who extracted some loose change from him and bestowed upon him some pasteboards.

These slips indicated that Wonderland, the annual charity event of the King's Daughters, was in the immediate neighborhood, so one pursued a steady but careful course between two lines of automobiles, which were so arranged that the lighting facilities for the walk were admirable. You crossed a lagoon where real fish collected under the rustic bridge to discuss what all the fuss was over, and real frogs hopped about on the banks and voiced their raucous protest against the invasion of their domain. Every now and then a frog would get some smoke in his throat, and you could hear a splash as he sought relief in the purling waters of the wandering Tischer's.

As you tried to distinguish between the smoke from Idaho and the fumes of the burning oil-soaked barrels, and rejoiced in the utter destruction of the mosquito hosts, you rounded a hillock and there, spread before you in a sort of perpendicular fashion, was the promised land. When you had found the pasteboards that you got on the other side of the lagoon, you gave them to a polite youth and sought the heights where strings of Japanese lanterns shed a helpful glow, so that persons desiring to commune with nature and with themselves would not wander away into distant cow lanes or from crags, slippery with fog-soaked fern and moistness, descend precipitately into the lagoon winding somewhere in the semi-gloom below you, where the shadows of things dimly visible moved vaguely in the underbrush and the tangled wild wood.

The Fortune-Teller.

At the foot of the hill you were greeted by a pleasant maiden, who conveyed the glad tidings that you could have your fortune told in a little tent just off the pike. You entered and learned that a fair-haired man was crossing your path, and you recalled your light-thatched friends and your tow-headed enemies and you gently cursed them all. You found that love's way would be somewhat devious, and that from time to time you might get tripped up, but that perseverance would finally meet with just reward. This seemed to be a long life, many children and the sudden demise of a wealthy relative of whom you had never heard before.

Thus cheered you ascended the hill after idly watching several dancing couples gliding over a platform near which an orchestra was making melody. A king's daughter, who should have been a queen, was selling little envelopes to several faithful subjects. They extracted numbers and the lucky number won a prize. A sweet singer nearby was voicing the merits of a wheel that turned round and round, and every revolution brought you something if you had a "chance on it." A young man whose energies have been misdirected and who should be associated with Frederic Thompson at that dear place they call Luna, was luring adventurous spirits to a wild plunge down a slippery slide. A sentimental person referred to it audibly as the Ride of the Valkyries and an unsophisticated youth glared at him as he picked himself up after bouncing off the mat at the foot of the descent.

There was a Hindu snake dance without a snake for which nervous old gentlemen were thankful, and on the crest of the hill children rode Shetland ponies into absent minded folk. There, too, was a diminutive amphitheater. You entered and found that your notions of the seasons were somewhat muddled for the ides of March were approaching and there was Julius Ceasar and his lady and some Roman young bloods out to paint the town red. They had fair measure of success by inserting a stiletto into Julius. It seems that J. C. had a cat and the cat yowled. The spectators agreed that justice did not go astray.

You were told that ticket No. 220 won the slippery slide and that the holder can have it by telephoning to Miss Katherine Hubbell, 1105 East First street.

As you descended the hill you came upon a tent where folk were endeavoring to look pleasant before a camera. You saw little tables where, if you talked pleasantly and smiled at some pretty waitresses, you got cooling refreshments or more substantial sustenance.

And finally you crossed the lagoon again into a prosiac world and sat down on a bench in the rustic house and waited for a car while a dickey bird turned over in its nest above you, gave a plaintive peep, sneezed the smoke out of its nose and went to sleep.

YOUNG CHICAGO BEAUTY WINS INTERNATIONAL FAME

JOSEPHINE BROWN.

Josephine Brown is the young Chicago ingenue and violinist, who with only two years' experience has jumped into success, and has been engaged by Charles Frohman as the leading lady in William Gillette's company. Miss Brown began her stage work two year ago with Arnold Daly. She is a noted beauty and has gained much fame abroad. She was last year acclaimed the beauty prize in Chicago by 910 playgoers. It has been reported and denied that she is to marry Daniel Frohman.

SENSE IN SHORT SENTENCES

Solitude is the best society.

Never judge your future possibilities by your past failures.

There is more cause for joy than for complaint in the hard and disagreeable circumstances of life. Browning said, "I count life just a stuff to try the soul's strength upon."

Every great artist saw visions, and his perfection in technique was the means of expressing those visions. Beauty was not obvious, and the will had to be exercised to retain the sense of it.

Every man is not so much a workman in the world, as a suggestion of what he should be. Men walk as prophecies of the next age.

The patriotism which can embrace the world will eventually rule the world.

The world's opinion is of so much importance that few of us can afford to be natural, and it takes a bold man to make a so-called fool of himself as to follow his inclinations in defiance of the prejudices which have become amost second nature.

Progress is accomplished by the man who does things, not by the man who talks about how they ought not to be done.

Men willingly believe what they wish to be true.

The upward sweep of civilization is not unlike the rising of the incoming tide. It advances and recedes, but each advance carries humanity to a higher altitude than it had reached before.

Marriage: An institution where one person undertakes to provide happiness for two.

There is no greater handicap in life than a distinguished father.

"Everything has its price and that buys that and something else," and those who marry for love will probably have much to sacrifice in the way of ambition.

Selfishness produces selfishness; indolence increases with every hour of indulgence; and what is left undone because it is difficult today will be doubly difficult tomorrow.

A STUDY IN COLORS

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

The object of two or more different tints in dress is to obtain relief by variety and yet the two shades brought thus in contrast should harmonize, else the beauty of each will be lessened. Thus, with a blue dress it would greatly injure its effect by wearing a crimson shawl, as would also a lilac-colored dress by trimming it with a dark brown.

That the reader may understand the colors that will contrast and yet blend, the following list of harmonizing colors is given:

Blue and gold; blue and orange; blue and salmon color; blue and drab; blue and straw color; blue and maize; blue and chestnut; blue and brown; blue and black; blue and white; blue, brown, crimson and gold

Black and white; black and orange; black and maize; black and scarlet; black and lilac; black and pink; black and slate color; black and buff; black, white, yellow and crimson; black, orange, blue and yellow.

Crimson and gold; crimson and orange· crimson and maize; crimson and purple; crimson and black; crimson and drab.

Green and gold; lilac and maize; lilac and cherry; lilac and scarlet; lilac and crimson; lilac, scarlet, white and black; lilac, gold and chestnut; lilac, yellow, scarlet and white.

Orange and chestnut; orange and brown; orange, lilac and crimson; orange, red and green; orange, blue and crimson; orange, purple and scarlet; orange, blue, scarlet, green and white.

Purple and gold; purple and orange; purple and maize; purple, scarlet and gold color; purple, white and scarlet; purple, orange, blue and scarlet; purple, orange, blue and scarlet; purple, scarlet, blue and yellow; and black.

Red and gold; red, white or gray; red, green and orange; red, black and yellow; red, black, yellow and white.

Scarlet and purple; scarlet and orange; scarlet and blue; scarlet and slate color; scarlet, black and white; scarlet, white and blue; scarlet, gray and blue; scarlet, yellow and blue; scarlet, blue, yellow and black.

Yellow and red; yellow and brown; yellow and chestnut; yellow and violet; yellow and blue; yellow and purple; yellow and crimson; yellow and black; yellow, purple and crimson; yellow and scarlet.

TRY THIS DINNER

Clear Soup.

Slice an onion and fry brown in butter, add two pounds of finely chopped raw beef, four cups of cold water, four pepper corns, two cloves and a plade of mace. Simmer three hours, strain, return to the fire, add the white of an egg and shell. Simmer for five minutes and strain through a cloth. Season with salt and add water from time to time to keep the amount four cups.

Meat—Frizzled Ham.

Fry very thin slices of ham for two or three minutes. Dust with flour and cook till the flour is brown. Add one tablespoon of made mustard and enough boiling water to cover the ham. Heat well and serve.

Vegetables—Lima Beans.

Take dry lima beans and soak over night with a little salt and sugar in the water. Start beans coking in cold water and change twice. When done, season well and pour over melted butter. I prefer these to the green beans.

Dessert—Cherry Pudding.

An old-fashioned baking dish is buttered and the bottom covered with a layer of cherries from which the pits have been removed. Sprinkle with sugar generously or reservedly according to the sweetness or tartness of the fruit, and just a little grated cocoanut, covering all with bread crumbs. Add enough of the juice of fruit to each layer to moisten the crumbs thoroughly and continue with alternated layers until the dish is filled. Have the top layer one of crumbs, of course, and cover and cook in the oven one hour. Now uncover and brown very quickly. Serve hot with sweet cream or nun's butter sauce.

THE EVENING STORY

SIMPLE SIMON

By Ada Roscoe.

Old Benjamin Frost, sitting in his accustomed chair at the Crab and Cauliflower, waxed reminiscent.

"Some folks look clever and they ain't. On the other 'and there's them as ain't so foolish as they looks."

He turned to gaze on the dozen yokels around him, a challenge in his eyes. As no one ventured to throw down the gauntlet, he proceeded:

"Some years ago there was a bloke livin' in this 'ere village o' Greenhay what called himself Simon Testy—a poor 'alf-witted chap who tramped in one day and couldn't be got to move farther on owing to his being so silly as to want to stay."

The old man chuckled as he paused to drink.

"Seeing that he wouldn't be got rid of folks started to give him victuals, and Farmer Beaver let 'im sleep in his barn. Then a lot of us field 'ands tried to larn 'im to hoe taters and use a spade, but 'e was too silly to do anything but eat and drink, so we gave 'im up as a bad job at last, and 'e seemed a deal 'appier in consequence.

"The vicar, too, who was a very kind man, took pity on 'im likewise and gave 'im his woreout clothes. So 'e used to walk about looking like a broken down parson, and the school children used to make game of 'im. Not that that worried 'im much, seeing as how their mothers would chuck 'im pennies and beat the young 'uns for larfin at a poor unfortunate critter who couldn't do nothing but eat three 'earty meals a day and sleep most o' the time when he wasn't eating.

"Up at the 'all servants used to collect all the pieces and give 'im, and many's the time I've seen 'im perched on a stile wi' three parts of a cold fowl and a 'unk o' bread in his fist, and I used to think what a blessin' it was to think that 'is appetite was spared 'im.

"'E was such an innocent looking chap, wi' his big saucer eyes and yeller hair, and if you 'appen to say a cross word to 'im he'd bust out crying like a baby, and nothing could stop it but a drop o' beer, which one or the other of us paid for, not liking to see a poor innocent put upon."

"Wonderful what a lot 'e could drink wi'out being upset, and it used to puzzle me that 'e never got drunk, till Peter Coleman, who generally reckoned 'e knowed everything, said: "Ow can a man lose his senses when 'e ain't got none?' So we left it at that, and only wished 'e wasn't so tender 'earted.

"Funny thing about 'im was 'e could read and write a little, which is more than could be said of most of us.

"The schoolmaster, when 'e 'eard it, said that no doubt the poor chap's affliction was brought on by a great shock, and that 'e was like as not to be the son of some big nobleman,, and had just roamed away and lost himself, and anybody what was kind to 'im might reckon on a big reward when his parents found 'im.

"After 'earing that it was surprising what a interest the village took in Simon, and it ended in George Trollop, the grocer, asking the simple critter to come and live with 'im, and be cared for as 'is own son. Everybody was astonished when then saw Simon walking about in a new suit 'o clothes, and 'eard what Mr. Trollop had done, knowin' him to be the carefullest man in Greenhay. But after it got about in the papers that a description of Simon Testy was in the 'found' column of all the Lunnon papers, they put two and two together and just winked at the groceryman's artfulness."

The old man drained his mug of beer and looked anxiously around for someone to replenish said mug. This matter ended to his complete satisfaction, he proceeded.

"One day a man came round with coming bills which said a conjurin' chap was coming to the Corn exchange for one night only, and everybody made up their minds to go, seein' as we 'adn't had anything of the sort in Greenhay since the circus two years before.

"The poor simple critter, 'e wanted to go, too, but Mr. Trollop was beginning to get a bit anxious about the money 'ed already spent on him, as no answers had come to his advertisements, so 'e told 'im to run away and not bother 'im. Then 'e went 'angin' round the Corn exchange asking to be let in. And the conjurin' chap, seein' 'im, thought 'e might be useful, as 'e was too simple to see how the tricks was done, so 'e asked him to go round and stand by the side o' the stage where he could see everything for nothin'. When the conjurer began the place was packed; I don't ever remember seein' the place with so many people in, in my life, and the things that chap did was marvelous to behold. Fust 'e borrowed a 'igh hat, and brought a collection o' things—a guinea pig, two rabbits, a feedin' bottle, and a bowl o' gold and silver fish. Arter that 'e cooked a pancake in it, and gave the 'at back to its owner as good as new "Then 'e did what 'e called thought readin'—told people how old they was, and 'ow much money they had in their pockets, when they was married, and a lot more that I forgets now.

"While 'e was having a bit o' a rest, the piano player gave us some music and sang us a few comic songs. Then 'e was commenced again wi some more tricks, and was going to wind up wi' a grand feat to send us 'ome mystified when summat went wrong.

"Ladies an dgentlemen, 'e began, to conclude my evening's entertainment I shall bring before you a simple country lad—next I will proceed to blindfold 'im and place 'im under my magnetic influence, during that time I will ask 'im three questions which 'e shall answer correctly to the astonishment of you all. The first question will be, count the audience in ten seconds and tell me the exact number present; the second will be, tell me what I am writing on the blackboard; the third, how much gold and silver was taken in at the door of the exchange this evening? After the questions are answered, any lady or gentleman is at liberty to prove the truth of 'is statement by calculation, and I'm willing to forfeit a hundred pounds if the young man has made an error.

"Then 'e goes behind the screen to fetch the lad, but comes back in a minute ravin' and tearin' his hair like a mad man. I've been robbed, I've been robbed, 'e shouts. Then the piano bloke starts, 'God Save the King,' and we all went out wonderin' who done it."

The old man stopped suddenly and drunk up his beer.

"If you wants to hear the end o' it," he remarked severely, "you must remember talkin' is dry work."

Once more his measure was filled, and he beamed serenely around.

"Simon was missing the next day, and that wasn't surprising, cause 'e 'appened to take the 10:15 to Lunnon the night before.

"The conjured chap come into this very 'ouse next day, and after we'd liquored 'im up a bit 'e let out 'ow 'e come to be robbed.

"It appears that to make certain of his little trick he was in the 'abit o' sending a note to 'is missus, who took the money, an' she, being ready with the answer, used to send it to 'im so that the conjurer could write it on the back of the blackboard, then all the young man had to do was to read it, seein' that it was only a bit o' muslin coverin' his eyes, and he was to have a shillin' in 'is pocket afterward to keep his mouth shut until after the show was gone. This is what the conjurer wrote to 'is wife: 'Money taken, audience roughly tonight.' What 'e meant was, 'e said, was, 'I ain't partickler as it's only a one night stand.' But the note that poor critter brought her, put her all in a flutter, and she never noticed till afterwards the bit that was put on and the bit what was taken off.

"'Send money taken, audience rough tonight.' This, she said to her husband, would have upset any woman with a big bag full of money to mind.' Fifteen pounds, I think wa sin it, but if Simon was 'ere 'e could tell you for certain."

DON'T COME HOME GROUCHY

By CARA REESE.

If the vacation delights, the experiences of travel, the new scenes and new acquaintances are going to make you a discontented grouch the minute you reach home, then you would better take down your ledger of personal income and outlay and list the whole recreation period as so much actual "loss."

Vacations are intended primarily as "profits" or benefits. An outing that foots up in the end a dissatisfaction with home life and its manifold duties and a sulky discontent with conditions and people, is time and money misspent and no benefit resulting. It is the same in the wider sense of extended travel. If such journeying far afield should lead to distaste for the responsibilities of the everyday life then again the time and cash are misspent and instead of "profit" there must be "loss" entered on the record.

There is a great deal of individual and family welfare going to smash from this very cause. A business is soon wrecked where "loss" is the chronic record. Domestic peace cannot long withstand the repeated entry of discontent as represented by the grouchy and dissatisfied returned vacationist. No, and an industrial enterprise is not going to submit long to the dictates and comparisons by the disgruntled traveled associate.

The trouble is that vacationists fail to make allowance for the circumstances of times, places and seasons. In the vacation outing the fellow traveler, or "mine host" at the inn, or the few friends and acquaintances are in vacation trim. The wardrobe is a well-selected assortment of the best from the home belongings, there is the affability of the stranger and there is the best foot forward in appointments and menu; moreover the routine cares are left behind and the humdrum daily life is cast off temporarily as a "has been."

Or again a new order seems to prevail in public or civic workings, the ideas appeal to the transient as more efficient in their exercise, there is public spirit, or a sense of thrift, or perhaps a suggestion of better advantages and larger opportunities. The stranger is carried away and fails to make intelligent comparisons. Each community or district or set of people are necessarily a law unto themselves, and as specific needs arise these are met for the public good. The stranger in the midst is not always as alert in detecting disadvantages as in accepting agreeable impressions as a sign of superiority over conditions at home.

It should be ever kept in mind during all travel and recreation that if the home coming brings discontent then the wandering and the new experiences have been in vain. Not that there should be an acquiescence particularly to disagreeable and unworthy conditions in the home environment, but travel and the larger outlook should serve to new strength how best to grapple with or to rise above such. Recreation should mean a re-creation, a benefit.

WHAT IS LOVE?

By SAMUEL DANIEL.

Love is a sickness full of woes,
All remedies refusing;
A plant that most with cutting grows,
Most barren with best using.
Why so?
More we enjoy it, more it does;
If not enjoyed, it sighing cries—
Heigh-ho!

Love is a torment of the mind,
A tempest everlasting;
And Jove hath made it of a kind
Not well, nor full, nor fasting.
Why so?
More we enjoy it, more it dies;
If not enjoyed, it sighing cries—
Heigh-ho!

SOAP MANUFACTURER KILLED BY AUTOMOBILE.

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 24.—William J. Peet, a wealthy soap manufacturer, was killed in an automobile accident ten miles south of here last night. Henry F. Long and wife and Mrs. Peet were injured in the mishap. None of them is dangerously hurt. Three of the Long children, who were riding in the car, were unhurt. The accident occurred when Mr. Peet, who was driving, turned out of the roadway for a wagon and ran into a ditch. The car overturned. Mr. Peet died two hours after the accident.

"DON'T BLAME ME, BUT THE SYSTEM," SAYS ASSESSOR

Says No Appropriation of $5,000 Was Made for Revaluation.

Declares Shartel "Statement" Mass of Inaccuracies and Unfairness.

City Assessor C. L. Rakowsky, in his report to the city council last night, declares that no appropriation of $5,000 was made for a revaluation, but that the allowance was for additional clerk hire and an extra man to examine buildings.

He stated that the "statement" of personal property valuations submitted by Alderman Shartel is so arranged as to cast the worst possible reflection upon the assessor. "It is a gem of the first water in its inaccuracies, incompleteness, misstatements and unfairness," reads the report. "Its value as a comparative statement is nil."

The assessor goes into some detail on the figures of the last assessment, and repeats in emphatic language that errors will continue to exist until there is a thorough revaluation of the city. The statement follows:

"To the President and Common Council of the City of Duluth, Minn.:

"Gentlemen: In response to your invitation to report on the 1910 real and personal property assessments, as per resolution passed by your honorable body on Aug. 8, 1910, and submitted to me, together with 'comparative statement of personal property valuations, 1909-10,' on the 12th inst., at noon. I desire to make the following statement:

"Permit me, primarily, to call your attention to the inaccuracies and unreliability of the so-called 'comparative statement.'

"1st item—'Assessed by assessor' should read 'assessed by city board.' 'Raised by county board' should read 'raised by state board.'

"2nd item—'Brewing companies.' Only three companies are represented by the figures shown; two local and one outside.

"Item of $65,230 was reduced, through application for abatement, by the county and state boards to $35,705, the latter being the revised amount and the amount upon which taxes were paid.

"3rd item—The 1910 city board's figures ($125,948) were used instead of the assessor's ($129,729), making the difference $4,000 larger than it really is.

"6th item—Item of $195,620 should read $214,435, or $18,815 more.

"The city board increased the assessor's figures on logs and lumber $220 more than the 'statement' shows, having raised the rate on lumber and not for quantity.

"The 'statement' is so arranged in each of its various particulars as to show the worst possible condition against the assessor. It is a gem of the first water in its inaccuracies, incompleteness, misstatements and unfairness. Its value as a comparative statement is nil.

"I am asked why certain decreases are made from the 1909 assessment, the comparisons being made between the 1909 state board's arbitrary figures and the 1910 assessor's and city board's figures.

State Figures Arbitrary.

"I desire to attack the state board's figures as being arbitrary, incorrect and not based on fact. The law demands that all personal property shall be assessed annually; such assessment to be based on the value of the property as of May 1 of the year in which the assessment is made. This is the basis on which the 1910 assessment was made. It was not a question as to what property was owned the previous year, but what was owned, and the value thereof, this year. If it were permissible to take the valuations of property for any previous year, then and in that case the result of the assessment would have been materially increased, but the law does not permit of any such action.

"The mere fact that the state or county board makes an arbitrary raise is no evidence that the property was not properly assessed. For instance, a piano is assessed at $100, being one-third of its actual value. The state board makes an arbitrary raise of 25 per cent on pianos, making this assessment $125. The mere fact that the state board has made this arbitrary raise does not increase the value of the piano one cent. Would the assessor be justified in using the arbitrary assessment as a basis the following year? We say no.

"What applies to the piano assessment applies to all other items of personal property which are assessed on the same basis. It has been the custom to assess personal property on a basis of 33 1-3 per cent of its actual value at the time the assessment is made.

"If a sewing machine were assessed at the same time as the piano on a basis of $30, or an assessment of $10 placed thereon, and the state board did not arbitrarily raise sewing machines, then the piano would be assessed at 41 2-3 per cent of its valuo and the sewing machine at 33 1-3 per cent of its value, thereby producing a different percentage of value for each item on the list instead of the present percentage of 33 1-3 per cent.

"Again, with reference to the statement:

"The Duluth Street Railway company was assessed by the city board, in 1909, at $673,412. In 1910 they are assessed by the assessor (the city board concurring) at $761,181, making an increaso over 1909 of $87,769. The 1910 asssessment is based on the returns of the company, duly signed and sworn to.

"Brewing Companies—Making the correction already referred to and ignoring the arbitrary raise made by the state board in 1909, reduces the difference shown from $44,261 to $11,194, accounted for by variation of stock and credits.

"Saloons and Eating House—The $139,843 includes a 10 per cent raise by the state board, which, if deducted, would leave $127,130, showing an increase, using the 1910 assessor's figures, of $2,599 instead of a decrease of $13,895 as shown by the statement.

"Pittsburg Coal Company—This company's coal on hand amounted to 17,450 tons of soft coal less than last year, which if figured at $1.50 per ton, the assessed valuation, accounts for the difference in that company's assessment. The coal was not there.

"Standard Oil Company—The state board's arbitrary raise accounts for part of the difference; the balance is accounted for by reason of the fact that the credits of 1909 were entered at full value instead of one-third thereof.

"Elevator Companies—According to the records of this office, the assessments against elevator companies for 1909 included assessment for grain handled. The 1910 assessment does not include this item for the reason that it is a special tax to be set up by the county auditor. There is to be added to the present assessment the tax on several million bushels of grain handled, which, when added, will produce taxes far in excess of the amount paid by these companies last year, providing this tax is not omitted by the county auditor.

"Retail Merchants—This item also enjoys the distinction of having been raised 10 per cent by the state board. Ignoring this raise, the proper figure is $1,052,097 for 1909. Of the difference here shown, $32,184 is covered by cancelled items; there was also $28,166 of the Street Railway company's assessment included in this item (being item 16b) last year that is assessed as 16a this year. The balance of the difference is accounted for by the fact of the depletion of stocks of merchandise in many instances.

"Wholesale Merchants—Deducting the state board's arbitrary raise of 5 per cent the correct figure is $1,171,564. The assessor's figures for 1910 are $1,196,330, showing an increase of $24,766 instead of a decrease as shown by the statement.

"Logs and Lumber—With respect to the difference in this item, it seems nonsensical to wonder thereat. Anyone, who knows anything, knows that the stock of logs and lumber on hand this year is much less than last. In addition to this, Alger, Smith & Co., last year listed 20,000,000 feet of logs located at Tower and in Cook county which were not listed this year. The city board this year raised the assessor's figures on lumber in the sum of $103,220, which amount was produced by raising the rate on No. 3 and better, and not for quantity.

The Appropriation.

"With reference to the oft repeated statement that the assessor was allowed a $5,000 additional appropriation for the purpose of revaluation, I desire to state that no such appropriation was made. The increase allowed this office was for the purpose of permitting me to employ the services of additional clerks and of an additional man to examine new buildings and assist in examining and reporting on old buildings where complaints have been made. Hundreds of such examinations have been made. We have over sixty-seven square miles of territory to cover, which territory has to be covered many times during the year. It is impossible for one man to take care of the proposition.

"Comparing the expenditures of 1910 with those of 1908 (the last year in which a real estate assessment was made) we have the following result:

Expenses from Jan. 1 to Aug. 1, 1910, $6,691.76; expenses from Jan. 1, to Aug. 1, 1908, $6,150.38; showing an apparent increase of $841.38. But when you consider the fact that the 1910 books were turned over to the county auditor in July this year absolutely complete in every particular, and that the 1908 books were turned over in August far removed from completion, it having required the services of many clerks of the auditor's office several weeks to complete them; then, as a matter of fact the actual cost this year was less than the cost for 1908. This ought to be conclusive that no moneys were expended that were not absolutely necessary to carry on the work.

Total Assessments.

Of which taxable increase, $1,107,379 is represented by —new buildings, leaving the sum of $2,076,296 as representing net taxable increase produced by raises in assessments.

"There are over 10,000 assessments for buildings, over 70,000 assessments for land and about 200 different additions and divisions in the city.

"In fixing the 1910 assessments for buildings, a sliding scale for reduction was used, according to the age of each building.

"Land values were based on the 1908 assessments as fixed by the county board, and increases were invariably made on a percentage basis. The figures governing the raises were arrived at through consultation with experts on valuations, sales prices and personal knowledge of values.

No scientific revaluation could be had, not even an approximately fair result could be obtained, but under the extremely adverse circumstances I have endeavored to be fair and impartial in my work. No class has been favored; all have been treated alike so far as it lay in my power. Errors in judgment have been made and clerical errors abound. It is the result of the system. Not until such time as sufficient funds are provided with which to make a complete, scientific revaluation will it be possible to remedy the existing conditions.

"The city board of equalization was in session several weeks awaiting the pleasure of those who considered that they were not properly assessed, and stood ready to adjust any and all discrepancies, errors or irregularities which were, or might be, called to their attention.

"This office has always stood ready and willing to make, or recommend, all such adjustments as it discovered itself or which were brought to its attention.

"I cannot see where anything extraordinary has happened to have caused such a furore. It is the same old story. The assessment is patch-work just the same as were previous assessments. Every assessment period it is getting worse and will continue as such until the proper steps are taken that will insure a complete, scientific assessment.

"As far as I am concerned I have no apology to offer save that the system was forced upon me. I have done the best I could under the circumstances. I shall stand ready at all times to render all the assistance in my power to bring about what I have been advocating ever since I took office, viz: a complete, scientific revaluation of every piece or parcel of land in the city as well as every building.

"Trusting that I have covered the subject to your satisfaction, I am,

"Very respectfully yours,
"CHARLES L. RAKOWSKY,
"City Assessor."

COUNCIL TAKES STEPS TO COMPLETE PARK SYSTEM

New Bond Issue of $50,000 for Buying Land Is Proposed.

Conference Committee Urged to Plan for New City Hall.

WHAT THE COUNCIL DID.

Heard first reading of ordinance providing for the issuance and sale of $50,000 worth of park bonds.

Recommended that a levy be made each year to raise money for a new city hall.

Asked for statement of permanent improvement revolving fund.

Allowed $28 back pay for burial expenses of William Langen.

Approved award of contract for new stack of incinerator.

Transacted other routine business.

The council last night heard the first reading of an ordinance providing for the issuance of another $50,000 worth of park bonds to secure funds with which to further complete the park system in Duluth.

The request was made by the park board, and will come up later for further discussion. It is desired to get a tract of land near Fairmont park, twenty-three lots in the West end, some additional land adjacent to Lincoln park, some property in the Fifth ward, some land with which to complete the entry to Chester park and more land at Lester park.

The bonds can be issued under special legislation passed several years ago. Duluth sold $50,000 worth about a year ago after some difficulty. The park board has used most of the money derived from the sale with which to buy playgrounds and park property.

The council recommended to the conference committee that steps be taken for a new city hall by making a small levy each year, the money to be put into a building fund until sufficient has been raised. In this way the burden would be lightened as the cost of the new building would be distributed over a number of years. With a new city hall the offices of the water and light board and the municipal court would be taken care of. At present the city is paying high rents to maintain them in other buildings.

W. S. McCormick, city comptroller, was requested to make a complete statement of the permanent improvement revolving fund from the time it started. The council wants to know where the losses which have tied up the fund this year have come in.

A resolution was passed directing that $28 due William Langer, former health inspector whose skeleton was found two miles from the Woodland car line, be paid to Flood & Horgan, undertakers, to apply towards funeral expenses.

Woodland residents sent in a communication emphasizing the necessity of immediate construction of the proposed sanitary trunk sewer. They requested that the council take steps to ascertain whether or not the sewage would contaminate the city's water supply. The matter was referred to a committee for a report.

The comptroller notified the council that he refused to sign a warrant for $8,798.52 in favor of the contractor building the sewer in Sherburne street, along Keene's creek. He stated that the cost has run up to $11,898.65 in excess of the contract bid, and that he desired directions from the council, not wishing to assume the responsibility himself. It was referred to the finance committee.

The contract for the new stack at the incinerator was awarded to Deetz & Co. for $1,550. The health commissioner reported that it would be more satisfactory than a force draught system.

Many residents in the West end requested that the council refuse a license for a junk shop to operate at 2005 West Michigan street. They alleged that it would be unsightly and become a nuisance.

The council went on record as favoring the pavement of Michigan street between Eighth and Twelfth avenues west with sandstane blocks on a concrete base. The Soo railroad will pay for part of the work, the sewer contractor who has torn up the north side will bear a share and the city will stand the balance. The work will be done by the railroad company, which has agreed to go ahead with it on the understanding that it will get its money from the city at a later date.

Notice of a personal injury claim for $5,250 against the city was filed with the council last night by John Soderblom, who alleges that his son was badly hurt through the city's negligence on Ninth avenue east between Fourth and Fifth streets. It is claimed that he stepped into a hole and sustained several fractured bones.

UNWRITTEN LAW SAVES GIRL IN NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, La. Aug. 24.—With the unwritten law as her plea, Mamie McLaughlin, 18 years old, charged with the murder of Hugh Smith, was declared not guilty by a jury which returned a verdict a few minutes after it had retired. According to the girl's story, she killed Smith because he had betrayed her.

Smith was a politician and saloonkeeper. The girl is an orphan and was supported in her trial by the Era club, an organization made up of representative New Orleans women.

CHOKED TO DEATH BY HIS HIGH COLLAR.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 24.—"Choked to death by a high collar," was the coroner's verdict when he found the body of Charles E. Thompson, a tailor on the North side, in a chair in the rear of his shop. Thompson fell asleep in the chair and when a customer went to awaken him he was dead. His face was discolored and a deep red ridge marked his neck.

DEATHBED REPENTANCE.

"While he is still convinced that the Payne-Aldrich law is the best tariff law the country has had up to this time, the president has at last reached the conclusion that there is decided room for improvement," says the latest report from Beverly.

"At last" is a fitting phrase that covers volumes. After the new tariff law has been in force for more than a year, after a series of crushing and humiliating defeats for those who supported the president in his approval of it, after the distrust it engendered had split the party asunder and practically assured the capture of the house of representatives by the Democrats, the president, writing for campaign purposes, admits that there is "decided room for improvement" in the tariff law.

Since everybody else in the country realized that when the president was affixing his signature to the tariff bill and when he was praising it and its sponsors in his Boston and Winona speeches, an utterance like this, called forth by a crisis in party affairs and by the imminence of a sharp rebuke at the polls, can hardly carry much weight.

DIVORCE WHILE YOU WAIT.

Yesterday a noted Kansas City woman filed a petition for divorce. Immediately she went before the court and secured her divorce on the ground of "incompatibility of temperament," the decree being signed ten minutes after the filing of the petition. The only testimony offered was that of the plaintiff and her maid.

A state which grants divorces for "incompatibiltiy of temperament" should cast no stones at Reno or Sioux Falls. It would be hard to find two people on earth who couldn't find excuses for declaring that their temperaments didn't fit each other. A tiff over the weight of the rolls at breakfast, a spat over buttoning up the lady's dress in the back just before theater-time, a row over the pattern of the dining room wallpaper—any of these and a thousand other trifles might be twisted into evidence of incompatibility.

A divorce granted in ten minutes, on the ground of "incompatibility of temperament," on the testimony only of the complainant and her servant, is no credit to Missouri. On the other hand, it makes South Dakota and Nevada look like Puritan communities.

TAKING A STAND.

In beginning his tour of the country, Col. Roosevelt also began his participation in the New York conflict within the Republican party, and he lined himself up on the progressive side and against the "old guard" which has kept the Republican party in New York faithful to Special Privilege, doing it with his oldtime vigor.

Maybe there is in this stand an element of pique over the foolhardy act of the "old guard" in rejecting him for the temporary chairmanship of the state convention, but it is fair to say that if the president is piqued, his irritation is only a contributing cause. It is merely a spur to his natural inclination. May he bring ruin upon the phalanx of the "old guard," and rout its forces in a crushing defeat.

THE MEANING OF BETTER ROADS.

There is an embarrassment of riches for those who seek arguments in behalf of the good roads movement. Bad roads mean high taxes, higher prices for consumers, lower prices for producers—a world of waste that can be remedied by the simple device of building good roads.

In Northern Minnesota the need and the value of good roads are peculiarly clear. They are the key to an empire. Millions of acres of rich soil, ready to yield wealth to the nation and to its tillers, lie waiting the time when good roads shall make it possible to get their products to market.

L. W. Page, director of the division of public roads in the department of agriculture, contributes to the National Grange an interesting paper following out a single line of the many divisions of the argument for good roads. Good roads mean better schools. That is the burden of his argument, and it is a sound one.

Says Mr. Page: "Good roads would revolutionize our country schools. Contrast the lot of the country child on his way to school in winter with that of the city child, with only a few blocks of paved streets to walk. Our country child, with satchel over shoulders and lunch basket in hand, must leave the cheerful fireside of home from half an hour to an hour before school opens in order to be there on time. The roads are wet and muddy many months of the year. The country is open and the cold winds are unmerciful. So that, by the time he reaches the schoolhouse, which is often unscientifically ventilated and poorly heated, his feet are so cold and his body so chilled that he is unfit for study or recitation most of the day, and the exposure and chilling of the body invite pneumonia and other diseases. These conditons cause broken and irregular attendance. They create an aversion in the child for the schoolroom instead of a pride in punctual attendance."

This true picture merely opens the vista of possibilities in good roads. They would not only ease the burdens of country school children with schools as they are, but they would make possible a new system of consolidated rural schools, which would insure better schools at less cost. With good roads over which the pupils could be transported at public expense, half a dozen small, ill-equipped schools could give place to one large, well-equipped school with proper facilities for argicultural and domestic science education. There could be graded schools in all of the rural districts. Larger schools, a more competent teaching force, and all the modern facilities could be provided where now they are impossible. Such steps are already being taken in many sections where the roads will permit it.

Nor is that the end of the social side of good roads. The consolidated rural schools can be made social, religious, political and intellectual centers. Country churches and meeting halls can be grouped about the school center. Church attendance would be stimulated, and it would be possible to arrange lectures, entertainments, debates and social gatherings.

A wise combination of good roads and the consolidated rural school idea can be made to work vast benefit in the social improvement of country life, and that, in its turn, would work to encourage the movement from the cities back to the land.

A NEW CITY HALL.

It is time to begin considering ways and means of building a new city hall, even though the completion of the structure may be several years in the future, and the city council took timely action last evening when it adopted a resolution calling on the conference committee to look into the matter.

First a site must be bought. The site is selected, and it is being held for the city by the county, which probably have no objection to holding it a reasonable time providing it is assured of the city's intention to buy it. The property at the northwest corner of First street and Fourth avenue west is increasing in value constantly, which tends to warrant the county in holding it and the city to make arrangements for its purchase as soon as possible.

Probably the city, just at present, is not in a position to buy the site and go ahead with the building of a new city hall; but a start is necessary some time, and certainly the time has come when the city should be looking about for a way to make that start.

Maybe the city can't levy a tax this year to buy the new city hall site, but it can make its plans for purchase and construction, giving itself plenty of time so that the burden of expense may be distributed over a period long enough to make it comfortable. Certainly there never will be a new city hall unless a start toward it is made.

THE DISCREDITED SERVANT.

Once upon a time a rich and rapacious baron employed a seneschal, or bailiff, who served his greedy master so zealously that he gained the hatred of the people.

The bailiff's chief fault was his loyalty to his overlord. So staunch was he in his devotion to his lord's interests that no oppression, no cruelty, no scheme of plunder and rapine was too shameful for him to undertake if it promised profit to his master.

So oppressive was his rule that the people often forgot that he was working for his master, not for himself, and they gave him a measure of hatred so full that there was little left for the chief criminal—the master in whose interest these iniquities were done.

The baron's household was abject in its obedience to the bailiff. He represented the baron's power, and he was the baron's trusted servant and close friend. They might envy him his position, or hate him for his power, but they dared not let any evidence of their state of mind appear in their acts. On the other hand, he was powerful with the baron as well as over the people, so it was worth while to cultivate his consideration. In fact it was practically impossible to get anything without his approval, so completely did the baron leave the management of affairs to him. So the baron's household fawned upon the bailiff, praised him, flattered him, consulted him, treated him as though he were the sum of all human wisdom and grace.

But the people murmured more and more. Groaning under the bailiff's oppression, they had little to lose and everything to gain by revolt. Yet revolt was dangerous business, and only after many years of shameful oppression did it become menacing. But by and by the people got to hate the bailiff so that the baron realized that if he retained him longer the threatened revolt would surely come. Though he valued the bailiff's services he saw that he must get rid of him. His very loyalty had made him too dangerous a servant to keep.

When word went forth that the wicked bailiff had been deposed, there was great rejoicing among the people, and a great change of attitude in the baron's household. One day there was no man there who dared to face down the stern old bailiff. Next day there was none so poor as to do him reverence. They jeered at him as he passed out, shorn of his power and no longer a thing to fear. They said that they always had distrusted him, and that they always had known that he was no man for the place.

In the meantime the baron had picked a new bailiff who, he was sure, would do the same things the deposed bailiff did, but who hadn't yet earned the people's hatred.

The application of this story will be found in the current news which tells us that the System has decreed that Speaker Cannon must go, and that many Republican congressmen, former henchman of the boss of the house, are coming out openly to declare that they are against Cannon for speaker.

THE PRICE OF PAINT.

A penetrating review of the flaxseed, linseed oil and paint situation in The Herald last night showed that paint prices are mounting rapidly, that this is because linseed oil has gone up, and that linseed oil is high because flaxseed, from which it is made, has reached price altitudes hitherto unheard of.

The analysis went farther than that. Evidence was produced to show that flaxseed is high not only because of a short crop, but because of the effect of "short selling" in which the producers, rather than the professional market manipulators, seem to have been most active.

"Short selling" is selling some thing you haven't got in the hope that later on you can buy it for delivery cheaper than you could when you made the deal, thus making a profit by what is practically nothing but a settlement on the basis of difference in prices. The legitimacy of such operations always has been questionable. When it results in hardship it is likely to open up the question whether society can afford to permit such artificial manipulations of the prices of the necessaries of life.

THE OPEN COURT.

(Readers of The Herald are invited to make free use of this column to express their ideas about the topics of general interest. Letters should not exceed 300 words—the shorter the better. They must be written on one side of the paper only, and they must be accompanied in every case by the name and address of the writer, though these need not be published. A signed letter is always more effective, however.)

TARIFF NOT NEEDED.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Your readers have expressed themselves in reference to the protective tariff lately.

I note from some of your articles that although wages are higher here than in other countries, the actual price per article on some products protected by a high tariff is much smaller as far as labor is concerned.

It impresses me that the freight upon goods from Europe and the commission charged by parties handling the goods, the loading, unloading and extra drayage, etc., should be enough to protect us against the European market, while the Canadian market ought to be about the same.

HEMLOCK FOUND NEAR BROOKSTON.

To the Editor of The Herald:

It was with much interest that I read the communication of W J. Stymiest in the Open Court of last Thursday evening regarding his discovery of a hemlock log in his locality near Knife River. I was not aware that hemlocks were such a great novelty in this portion of the state, where almost everything can be found. It is three years last winter that Mr. Bradbury, assistant superintendent of logging on the Fond du Lac reservation, made the statement that several hemlock trees had been found by him near Brookston. Since then I have seen several in this vicinity. Yours truly,

A BROOKSTONITE.

The Jettisoning of the Jonahs.

It was the good ship G. O. P.—
(I've told you of her before)—
And still she sailed on the raging sea
And struggled to reach the shore;
But fiercer and fiercer grew the storm,
And blacker the wind clouds lowered,
Till some of us cried, in wild alarm,
"A Jonah we've got aboard!"

Then the Captain mustered the grizzled crew
And he carefully looked 'em o'er;
There were tried old tars that the Captain knew,
Who'd sailed on the voyage before.
And he said, said he, "Well, it's blowed I'll be
If a Jonah I can perceive"—
When up steps the Mate, and "Avast!" says he,
As he tugged at the Captain's sleeve

"Oh, Cap'," says he, "you are gettin' blind,
And you have'nt got sense no more;
There's a Jonah on board all right, you'll find,
And not only one, but four!
I swear by the tides of Oyster Bay
I'll point 'em to you, no fail—
There's Ballinger, aye and Cannon, too,
And Aldrich, and likewise Hale!"

Then the Captain suddenly saw the light,
And he ordered a plank run out,
And up on the deck, at dead of night,
We silently grouped about;
And the Captain, he says, "It may seem rank,
My boys, for to treat you thus,
But I reckon you'll have to walk the plank
For the sake of the rest of us!"

And the moon turned pale, and the stars they cried,
And the rest of us had to weep,
As the four walked o'er the vessel's side
And never let out a peep.
An' now we're buckin' again' the gale,
An' we're sailin, to reach the shore,
But Ballinger, Aldrich, Cannon, Hale—
They'll never come back no more!
—Paul West in New York World.

La Follette.

Collier's: A genuine leader not infrequently must wait long for vindication. Thousands of cautious citizens, who now stand on important questions where Senator La Follette stood a decade and more ago, then looked upon him as one whom they would have called "unsound." But La Follette was much sounder, on the whole, than the rest of us, in his financial and social theories, and very much sounder in his personal and ethical composition. The taste for luxury never tainted him. Money has never even remotely influenced his mind, and within these few months he has taught the senate and the country a lesson in the proper spirit of a legislator whose own interests are affected by his vote. Years ago he urged regulation by commission, long before any popularity attached to the idea. Years ago he fought for physical valuation of railroads, a measure to which most reasonable men are converted now. He was one of the first to realize that government by corporations is not self government. No measure ever had his support or opposition, save for considerations of the general welfare. In his present office he has been the very terror of the senate. When he entered that august and crooked hall, it was freely predicted that he would be chloroformed within a year. Aldrich, whose personal gain from political corruption Bristow has recently made clear, has been quietly devoting his power to the defeat of La Follette for re-election, and the president, to his shame be it said, is enlisted in the same unholy cause. We believe the political oligarchy will be unable to control the proud independence of Wisconsin. All his life he has honorably, independently, successfully fought the people's fight. To Aristides were, by his countrymen, applied these words of Aeschylus:

"For not at seeming just, but being so He aims."

The lifelong sincerity of La Follette deserves as high a praise.

The Killing Pace.

Through all the year he toils away
And saves a little day by day,
Through self-denial;
His fingers are bedaubed with ink,
And often he has cause to think
That life's a trial.

He sadly turns from pleasures which
Are only for the idle rich
And for the lucky;
He might sometimes bewail his lot
To her who shares it, were he not Almighty plucky.

His hours are long, he finds it hard
To win his fellow man's regard,
Without some splurging;
He's idle only when he sleeps;
Necessity ignobly keeps Forever urging.

His trousers sag around the knees,
His whiskers flutter in the breeze,
His look is seedy;
He always wears a last year's hat,
His general make-up is that
Shown by the needy.

He might sometimes have peace of mind
And sweet contentment gladly find,
Freed from his labors,
If he could get his wife to try
To quit endeavoring to vie
With their rich neighbors.
—S. E. Kiser in Chicago Record-Herald.

Wanted More.

Lippincott's: A hypochondriac friend of a Nantasket man, who was visiting the latter's place on the coast of Massachusetts, imagined that he was deriving some benefit by reason of the sea water he was drinking.

One day, as the two strolled along the beach, the hypochondriac said to his friend:

"Dick, this sea water is really helping my dyspepsia. I've already taken two glasses of it this morning. Do you think I might take a third?"

"Well," returned the friend, with a gravity equal to that of his friend, "I don't think a third would be missed, Tom."

FOR NORTHERN MINNESOTA.

Too Late After Primaries.

Foley Independent: Now is the time to go after the various legislative candidates to find out how they stand upon reapportionment and state development. After the primaries it will be too late.

Chair of Good Roads.

Ortonville Herald-Star: When our state university establishes a chair of good roads the despised office of highway overseer, or road boss, will take on new dignity and importance.

Of Course She Will.

Aitkin Independent: Will Aitkin county join the Northern Minnesota Development association and identify itself with the work being carried on by that organization for the development of this section of the state? It appears to the Independent that our people have been singularly apathetic in this matter and that the conferences at Bemidji and Crookston ought to have been attended by Aitkin county boosters, the reputation of this county for progressiveness upheld, and her voice heard in the councils. But it is yet time to get into the movement. A meeting is to be held in Brainerd in December to formulate plans for a campaign in the legislature for legislation providing for reapportionment, the taxation of state lands for a fair share of the cost of building roads and schools so that settlement may be made possible. Thirty-one counties are interested and $3,000 must be raised for the necessary expenses of the association. Will Aitkin county do her share?

Tragedies on the Farm.

Walker Pilot: With milk now selling for 8 cents a quart in the cities, no wonder there's a tragedy on the farm every time the cow kicks over the milk pail.

Pledge Every Candidate.

Two Harbors Journal-News: Every candidate for the legislature from Northern Minnesota in order to get votes should be pledged to reapportionment and to work for the passage of a law taxing state lands for road building purposes. It is neither right nor just that the burden of increasing the value of state lands by building roads should fall upon the pioneers of our unsettled districts.

Got Any Potatoes?

Brainerd Dispatch: Potatoes are climbing up the ladder along with other necessaries of life, and the man with a good crop of tubers this fall will be able to wear diamonds or take a trip abroad.

Boosting Means Prosperity.

Stillwater Gazette: The Northern Minnesota Development association, with headquarters at Bemidji, is in the boosting game, which, if carried to successful termination, means prosperity for our state.

Advertising Pope County.

Glenwood Herald: A county with rich soil and other advantages for making a living should be advertised. Advertising is what creates demand for land and raises the price of land. The best way of advertising a county is to exhibit its products at some place where many people congregate. The state fair and the county fair are such places. Pope county deserves advertising. The natural conclusion is that every farmer should first send something to the state fair, second to the county fair. Every farmer should make a special effort to have something a little better than some one else that he could exhibit at the county fair. You may have something that is better than that of any one else and you do not know it and will not know it until you bring it to the fair where it can be compared with what others produce.

Farmer Gets Along.

Shevlin Herald: The farmer who owns a farm in Clearwater county is the particular person who is well fixed. Banks may fail and factories close, workmen strike and mines suspend merchants fail and city burn, times may be panicky and even crops may be short—but the farmer who owns his acres will get along. He will live in comfort and quiet, with plenty to eat, drink, wear, and nothing to worry about Yet there are lots of them here in this clear-water soil who do not appreciate their situation.

The Press and Good Government.

Atlanta Constitution: Stressing the fact that, at the ultimate analysis, the unremitting publicity afforded by the newspaper is the mainstay of good government everywhere, the Haverhill (Mass.) Gazette thus comments upon recent exemplifications of the principle:

In a recent issue of the Forum, Julius Chambers offers a comment on the Des Moines situation of much wider application than he makes. Mr. Chambers says:

"In Des Moines the mayor and commissioners rely upon the local press to keep every department active and clean. Every branch of city administration is an open book to the reporters, and they are encouraged to investigate constantly. The press and citizens lean on each other. Mutually they assist the mayor and his council. Warfare does not exist between the press and the public officials. They work together. I am assured by a student of the Des Moines experiment that not a sinecurist exists in the municipal machinery. If an incompetent has been inherited from past history, the mayor thanks the press for pointing out the dereliction."

The newspapers and city administration everywhere should work together in the only relationship permissible for the public good, that of service on the one hand, and absolute frank publicly on the other. The centralized government plan, like any other plan of direct popular government, is succeeding very largely in the degree that publicity is fixing responsibility.

An overwhelming proof of these assertions is offered in the relation of publicity to the Roosevelt administration.

Had it not been for the detailed and intelligent handling the press, almost without regard to partisan distinction, gave to the preachments of the former president, the nation would not have undergone a marvelous era in which the public conscience was quickened to an extent even now visible.

We use that illustration because it is of recent date and plain enough to impress the most casual observer.

Numerous other instances of the safeguarding functions of the press, in city, state and nation, intrude themselves every day upon the attention of the thoughtful.

If the rascal and incompetent is driven out of public life, it is because the publicity of the newspaper makes it impossible for him to maintain his station.

If good men and able are sustained against the attacks of malice or private interests, credit again is due to the vigilance and conscientiousness of the newspaper, acting in common with the quick response of the public.

It is noteworthy, also, that this almost incalculable power is seldom abused, or at least, it is not abused with persistence. For, should the vernal newspaper seek to deceive the public, there are a dozen other honest papers to warn the people and circumscribe the influence of the erring brother.

It is, as a matter of fact, doubtful if what we call democratic government would be a possibility without the strong sustaining arm of twentieth century publicity.

And wherever, as in Russia or other backward countries, the influence of the press is limited, there also is either stagnation or anarchy.

The Noble Nature.

It is not growing like a tree
In bulk doth make man better be;
Or standing long on oak, three hundred year,
To fall a log at last, dry, bald and sear;
A lily of a day
Is fairer far in May,
Although it fall and die that night,
It was the plant and flower of light.
In small proportions we just beauties see;
And in short measure life may perfect be.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

Taken From the Columns of The Herald of This Date, 1890.

W. C. Dickinson, a gentleman who probably has built more towns than any other man in the country, is visiting G. G. Barnum and spending a few days looking over his home of fifteen years ago. Mr. Dickinson used to live on Fourth avenue east, when he could purchase three lots near that section for $600, where today they are worth $150 a front foot. "I came here in the early 70s," said Mr. Dickinson, "and found a lonely little place of 3,000 people. Then came Jay Cooke's failure and the times of depression. At that time there was no canal, and we did our business through Superior in winter and on the lake dock in summer."

The Eastern Minnesota is arranging for work on the extension of its Duluth terminals, and Chief Engineer Miller of the Great Northern road is in the city today for that purpose. Fills will be made and new tracks laid on Rice's Point, where the company owns a strip of land 120 feet wide, extending nearly its whole length.

Lee Ettenger has returned to Duluth accompanied by Mrs. Ettenger. They will make their home at Lakeside at present.

J. B. Stone of Grand Rapids who left Duluth for that city four years ago, returned for a short stay and is shaking hands with his many friends.

John H. Harris and Miss Betta Foote were married last week at the home of the bride's aunt at Lockport, N. Y. Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Harris and daughter were present at the wedding.

Mrs. Fred S. Wardwell of East Second street has returned from a trip to the East.

A MOMENT WITH THE WITS.

Judge: Knicker—Are you swept by ocean breezes?

Bocker—Yes, and dusted by land ones.

Puck: "What are those floating tables?"

"Great scheme on the part of the management. They've fixed it so you can play bridge in the surf."

New York Sun: The Ancient Mariner wept.

"Water, water everywhere, and I forgot to water the plants," he cried. Trembling, he feared to face his wife.

Birmingham Age-Herald: "What do you do when a tire bursts, Cholly?"

"Aw, I light a cigawette."

Philadelphia Record: Tommy—Pop, what does multum in parvo mean?

Tommy's Pop—Multum in parvo is Latin, my son. It means—er—well, haven't you ever seen a fat woman in a bathing suit?

Boston Transcript: Sapleigh—Ah, speaking of electricity, that makes me think—

Miss Keen—Really, Mr. Sapleigh! Isn't it remarkable what electricity can do?

Pittsburg Post: "Will you love me always?" murmured the girl.

"Certainly, if you wish it," responded the young man. "But I'll be down here only two weeks."

Kansas City Times: "I see you have an actor employed on the farm."

"Yes, I put him on. He's a darn good actor, too. I thought he was working the first week he was here."

Scraps: One evening at tea little Tommy said to his grandmother: "Grandma, do your glasses make things look bigger?"

"Yes, dear," said grandma. "Why?"

"Oh," said Tommy, "I only thought if they did, maybe you'd take 'em off when you're cutting my piece of cake."

Louisville Courier-Journal: Figg—Talking about pugilism and state laws, did you ever notice it?

Fogg—Ever notice what?

Figg—That there's no law to prevent fighting in the state of matrimony.

Chicago News: Hyker—Joblott is an exceedingly kind-hearted chap.

Pyker—Is that so?

Hyker—Yes. Only last week he had his dog's tail cut off for fear he might accidentally step on it some day.

Turn On the Light.

While they're looking for an issue
There is one that's right at hand
And right in sight,
And it's just the kind of issue
For which honest men can stand—
Turn on the light!
Where does the people's money go?
And other things we'd like to know,
Investigation ought to show—
Turn on the light!

Every congress votes a billion;
Yes, but what becomes of it?
And is it right
That we spend a thousand million
And still have a deficit?
Turn on the light!
It's time the people had a look,
It's time that every public crook
And derelict be brought to book—
Turn on the light!

While the daily cost of living
Has kept going up until
It's out of sight,
Willing tools to trusts are giving
Leave to do just as they will—
Turn on the light!
There is a way to check the greed
Of all that foul, predacious breed,
And this the first and greatest need:
Turn on the light!
—Richard Linthieum in Kansas City Post.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: A strait-jacket is the best aid to self-control for most people.

A girl will refuse a man and still want to hold an option on him.

A man will seem to be able to run faster and longer after a public job than after salvation.

When a girl will take her mother's advice against a man, it's a sign she doesn't like him anyhow.

No Time Like the Old Time.

There is no time like the old time, when you and I were young,
When the buds of April blossomed and the birds of springtime sung:
The garden's brightest glories by summer suns are nursed,
But oh, the sweet, sweet violets, the flowers that opened first!

There is no place like the old place, where you and I were born,
Where we lifted first our eyelids on the splendor of the morn
From the milk-white breast that warmed us, from the clinging arms that bore,
Where the dear eyes glistened o'er us, that will look on us no more!

There is no friend like the old friend, who has shared our moning days,
No greeting like his welcome, no homage like his praise;
Fame is the scentless sunflower, with gaudy harp of gold,
But friendship is the breathing rose, with sweets in every fold.

There is no love like the old love, that we courted in our pride;
Though our leaves are falling, falling, and we're fading side by side,
There are blossoms all around us with the colors of the dawn,
And we live in borrowed sunshine when the day star is withdrawn.

There are no times like the old times; they shall never be forgot!
There is no place like the old place—keep green the dear old spot!
There are no friends like the old friends—may heaven prolong their lives;
There are no loves like the old loves—God bless our loving wives!
—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

His Lucky Escape.

Pittsburg Gazette-Times: "Thank heaven!" exclaimed a man watching the ticker tape mark the fall of stocks.

"Are you short of the market?" asked a man, dripping with the perspiration of heat, humidity and excitement.

"Oh, no."

"Did you get out in time, then?"

"Oh, no."

"What are you so thankful about then?"

"Why, they broke me, but if I'd had any more money they would have broken me more!"

WOMAN.

By David R. Locke (Petroleum V. Nasby): My experience in New York, Washington and Trenton shook my faith in woman somewhat. I discovered that women can be wicked, and when they are wicked, they are very wicked. I found that they are not all truthful; and that when they set out to lie, they do it with an ease, a grace, a smoothness that sugar-coats the most audacious falsification, and makes it go down as easily as the sweetest truth. I found them horribly insincere in everything relating to the stronger sex. They would flirt and trifle with them, and I never heard but one who even condemned the practice, and her condemnation, severe as it was, did not count when I cited it, for she was 39 and had had smallpox, and cross-eyes, and wore a wig, and was thin and angular, and had freckles and very sandy hair, and her nose turned up, and her teeth were bad, and she didn't know how to dress, and had large feet, and very large bony hands, and a stoop in her shoulers, and some other defects in her person unnecessary to enumerate, as from what I have said regarding her you may infer that she was not the belle of her native village.

She protested vehemently against this thing of ensnaring young men, and when they had lost all control of themselves in their adoration, of casting them off heartlessly. She had never done it, nor never would—she had always blasted their budding hopes at the beginning. When I repeated this noble resolution to a bevy of girls, dressed artlessly in ringlets and white muslin, they winked at each other and tittered. The noble example I set before them did not produce the effect I hoped.

I found them vain. I knew women between the ages of 18 and 24 who habitually consumed four hours each day in adorning their persons, that they might enjoy the ecstacy of half an hour's promenade to show their feathers. They never returned in good humor—they were invariably disappointed. If there should be no crowd, they always encountered some woman arrayed still more gorgeously, which was poison. Then again, they lack judgment as to the men upon whom to lavish their admiration. They esteem appearance and pretension more than they do real manly beauty and intellect. I have known them to pass me by with the merest and coldest nod, and blossom out all over with smiles at the approach of a fop whose mustache was like a baseball club, nine on a side, and whose other points were as weak as his mustache.

When Aldrich Sneers.

Kansas City Times: Strangely enough, this little group of men—very small in number—has arrogated to itself the leadership of the progressives, and its members prate about the treatment of the tariff as a moral question. —Senator Aldrich.

Yet the formal statement made by Senator Aldrich in answer to Senator Bristow, and in which this sneer at the insurgents is found, acknowledged, by his own act in making this statement, that the tariff is a moral issue.

For the Bristow assault on Aldrich was on moral grounds—on the spectacle of a beneficiary of the tariff, surrounded by other beneficiaries and influenced by them, deliberately manipulating the schedules for the enrichment of himself, his son and his financial associates. There was a time when that spectacle would have outraged the public sense of decency; for protection has been developed from a revenue and industrial device to a grafting system by this very means of manipulation by the direct beneficiaries.

But the country is wiser now, and its conscience is more sensitive. The awakening is due fundamentally to the Roosevelt doctrine of the square deal. That doctrine cannot be lived up to by a people or a government that permits a few favored interests to prey on the masses through the medium of protective duties named by the beneficiaries themselves. The country now demands that the tariff, whether protective or for revenue only, shall be determined by disinterested experts, not by interested trusts.

The tariff is an economic issue, but its importance as a moral issue is still greater, more fundamental, more essential to the spirit of a republic.

Chinamen Plead Guilty.

Four of the Chinamen arrested in a midnight raid at 18 West First street, recently, entered pleas of guilty to gambling in police court today. They paid fines of $15 and costs each. Those admitting the allegation were Charles Lee, John Lee, Tin Lung and Lee Teo. The cases against the others charged with gambling were dismissed. Those accused of engaging in a lottery will be in court later.

Two Charges Against Woman.

Susie Hill and Gust Nieml were arrested last evening on statutory charges. The woman was also charged with begging on the street. She had a book with the written notice that she was collecting funds for a sister-in-law who was down with consumption and had a family of five children in Michigan. They denied the statutory allegations, but she admitted that she had been begging. The disposition of their cases was put over until Friday afternoon.

R. W. Higgins, who found himself at "Wonderland" last night the possessor of a white elephant in the shape of a "slippery slide," turned the affair back to the King's Daughters to make such disposition of it as they wished. They, in turn, presented the slide to the Newsboys' club of the West end and the club will be able to make more use of it than could Mr. Higgins, even at the sacrifice of dignity.

"Throw Out The Life Line"

A fond and loving mother in Des Moines, whose son was cured by the Neal three day cure, writing to Senator Bruce, Atlantic, Iowa, says:

"You threw out the life line to my boy Roy, and we are all glad beyond expression. Now he is my own dear boy the same as he was twenty-five years ago. God has heard my prayer, tht he might stop drinking, and I am happy. May God's richest blessings rest on you and yours for using money in such a good way to help the fallen man and restore him to his family sound and well and sober.

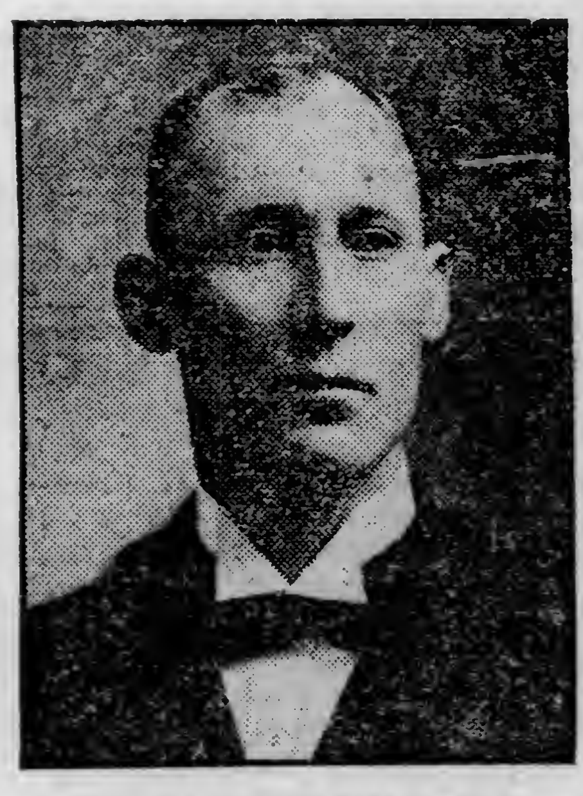
POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

JUDGE J. B. MIDDLECOFF



Permit me to state that I am a candidate on the Republican ticket for renomination, at the primaries to be held on September 20th, and for election to the office which I now hold.

The office is considered one of the most important in the county and I have used my best efforts to bring it up to the high standard which it now has. I have made a specialty of the subject of the estates of the widows and the unfortunates and have become acquainted with the business and professional men in almost every district in the county, which information is very valuable to the administration of the office, as it has to do entirely with property rights, appraisals and sales of property, and the continuous examination of the many bonds filed for the protection of the estates.

The jurisdiction of this court includes the estates of deceased persons, the admission of wills to probate, the appointment of guardians for minors and incompetent persons, the examination and commitment of the insane and the hearing and allowing of all claims against estates of deceased persons and minors.

The appraised value of the real and personal property that came into the Probate Court from June, 1909 to June, 1910, is as follows:

Real property	$1,030,690.66
Personal property	1,272,715.80
Total	$2,303,406.46
The claims heard and allowed against estates during the same period of time (claims disallowed not estimated) amounted to the sum of	$100,617.62
The amount of tax collected under the inheritance tax law and paid into the County Treasury during the last two years is the sum of	$42,218.67

I cannot see every voter personally during the campaign, but wish to thank you for your support in the past and assure you that if I am reelected I will give to the office all of my time and careful consideration, the same as I have always done, and see that all business receives prompt and careful attention.

DECLINE IN WEAK MARKET

All Issues Suffer in Furious Raid on Copper Shares.

The copper market was nervous and erratic today and trading was dull except in the specialties. The market held up fairly well until noon when recessions became general along the entire list and the decline was swift. At the close there was a slight reaction but the net loss in values was from one to two points for the leaders and fractional losses for the low priced issues. The market was weaker than at any time in several weeks. The weakness was more pronounced on account of the strength which developed in a few specialties.

Indiana and Isle Royale were the features of the market. Indiana reported that No. 7 drill at 1,190 feet and No. 9 drill at 890 feet have passed through a two-foot seam of rich copper of the same quality as that encountered by the No. 2 drill. Indiana was heavily bought and advanced from $18.50 to $19. Isle Royale cut the Baltic or Superior lode in "A" shaft and the showing is considered encouraging by officials of the company who say they have found what they have been searching for during the last four years. Isle Royale sold at $18.50 to $20.87½ to $20.50.

The strength in these specialties did not help the market when it started on its sharp decline after noon. The swift recession was caused chiefly by the uncovering of a batch of stop-loss orders on the decline. Some support appeared at the close.

Efforts to bull the stock market are not being tried as such attempts would be futile in the face of present conditions, most people believe. The leading interests are not manifesting any desire to get into the market and there is no concentrated movement to boost values. The public is holding aloof from the market and does not seem to evince any desire to speculate nor is the investment demand of normal proportions. The people appear to have plenty of money as the immense imports into the country indicate but Wall street is not getting any of it and Wall street can't make up its mind as to the reason.

The political situation is causing some apprehension among traders. The defeat of two Cannon congressmen in the Georgia primaries yesterday was another indication of the political upheaval that seems to be impending, a situation that is making the big interests extremely cautious about entering the market. The red metal situation is moderately good compared with other market factors, but it is unable to weigh against the pressure of other bearish factors. Thompson, Towle & Co. declare that there is an understanding among the big copper interests of this country and the leading foreign producers to curtail production, and that the output is being cut down 15 per cent. The firm says that the mines of this country are producing 20,000,000 pounds of copper less per month than their normal output.

Calumet & Arizona declared a dividend of $1 today on stock of record Sept. 2, payable Sept. 19. The quarterly meeting was held at Calumet today. Quincy declared a disbursement of $1.25 to stockholders.

Trading was light here and there was little public interest in the market. Amazon sold at $3; Butte & Superior at $10; Calumet & Montana at $1; Keating at 84c; Mowitza at 80c; Butte Alex-Scott full paid at $6.25; Butte-Ballaklava at $8.87½ to $8.37½, and Shattuck at $23.

In the East, Butte-Ballaklava sold at $8.50 to $8.12½; Amalgamated, $18.75 to $19 to $18.75; Giroux at $6.75 to $6.50; Greene at $7.50 to $7.25; North Butte at $28.50 to $29 to $27.62½; Superior & Pitsburg at $11.62½ to $12.25 to $12; Ojibway at $6.25 to $5.87½.

SHERIFF NEEDS NO WARRANTS

Attorney General Says Failure to Arrest Constitutes Neglect of Duty.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Any Minnesota sheriff who fails to stop or prevent violation of the law can be removed from his office by the governor for neglect of duty, according to a decision made today by Attorney General Simpson.

The decision was called for by Governor Eberhart on account of numerous complaints that have come to his office regarding law violations. Four such complaints have been filed in the last week, one from International Falls.

In his opinion the attorney general says that it is the duty of the sheriffs of the state not only to apprehend and jail those who have committed crimes, but "to prevent the violation of law, whether as to the sale of intoxicating liquor or otherwise," and failure to serve a process or failure to preserve the peace is ground for his removal from office.

"It is not enough," he says, "for a sheriff to plead that no complaint has been made to him with regard to the alleged violation of law, or that no warrant has been placed in his hands for service. * * When complaint is made to him that a law is about to be violated, or he has reason to believe that the peace of the county is about to be broken, a duty rests on the sheriff to conserve the peace, and for that purpose he may call to his aid as many of the citizens of the county as may be necessary."

MERRITT CASE IS DISMISSED

The suit against Martin Rosendahl by Fred Merritt, a former stock broker of this city, for approximately $100,000 has been dismissed in the district court. Merritt claimed that Rosendahl refused to accept delivery of stock that Merritt said he bought for Rosendahl. The suit was dismissed without costs to either litigant.

RAIN

Although the weather was threatening, the promised rain did not fall last evening and threats are held out again today by the overcast sky. The highest temperature in Duluth yesterday was 62 deg., which was decidedly comfortable, although Alberta had cold storage weather with 42 deg as the highest temperature at Calgary. The weather man qualifies his rain prediction for tonight with "probably."

Showers fell a year ago today.

The sun rose this morning at 5:17 and it will set at 7:04, giving thirteen hours and forty-seven minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"A trough of low pressure extends from Wisconsin across Iowa to Western Kansas. During the last twenty-four hours this disturbance caused light showers in Alberta, Saskatchewan, Montana, Colorado, Kansas, Missouri, South Carolina and Florida, and continued high temperature over Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah and Nevada. Much cooler weather attends a strong high pressure area which overlies Alberta and Montana. Temperatures slightly above the freezing point prevail in Southwestern Montana. The easterly movement of the Iowa-Kansas low pressure condition will probably cause scattered showers at the Head of the Lakes during the ensuing thirty-six hours."

General Forecasts.

Chicago, Aug. 24.—Forecasts for twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m. Thursday:

Upper Michigan—Unsettled weather with probable showers tonight or Thursday; cooler.

Wisconsin—Cloudy, probably showers tonight or Thursday; cooler.

Minnesota—Partly cloudy with showers in southeast portion tonight or Thursday.

Iowa—Unsettled, probably showers tonight or Thursday; cooler.

MRS. CUDAHY GETS DIVORCE

Is Given $1 Alimony and Children Go to Their Grandparents.

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 24.—As a sequel to John P. (Jack) Cudahy's attack upon Jere S. Lillis in the Cudahy residence shortly after midnight of March 5 last, Mrs. Cudahy has obtained a divorce from her husband. The decree was granted yesterday by Judge James H. Slover on the grounds of incompatibility of temperament, ten minutes after Mrs. Cudahy had filed her petition. Mrs. Cudahy and her maid, Elizabeth Johnson, were the only witnesses. No mention was made of the Lillis affair.

Cudahy was not in court. He is said to have been in town, and attorneys represented him at the hearing, but they made no protest at the decree. It is understood that Gen. John C. Cowin of Omaha, father of Mrs. Cudahy and Michael Cudahy, the defendant's father, brought about an amicable settlement outside of court.

Alimony of One Dollar.

By the terms of the decree, Mrs. Cudahy receives alimony of $1. Attorneys for both sides refused to discuss the report that a secret settlement had been effected. A friend of Mrs. Cudahy, however, said Michael Cudahy had agreed to pay his son's wife $5,000 during the first year following her divorce and $3,000 during each ensuing year of her life as long as she remained single.

Custody of the four Cudahy children was given Michael Cudahy and his wife, Catherine, during their lifetimes. Upon their death, Mary Cudahy, an aunt of the children will have charge of them, and when she dies, Clara Cudahy, another aunt, will become their guardian. Mrs. Cudahy was given the right to visit the children "at all reasonable times and places and for such periods as may be reasonable and proper."

Children With Grandparents.

"To protect the children," was the reason given by attorneys that no charge other than "incompatibility" was made in the bill.

Immediately after the decree had been granted, Mrs. Cudahy left for Chicago with her children. She will take the children to the home of their grandparents. It is understood she will return here to make her home. Friends say she received the furnishings of the fashionable residence at Thirty-sixth and Walnut streets, here.

With the granting of the divorce, the rumor that Mrs. Cudahy would enter vaudeville was revived. She is known to have a standing offer of $500 a week for a 30-week engagement.

Mrs. Cudahy's bill was one of the shortest ever filed in this country. She set forth that she was married to Cudahy on Dec. 24, 1899, in Omaha, and he left her on March 1, 1910 without cause. The children are: Edna Catherine, aged 10; Marie C., aged 8; Anne Elizabeth, aged 6, and Michael, aged 2½ years.

FAVORS CHANGE IN THE TARIFF

Taft's Letter to the Campaign Committee Contains That Suggestion.

Beverly, Mass., Aug. 24.—President Taft's keynote speech for the congressional campaign has come out here. The president will favor further revision of the tariff. While he is still convinced that the Payne-Aldrich law is the best tariff law the country has had up to this time, he has at last reached the conclusion that there is decided room for improvement.

Mr. Taft does not propose that business shall be upset by another wholesale revision, but he will recommend to congress that individual schedules in the tariff system be taken up separately and be disposed of on a scientific basis. The new revision is to be based upon the findings of the tariff commission as to the cost of production at home and abroad. Only a fair profit is to be allowed the American producer. "Extortionate and unreasonable" profits, the president declares will be tolerated no longer.

For Harmony Purposes.

The president has stated these facts and has outlined his position in detail in the letter he has sent to Representative McKinley of Illinois for publication in the Republican congressional camapaign text book. The time of making the letter public has been left entirely to the judgment of the committee.

Political observers regard this move as about the shrewdest that has been made during the present administration. It offers an excellent opportunity for the insurgents and regulars to get together in the campaign, and President Taft has been exceedingly anxious to find a ground upon which the different factions could meet without embarrassment to either.

TAFT WILL ATTEND STATE FAIR OPENING.

When President Taft attends the conservation congress in St. Paul, Monday, Sept. 5, as he has decided to do, he has promised to include the Minnesota state fair in his calling list. This day will be one of the most important of the year in the state. Added to the fact that it is Labor Day, and therefore a holiday, Monday, Sept. 5, will become memorable through the opening of the greatest state fair in the history of Minnesota and the assembling in St. Paul of the national conservation congress. These two big progressive enterprises will work hand in hand, so that each shall help the other. It was not conceivable that an event of such unusual importance as the conservation congress, drawing representatives from nearly all of the nations of the globe, and instigated to a large degree by the president himself, could open without his presence. He assured the special committee that called on him last week, in the interest of both the state fair and the congress, that he will surely be on hand.

The president has a genial way of making possible things he knows the people would wish him to do, and he has finally assured Governor Eberhart that he will not lose the opportunity of visiting the Northwest. Accordingly the opening day, Monday, Sept. 5, will be known as Taft Day, and an immense throng of visitors will be on hand to give the president a hearty welcome and possibly to hear him speak on some of the live topics of the hour.

Easing Up on the Forests.

The substitution of concrete and reinforced concrete for wood in piling, dock foundation poles, mining operations, etc., promises a very important relief in forest exhaustion. When in need of a good malt beverage do not be convinced that there is something just as good, but insist on Golden Grain Belt beer—an ideal beverage for home use, and an aid to digestion. CUTTING SWAMP HAY.

Farmers Around Mora, Minn.. Find It a Godsend.

Mora, Minn., Aug. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Thousands of tons of wild hay is being cut in swamps by the farmers in this section in order to provide forage for their stock during the winter. It was feared that on account of the shortage of tame grasses, due to the dry season, farmers would dispose of their cattle, and this being a dairying and stock-raising section the result would prove very detrimental. However, these wild swamps have become a source of salvation for this industry. It may be said that the swamp grasses are very nutritious and are a very good emergency substitute.

PROCTOR IS GIVEN NEXT TOURNAMENT

Range Firemen Decide to Hold Next Meeting in Duluth Suburb.

Eveleth, Minn., Aug. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—This, the last day of the Range Firemen's Tournament association meet, finds interest keener than ever in the various events scheduled

The hub and hub race, the 100-yard dash and the novelty race, which was postponed from yesterday because of damage to some hose, are being pulled today. This afternon there will be a ball game.

Proctor secured next year's meet and the following officers have been chosen: Samuel Kellar, Gilbert, president; H. E. Gilderman, Proctor, vice president; Henry Rivers, Proctor, secretary; H. H. Peyton, Proctor, treasurer.

The flag race was disputed as it was claimed that one of the men on the Schley team, which won the race, jumped before the gun was fired. Two seconds were therefore taken off the time of 65 2-5 seconds, putting Proctor first with 63 3-5, Schley second and Aurora third in 68 1-5 seconds.

The Proctor teams made good scores all the way through. Their man in the ladder climbing contest touched the top rung in 7 2-5 seconds, which is very fast time. The Gilbert city team won the championship prize banner in the hose association race in 29 1-3 seconds. Proctor, Schley mine and Biwabik tied in this event for secend with 30 1-3 seconds. In the combination hook and ladder race Aurora was first with 28 2-5 seconds, taking a prize of a $10 medal, and Gilbert second in 29 2-3 seconds, taking a searchlight as a prize. In the chief's race, Saudberg of Aurora won the 100 yards in twelve seconds flat, winning a chief's lantern; Brown of the Gilbert mine was second in 12½ seconds, winning an oiled coat. In the ladder climbing contest Proctor was first in 7 3-5 seconds, Aurora second in 8 2-5 and Gilbert third in 8 3-5 seconds.

Aurora Wins Parade Prize.

In the big parade the Aurora team with thirty-one men in line, was awarded the best appearing prize of $10 and the prize for the largest number of men in line of $15. Large crowds witnessed the parade in which the bands and the fire departments took part as well as the races.

Late yesterday afternoon a horse race was run off in three exciting heats. Horses belonging to William Trenholm, Frank Webb, Norris Colim and Herman Bodas were entered. The Trenholm horse won the first heat easily. The Colim horse took the second with a little space to spare. The third and final heat was nip and tuck all the way. The Colim horse came across the line barely a neck ahead.

In the evening there were fireworks and several county officials talked. Somewhat later a boxing match was pulled off. The dancing pavilion has been made use of afternoon and evening. A dance was also given last night at Dowling's hall. This evening there will be some more dancing.

Many visitors are present here from all over the range. The Proctor team brought along a number of rooters. The Gilbert high school band is making quite a hit. The Biwabik and Aurora bands are also here. The St. Joseph Catholic church took in some money by having ten pretty girls selling tags from 10 cents up.

SOLD LIQUOR TO A "POSTED" MAN

Virginia Woman Makes a Serious Charge Against Saloon of City.

Virginia, Minn., Aug. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Local saloons came in for a hard rap at the hands of a woman at the meeting of the council last night. Mrs. H. Burchell appeared with a protest against the way some of the saloon men did business. She stated that certain men had been "posted" and notwithstanding that fact liquor was sold to them.

She said she had followed a certain man on Sunday last and saw him enter at least a half dozen saloons and that she knew that he had secured liquor in every one of them. She entered one place and when the bartender saw her, he told her that she had no right in the place and ordered her out. At this place she saw the man she had been following drinking liquor at the bar. She wanted to know from the council if the saloon keepers had a right to sell liquor to a man that was "posted." She said she asked the bartender at a saloon why he had sold liquor to the party in question when he had notice to the effect that no liquor should be sold to him, and that the man behind the bar told her that he knew nothing of such notice. Mrs. Burchell said she only appeared before the council in protection of her own family and that it did not seem right to her for the saloon men to sell liquor to men when the law prohibited it. The council instructed Aldermen Staff, Boyland and Mollan to investigate the matter.

BEAR RIVER LAND IS VERY FERTILE

Farmers in That Section Are Making Much Off of Vegetables.

Bear River, Minn., Aug. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—The farmers in this section are making a good thing off garden products this season.

During the past two weeks the high prices of garden products on the range have proved very attractive, and many wagon loads of vegetables and potatoes are being taken to Hibbing. One day recently Weeding & Co. of Hibbing received five loads of garden products from Bear River.

At the present prices it is possible to raise on an acre of Bear River land any of the following: $600 worth of green onions, $400 worth of green peas or $1,000 of pie plant. Land like this is cheap at $100 an acre, and some day the farming public will find it out.

TWO PREACHERS PUT OUT BLAZE

Their Prompt Action Prevents Calamity During Gilbert Celebration.

Gilbert, Minn., Aug. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Yesterday afternoon, while the races were in progress at the firemen's tournament, a number was pulled off which was not on the program.

At the hall where the ladies of the M. E. church served meals for the visitors a gasoline stove had inadvertently been left turned on, and a considerable quantity of the gasoline had escaped, so that when an attempt to light it was made the whole stove was enveloped in flame. Rev. Mr. Johnson of Eveleth and Rev. Mr. Schenck of Aurora, who were in the hall at the time, secured wet cloths and succeeded in putting out the flames in about ten minutes.

In a few moments they were discussing various questions of church activity, as though nothing had happened. Rev. Mr. Johnson was formerly a soldier in the United States army and Rev. Mr. Schenck was formerly in the employ of the Northern Pacific railroad, so a little thing like a gasoline explosion did not bother them.

The miscellaneous items mentioned include gate houses, scale houses, round house, gas and steam engines, turbines, boilers, heaters, condensers, motors, mixer, electric cranes, roll trains and tables, pumps, iron and steel ladles, gas producers, derricks, gas and water mains, sewers, transmission lines, skull crackers, tank, fences, storage yards and machine tools.

No true conception of the vast size of the institution will be gained by the public until they see the buildings rising from their foundations. Those who have seen other steel plants realize the size of the plant that is being built at Duluth, but the others have difficulty in getting a mental picture of what it will be when it is completed. The work is being pushed ahead rapidly. As far as possible everything used will be manufactured at the site of the plant. Cement blocks will be turned out in large quantities for use in the buildings and the cement for the foundations will be made as fast as it is used. The bridge across the river is about done, the power house is built and much of the other preliminary work out of the way.

M'PHERSON MUST GO TO PRISON FOR KILLING FRIEND

Whipple claimed misconduct on the part of John H. Norton, county attorney, who made the final address to the jury. In that address Mr. Norton is said to have called McPherson a "scab" and a "Bowery tough." These epithets put the defendant to a disadvantage and prejudiced the jury against him, was the claim of the attorney in his motion for a new trial.

"Scab" a Regular Word.

In the order denying the motion for a new trial, Judge Ensign says that the term "scab" is a regular word and has a recognized meaning and definition, according to the dictionaries. The judge says it is not a slang word, but an ordinary word such as is used in describing a class of workmen who do not belong to the union. The judge says that McPherson admitted that he had been on the Bowery in New York so many times that he couldn't count them. He says the term "bowery tough" was appropriate. Judge Ensign states that attorneys are not always careful of the words they use, but that they have a right to use such epithets as the evidence will substantiate. "The words are inelegant but expressive," he says.

Both Had Right in Bunk House.

Continuing in the order the judge states that Frey was unarmed, according to the evidence. They both had a proper right to be in the bunk house. The bunk house was common ground where they could both be the same as the street or any other place to which both had a proper right.

Story of the Crime.

The shooting took place on the steamer North Lake of the Mutual Transit company line Sept. 22. The quarrel which resulted in the death of Frey was begun in a saloon on lower Lake avenue early in the morning. It grew more bitter as time advanced and after dinner the two men met alone in the bunk house where the fight was renewed and Frey was shot.

McPherson and Frey became acquainted on board the boat and a friendship sprang up between them. Frey was acquainted in Duluth and McPherson was not. Frey took McPherson to the several saloons where he was acquainted and it was in one of them that McPherson playfully, he says, took a handkerchief from the pocket of George Thatcher. Frey took offense at this and told McPherson that as he was but little known he had better keep his hands to his own pocket. One word led to another and soon the feeling between the two men was very bitter.

Quarrel Renewed on Boat.

After going back to the boat and meeting in the bunk house, McPherson claimed that Frey attacked him, and that he shot his shipmate in self defense.

Both County Attorney Norton and First Assistant W. E. Greene appeared at the time of the trial for the state.

HEAVY FALL OF SNOW IN MONTANA CHECKS FIRE IN THAT STATE

troops are on the way to the burning districts.

Rain and Snow Falling.

The best hope of the threatened forests, however, is in the sky. Rain and snow have fallen in Montana and light rains in Idaho, and the season of the fall rains is near at hand.

Stories of the blinding and burning of fire fighters have made it difficult to obtain men to go into the blazing woods.

Reports from the forest fires on the Middle Fork and in the Elk City region state that the wind blew a gale all day Tuesday and the ground gained by the rangers and volunteers in the lull in the tempest Monday night has been lost. Maj. Fenn, who is in command of 500 men, considers the situation desperate, and although the almost exhausted fire fighters are working with renewed energy he has little hope of making any headway. However, the wind has fallen and the flames are advancing less rapidly.

Front of Twenty-five Miles.

United fires at Eldorado and Old Man's creek have an unbroken front of twenty-five miles, extending from the Selway to the Locksaw and cutting off the only trails over which reinforcements and supplies can be sent to the foresters. Nearly 100 men who were sent to the assistance of the rangers in that locality a week ago have been unable to get through.

In the Elk City district the situation is steadily growing worse. The town is considered safe, but the surrounding country will be devastated.

In the Couer d'Alene.

The fires in the great Couer d'Alene national forests are beyond control and timber worth millions of dollars is burning. The fires on the Couer d'Alene Indian reservation are checked, as are those of Palmouse forest. Along the St. Joe river, which runs through what is described on the maps as "the largest body of standing white pine timber in the United States," there is a continuous fire from Plummer to a point in Montana.

The United States is the largest loser and next in importance are the losses sustained by the Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound railroad, which has suffered destruction of bridges, buildings and timber lands for forty miles.

The fires along the Northern Pacific in Western Montana have diminished. They were largely in timber that had been fire-swept in former years, but the Idaho fires are burning virgin forests.

The Pen d'Orielle valley, heavily timbered, is on fire in several places. It is difficult to get news from that section.

Milwaukee employes at Avery say that it seems as if all the Bitter Root mountains are burning and that the entire Couer d'Alene national forest will be destroyed.

Trained Men Sent.

Washington, Aug. 24.—Fifty trained forest agents from the staff of District Forester Sherman at Ogden, Utah, have been ordered by the forest service here to proceed at once to Missoula, Mont., to aid in superintending the fighting of the flames in that district.

AMERICANS ARE HELD AS PIRATES

Five Are Being Brought to This Country on the Iowa.

Washington, Aug. 24.—On board the battleship Iowa, one of the ships making up the practice squadron which has just returned to Chesapeake bay with 500 midshipmen aboard, are five Americans who are held on a charge of plundering a vessel on the high seas.

The prisoners are members of the crew of the American whaling schooner Pedro Verala of New Bedford, Mass. They were placed in jail at Horta, Fayal, at the request of the American consular agent, it is said, and when the naval academy practice squadron passed the Azores it was requested to take the prisoners to the United States.

In addition to the five who are accused of the crime, the Iowa has on board two other members of the crew who are being held as witnesses. It is said at the navy department that the prisoners will be turned over to the United States authorities at Annapolis on the arrival of the Iowa there on Aug. 28.

Chokes Dog With His Hands.

Edinboro, Pa., Aug. 24.—Driven desperate by his inability to subdue a vicious bulldog with a club, F. M. Slocum threw his body on the brute and choked it to death with his bare hands. The dog had bitten Slocum's 15-year-old daughter, who is in a hospital with more than forty wounds from the dog's teeth.

Strike to End Saturday.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 24.—President P. J. McArdle of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers announces that the strike against the United States Steel corporation will be ended Saturday.

AGED PRIEST CALLED.

He was born in Switzerland about eighty-six years ago. In 1900 he celebrated his golden jubilee as a priest, having been then in the ministry for fifty years. NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST

RESCUED BY FISHERMAN

North Dakota Launch Party Nearly Lost in Lake of the Woods.

Launch Strikes Rock and Death Seemed Imminent, When Help Arrived.

Grand Forks, N. D., Aug. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Hung up for two hours on a rock in Lake of the Woods, in Northern Minnesota, Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Allert of Langdon, N. D., and party nearly drowned before Edward Nymiller, a fisherman, rescued them. The party was here yesterday enroute home and told of their harrowing experience.

With Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Johnson, Miss Daisy Albert of Langdon, and Mrs. E. S. Reilly of Calvin, N. D., Mr. and Mrs. Allert were going from Warroad to Beaudette in a 45-foot launch owned by James Russell. Twenty miles from Warroad and about a mile and a half from shore they struck a rock that was projecting to within two feet of the surface.

Buffetted About on Rock.

With a high wind prevailing, the launch was buffetted about on the rock for two hours. Members of the party had buckled life preservers on themselves and were ready at almost any moment to take to the water, as the boat was rapidly being pounded to pieces on the rock.

At this time Nymiller discovered the trouble from shore and immediately set out, and reached the imperiled party in time to save them.

Nymiller was the only man living within fifteen miles of the place where the accident happened, and the members of the party consider the fact that he chanced to discover them was nothing more or less than a miracle.

BUILDING BRISK IN NORTH DAKOTA

Despite Crop Scare All Sections of State Are Forging Ahead.

Bismarck, N. D., Aug. 24.—Crop scares may come and crop scares may go, but building in North Dakota, like the fated brook, goes on, just the same. Reports from all sections of the state indicate that there is more than a normal amount of building under way and 1910 promises to stand out as one of the notable building years of the decade.

At Minot the library board will soon commence the erection of a $12,000 Carnegie library building and the one for Fargo college is going up rapidly.

It is stated that the government may erect a postoffice building at Lisbon, but this has not been definitely settled.

At Carrington bids are being taken for the site of the proposed federal building.

At Rose bids will be received for the erection of a school house for Manitou township.

At Velva bids will be received for the erection of a school house in District No. 52.

At Souris, the clerk of the school board is to receive bids for a new school house for District 8.

At Sanborn the school board will receive bids for a new school house in District 16.

At Cando the contracts have been signed for a $5,000 school house in Olson township.

At Manfred a $9,000 school house is about completed and will be ready for occupancy this fall.

John Deacon, clerk of No. 6 school district, ass county, will receive bids for the erection of a new school.

Plans $25,000 Parochial School.

Rev. Father Wagner is planning to erect a $25,000 parochial school for his parish.

The First State Bank of Sawyer is just completing its new $6,000 building.

Contractor Lawson has commenced the brick work for a hardware store building for the Hansen company.

The Fargo Foundry company has secured the contract for the steel work for the Burrows building at Mandan.

The construction of a brick store building for the G. Steig Mercantile company has been started.

The contract has been let for an elevator at Belfield and it will cost $7,000.

At Des Lacs the work of rebuilding the elevator is to be commenced at once. The Woodward Farmers' Elevator company has been incorporated at Cathay. At De Lemere the Equity Elevator & Trading company has been incorporated. The capital stock is $5,000. At Sentinel Butte, the Hart-Robinson company has let the contract for an elevator.

The Grand Forks city council decided to erect a $60,000 city hall.

PAVING PLANS ARE ACCEPTED

Crookston City Council Will Proceed With Improving Streets.

Crookston, Minn., Aug. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—At the city council meeting last evening the paving plans of City Engineer Carroll were approved and bids will be called for at the next meeting. Alderman Murphy resigned as alderman from the Second ward, having moved into the Third, and his successor will be named at the next meeting.

The report of the finance committee acting as a city board of equalization was approved. This report showed the real estate valuation $1,359,389; personal property, $520,875; total, $1,880,264, a gain of $307,385 over last year.

City Attorney Loring was authorized to attempt to secure a new trial in the case of John Darkow against the city. The city made a tacit agreement with Darkow eleven years ago for an acre of ground adjoining the city dumping ground, for the location of a pesthouse, for a consideration of $75. The payment was authorized when the deed was filed, but Darkow never filed the deed. People in that section began protesting to Darkow against the location of the pesthouse, and last summer he started ejectment proceedings and won.

In the meantime the city had erected a pesthouse at considerable cost, and made other improvements, and a strong effort will be made to secure the title in a new trial, to save the city from the loss of the buildings erected.

LOWER COURT UPHELD.

Supreme Court Rules Against Convicted St. Paul Banker.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 24.—The state supreme court has denied the application of Frank W. Waterman for bail and a stay of execution of the thirty-day sentence imposed upon him last Friday by Judge Finehout of the municipal court for reckless driving of his automobile. This takes away almost the last hope of Waterman and his friends that he might postpone or escape serving the thirty-day sentence in the workhouse, as the court says there is no merit in his appeal and holds the law under which he was sentenced is constitutional.

The court says the right to a stay of execution is not absolute and the court may and should refuse it if clearly satisfied upon inspection of the record that there is no merit in the appeal.

The defendant urged that the section of the statute governing the speed of motor vehicles is unconstitutional and also that the complaint to which Waterman pleaded guilty did not charge a public offense, but the court found each of these contentions without merit.

Unless Attorney Kane has some plan in prospect which he has not thus far outlined, it appears as though Waterman will have to finish the sentence of thirty days imposed by Judge Finehout.

MAY OVERDO DITCHING.

Beltrami County Cautioned to Go Slow in the Matter.

Bemidji, Minn., Aug. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Fearing that the construction of draining ditches may become such a fad with the residents of the country north of here as to be a burden on the taxpayers and tend toward the financial ruin of Beltrami county, 100 Bemidji people met yesterday and discussed ditch matters generally.

T. J. Burke expressed the sentiment of the meeting when he said: "This county already has a bonded indebtedness of $300,000 and I think it the height of folly to place it in jeopardy of more than double that amount."

There are several judicial ditches that are now under consideration to be constructed in the country near Red lake, and two of which have been advanced to near the point where construction will begin, and it is intimated that at least two other ditches were under consideration. It was pointed out that while those who own lands along ditches Nos. 3 and 4 may possibly be able to pay for the construction of those ditches, it was positively asserted that there were not enough actual settlers on the lands that would be benefitted by the other ditches to care for the payments of construction of the others, which add burdens to the taxpayers of the county.

MINING EXHIBIT IS VERY POPULAR

State Fair Board Managers Anxious Oliver Mining Make a Good Showing.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 24.—The splendid mining exhibit shown by the Oliver Iron Mining company at the recent state conservation congress made such a hit that the state fair managers want the display exhibited at the grounds next month and yesterday passed a resolution to that end.

President W. J. Olcott of the Oliver company will begin at once to make plans for an exhibit that will far surpass that seen at the congress.

He has placed the work in the hands of Assistant General Manager J. H. McLean, President W. A. McGonagle of the Missabe and Maj. John Uno Sebenius, head of the engineering department of the company..

Maj. Sebenius was here yesterday, accompanied by Guy F. Diehl of his department and C. P. Craig of the fair board. Maj. Sebenius took up the matter of placing the exhibit, which will be in one of the two buildings under the management of Mr. Craig who is the Duluth member. While Mr. Craig's departments are covered in the terms "agriculture, horticulture and floraculture," he has found warrant for taking the iron ore exhibit under his care.

CLAIM AGENT IS ALLEGED FORGER

Former Employe of Soo Is Arrested at Eau Claire for Alleged Fraud.

Eau Claire, Wis., Aug. 24.—Upon telegraphic advices from Bismarck, N. D., Sheriff Everson took in custody Gerald E. Neel, an alleged forger, and is now being held under $2,000 bail.

Neel was arraigned in Justice Ellis' court, where he pleaded not guilty. His case was adjourned until next Monday. Neel secured bail. Judge Pannier of Chippewa appeared for Neel. Neel was formerly claim agent for the Soo line, which company entered the complaint. Not very long ago he brought suit against the company for $200 for salary alleged due him. The company turns around and enters suit against Neel for alleged forgery.

Settled Fictitious Claims.

Neel was the claim agent who settled with the sixty or seventy people who were injured in the big wreck on the Soo just outside of Bismarck last spring, Mr. Neel representing the company at that time. According to the charges of the company Mr. Neel turned in a number of fictitious names of people to whom he claimed he paid money in settlement for their injuries received in the wreck; that upon investigation the company was unable to find some eight or ten of the people whom Mr. Neel claimed he had settled with and the inference in the charges is that Mr. Neel is some $500 ahead of the company as a result of turning in the alleged fictitious names.

The proceeding is the regular one for holding a person in the state until extradition papers are secured. The sheriff from Bismarck will, it is understood, be here next Monday with the warrant and the extradition papers to take Mr. Neel to Bismarck, where he will be arraigned on the forgery charge.

FARM LABORERS FIGHT: ONE IS FATALLY WOUNDED.

D., Aug. 24.—As the result of a shooting and stabbing affray, John Inskie, Tom Gorkey and Fred Madron, all foreign farm laborers, employed on the Staples farm near Absaraka, are in the county hospital here, Inskie with a bullet wound through his back and a bullet lodged in his kidneys, Madron with a gaping knife wound that penetrated his lung, and Gorkey with a broken jaw.

Inskie cannot live, Madron has a chance to recover and Gorkey will be laid up for several weeks.

TWELVE DEER PLACED UPON ISLE ROYALE.

Houghton, Mich., Aug. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Game Warden St. Clair Wilson has returned from Isle Royale, where he went recently on the Chase S. Osborn with a number of deer aboard. The deer were donated by several parties, including Frank Stanton of Atlantic.

Mr. Wilson says that the deer were landed at Washington Harbor and permitted to go free. They immediately sauntered off for the woods. There are eight does and four bucks, and a number of fawns. Mr. Wilson says that the watchman in the Washington club has been deputized game warden and he will be placed on the job of seeing that no deer ae killed out of season. There are no wolves on the island, as a number of trappers report that in the last three or four years not a wolf track has been seen. It was thought for a time that possible wolves might exterminate the small herd of deer before they were given time to multiply, but this fear has been prover groundless.

S.S.S. NO HARMFUL MINERALS PURELY VEGETABLE
There are certain mineral medicines which will temporarily remove the external symptoms of Contagious Blood Poison, and shut the disease up in the system for awhile, but when the treatment is left off the trouble always returns in worse form. But that is not all; the delicate membranes and tissues of the stomach and bowels are usullay injured by these strong minerals, and frequently stomach trouble, chronic dyspepsia, and mercurial rheumatism are added to the destructive blood poison. S. S. S. is the only remedy that can be used with perfect safety in the treatment of Contagious Blood Poison, and with the assurance that a lasting cure will result. This medicine, made entirely of non-injurious roots, herbs and barks of recognized curative and tonic value, removes every particle of the virus from the circulation, and by enriching and strengthening the blood removes every symptom permanently. S. S. S. does not hide or cover up the disease in any way, but cures it by removing it from the system. Home Treatment Book, and any medical advice free to all who write.

BOOSTER DAY CELEBRATION

Home-Coming of White Sox Will Be Occasion for Demonstration.

Duluth and Wausau Teams Will Open an Interesting Series.

BOOSTER DAY LINE-UP:

Wausau missed a train yesterday, and as a consequence the Booster day celebration will be given today, and one of the largest crowds of the season should be on hand to give the Sox the kind of a reception that will help them climb to a good percentage berth before the close of the present season.

A large number of tickets have been sold, so there is the assurance that there will be a stand full of howling fans. Yesterday the commission men of Michigan street closed early to permit their employees to attend the game. Many of these liberal business men have assured the management that their stores will be closed early again this afternoon.

A large delegation from the board of trade will be on hand. Many of the stores on Superior street have assured Manager J. J. Desmond that they will let some of their clerks attend the game. The spirit of the business men is the best it has been for many seasons, because there is an appreciation here of the good baseball the team has been playing of late.

With the long home stand that the Sox will have, they should be able to pass Red Wing and La Crosse in the race and also stand a very good chance of beating out Rochester in the last dash at the close of the season. With the four Sox flingers in condition, and the new outfielder showing some garden class, the O'Brienites will be the hardest team in the league to defeat in the games that remain between now and the close of the season.

A band and tally-ho will do some stunts in the downtown business district before the game this afternoon. In the tally-ho will be some of the Boosters' club, fans who have stuck by the team when things looked the most discouraging.

Wausau is playing great baseball at the present time, for the boys from the Wisconsin village are out for second place, with the possibility that Eau Claire may be beaten out for the rag. With the Sox playing the present grade of ball the game today should be one of the best of the season.

Schieffer will oppose smiling Al Cummings. In the past game he worked in on the trip, Al showed great form, beating the strong Eau Claire team. He has been under the weather for a few days, but is in good condition at the present time. With Schieffer and Cummings in form, one of the best hurling quarrels of the season will be seen this afternoon.

There is a royal chance for the team to win the great majority of its games between now and the close of the Minny season. The fans can do their part. Rooting and enthusiasm and a sense of appreciation will do a world of good for a baseball team. In this particular instance the team deserves the appreciation and enthusiasm, for, despite numerous defeats, it has been playing as good baseball as any team in the league.

The Sox are going to climb, and every fan can lend his assistance. Duluth wants good baseball and the three gentlemen interested in the team are out to give the city a winner, no matter what it costs.

Booster day today; come out and boost.

LEADERS LOSE TO SUPERIOR

Duke's Bunch Blows in Two Innings and Finally Win a Game.

After a disastrous road experience, in which the team dropped down the pennant path, Superior returned to its native pill box yesterday and proceeded to win the opener with the Eau Claire leaders, taking the game by the score of 5 to 4.

Dahlgren and DeLave were the opposing hill workers. The Schooners collected eleven blows off the delivery of Dahlgren, while the Dukes went one better and garnered twelve from the slants of DeLave.

Superior bunched all its runs in the seventh and eighth innings. Up to that time DeLave had done very well. Some fancy fielding stunts saved Superior upon several occasions. The visitors kicked upon various and sundry occasions and made themselves generally disagreeable.

COLORADO E. SETS NEW RECORD AT EMPIRE CITY.

New York, Aug. 24.—Seven thousand trotting horse men, owners, breeders, drivers and followers of the sport, cheered wildly yesterday when Colorado E., a bay colt by The Bondsman-Bess McGregor, established a new world's record for 3-year-old trotters at the opening of a five-day Grand Circuit harness meet at the Empire City track, Yonkers. In the Matron futurity stake of $15,000, he won in straight heats of 2:07¼ and 2:07¾, the fastest work ever done by a 3-year-old in the history of the light harness racing.

AS SEEN FROM THE SIDE LINES

(BY BRUCE.)

Whisper It Gently.

There have been a lot of statements made regarding the Jeffries-Johnson fiasco. You have believed some of them, and others have been rejected, as coming from a source that is far from reliable. But taking a happy average of the statements that have been set adrift since the fight, it is pretty safe to say that the American public has come to the belief that it was buncoed.

A sensational story, regarding the condition of Jeff, has just come to light. It has been published in the New York Sun, a paper that has established an enviable reputation for conservatism and fair dealing.

The story states, in brief, that two of the Nevada state board of physicians examined Jeffries before the fight, and pronounced him in no physical condition for a fight. It is also stated that influence from various sources was brought to bear upon these two medical men, and at last they agreed to make the report of the examining board unanimous, as specified by the law of that state.

Further—it is told in the story that Corbett, Berger, et al, knew before the fight that Jeffries was not in condition and that there was no chance for him to get into anything like the condition demanded of a fighter who is going to battle for a world's championship.

All of which would bear out the statement often made that Corbett, Berger and some of the others of the choice ring of touts that surrounded Jeffries realized a financial gain from the victory of the black.

Many of us are very weary of hearing of the farce fight. Yet, at the same time, it is the part of every sport writer to show up as much as possible, and in every manner possible, the gang that engineered the return of Jeffries to the ring.

Gradually the truth is leaking out. Almost every week brings some new phase of the whole dirty business. Sam Berger has always been a poor sport, and the same can be said of Lou Houseman. These men were mixed deeply in the mire of the Jeffries thing. Therefore, the facts that are being brought to the notice of the public are not really in the end so surprising as they might be, were there at least one honest man in the bunch that had the handling of the man who tried to beat Johnson.

Heroes Passing On.

Just the other day a sport writer was selecting the two best shortstops in the National league. It sounds like sacrilege, Bill, but this chap did not select Hans Wagner as one of the two greatest. And the reason is, Wagner is passing from the hero class. His classic foot is slowly slipping from the pedestal.

And with the going of Wagner, who one day may break all records for hitting, but who is sliding just the same, may be classed Sam Crawford, the once great slugger of the Detroit Tigers.

Of course if the Tigers do not win the gonfalon the present season, the failure can be attributed directly to the slump of the pitching staff; but, and there is always a world of possibilities in that word, Crawford, one of the men who has won countless battles for the Jennings crew. He is not the Crawford of old, and thereby hangs a long tale holding a world of explanation.

It is the sliding of incomparable Wagner that will lose the rag for the Pirates, should that gallant team fail to repeat.

Brown of the Cubs is not as good as he used to be; also it might be stated that Mathewson, the king pitcher of them all, is not the peerless pill pusher that he was in the days of yore.

The saddest of all it is when a great player begins to fade. Every time Wagner makes a boot he probably realizes the truth of this very patent fact. Once let the fans get wise to the fact that a player is going back, and they will assist in hastening the big league obsequies of that rather forlorn person.

Every time Crawford fails to hit, every time he strikes out, he drives another nail into his baseball coffin. He probably knows it, although a player hates to admit that he is not as good as he was in the very best season he has ever had. Heroes must pass, even as history tells us, and the present season in the big leagues is witnessing the passing of not a few of the men who have made baseball history in the last decade.

Papke Packs His Grip.

One William Papke, aspirant to the middleweight crown and hero extraordinary of Kewanee, Ill., is off for the Never-Never land, where he is under contract to fight three men that will be selected by Hugh McIntosh, the Charles Frohman of the fighting game.

If the former coal heaver is successful in knocking into a state of coma, or bordering thereon, the men he mixes with in the roped arena, he will pause in England on the return trip and attempt to coax into the battle pit Tom Thomas, who is the little white czar of the English middles.

And then, after this triumphant pugilistic procession across the span of several continents, the Papke person will again try to get Stanley Ketchel into the ring to settle the somewhat disputed question as to the supremacy between these two husky boys of the 158-pound class.

It is a very ambitious program that Papke has outlined, or rather, had mapped out for him by the somewhat shrewd and calculating brain of the McIntosh man. If the Kewanee boy wins all the battles that occur before he returns to this country, and Steve Ketchel has by that time recovered from the effect of long periods in which there was not sleep but excitement a plenty, we may expect a battle that will attract the interest even of him who reads with exceeding long rows of figures that pertain to the cost of living.

Mad and Madder Madden.

As a predictor, one Billy Madden is one of the most prolific of the somewhat in bad repute species. He has been predicting many things, this last year. At one time he predicted that James Joyless Jeffries would whip Lil' Artha Johnson. Then he hedged on his prediction, going around to the other side of the house and making prediction number two, wherein he allowed as how Artha would naturally lambast Jim to a sad frazzle.

His more recent prediction being sadly true, William has taken courage and has predicted that Johnson will not long be strong and lusty under the amount of wealthy beverage he is partaking of in somewhat copious quantities. According to Mr. Madden, some strong young man will gallop up and naturally and with pride therewith, walk all over the once king of the heavies.

There are many of us who hope not much luck for Lil' Artha in escaping the jinks that Madden has sent on his trail. And it might be added, that if Artha does succeed in escaping the fate that has assailed every heavyweight champion since the glorious days of John L. Sullivan, he will be performing a feat that will be unique and almost without parallel in ring society.

Mister Madden does not like Mistah Johnson, and this fact may have colored his last official prediction. But the pitfalls are many, you know.

JUNIOR CREW WINS AGAIN

Defeats Bantams in Second Race By Less Than Two Feet.

The Four-Oared Races Will Be Held Next Saturday.

Won by a foot, by gosh!

To be correct, it was a foot and a half, or least the judges, stationed at the finish line, there in the gathering gloom, said so. Yes, for the second time in less than a week the junior eight of the Duluth Boat club defeated the crew composed of the four little "banties" and some of the crack squad extras.

And yet the boys of Eddie Walker's crew are not satisfied, in spite of two defeats in less than a week.

If the race of last Saturday, when the juniors won by a scant foot was exciting, the race of last evening was even more to the ultra sensational. It was just like a race in "Brown of Harvard," or one of those athletic plays, only faster and harder work. The contest last evening was the greatest test of gameness and the prettiest race ever seen in this part of the country.

To drop into a colloquial line of talk, "she were a darb."

In the first 100 yards of the sizzling test of speed, the bantam crew gathered a lead of about seven-eighths of a boat length. This is being rather precise, as to figures, but in such a race as last evening, Bill, every little bit helps.

As has been remarked, the bantams lifted their shell ahead at the beginning, and thus being encouraged rowed scandalously fast for the first half mile of the mile breeze. At the half, it looked like the banties under wraps, with those on the juniors' odds feeling blue and despondent.

As the half mile mark was passed the juniors began to use their sturdy limbs to advantage. Inch by inch, or perhaps foot by foot, Percy, the julor boat began to overhaul the Walker band of hope. Slowly Mister Lathrop, who has a seat of vantage in the bow of the junior boat, and who has a keen observation, began to got a view of the bantam crew. "We are catching 'em, boys," he shouted with mirth and glee, at the same time in gutteral voice warning the juniors not to let down in their efforts.

At this highly exciting time, serious Simon Forgette, who is chief in command in the after deck of the junior craft, permitted a comanche-like yell of encouragement to escape from him. The effect was spontaneous, not to say instantanous, and the slow gain of inch by inch was increased a few notches.

At the beginning of the tennis court, which usually marks the spot where men must put forth the very last degree of effort, the boats were racing bow and bow, and the crowd that lined the long dock was yelling its collective head off.

Suddenly Louis Thompson's oar was knocked rudely from his hand by an obtruding and very inconsiderate deadhead. Deadheads are always thus; in the way and of no use. After dashing off a few remarks, which shall not be woven into the story, Mr. Thompson grabbed his oar with that promptitude that marks the natural man on the job, and the spurt that won, was started.

With four feet to get back in a short sprint, the cause looked almost as black as the surrounding night. But the junior boat traveled faster in those last few strokes than it has ever traveled before. It was fairly lifted out of the aqua pura more or less at every lift of the legs and backs of the men, and when the welcome gun boomed forth, some one, with a very good sense of the needs of the occasion, shouted forth that the juniors had won.

It was a great and well rowed race. Such races as the one of last night and the one of last Saturday, cannot but help in arousing the highest interest in the rowing game. The bantams want a third race, and they being small, the juniors have decided to humor them and race the third race for a distance of a mile and a half.

Last night the bantams had the old cedar shell, the new boat going to the juniors. On the next occasion of a meeting, the bantams will have the new eight and the old cedar boat will go to the juniors.

Next Saturday the four-oared events will be pulled off. The deciding race between the juniors and bantams will be held next Tuesday evening. It is expected that this contest, like the others, will be one of the prettiest races ever held on the bay.

Lapstreak races will be held up the St. Louis river Labor day, when the big fall picnic of the club will be held. It is also expected that a race between an eight from the Minnesota Boat club of St. Paul and the junior eight of the Duluth Boat club, will be held.

The St. Paul officials have been communicated with, and have promised that they will send an eight up here, if the Duluth officials decide to go through with the interclub program.

At a dinner given to the oarsmen last evening, it was announced that if the men would get together between now and Labor day, the race with St. Paul will be arranged. The men have promised, and if they stick by their word there is no obstacle apparent on the horizen to prevent the holding of the race.

Enthusiasm in rowing is at the highest point of the entire season, and if the enthusiasm that is present right now is manifested next season, there is nothing that can prevent the Duluth Boat club from placing some winning crews in the Northwestern International association events.

PLAY NEARS SEMI-FINALS

One Match Between Loren Kennedy and the Favored Four.

Washburn Loses to Storms of Minneapolis in Good Match.

St. Paul, Aug. 24.—Marked by the return of Joe Armstrong, who came home to St. Paul from Sioux City, Iowa, where he won the tri-state single championship, play at the Town and Country club for the honors of Minnesota went on yesterday. It seemed as if the clouds would send down a deluge but the coolness was a boon to the players. The courts have gathered a bit of moisture but are still hard and firm and the speed with which the matches are being reeled off indicates that they will close toward the finish mark by Friday and the single championship in both men and women's events may be looked for Saturday. The men's singles have progressed where the matches today will decide the men who will fight in the semi-fianls, while Storms of Minneapolis, by defeating Washburn of Duluth, is the first man to break into that trying round.

Kennedy of Duluth, if he defeats Douglas of Minneapolis, will be one of the chosen few and John Adams or Dr. Lafans of Minneapolis, will join them while U. H. Wheeler, the St. Paul champion of the winner of the Burton-Stellwagen will complete the list.

Without doubt the most interesting battle yesterday was the match between Adams and Armstrong and Burton and Lafans. Two intermediate defaults brought these men together and as a result the St. Paul stars are in a fair way to win the tournament and they are in the double semi-finals.

Dickerman and Graff of Duluth lost to Dr. Pohler and Rhame of Minneapolis by remaining entirely on the defensive, leaving the net work to be done by the swift Mill City men who made deadly use of criss-cross killing.

The Summaries.

Burton of Minneapolis won from Cobb of Minneapolis, 7-5, 6-2.

L. P. Ordway of St. Paul won from Polk of Minneapolis, 6-3, 6-3.

Adams and Armstrong won from La Fans and Burton of Minneapolis, 6-3, 6-3.

Poehler and Rhame of Minneapolis won from Dickerman and Graff of Duluth, 6-2, 6-0.

Mausolf Defeats Kendig.

August Mausolf won a pool game from Frank Kendig last night, Mausolf running out 129 balls while Kendig was securing 125. The result of the game last evening gives the winner a total of 250 for the two nights' play and Kendig 249.

EAST AGAINST WEST IN TENNIS

Wright and Bundy Play for Honor of Meeting Champion Larned.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 24.—It was the East against the West today in the final match of the thirtieth annual all-comers singles national lawn tennis championship. Beals C. Wright of Boston met Thomas C. Bundy of Los Angeles at the Casino to decide who will have the honor of challenging the national champion, William A. Larned of Summit, N. J., to a match for the title tomorrow.

Bundy and Wright had never opposed each other before and as both use the same style it seemed that the result today hinged on the question of generalship.

The match drew out the largest and most fashionable gallery of the tournament. The weather was warm and just a bit humid.

Wright, himself a former champion, barely won in five hard sets yesterday from E. H. Whitney, another Bostonian and the interscholastic chamupion. Bundy, after losing the first set, had little difficulty in winning from E. C. Colston of Baltimore, Maryland's state champion.

BUMBLEBEES STING FARMER TO DEATH.

Kendalville, Ind., Aug. 24.—David O. Hinkley, a pioneer farmer living near here, is dead of bumblebee stings received when he unearthed a nest while plowing. He was found lying in a furrow with his head and neck covered with stings.

NEWS AND VIEWS OF POLITICS AND POLITICIANS

Albert Berg of Spooner, Visits City and Talks of Senatorial Candidacy—C. A. Congdon Will File for the House in Fifty-first District This Week—Volstead Says Cannon Won't Be Speaker Again—Boyle-Vail Contest is Lively.

Albert Berg of Spooner, candidate for the Republican nomination for state senator in the Sixty-first district, was in the city yesterday, going from his home to Bemidji.

Talks of Fight For Senatorship.

Mr. Berg said, at the Spalding, last evening, that he has no doubt about the outcome of the primaries, being sure that he will be nominated over Senator A. L. Hansen, who, he concedes, will carry his home county of Mahnomen, but is certain to be decisively defeated in the other parts of the district.

The Sixty-first district is one of the most remarkable results of gerrymander observable on the map, and in it are many new and rapidly growing communities. It is one of the striking object lessons that point to the necessity for immediate reapportionment, and on that question Mr. Berg is an enthusiast. He is completely in accord with the objects and declarations of the Crookston and Bemidji conventions.

"Reapportionment, development and good roads are the three principal things needed by this part of the state," said Mr. Berg. "We must have reapportionment, without delay. Men who are candidates for the state senate should not be nominated or elected unless they are prepared to serve but two years. That is the only way we can accomplish anything in this direction."

Mr. Berg left the city last evening for Bemidji. He has been over the district once and is now starting on another canvass of the counties.

Mr. Berg is one of the best known men in public life in the state, of which he is a native. When he lived in Chisago county he served eight years as register of deeds. Then he became secretary of state and continued in that office for three terms. Later he served in the legislature of 1901. In 1892 he was a delegate to the Republican national convention, and at the 1908 national convention he was a reading clerg.

Now it's the "kitchen cabinet" that is responsible for the candidacy of Alex G. McKnight for the Republican nomination for congress: The Aitkin Republican makes the discovery, saying "it is surmised that Democratic flattery of an insidious kind is responsible for his announcement. It is not unreasonable to suspect that the kitchen cabinet has been silently busy in various ways handing out encouragement to him in the hope that a fight will be stirred up which will help Candidate Jaques in the election."

"Kitchen Cabinet" Again Is Made the Goat.

Mr. McKnight is going serenely on his campaigning way, disregarding such thrusts and looking confidently forward to the primaries, sure that he will be nominated over Mr. Miller.

However, the Hill City News disposes of Mr. McKnight and his candidacy by saying "he will hardly know he is running" at the primaries. The Anoka Free Press says:

"Mr. McKnight was in Anoka last Saturday conferring with local men who were not friendly to Miller. Among the local men who have become interested in Mr. McKnight's candidacy are: T. G. McLean, G. W. Swank, G. H. Wyman and W. J. Annon and others.

"Naturally Miller's friends will be much as in the previous campaign and the fight for the Republican nomination in this county will resolve itself into the usual factional fight."

The Aitkin Republican notices the fight in the Forty-ninth and pays the Eveleth lawyer this compliment:

Jimmie Boyle, formerly of Brainerd, is a candidate for state senator from the Forty-ninth district, and doesn't believe in the old stereotyped way of announcing his candidacy. He says he is interested in the problems of Northern Minnesota and believes he can do some good in the legislature. Jimmie is one of the boys who always did some good on the Brainerd ball team when it used to come to Aitkin, and he has been doing some good ever since in his professional life and here's hoping he'll be nominated and elected, so that he can go down to the legislature, where his field for doing good will be greatly broadened.

"We're all friends of Jimmie Boyle and we all know he's got a big future before him," said a range man who is aligned with Vail, yesterday. "I don't know that Boyle can beat Paddy, but if he does it will be a cinch that the district will be as ably represented at the capitol as any in the state."

Interest in the Forty-ninth district senatorial fight continues to be shown, not only by voters of the district but by residents of all parts of the county as well. James P. Boyle of Eveleth remains the favorite and the popular choice to win in his contest with P. R. Vail for the nomination. However, the Virginia Brewer has friends and business associates who are leaving nothing undone that might contribute to their man's success at the primaries.

Vail And His Boasted Record.

The Eveleth News pertinently asks:

> So much is said by the Virginia papers on the score of Senator Vail's record we would be curious to see it set forth in detail. What did the senator do? Is there any legislation of importance for which he is responsible, any enactment of moment that bears his name and impress? We doubt not the senator was right on measures that concerned the welfare of this county and section, as would be any other man sent to represent us. Is this sufficient?

Commenting on Mr. Boyle's announcement of his candidacy, the Chisholm Tribune-Herald says:

> "Jimmie," as he is familiarly known, has a host of friends in Chisholm who think he will make an ideal senator. He is an attorney by profession, is a splendid orator and is thoroughly alive to the interests of St. Louis county and the state. His appeal to the people is straightforward and concise enough to appeal to all.

* * *

A. J. Volstead, congressman from the Third district, who was a luke-warm insurgent, sees the handwriting on the wall for Joe Cannon, who, he says, will never again be elected speaker of the house. Mr. Volstead was in Bemidji yesterday, on the way home from Backus, Cass county, where he has been taking an outing.

Cannon "All in" Says Mr. Volstead

"Uncle Joe is in a bad fix," said Mr. Volstead, "for he has lost his prestige with both factions of the Republican party. His stubborn stand at the last session of congress, when his scalp was in jeopardy, did not please even the regulars, who thought that the old Illinois worker should agree to a compromise in behalf of party harmony.

"As a result many of those who were his closest friends became bitter against him and they remain bitter to this day. As a matter of fact what Uncle Joe is fighting for is his seat in congress and not the speakership. He knows that unless he tells his constituents of the Danville district that he intends to continue as speaker that they will fail to return him to congress at all. It is pretty well understood that the power of the stern fighter has faded, never to blossom again."

IS CONFIDENT HE WILL GO TO SENATE

ALBERT BERG

Of Spooner, Candidate for Republican Nomination for Senate in Sixty-first District.

Chester A. Congdon will file about the end of the week as a candidate for the Republican nomination for the house from the Fifty-first district. It is not probable that Mr. Congdon will have opposition at the primaries. In fact, it is known that Mr. Congdon would not file if he believed that would involve him in a fight for the office. He is willing to serve the district at St. Paul, his friends say, but does not care to indulge in a controversy over the job. Mr. Congdon was a member of the last legislature and one of the ablest legislators in the capitol. It is comparatively infrequent for a man of Mr. Congdon's standing in the business world to consent to enter politics as he has done and he made his presence felt in the capitol throughout the session.

C. A. Congdon To File For The House.

William J. North is said to have decided he will make the run on the Democratic ticket in the Fifty-first. Mr. North is a new man in politics and a young one. His friends expect him to give a good account of himself.

Edward R. Ribenack, secretary-treasurer of the Lenox Hotel company, continues to be the general choice among Fiftieth district Democrats for the house. He is one of the most popular men in the city and would make it decidedly interesting for his opponent should he decide to run.

Mr. Ribenack is expected to make known his decision within a few days, and the pressure upon him is so strong that it is expected that he will make the run.

O. N. Lindh of Lengby, Polk county, who was chaplain of the house in the legislature of 1899, but is now a merchant, will be a candidate for the house. He was indorsed for the place at a mass meeting held in Crookston and agreed to run. With Senator Stephens filing this week, the political situation in the district is decidedly a live one. It is expected that there will be five or six candidates for the house seats.

* * *

William Lockwood of Pipestone has filed for the house. He has been prominent in Southwestern Minnesota affairs for many years.

* * *

The new Democratic state committee in North Dakota will meet at Bismarck, Sept. 6, at the call of Chairman J. L. Cashel. Officers will be elected and the platform given out. The party will open headquarters at Grand Forks in a few days.

BOY PLAYS VIOLIN IN COURTHOUSE.

For breaking into public telephone boxes and stealing the money, a small boy was placed on probation recently by Judge Ensign of the juvenile court.

Yesterday the lad appeared at the courthouse to report. He brought his violin with him. He was asked to play. The strains of "Garden of Roses" and other popular songs floated through the corridors and everybody asked where it was coming from.

The musical ability of the little fellow is considered wonderful by those that have heard him play and it is possible that arrangements will be made whereby he may receive instruction.

INSURGENTS DOING THINGS

Michigan's Progressive Candidate for Senator Raps Reactionaries.

Marquette, Mich., Aug. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—That Representative Charles E. Townsend of Jackson, Mich., progressive candidate for senator against Julius Ceasar Burrows, is popular in this section was evidenced when he opened his pre-primary campaign here Monday evening before a large audience that frequently applauded him.

While paying his compliments to the reactionaries Mr. Townsend said:

"I defy you to point out to me one piece of legislation to which the public points with pride that was initiated by a reactionary. All have been introduced by insurgents and passed against determined opposition. Nevertheless, I do not claim that all insurgents are patriots. I believe there are some who are insurging because it is popular. I stand with those progressives who have always cast their vote for what they thought to be right. While I am proud of the record of the Republican party, the glory of the past is valuable only as a guaranty of progress in the future.

Believes in Roosevelt Policies.

"I have no personal grievance against Speaker Cannon and Cannon and Aldrich should not be confused with what is styled Cannonism and Aldrichism. I am a believer in the Roosevelt policies. McLaughlin, Hayes and myself met together to discuss revision of the house rules long before the majority of the house would admit that any revision of the rules could be brought about, and while many of those who are now telling of what has been accomplished by that revision, were doing their utmost to prevent any curtailing of the speaker's power.

"Gauge a man by what he has done. The people express their wants at the ballot box and they will not get what they want until they are willing to get out and vote. Sometimes a few men control the politics of the county.

Whole People Should Rule.

"In a popular government, the whole people, not a select few, should rule. Oftentimes there is a government of, for and by the office holders, rather than by the people. I believe there are 20 per cent more government jobs than there should be. It is not the duty of the government to furnish jobs to anybody, and anyone holding a job should be required to give service. The sole object of a job should not be to pay a salary to some one to whom an office holder is indebted. However, the job holders are always busy in political campaigns and oftentimes, the people let them control the political affairs of a community."

WANTS HOME FOR DEFORMED GIRL.

"I am 18 years old, but no bigger than a girl 10 years old," writes a deformed girl who lives about twenty-five miles from Duluth in the backwoods. The letter was written to Miss Jean Poirier, deputy state factory inspector.

For many years the father of the family has been ill and unable to work. The mother and the deformed girl have attended to the farm.

Miss Poirier is trying to find a home for the little girl in Duluth that she may attend the city schools.

LYCEUM—The Pierce Players in "The Squaw Man."
ORPHEUM—Advanced vaudeville.

UNIFORMED EMPLOYEES AT THE NEW ORPHEUM.

One pleasing feature connected with the Orpheum theater, which has occasioned much favorable comment, is the fact that uniforms are used by every employe of the house with whom the patrons come in contact.

The street door is opened by a uniformed attendant. A soldierly looking door man, clad in a neat uniform, and wearing a cap with gilt braid, presides over the destinies of the main entrance. All of the ushers are clad in uniforms, and every stage hand who makes his appearance before the footlights for the purpose of removing properties or assisting the actors or acrobats, is clad in uniform.

The ushers all have their posts, where they are expected to remain throughout the performance, and a head usher sees that there is no disturbance or unnecessary noise.

The house organization is, in fact, run on military lines as far as strict discipline is concerned. This is a feature of all the theaters on the Orpheum circuit.

Matinees are given daily at the Orpheum, beginning at 2:15 o'clock, when special prices are in effect. The "S. R. O." sign was out again last evening, all the seats being sold shortly after 8 o'clock.

"THE SQUAW MAN" IS PLEASING LYCEUM CROWDS.

"The Squaw Man," the four-act drama by Edwin Milton Royle, in which the Pierce Players are appearing at the Lyceum this week, is one of the strongest American dramas yet produced. That has been the verdict of the press wherever the play has been seen. The intense dramatic interest of the play, the novelty and originality of many of the situations, the vigor and simplicity of the language, the powerful delineation of the characters—some of which are new to the stage—are points that critics agree upon.

Mr. Jossey himself has a role that fits him like a glove whether he wears the red jacket of the British army officer, as he does in the first act, or the buckskin breeches and flannel shirt of the cowboy as he does in the other three.

H. E. Pierce & Co. have given the play a remarkable stage setting, remarkable even today when managers are rivaling one another in the elaborateness of their productions. The scene for the second act, a typical frontier saloon frequented by cowboys, gamblers and desperadoes in Eastern Utah—is an extraodinary example of scenic art and one that never fails to arouse the enthusiastic applause of the audience. The others are only less interesting because they are more familiar.

The company too is of the best. Miss Blanche Douglas is the leading lady and with a score of others completes a cast that would carry a play with far less in its favor than the "Squaw Man" to a triumphant issue. "The Squaw Man" will close with two performances next Saturday. Beginning Monday, Robert Edison's former success "Strongheart" will be seen.

PLAN PLEASES MINNESOTANS

State Leads in Applications for Postal Savings Bank Offices.

Washington, Aug. 24.—Minnesota is leading in the demand for postal savings banks. More than 10 per cent of all the applications received at the treasury department have come from there. The bulk of all the applications come from the territory west of the Mississippi.

While the West is leading in the demand for postal banks, the East is leading in applications for other banks that want to be depositories of the funds. For every postal savings bank that has been asked for in the East, there are two private banks asking to be named as depositories of postal money. The New England states are credited with only a little more than 4 per cent of the demand for the new banks.

The difference in the sentiment is well illustrated by comparing New York and Oklahoma. The Empire state has applied for eight banks and Oklahoma to date wants eleven. Pennsylvania, however, [illegible]cations. There has been none from Delaware or Rhode Island.

AUTOMOBILES COUNTERFEITED

Stolen Machines Are Fixed Over and Sold---Pittsburg Owners Suffer.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 24.—"Somewhere in this city is an automobile counterfeiting plant, where stolen machines are taken, made over to hide their identity and then put out as new machines. Now go out and find it."

This demand was made on a squad of local detectives by Capt. William Elmore, who later explained that he has more than 300 complaints of machines being stolen. In two instances, the captain said, detectives have seen men in stolen machines, and by setting a watch on railroad freight stations, supplemented by notifications and descriptions to surrounding communities, he was assured the machines were still in this city.

Capt. Elmore said he is convinced that a band of expert mechanics have banded together to prey upon automobile owners.

TWO KILLED AND NINE HURT.

Automobile Crashes Into Construction Train in the East.

New York, Aug. 24.—Three persons were killed and nine were severely hurt late yesterday afternoon when an automobile crashed into the side of a construction train on the Long Island railroad at Springfield, Queensborough. Four others were less seriously injured. Both the automobile and the construction train were wrecked. The dead are:

J. BERBON, 50 years old, New York City, chauffeur of the wrecked car.

BERTHA WEISS, 11 years old, New York City, a niece of the owner of the wrecked car.

REBECCA GLASS, 9 years old.

The spot where the crash occurred is not far from the crossing where twenty-three persons were killed outright in a tallyho accident with a locomotive in 1897.

BEAR VISITS GOLF CLUB.

Bruin Looks Over Grounds Then Returns to Timber.

Marquette, Mich., Aug. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—A bear with a large bump of inquisitiveness came within a few feet of the golf clubhouse two days ago, much to the surprise of Mrs. Sweeney and others who happened to be there. The bear came down the hill from the west, put his front paws on the fence, looked around for a moment, and then ambled back into the woods. The same bear has recently been seen in the wild growth in the western part of Park cemetery.

Hellweg, Frend Lorenz of Minneapolis and Mayor F. R. Crumpton were the chief speakers at the big banquet tendered the members of the State Grocers' association by the members of the local association at the Hotel Superior last night. A resolution opposing the parcels post was adopted at the morning session. The meeting of the association will be concluded at this morning's session, when the next place of meeting will be selected. This afternoon the delegates and their families will be taken on a trip about the harbor and up the river to the new steel plant site.

IN FIRE ZONE.

Many Superior People Are Fearful of Safety of Friends.

Considerable anxiety is being caused by friends and relatives known to be in the fire district. It is reported that Mr. and Mrs. James Douglas and their son and daughter have been burned to death near their home in Northern Idaho. The family formerly lived at 406 Hammond avenue, Mr. Douglas being an engineer in one of the flour mills here.

James A. Little is worrying about his wife and two children, who have been in Eureka, Mont., in the fire district. No reports have been received from that point as yet.

MAY BUILD LINE.

Commission Gives Soo Right to Build Through Billings Park.

The Soo road was today granted a certificate giving it the right to construct a line through Billings Park to the site of the proposed ore docks on the St. Louis bay front.

This line was projected some time ago, but the city objected because of its proximity to the residence district. The matter was taken up before the Wisconsin state railroad commission, the hearing being concluded about a month ago. This is the first intimation of the commission's decision.

Work will be commenced at once on the new line.

Suspected of Burglary.

A man booked as William Surloin was arrested last night in connection with the sensational burglary of Mueller's tailor shop. At the time the burglar made his escape by smashing a window in front of the store and making his escape through a crowd of onlookers. The suspect was arrested as a result of his return to the vicinity to get a bundle of clothes left in the rear of the building.

Will Carry on Work.

At the special meeting of the council called last night City Statistician B. J. Van Vleck was directed to make provision for the carrying on of the work now being done by the traffic commission of the Commercial club, the sum to come out of the appropriation for Mr. Van Vleck's office. Little else of importance was done at the meeting.

ONLY THREE MORE EXCURSIONS

Herald's Popular Priced Outings Will End Monday and Tuesday.

The Herald's popular priced excursions on the lake and up the river will end for the season next week. There remain only three more opportunities for those delightful steamer rides up the St. Louis river to Fond du Lac, down the south shore of the lake to Port Wing and along the north shore to Two Harbors.

If you wish to take advantage of these low-priced outings, make your plans for next Monday and Tuesday.

Monday morning the steamer Newsboy will leave Fifth avenue dock at 3 o'clock on the last Herald excursion to Fond du Lac. Round trip fare, only 25 cents. The last opportunity for a picnic before school begins.

Tuesday morning the steamer Mascotte will leave Fifth avenue dock at 8:30 o'clock for a 40-mile run down the south shore to Port Wing, Wis. An all day outing on the lake for only $1.

Tuesday afternoon the steamer America will leave Booth dock at 4 o'clock for a 30-mile run along the north shore, stopping an hour at Two Harbors and making the return trip by moonlight. This is one of the grandest rides ever afforded Duluthians or visitors and after Tuesday you will wait many months for another like it. Fare only 30 cents.

It is expected that the demand for tickets for these last excursions will be heavy and those who wish to assure themselves of the trips will do well to secure their tickets early at The Herald office.

Prof. Leonard Young, the new principal of the Central high school, arrived in Duluth this morning from South Bend, Ind. He will spend the time until the opening of school, Sept. 6 in familiarizing himself with the school and the methods here.

Mr. Young comes to Duluth highly recommended as an efficient educator. He was for several years principal of the high school at South Bend and is well thought of by educators who know him and his methods.

George Buck, who succeeded the late Charles Smith as principal last year, resigned the position last spring to take one as principal of a high school at Indianapolis.

FLUCTUATES BEFORE FALL

Wheat Declines, Rallies and Then Slumps to Low Levels at the Close.

Early News Mixed and Late Reports Are Bearish---Flax Is Weak.

Duluth Board of Trade, Aug. 24.—Wheat was erratic today. Following the opening decline wheat rallied to the opening levels when shorts covered and scattered buying developed from the bulls. The advance was unsustained and values slumped. Late news was bearish and the weakness of the Winnipeg market had a depressing effect.

September wheat lost ⅝c, December, ⅝c, and May, 1c. Cash wheat was on a parity with September. Oats closed ⅛c off; barley was unchanged; rye was the same, and cash durum lost ½c.

Flax was dull and trading gave no criterion of the market's position. The action of the market was uneventful. September lost 1½c, October was unchanged, November declined ½c and December lost ½c.

Values opened moderately firm and declined on profit-taking by buyers who stayed to the finish of yesterday's advance. The undertone was fairly good and when the bulls began to pick up wheat on the recession values rallied and at midday the market was on a par with the opening. News of flour business in an increasing quantity caused a better feeling in the pit and the professionals were encouraged to believe that the market was in a healthy position especially as trades in the last few days had been evened up to a large extent.

A small amount of flour was reported sold for export from this market. The demand is small and is confined mostly to low grades. Minneapolis wired that country mills said acceptances of flour were increasing and that city millers reported a healthier demand. Future flour business, however, is still slow compared with this time last year.

Cables were higher and unsettled weather in the United Kingdom delayed harvesting. Reports from France were less favorable. Snow wired that thrashing returns from Minnesota were averaging 17 bu an acre instead of 14.2 bu as indicated by the government's report as of Aug. 1. South Dakota is reporting average yields of 16 bu as compared with the government's estimate of 11 bu and in North Dakota yields are averaging 6 bu compared with the government's indicated yield of 5.2 bu. The reports received by Snow are mostly from the southern portions of the three states where the returns are most favorable.

Showers are predicted for the Northwest tonight and the bulls were led to believe that thrashing might be interfered with although they agreed that the situation was becoming more bullish anyway and that they were not forced to depend on possible rains for an argument. The bulls have been picking up wheat on all declines. They think there will be a big foreign demand and that the foreigner will be forced to take considerable stuff from this country. The bears have been selling on the bulges and the result has been a scalping market in the last few days.

Primary receipts are moderately heavy and the records show that grain has been marketed in the last month in large quantities. The farmer has sent his stuff to market freely and the assertions of the bulls that the farmer has held onto his grain is not borne out by figures. The average bear does not think domestic conditions will permit an advance of sustained proportions unless the foreign demand improves materially.

There is a possibility that the Russian crop has been underestimated and bulls who have been placing considerable credence in reports from that country that the crop was curtailed may awaken to the fact that reports from Russia have been comparatively as low as the experts' reports on the crop in this country. Nearly 5,000,000 bu of wheat was put on water last week by Russia, statistics which are regarded with considerable favor by the bears.

Argentina has not sent any reports of a distinctly bullish character. The bears think that if the Argentine crop comes through safely and the Danubian district and Russia continue to make free offers there will be no shortage of wheat abroad, despite the curtailed crop in France.

The winter wheat run is falling off and the spring wheat movement is not showing much of an improvement, although stores in the Northwest are slowly increasing. At this time last year interior reserves were exhausted and supplies did not accumulate at primary markets during the first part of the after-harvest movement and cash wheat was at premium. This year the mills had fair stocks at the start and have secured good supplies since. They now report larger stocks than at any similar time in recent years. Prices are actually higher than last year, notwithstanding larger stocks.

The Dornbusch detailed estimates on the world's wheat crop for the current year, published in quarters of 8 bu, give Europe 242,500,000 quarters against 255,000,000 quarters in 1909, and 226,500,000 quarters in 1906. America, including the United States, is credited with 120,250,000 quarters two years ago. Asia has 53,000,000 compared with 44,000,000 and 36,000,000 respectively. Africa has 6,500,000 compared with 6,750,000 and 5,750,000; Australia, 10,000,000 against 11,250,000 and 9,000,000. These figures indicate a decrease of 20,000,000 quarters or 160,000,000 bu in the world's crop as compared with last year.

Chicago Inter Ocean, Tuesday: It was said that the 150,000 bu red wheat sold at Toledo yesterday was low grade for export via Montreal. New York sold 48,000 bu and philadelphia did a little business. Kansas City sold 100,000 bu wheat to Texas millers and said their prices were 1c higher.

A special dispatch to The Herald from Grand Forks, N. D.: Only scattering reports are being received from over the state on the results of the thrashing operations. Some of the reports are better than anticipated, while numerous others are not so good. From Taylor comes the report that Paul Ziner thrashed 106 acre of wheat on new breaking that averaged 19 bu an acre. Frank Honnett, residing near Webster, Ramsey county, thrashed 100 acres that went 20 bu an acre. The entire wheat crop on his farm will average about 12 bu an acre. Several reports on thrashing at Courtney, Stutsman county, have been received. J. E. Lange thrashed wheat that went 13 bu to the acre and weighed 58 lb. It graded No. 1 northern. Peter Gospoder, near the Spiritwood lake district, secured 10 bu an acre of No. 1 northern. On the Palubitzki farm near the Fried postoffice, also in the Courney district, a yield of 8 bu an acre was obtained. The yield for this neighborhood, it is expected will average about 15 bu an acre.

Stark county will have a yield of about 12 bu an acre on flax judging from reports so far sent out from that section. In the Anamcose, McHenry county, some fair yields are being received. Jacob Hess, Jr., got 9 bu an acre on 200 acres; Julius Stele received 7 bu an acre on 10[illegible] acres, and J. Hess Sr., received only 6½ bu an acre. About 9 bu an acre will be the average for the Anamoose district.

Near Grand Forks, O'Connor Bros. secured a yield of 22 bu of wheat on a 60-acre field.

Chicago Inter Ocean: All records have been broken in the receipts of grain at Chicago in the past three weeks, 24,480 cars of all prains having been received and inspected at Chicago. This is 2,480 cars above the record for any month in the history of the grain trade in Chicago, the previous high figure being 22,000 cars, made six years ago. The grain has been handled in exceptionally good shape by the Illinois state grain department, in fact so fast that the elevators are unable to dispose of the immense quantity, although inspectors have worked all night at the elevators so that no time was lost. The congestion of cars at the elevators is severe, one of the smaller grain carrying roads reporting 1,000 cars on track yesterday that it was unable to switch to the elevators as there was no room for them. There is now over 6,000 cars of grain on all roads waiting to be run into elevators, all of which has been inspected.

Forecast: All over Northwest probably showers tonight or Thursday, cooler Thursday. Dakotas, Nebraska and Montana partly cloudy tonight or Thursday. Cooler Thursday.

Ted Welch wired to E. L. Welch & Co. as follows: Marietta, Minn.— Lac Qui, Parle county wheat 20 bu per acre; oats, 30; barley, 15 bu. Teitz thrashed, 25 bu per acre.

Winnipeg wired Thornton: About 12,000,000 bu of wheat under contract for fall shipment this time last year. Not a bushel so far this year that I can hear of. It is certainly not a bullish feature as we will need a good export demand soon to take care of the movement.

Broomhall cabled: Wheat market opened steady and ¼d higher. Further advanced ½d being influenced by the strength in America yesterday and the firmness in the Winnipeg market. Following this an easier feeling developed and prices declined ½d for the near months. Selling pressure was induced by continued poor demand for parcels and the lower English country markets. Later in the session the market again reacted and values advanced 1d from the low of the morning. Buying was attributed to the unsettled weather in the United Kingdom, which is delaying harvesting and unfavorable weather conditions in France and the fact that the continent is buying in this market. At this time the market was firm at ½@¾d higher than yesterday. Corn was steady at the opening and unchanged. During the morning prices advanced ⅜d with covering by shorts on the continued scarcity of spots.

Kinyon wired from Holland, Man.: Carman averaging 8 to 10 bu; Elm Creek west to Rathwell, 12 bu, all grading No. 1; Treherne, 15 bu, grading No. 2 and No. 3; here, 8 to 10, grading No. 2. Oats all light, crop running 10 to 30 bu; quality poor.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Opens Stronger But Quickly Develops Weakness.

Chicago, Aug. 24.—Wheat opened steady today, the range being from ⅛c down to ¼c up, with May a trifle stronger than the less distant options and speedily developed weakness. The foreign markets were somewhat more bullish. Some of the important concerns were liberal sellers, commission houses taking the buying tide. In the first hour the figures declined from ½c to ⅝c. Favorable weather reports from the Northwest fields and cessation of the Canadian frost talk were also taken advantage of by the bears. September opened ⅛c down to ⅛@¼c up at 99¾c to $1 and sagged to 99¼c. December opened with the same range at $1.04 to $1.04¼ and fell away to $1.03⅜.

Offerings continued to load the pit and at the close the weakness was pronounced. September closed 1⅛@¼ to 1¼c off at 98⅝c. December closed 1@1¼c off at $1.02⅞@1.03.

Corn opened unchanged to ¼c up and quickly lost its strength, declining in terday's closing prices. Country houses were active sellers and were joined by some of the buyers of yesterday. September opened unchanged to ¼c up at 60¾c to 61c and declined to 60¼c. December started unchanged to ⅛@¼c up at 58¾c to 58½c and rested at 58⅛c.

The market showed little buoyancy later in the session. The close was weak with September ¼c off at 60½c. December closed ½ to ⅝c down at 58c.

Oats had a weak tone and opened ⅛c up to ⅛c down. In the first hour sellers loaded the pit and shaved ¾c off prices. September opened unchanged at 34½c. December started ⅛c up to ⅛c down at 36⅝to36⅞c and quickly declined to 36¼c.

Light offerings and improved prices for hogs kept provisions generally steady at the opening the figures at the outset being from 5c up to 10c down. Opening prices for the September products were: Pork, 21.27½, 2½c down; lard, 11.95, unchanged and ribs, 12.35, 2½c off.

Foreign Firmness Fails of Effect in Wheat Market.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 24.—Local prices failed to respond to firmness in foreign wheat markets. Trading was professional and scalping profits were quite generally accepted. September closed 1@1⅛ lower than yesterday, December and May both ¾ lower. Local elevator stocks decreased 90,000 bu for four days. Minneapolis today received 347 cars of wheat against 303 cars a year ago; Duluth, 139 cars against 7 and Winnipeg, 51 cars against 5. September opened $1.10¼@⅛; high, $1.10¼; low, $1.08⅞; closed, $1.09. December opened $1.12¼@⅛; high, $1.12¼; low, $1.11@⅛; closed, high$1.11⅛@¼. May opened, $1.16⅛; high, $1.16⅛; low, $1.14¾; closed, $1.15@⅛. Cash wheat today was steady to slightly easier. Demand strong for choice grades, but slow for low varieties. Millers and elevators were buyers. No. 1 northern sold for 1 to 2½c above September. SAGS IN THE FINAL HOUR

Stock Market Closes Steady on Sharp Upturn at the Last.

Much of Session's Selling Is Laid to Possible Tariff Revision.

New York, Aug. 24.—The stock market developed a downward tendency at the start with losses of a full point in such active issues as Reading, Southern Pacific and United States Steel. Canadian Pacific lost 2¼ and there were substantial fractional declines in Union Pacific, St. Paul, New York Central Consolidated Gas and Amalgamated Copper.

Further weakness developed in the first hour and stocks were thrown over with general losses well in excess of a point. Room traders put out short lines confidently and there was little resistence encountered at any point. Reading, Union Pacific and United States Steel bore the brunt of the selling. Reading broke 2½; Union Pacific 2¼; Southern Pacific, United States Steel, International Harvester and North American, 2; New York Central and St. Paul, 1¾; Northern Pacific, 1⅝, and American Steel Foundries, 1½.

The selling stopped and the market became quiet for a long interval, with prices ruling slightly above the lowest. Near noon the downward movement was resumed and Union Pacific, Reading and United States Steel sold lower than before. Much of the selling was attributed to uneasiness over the prospect of further tariff revision. The weakness of the industrial group was partly accounted for by reports that one of the largest of the independent steel companies had ordered restriction of operations because of the discouraging outlook. Brooklyn Union Gas gave way 4 points, Federal Mining preferred 2⅝, Rock Island 2, and Pennsylvania, Pittsburg, C., C. & St. Louis, Consolidated Gas, American Cotton Oil and American Hide & Leather preferred 1½@1¾. Bonds were easier.

The market closed steady. After holding almost motionless during the greater part of the last hour, the market began to sag again in the last ten minutes, in sympathy with an attack on Amalgamated Copper, which lowered it more than 2 points from yesterday's closing. Reading, Union Pacific and United States Steel were foremost in the decline, with the list generally going down to near the lowest of the day. Just at the close a sharp upturn began, which ran to 1¼ in St. Paul and 1½ in New York Central.

Wednesday Aug. 24.
Again we have had a stem-winder in our local market.
The Amalgamated has brought suit against the Ballaklava. I suppose for some reason maybe they would like to get control of this rich mine and they probably would like to get control as cheaply as possible. We understand that part of two veins are in question, but what does this mean and the answer is: Only a small part of the workings in the B. & B. is disputed. The Ballaklava has a huge vein system which belong to them and no one can stop them from working their ledges. It would be up to the government of the United States to protect their interests and the government is a little bigger than the Amalgamated Copper Co. It is all right to start a suit to scare the public, but those at the head of the B. & B. do not scare worth a cent; therefore stand by them. Any one can start a suit. Don't you remember one time I was sued for $25,000 for an introduction, and then was I not sued for $108,000? Both of these cases were dismissed, but still they hung over me for several months. It reminds me of the fellow on the chain gang. He was asked why he was jailed and he told his friend what he had done, and his friend at once told him that they could not put him in jail for such an offense. The fellow on the chain gang said: "That is what others have told me, but I'm here," and that is about the way with many of these law suits; they can start them any time and it takes time to get them out of the way.
Our market will soon get over this scare and things will start off again. We advise the purchase of the curbs, such as Scott, Amazon, Red Warrior, Ballaklava and many others.

WELL HIT OFF.

Speaker Cannon, at a dinner in Washington, praised a Washington physician.

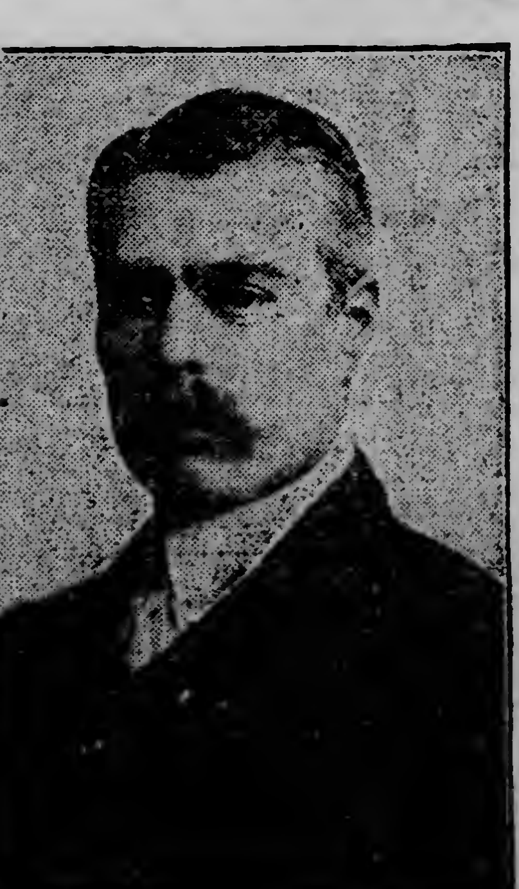
"The doctor has a neat way," he said, "of hitting off a case.

"There was a Kentuckian—from the Blue Grass region, you know—who called to be treated for a red nose.

"'Doctuh,' the Kentuckian said, 'what shall I take, such, to remove the redness of mah nose, sah?'

"'Take nothing—especially between meals,' the doctor answered."

Mysterious Robbery From Moving Train.



A couple of years ago, one of the wholesale houses of this city ordered goods shipped from Chicago to Warroad. The goods were placed on the cars at Chicago, came to Duluth, and were transferred to a box car on the Missabe road. This car was sealed and sent on its way. It was inspected at Saginaw and was still sealed. At the next stop it was inspected again, and it was found that the seal had been broken and some of the goods were gone. The car had been robbed while in motion. Mr. Norton, the county attorney was notified, and an investigation was instituted. Upon careful search of the road bed, a place was found where a box had apparently been thrown off, and a small piece of wood, similiar to that of the box containing the merchandise, was found. Starting with this small clue the trail was taken up and led to Superior, Warroad, Beaudette and International Falls. Finally two men were arrested with some of the goods still in their possession. One of them proved to be an old criminal with a penitentiary record. The other was a young fellow who had been led into it by his companion. The former was vigorously prosecuted by Mr. Norton, convicted by a jury, and sent to the penitentiary. The other pleaded guilty and was given a jail sentence. This was an expensive case to try, but the wholesalers are entitled to the same protection as the individual. Was this case handled right? Is the county attorney's office being conducted properly? You can demonstrate your approval by voting for John H. Norton at the Primaries.

EIGHT DIE IN CRASH ON THE GRAND TRUNK

Only One Body Identified in Disaster Near Durand, Mich.

Engine Plows Through Pullman Sleeper and Debris Takes Fire.

Charred Bones All That Is Left of Six of the Victims.

Durand, Mich., Aug. 25.—Probably eight persons were killed and eight injured, three probably fatally, when Grand Trunk Train No. 4 crashed into the rear of Train No. 14, stalled on the track two miles east of Durand last night.

Only one body has been positively identified that of Mrs. Alma Woodward of Montreal, an invalid, who was travelling with a nurse and her son, Clifton A. Davis. One of the other bodies is believed to be that of the nurse, Miss Swinger of Bellfield, N. D.

Dr. Fair of Durand, surgeon of the railroad company, asserts that the charred bones so far recovered should represent about six persons.

It is believed that they are those of four women, one child and one man.

In Hospital at Flint.

Bert Mitchell, Battle Creek, engineer of Train No. 14, head bruised; condition critical.

Mrs. Lester Sholtes, Chicago, aged 28, scalp wounds and bruises.

Arthur Watt, Edmonton, Alberta, aged 33, face and hands burned.

Mrs. Kate McBean, Chicago, aged 63, right leg fractured.

Mrs. Lester Dochler, Tavistock, Ont., Can., aged 74, fractured leg and bruises.

In Durand Hospital.

The injured who were brought to the hospital at Durand are:

George Nelson, Battle Creek; fireman on No. 4, badly scalded; will probably die.

Clinton A. Davis, Montreal, seriously and probably fatally scalded.

Mrs. M. Steultey, Dubuque, Iowa, upper lip cut and severe bruises.

Charles Spencer of Battle Creek, engineer on No. 4, is said to have been badly injured but his name does not appear on the list given out by the railroad officials as being taken to a hospital, at either Durand or Flint.

Plowed Through Sleeping Car.

The engine of No. 4 plowed its way three-quarters of the way through the sleeping car Nebraska, the last car in train No. 14, catching eighteen persons asleep in the coach. The firebox of the colliding engine then dropped out and the death coach in a few minutes was blazing from end to end.

As the flames ate their way through the splintered timbers of the coach, the cries of the injured ceased and the odor of burning flesh deterred the passengers of the undamaged cars and the farmers who had hurried from their homes to assist in the work of rescue.

Sections of Express Train.

The two trains were sections of the Montreal & Boston express and left Chicago yesterday afternoon. No. 14, the first section, passed Durand at 10:02 p. m. and No. 4 at 10:35. The engine of No. 14 was having trouble with its air-brakes and two miles out of this city Engineer Mitchell stopped the train and, with his fireman, got down

TO INSPECT GARY PLANT

Members of Lake Superior Mining Institution Leave for Gary, Ind.

Visit Mines on Gogebic Range Before Departing From Ironwood.

Ironwood Mich., Aug. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—A special train over the North-Western railroad left here at 2 a. m. today bearing about 250 members of the Lake Superior Mining Institute and visitors, en route to Gary, Ind., where they will look over the great plant of the United States Steel corporation. Part of today will be devoted to looking over mining machinery plants in Chicago before leaving for Gary on a special train.

Returning, the party will stop in Chicago tomorrow evening for the annual banquet at the Congress hotel.

The annual gathering of the institute began here yesterday.

Many Mines Visited.

The special train conveyed the institute on flat cars from explorations through the Norris, Ashland, Aurora and Newport mines in this city. Then they left for Bessemer and Wakefield, visiting the Tilden, Colby, Anvil and some other mines in that vicinity. A heavy thunder, rain and hail storm compelled the institute to return here at 8 p. m. without visiting the mines east on the Gogebic range.

At 7:30 last night there was dinner at the Curry hotel. At 8 o'clock the members met at Pierce's opera house. John Bush was appointed chairman. Mining methods on the Gogebic range were discussed. Percy Williams of the Montreal company read a paper on "Advanced Mining."

A committee was elected to appoint officers for the ensuing year.

These officers will be appointed later. The meeting adjourned after a speech by Dr. Libby of Iron River, Mich.

TALK ABOUT NEW SPEAKER

Republicans Casting About for Successor to Cannon, If---

Tawney, Olmsted, Mann and Weeks Suggested, Unless Democrats Control.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, Aug. 25.—Discussion is uppermost among Republican house members as to a substitute candidate for Speaker Cannon—provided their party retains control of the house.

Mr. Cannon's former supporters do not attempt to deny that he has lost notable strength since the adjournment of the house, even some of his staunchest adherents having announced that they could not again vote for him for speaker.

Among those who have taken this course is Judge Walter I. Smith of Iowa, who was a tower of strength to the speaker as a member with John Dalzell of Pennsylvania on the rules committee and as a member of the appropriations committee. Other Republicans discussed for the speakership are James A. Tawney of Minnesota, Marlin E. Olmsted of Pennsylvania, James W. Weeks of Massachusetts and James R. Mann of Illinois.

Terms of Service.

Mr. Smith is serving his sixth term, Mr. Tawney his ninth, Mr. Olmsted his seventh, Mr. Weeks his fourth, and Mr. Mann his seventh. All of these are strong men, and all of them have supported the "regular" organization. Whether the original insurgent Republicans will put forward a candidate has not yet developed. A great deal in their case depends upon the result of the November election returns. The Democrats who are confident of success, are not discussing candidates. They seem to be agreed that there will be but one Democratic candidate—Champ Clark of Missouri.

Should Democrats Win.

Should the Democrats win, their chief difficulty will undoubtedly be in the control of their majority. Mr. Clark's best reputation as a house member does not embrace superior knowledge of parliamentary law. Parliamentary contentions he usually leaves to other Democrats, such as Fitzgerald of New York, and Underwood of Alabama, both of whom are fairly well informed in parliamentary law and practice. The Republicans should prove a troublesome minority to the Democrats, if they control the house. On the minority side, with Mr. Cannon, would be John Dalzell, the other candidates for speaker already mentioned, and Asher G. Hinds of Maine, who has a national reputation as clerk to the speaker and who is a candidate in a Republican district.

LOUISIANA HAS CAVIAR MARKET

Russian Sturgeon Are Migrating to the Gulf of Mexico.

New Orleans, Aug. 25.—Numbers of so-called "Russian" sturgeon, the fish that have been the source of millions of dollars in revenue to Russian fishermen on account of the roe which provide the world's markets with caviar, are now in the main gulf, according to reports received by the game and fish commission of Louisiana. The migration of these fish into the waters hitherto uninhabited by them seems inexplicable, but this movement is now putting hundreds of dollars into the pockets of Louisiana fishermen.

BECKEMEYER ON WITNESS STAND

Representative Testifies in the Browne Bribery Trial.

Chicago, Aug. 25.—Representative H. J. C. Beckmeyer, testifying in the trial of Lee O'Neil Browne here today, admitted coming to Chicago before he was subpoenaed as a witness by the special grand jury. He said that his purpose in coming here at that time was to hold a conference with Representative Robert E. Wilson regarding the bribery and "jackpot" expose.

Mr. Beckmeyer was not allowed to tell what was said at this conference. The witness, however, was permitted to repeat portions of a conversation which he had with Representative Emanuel Abrahams at the same time regarding the same matter.

"Representative Abrahams told me to stand pat," said Beckeyer, "and tell the people in the criminal court building nothing. Abrahams said he was going to stand pat, because if we told anything we both would get into trouble."

SOCIALISTS BAIL ALLEGED THIEF

Russian Fugitive Awaiting Extradition Released on $5,000 Bond.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 25.—Julius Vezosal, the Russian fugitive, who is awaiting extradition proceedings on the charge that he stole $50,000 from the Russian sub-treasury at Tiflis, was released today on bail of $5,000, which was deposited in cash in the United States court by the Socialist Labor party of Massachusetts, of which the fugitive is a member.

Known Dead Number 142 and 106 Men Are Missing.

EIGHTY-SIX MEN OF FOREST SERVICE DEAD.

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 25.—The fact that about eighty-six men of the forest service have perished has been definitely established by reports to the supervisor at Wallace, Idaho.

Washington, Aug. 25.—Basing his judgment on telegrams from the Northwest telling of the fall of rain and snow, Associate Forester Potter today expressed the opinion to war department officials that the crisis had passed in the fight against the forest fires.

Two companies of troops which were requested by Supt. Morgan of the Flathead Indian reservation for fire fighting duty will not be required owing to a fall of snow last night, according to a telegram received today at the Indian bureau. It is assumed that the fires in that section are under control.

One Hundred Forty-two Dead.

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 25.—The mystery of the bodies that are being found in the St. Joe country of Idaho, probably will be cleared up today. One hundred and six men living in the St. Joe valley are said to be missing. Twenty-two bodies, supposed to be of settlers, were found yesterday. Several days ago twenty bodies were discovered scattered over an area of over a mile.

Supervisor Weigle included them in his list of dead rangers. Last night, however, he declared they were not his employes.

Add the various known dead and the total is 142. This is without taking into account the 185 rangers imprisoned in headwaters of the St. Joe.

Fire Fighters Losing Heart.

The appalling loss of life has taken the heart out of the surviving foresters and an order has been issued not to risk life to save timber.

It is believed that the present fires are the most expensive the United States has ever known. An expert railroad builder estimates the loss of the Milwaukee railroad at $2,500,000.

There are 180 men surrounded in the mountains between Lolo pass and St. Mary's, and Maj. Fenn has sent guides.

Conditions in the Clearwater reserve are hopeless. Maj. Fenn has received instructions from Missoula to recall all the fire-fighters from the interior of the stricken region and set them to work on the outskirts of the fire zone. The message said:

"Save the lives of the men and let the timber go."

There are thirty-five large fires and many smaller ones on the reservation.

SNOW AND RAIN FALLING.

According to reports sent to Duluth by the Rocky Mountain Bell Telephone company this noon, it was raining at Billings and Missoula, Mont., and snowing at Butte, Helena and Bozeman, and the fires north of Missoula were under control. The fire was reported practically out in the St. Regis district. Refugees were returning to Wallace. The snow in the vicinity of Bozeman had extinguished the fires in the mountains.

GRISCOM SAYS OTHERS WILL JOIN

Orleans County Indorsement of Roosevelt Pleases the Chairman.

New York Aug. 25.—The news that Orleans county had instructed its delegates to the state convention to favor Theodore Roosevelt as the convention's temporary chairman, was received with elation by Chairman Lloyd C. Griscom of New York county.

"The news from Orleans county this morning," said Mr. Griscom, "shows how the Republicans of New York state feel in the present contest. It will ring from one end of the state to the other and stir Republicans everywhere. It will be followed soon by other victories for the men who have sided with Taft and Roosevelt."

UNIFORM LAW MEN IN SESSION

Meeting of Commission Is Being Held in Chattanooga, Tenn.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Aug. 25.—The annual conference of the Uniform Law commission, which holds its sessions in connection with the American Bar association, met here today with President W. G. Smith of Philadelphia presiding. The delegates were welcomed by Mayor Thompson and immediately thereafter the commission took up the consideration of a uniform marriage and desertion act. Today's program also included a discussion of a uniform corporation law and the child labor question in its general terms. Discussions of these subjects will be followed by reports of committees and the election of officers.

BIG STICK IS READY FOR GUILTY RICH

Roosevelt Makes Speech at Buffalo on Crookedness of All Kinds.

Says He Is Ready to Make War on Those in His Own Party.

Promises Fight at State Convention---Talks of Great Lakes.

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 25.—Theodore Roosevelt pledged himself to the men of Buffalo today to help them and all sincere citizens to fight crookedness wherever it was found.

"I'll help you just as I did in the past," he said, speaking to the Ellicott club, whose guest he was at breakfast, an hour after sunrise.

He made a plea for the punishment of crooked and grafting public officials and the election of honest ones in their places, a process of gradually but permanently raising the morale of political and business life and said he thought it the duty to hunt out crooks, especially crooks in his own party.

Crooks in the Party.

"I believe in party government," he said, "but the moment a question of honesty is involved I recognize no party distinctions, or if I do make any, it is that it is a little more my business to put the grafter and crook out of public life if he belongs to my party than if to another. This attitude demands that one's attention be fixed not on financial or social values but on conduct."

The men who heard him, who noted his earnestness in dealing with the subject of crookedness and grafting, and who frequently broke in with sharp applause, had in mind his expressions within the last few days, and that of yesterday afternoon at Utica, when a statement by William Barnes, Jr., the Albany leader, to the effect that there would be a fight in the convention against its domination by Mr. Roosevelt, was read to him. He replied:

All the Fight They Want.

"They will have all the fight they want. I am only going to the convention because I feel that the public interests, the interests of the people of New York, demand that the Republican party be given a chance to stand squarely and uncompromisingly for clean, decent, honest policies. I go to that convention to make the speech exactly as it had been planned originally, and while I hope there will be enough good sense to prevent any Albion, N. Y., Aug. 25.—The Republican county convention of Orleans county in selecting delegates to the state convention, instructed them to favor Theodore Rosevelt for temporary chairman of the state convention over Vice President Sherman.

KEEP GREAT LAKES CLEAN

Plea Is Made By Col. Roosevelt in His Buffalo Speech.

Ex-President Declares That They Must Not Be Polluted.

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 25.—Col. Roosevelt's speech here today in regard to the pollution of water supply was as follows:

"I will plunge at once into the subject that I know is of the utmost interest to you and ought to be of interest to all our people and that is: Keeping the fresh water supply of the Great Lakes unpolluted.

"We claim to be a civilized people, and civilized people ought to know how to dispose of the sewage in some other way than putting it into the drinking water. We need action by both state and national government to put a complete stop to the pollution of the Great Lakes; action by the state so far as our own boundary is concerned, and action by the nation, because other states besides our own are interested.

Interests of All.

"Our people must realize from now on that in addition to grasping after new fields of conquest they have got to take good care of the things that have been conquered; that they have got to attend to a number of things they have left unattended. Too much, in the past, it has been the habit of our country to let every man do what he wanted without regard to other men. We have got to that state when we must consider the interests of all.

We have got to do more in such manner as to keep unpolluted the Great Lakes, the most wonderful body of fresh water in the country. We must do that in all matters pertaining to life, and in the matter of the improvement of the extraordinary heritage we have received and in the field of morals, public and domestic.

Keep the Source Clean.

"We must keep the water supply unpolluted, and to do that you must see that it is not polluted in the source. In the same way we must keep the standard of public honest and public decency high, and you cannot do that unless the individual citizen in the first place himself keeps it himself."

WATERWAYS TO BENEFIT

River and Harbor Legislation Is Likely to Figure Next Session.

Both Leading Parties Committed to It---Lawmakers Willing.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, Aug. 25.—River and harbor legislation will be among the most important subjects considered by the next congress. Both parties, through their leaders, are fully committed to a systematic policy of waterway development; broad and comprehensive but along economical lines and in conformity with the ideas as set forth in the interview with Gen. William H. Bixby, chief of engineers, that the press and all others interested should unite in the advocacy only of projects approved both for their scientific feasibility and their commercial practicability.

The indications are that there will be little change in the membership of the rivers and harbors committee in the next house, unless the Democrats control the house, in which event they will have four more members accredited to their side. So far only two members—McLachlan of California and Tener of Pennsylvania—have not been renominated for congress. The former was defeated in the recent primaries, and the latter is the Republican candidate for governor of Pennsylvania.

In the Senate Committee.

The commerce committee of the senate, which handles river and harbor legislation in that body, will possibly change its personnel in only one instance, and that is in the event of the defeat of Senator Depew, who will undoubtedly have opposition in his own party as a candidate to succeed himself.

The senate committee is solidly committed, with the exception of one or two, at most, to a progressive policy of waterway improvement which has been the slogan of the National Rivers and Harbors congress ever since its organization a decade or more ago.

LOUIS HILL ADMITS LETTER

Says He Wrote to Governor Hay About Conservation Congress.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—L. W. Hill, president of the Great Northern railroad, admits freely that he wrote to Governor Hay of Washington cautioning him against the projected lineup at the national conservation congress to be held in St. Paul, Sept. 5 to 9, inclusive.

It was undoubtedly on the strength of Mr. Hill's observations on the program that the conference of Western governors was held in Salt Lake City, which resulted in a decision to send large delegations to fight for the ideas of that part of the country regarding the disposition to be made of the national timber and other resources.

"Certainly, I wrote to Governor Hay," said Mr. Hill today. "The only letter I wrote to him was one urging him to come to the congress. I explained to him how the meeting was lined up, and advised him that the people of the West ought to come here to take care of themselves."

ELECTRICAL STORM IN COPPER COUNTRY

Hancock Merchant's Wife Is Struck While Standing on Her Porch.

Houghton, Mich., Aug. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Copper country is in the throes of a severe electrical storm which began last evening about 6 o'clock with hail and rain. Over an inch and a half of rainfall has been recorded and the heavens are still belching forth.

Mrs. N. W. Sewell, wife of a Hancock merchant, was shocked by lightning while standing on her porch watching the storm. She will live but may be paralyzed.

MILLIONS FOR STATE

Receipts for the Last Fiscal Year Amount to $14,810,944.53.

Nearly Four and One-Half Millions Paid By the Railroads.

St. Paul, Minn, Aug. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Minnesota received $14,810,944.53 during the fiscal year ending July 30, according to a statement issuerd today by State Auditor S. G. Iverson.

Of this amount the railroads of the state paid $4,458,911.59. This included the tax on gross earnings and the back taxes paid by the Great Northern, Northern Pacific and Soo roads. The previous year the roads paid only $2,976,792.55, or nearly a million and a half less than in 1909-10.

From General Tax.

The income from the general tax was less than in 1908-09, or $1,907,902.17, compared with $2,293,294.30. The reduction of the tax was due to the prosperous condition of the state treasury.

Inheritance tax receipts also show a big increase during the year, going from $215,093.38 to $508,810.91.

Royalty on iron ore shows an increase from $119,393.52 in 1909, to $303,952.39 in 1910.

LIFE IN MADEIRA.

A Lotus Eating Existence Which Charms Even Americans.

Madeira furnishes a novel experience to the visitor. He is taken about in a carro, a vehicle the like of which he has never seen before, though it is a distant and very much ornamented reminder of the old stoneboats he may have known on the farm when he was a boy.

These carros are sledges with a wicker body resting on springs and are drawn by teams of oxen. The animals have long horns with holes in the ends through which are strung leather thongs. By jerking these to one side or the other the driver guides the team.

One man runs ahead to lead the team. Another goes alongside and devotes himself to shouting and to prodding the beasts with a long pole. At intervals a stop is made to grease the runners of the sledge. The cobblestones glisten like worn steel rails from the grinding of these runners.

The streets go up and down like toboggan slides, and on foot you must wear rubber soles or soft native shoes to keep your footing. If you journey to the upper heights where the quintas or country homes are you take a hammock swung by a pole to the shoulders of two brawny bearers, or climbs on foot. There are two tram cars drawn by three horses each, in which for a fare of 3 pence English, 6 cents American or 140 reis Portuguese one may ride over a limited route in the city.

But the English do not conform to the native custom. At the peril of their necks English men and women go galloping up and down the streets, slippery as sleet clad cellar doors, on imported horses shod with spiked shoes. Also two small motor cars have recently made their appearance in Funchal and they chug about the sharp angles with their hill climbing gear thrown in to the great consternation of the natives, who have not grown used to them.

One of the chief stunts for travellers is to journey two miles up the mountain on a ratchet railway and to coast down in sleds, piloted by natives who steer the wicker vehicles from behind. These conductors run along with guiding ropes and stop at every wine shop, panting piteously and making eloquent gestures to indicate that they are perishing with heat and thirst and that the price of a glass of wine is the price of lasting gratitude.

The way crooks in and out between overhanging vineyard walls of stone and plaster, along the sides of gorges overlooking leagues of land and sea and through the native quarter of the town. Once down the conductors carry the sledges up the two mile climb on their heads — and some sledges are large enough to seat three persons. For this labor they are paid by the company that employs them 20 cents a day.

The average speed of the descent is twenty miles an hour, but in places where the grade is steep one feels his sledge shoot downward like a falling stone, and knows from the stopping of the pattering feet behind that the conductor has stepped onto the rear runners and that it is genuine coasting.

The temperature has a range of from 49 deg. in winter to 76 deg. on extra hot summer days. The breeze always blows by day and drops away at night, and rains are frequent.

The residences of the rich are the quintas in the mountains. A quinta is literally a closed in garden, but its meaning is enlarged to take in house and grounds and all that is included in the Spanish residencia. The residents travel in bullock carts and hammocks to and from the city.

"The life is one of ease and indolence," says a writer in the Travel Magazine, "The rich breakfast in bed, rise at 11, stroll in the gardens and in the afternoon the ladies come to town and play bridge. There is a daily concert at the casino, a nightly ball and social life is gay. I met several American families who live the quinta life and want no other—it is lotus eating dalliance in a garden of Eden—and they say it suits them.

"The growth of the Madeira grape and the manufacture of wine is known to the world, but what is not so well known is the fact that every grape grown is really from imported American vines and that when the entire wine industry of the islands was paralyzed and near to death the American consul saved the industry by importing the Isabel grape from California. In 1851 the Oidium tuckeri, a disease of the vines, struck every vineyard and trellis and for eight or nine years the wine presses of Madeira stood idle. Then the American grape was brought and the newer vines were grafted to the old and treated with sulphur.

"The experiment was a success—the rehabilitated vines proved immune and once again the pipes of wine were exported and the dead industry came to life. In 1871 the phylloxera attacked the grapes, and this meant that a sturdier and more blight resisting stock must be secured. Again grafting of American stock proved the solution."

REFINED RAILLERY.

"Poor Lal Brough," said an actor at the Lambs', "had a great liking for London 'bus drivers and conductors. He was always telling quaint yarns about them.

"He told me once that, as he sat on a 'bus in High Holborn going toward Tottenham Court road, an elephant and castle 'bus went by the other way and Brough's conductor took off his badge and dangled it by its cord in the elephant and castle driver's face.

"The driver, at sight of the dangling badge, turned purple with rage. He swore and shook his fist and went on terribly, while the conductor on Brough's 'bus jiggled the badge by its string and laughed as if he would burst.

"Brough had watched the odd incident with a puzzled smile.

"'What was the idea of that performance?' he asked, as the conductor pinned on his badge again.

"'Why,' said the conductor, pointing his thumb derisively at the driver, who still, from a distance, shook his fist and swore—'why, ye see, 'is father was 'ung.'"

A WONDERFUL SUNDIAL.

A remarkable sundial stands in the churchyard at Cuencame, state of Durango, Mex., says a writer in the June Wide World Magazine. The dial is twenty-five feet in height, the portion upon which the figures and lines for denoting time are engraved being a solid stone slab five feet in height. The opposite side of this slab is also marked and has a pointer for indicating time, so that throughout the year, no matter what the position of the sun, the correct hour, quarter, or half, is indicated. This is practically the only method the natives of Cuencame have for ascertaining the time, as such things as watches and clocks are almost non-existent in the town. The entire monument was the gift of a young lawyer, Don F. Vasquez del Mercado, to the town. He himself worked out the necessary calculations to make the dial exact, and also wielded the stone-cutter's tools in the production of the face not wishing to trust any one else for fear of mistake, as Mexican mechanics are not exactly noted for the accuracy of their work.

EACH INDIAN HAS $20,000

Osage Tribe in Oklahoma the Richest People in the World.

The Congressional Committee Hears of Plot to Grab Federal School.

Pawhuska, Okla., Aug. 25.—Testimony was given before the congressional committee investigating Indian affairs today, that each of the 2,300 Osage Indians is worth $20,000, which on a per capita basis constitute them the richest people in the world.

As their property is held in restriction by the government, the Indians have used a great many lawyers. One attorney testified that he represented twenty-three claimants, who demanded that the government place them on the Osage rolls, thus giving them the right to $20,000 worth of property. The wealth of these claimants, if they are successful would amount to $460,000.

A firm of attorneys declared they were to get a contingent fee of $423,000 for securing to the Osage tribe $700,000 said to be due them by the government.

Grab for Government School.

An attempt in which it was alleged land grabbers sought to gain possession of the $1,000,000 government Indian school at Chilocco in Northern Oklahoma, near the Kansas state line, has been laid before the congressional committee which is investigating Indian land contracts.

The school comprises numerous stone buildings and 8,000 acres of land, and is open to all Indian children except those of what are known as the Five Civilized Tribes in this state. The land is valued by the officials at $400,000 and the buildings at $600,000.

Representations had been made at Washington, it was stated, that the buildings were dilapidated, the farm lands of little value, and that the Indians refused to send their children to the school.

Found Representations False.

The committee, headed by Representative Charles S. Burke, chairman of the house committee on Indian affairs, made a thorough inspection of the place. The equipment was said to be in excellent condition and the farm lands among the best and most productive in the state.

For the government to close the institution and sell out the lands would be to rob the Indians of one of their chief sources of education, said an official. The land grabbers have had agents working in Washington in an effort to get the government to sell the property for practically nothing.

ZINC ROOFS BAD IN CITIES.

While zinc is cheap it is questionable whether it may not be replaced by copper for roofing purposes where atmospheric conditions are bad, says Cassier's Magazine. Experiments at a Berlin testing laboratory are said to have shown that in an atmosphere loaded with sulphuric acid and steam zinc lost eleven times as much as copper.

Copper is not eleven times the price of zinc as a rule, and it may be employed in much thinner sheets. Thin zinc on roofs five miles from Charing Cross has been known to become badly perforated in twenty to twenty-five years. This is the weakness of zinc; it rots in little spots, which let in water freely and are not easy to find. Copper appears to waste much more evenly, but very slowly.

Lead appears to have an indefinite life, and it is often a cheap metal per weight, but it weighs much per unit of area. If used as thin as zinc is used by the cheap builder it would cost more and its life would be very much greater. Zinc is quite unsuitable for city roofing owing to its easy solubility by acid rain.

The present crown prince has publicly declared against this custom and says he will marry a wife of his own choosing.

WILL "CINCH" WRONGDOERS

Roosevelt Says He Will Use His Power to Secure Justice.

Speaks of Corporations in Talks Given in Ohio.

Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 25.—Col. Theodore Roosevelt outlined his political creed in three speeches which he crowded into a space of fifteen minutes here today.

"There are two prime articles in my faith," he said. "I stand for justice for the rich man and the poor man alike, and for the punishment of wrong wherever or by whomsoever done."

At 11:35 his train left for Toledo, where a ten-minute stop was scheduled. A great cheer went up when the colonel appeared on the rear platform. A fence barred most of the crowd, so the colonel descended and made his way, conveyed by Cleveland's Golden Rule chief of police, Frederick Koehler, to a point where all could see him.

Balanced on Fence.

Then, standing on the stone foundation of the fence and clinging to its pickets, he tried to say a few words.

"I want to assure you—" he began, when three men managed to climb up on a truck in such a way as to obscure the view of those behind them.

"Get down," said the colonel.

They did, and he resumed:

"I want to assure you that as long as I have the power to do so I am going to fight for a clean government. I am going to fight for clean manhood; I am going to fight for clean politics.

"There are two prime articles in my faith. I stand for justice for the rich man and the poor man alike and for the punishment of wrong wherever or by whomsoever done.

As to Corporate Wrongs.

"If the corporation does wrong I will cinch it if I have the power to do so.

"If the poor man does wrong I'll stand back of the law to see that he gets his desserts.

"I do not distinguish between the man of wealth and the man of poverty so long as both are law-abiding citizens, clean men and working for clean government."

DEMAND FOR FARMHANDS

Railroads Rush Laborers From Eastern Canada to the West.

Manitoba and Other Wheat-Growing Provinces Need Many Men.

Over 300 harvest hands passed through Duluth this morning on a special train bound for the harvest fields of Manitoba and the provinces to the west, while a special train over the Omaha left Chicago this morning carrying 300 more laborers for the wheat fields. This second special train is expected here about 6 o'clock this evening, when the men will be transferred to the Duluth, Missabe & Northern and later turned over to the Canadian Northern.

So heavy is the demand for labor in the wheat-growing sections of Canada that orders for more laborers have been sent to the Eastern provinces of the Dominion, where there is no such great need for farm laborers.

It was announced here something over a week ago that the movement of laborers from the Eastern section of the Dominion to the Western wheat-growing section, as far as the Duluth traffic gateway was concerned, was over for the present season. When that statement was made, something over 1,200 laborers had passed through this city en route to the harvest fields.

Since that time, however, the need for more laborers has been felt, and in competition with the Canadian Pacific railway, the Grand Trunk is rushing harvest hands part way across the United States to the fields where there is pressing need for all the men who can be transported from every section of both Canada and the United States.

It is stated this morning that even with the number of men being sent to Canada via both the Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific, there is need for additional laborers and that it is very likely that more men will pass through Duluth before the end of the harvesting season.

Many of the men who passed through Duluth this morning were accompanied by their wives. Many of the large party will remain and take homesteads in Western Canada. The exodus from the Eastern to the Western section of the Dominion is slowly but surely adding its increase to the population of the Western section at the expense of the Eastern provinces.

The competition between the Grand Trunk and the Canadian Pacific has been very keen the present season for the hauling of the laborers who are passing to the Western provinces. The competition has resulted in the passing through Duluth of over 1,500 laborers since the wheat harvest started in the Western provinces of Canada.

RAILROADS HAVE HUSTLED SOME.

National Magazine: In ten years nearly 7,000,000 people were carried by the railroads of the United States, and in a single year, 1908, 1,500,000,000 tons of freight were transported over the shining rails from one part of the country to another.

The weight of individual locomotives has increased 115 per cent and the number 75 per cent, there being now almost 57,000 puffing over the United States. The increase in the capacity of freight cars has been approximately 120 per cent, making their present carrying capacity more than 71,000,000 tons.

Perhaps the statistics giving the number of railroad employes are the most impressive. Nearly 1,500,000 people an increase of 67 per cent, are now on the payrolls of United States railroads, drawing a compensation of $1,000,000,000 a year, an increase of 110 per cent over ten years ago.

LITTLE CHANGE IN COPPER MARKET

Values Fluctuate and Close on a Par With Yesterday ---Strong Opening.

The copper market opened strong in sympathy with rails, which were higher. Shorts were forced to cover and values steadily advanced until noon, when professionals took profits and values slumped. The advance in wheat and corn caused some selling of stocks and the effect was communicated to coppers. C. & O. declared its regular dividend and the rails rallied. Coppers trailed along and the market firmed at the close which was about on a parity with yesterday's close.

The professionals are not in the market to any great extent and the public is holding aloof. An ex-president seems to be more feared by Wall street than a president as the professional traders are talking pessimistically on account of Theodore Roosevelt's Western trip. They fear he will say something to "hurt" the market. This country has a political battle every four years and minor contests in between, yet Foster, the Boston expert, sends out such dope as this: "We see no permanent improvement at present. Any political strife like this can have only one effect." Wall street did not discount the early insurgent victories. It seldom discounts anything in the line of politics in the summer, but its "discounting," starts in full blast with the advent of cool weather.

The New York and Boston stock exchanges will be closed Saturday, Sept. 3.

Trading here was dull and the undertone was weak. Offers were more numerous than bids. These were out of line and holders were not disposed to sell. Copper Queen sold at 29c, Denn at $3.25, $3.18¾ and $3.25, Red Warrior was firm, advancing from $2.25 to $2.37½, Amazon sold at $3 to $3.12½, Calumet & Corbin at 45c and Mowitza at 80c.

Amalgamated sold at $63.87½ to $64.25, $62.75 and $63.62½, Butte Ballaklava at $8.25 to $7.75, Butte Coalition at $18.50, Calumet & Arizona at $60.50 to $60, Greene at $7.25 to $7, North Butte at $28 to $27 to $27.50, Giroux at $6.50 to $6.25, Superior & Pittsburg at $11.75.

TOO FAULT-FINDING.

Mayor Gaynor, at a recent dinner in New York, said with his whimsical smile:

I am against the kind of press that goes through a man's desk and steals his letters to publish; but I am not a harsh critic. I know that to get out a really good newspaper is a very difficult thing, and I could never find sympathy for the Widow Jones.

"The Widow Jones, you know, sued the local paper because her late husband's obituary said that the poor man had gone to a happier home."

THIS APPEALS TO MEN ONLY.

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, at a dinner in New York, discussed the upbringing of children, a subject on which, as her writings show, she is an authority.

"The modern fashion of letting no one kiss the baby is," said Mrs. Belmont, "excellent. For, aside from the health of the thing, the baby doesn't like to be kissed, and neither does the adult, unless a close relation, like to kiss it.

"I once watched a great artist as, at an enthusiastic young mother's request, he kissed stiffly her 6-month-old babe.

"'Well, how did you like it?' I asked him afterward.

"The artist answered him with a grimace:

"'It was exactly like kissing a poached egg.'"

NEWS AND VIEWS OF POLITICS AND POLITICIANS

Boyle Confident He Will Defeat Vail in the Forty-ninth—Cheadle's Candidacy is Meeting With Decided Favor—Ribenack Urged to File—Second Ward Republicans Hear Orators—Walter J. Smith in City.

James P. Boyle of Eveleth, assistant county attorney, who is a candidate for the Republican nomination for state senator from the Forty-ninth district, is in the city. Mr. Boyle, although busily engaged of late in prosecuting state cases on the range, has succeeded in keeping in touch with the political developments in the district. He is pleased, more than pleased, with the situation. He has every reason to believe that he will win the Republican nomination, his opponent being P. R. Vail, a Virginia brewer. There is another candidate in the field for the Republican nomination, but he is politically a negligible quantity.

Mr. Boyle Assured That He Will Win.

Mr. Boyle has been informed by men who are powers in several of the range towns, that their communities are for him for senator. Inquiry into the measure of reliance that may safely be placed on these assertions shows that they are apparently accurate and that Mr. Boyle will receive a very large majority at the primaries.

The Eveleth man will not permit himself to be lulled into a feeling of what might prove to be false security, however. He will make a strenuous campaign from now until Sept. 20, determined that he will demonstrate that the faith his friends have in him is justified and that the voters of the district favor a change in their representation in the senate.

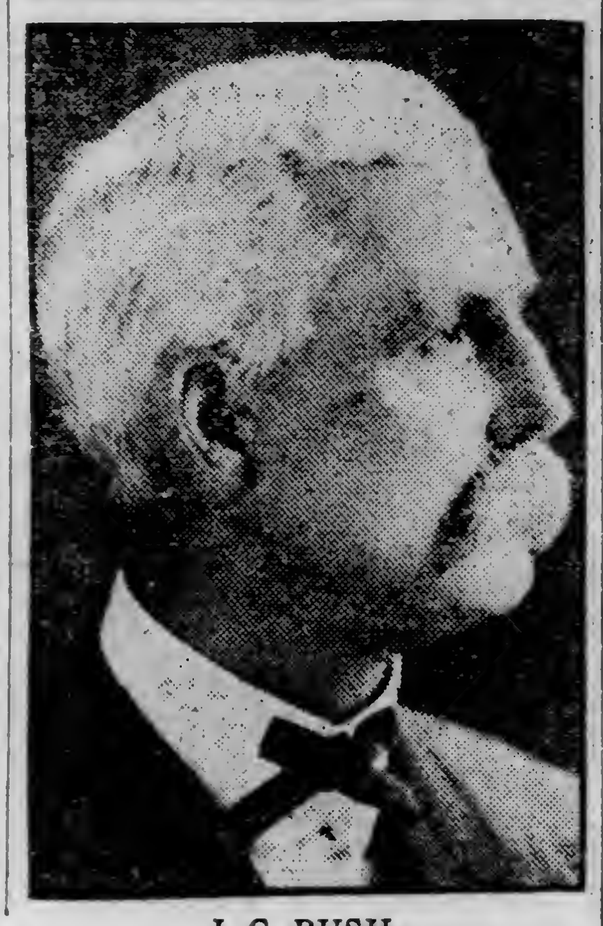
Since the news became known that H. W. Cheadle is a candidate for state senator in the Fifty-first district, there has been a decided increase in popular interest in the legislative ticket. Mr. Cheadle is so very well known, having been before the public many years as the efficient city clerk of Duluth, that the announcement of his candidacy was received by his friends with every evidence of pleasure, and he was assured of strong, consistent and enthusiastic support at every stage of the game.

Mr. Cheadle and That Toga.

It is realized that Mr. Cheadle will have a hard battle. Whether he can be elected is purely probematical, but Democrats who have studied the situation carefully say they believe Senator Layborun can be defeated this year. This is an opinion in which Senator Laybourn's friends most decidedly do not concur. However, a difference of opinion is necessary in politics just as much as it is in horse racing.

Mr. Cheadle is thoroughly in accord with the objects of the Crookston and Bemidji conventions of the Northern Minnesota Development association. If elected he hopes to be in a position at St. Paul which will make it possible for him to work in complete sympathy with the other Northern Minnesota legislators who will be pledged to work unceasingly for reapportionment. He believes that no one should be elected to the legislature this year who is not willing and eager to cut his term of office in two, if it is necessary, to get a just reapportionment.

WANTS TO BE COUNTY COMMISSIONER



J. C. BUSH,
Democratic Candidate in the Second District.

* * *

In the last few days Edward R. Ribenack has been called upon by many of his Democratic friends and urged to enter the race for the house in the Fiftieth district, where Capt. R. T. Lewis and Anton Borgen are candidates for the Republican nominations. Up to this time no other Democrat has been mentioned as a possible candidate for the second seat.

E. R. Ribenack Is Expected to Run for House.

Mr. Ribenack is a good campaigner and has had experience in public life as a member of the city council He is a vote-getter and it is urged that he would add strength to the ticket all along the line.

He is not inclined to enter the race, saying he would rather keep out of politics, but the pressure is getting pretty strong, and his friends expect him to file before the 31st, which is the last day for filings.

J. C. Bush, 23 Sixtieth avenue east, has decided to become a candidate for the board of county commissioners, Second district, on the Democratic ticket. Mr. Bush has been a resident of the district for eighteen years and of the city for twenty-four years. He has been active in Democratic party affairs and is widely known. The contest in this district among the Republicans may result in such a situation that Mr. Bush will be the likeliest candidate. John Tischer, now a member of the board, is out for renomination and is being opposed by four other candidates. Each of them is confident that he has the nomination as good as won and it may be that the fight for the nomination will create so much feeling that Mr. Bush can easily defeat whichever of the five is the victor at the primaries.

Another Candidate in the Second.

At the regular meeting of the Second ward Republican club last evening in the Polish hall speeches were made by Alderman James A. Wharton, Attorney H. A. Carmichael, R. M. Hughes and others. The talks were interesting and the attendance quite large. L. A. Sulcove, who is a candidate for the house in the Forty-ninth district, was to have been a speaker but was unable to appear.

Second Warders Hear Some Orators

Alderman Wharton discussed the Payne-Aldrich tariff law, liars and thieves, and Republicans and Democrats, not intimating that either the Republicans or the Democrats were liars and thieves, but pointing out that the Payne-Aldrich bill was enacted on the theory that all men are dishonest. Before he finished he had proved conclusively that the framers of the bill were not striving for clear title to a halo and a harp when they perpetrated that legislation. He was hopeful that the next congress will be constituted as to make possible on honest revision of the tariff. He urged that the Republicans have the necessary housecleaning performed by themselves, and not by the Democrats, whose chances of victory were not minimized by the speaker.

"I am not one of those who profess to believe that the nation will go to the bow-wows if the Democratic party gains power," said Mr. Wharton. "It won't, you know. The Democrats are just our neighbors and friends. They are not liars and thieves, any more than are the members of our party. But let us not permit them to gain advantage through our quarrels."

Mr. Carmichael talked about the Republican state platform, mentioning each plank in its turn and accenting the assertion that when Roosevelt was in Africa and the cause of conservation languished in deserted America, Governor Eberhart came to the rescue and took rank next to the colonel as a conservationist.

Mr. Hughes talked about the Republican party and the young man, from much the same standpoint as that of a preacher talking about salvation and an old sinner.

A curly haired doggie, near yellow in hue, persisted in making himself conspicuous at times during the meeting and one of the distinguished Republicans present was asked about the intruder's identity.

"'Nother candidate for congress," he said.

Walter J. Smith, Republican nominee for state treasurer, is in the city, coming down from Eveleth this morning. Mr. Smith has not been doing anything in a political way for some time, the business of his bank requiring his undivided attention just now, in anticipation of the opening of the campaign on the heels of the primaries.

Man From Eveleth Is In Duluth Today.

Mr. Smith will in all probability be called upon to do a good deal of campaigning for the Republican state ticket this fall. He has no need of exerting himself on his own behalf, as his nomination is equivalent to an election, but his unique abilities as a campaigner have been so clearly demonstrated that the state central committee will not overlook any opportunity to make use of him in the campaign.

Mr. Smith's visit to Duluth is a business and social one and has no particular political bearing.

MARINE

BIG STEAMER IS AGROUND

Thomas F. Cole Runs on Gravel Island Shoal Near Detour, Mich.

W. J. Olcott and Family Temporarily Marooned on Freighter.

W. J. Olcott, president of the Oliver Iron Mining company and family are marooned aboard the steamer Thomas F. Cole which ran on the reefs of Gravel Island shoal in the St. Mary's river at an early hour yesterday morning.

Five of the tanks on the starboard side are filled with water but the ship is in no danger. The wrecking tug Favorite has been sent to the scene of the accident. The Olcott party will probably leave the boat and return to Duluth by rail.

Although the boat was running at a very low rate of speed she was carried nearly her full length over the reef. H. W. Brown of the Pittsburg Steamship company was informed of the accident by brief messages yesterday. Few details were obtainable at the Soo up to an early hour this morning.

The messages received in the city state that the starboard compartments from 4 to 8 are badly punctured. They are filled with water on which the pumps have not been able to make much of an impression.

The Cole was bound for Duluth light. She got out of her course Tuesday night in the heavy fog as she was entering the river. It is not known how many of the plates are damaged.

She rests easily in her present position. The weather is calm and it is thought that there is little danger of further damage.

The steamer Cole is one of the largest and finest of the ore carriers. She is 607 feet long and has a 58-foot beam. Her estimated gross tonnage is 7,268. She was built in 1907, and is commanded by Capt. J. W. Morgan.

At the Duluth office of the Pittsburg steamship company, it was stated today that nothing further had been heard regarding the condition of the Cole. Whether the big freighter had been cleared from the reefs or whether the vessel is still on the rocks and in a precarious condition, could not be learned at the Pittsburg office.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. LAUNCHING WILL BE HELD SATURDAY.

Officials of the Pittsburg Steamship company have requested that the launching of the steamer William B. Dixon, one of the big freighters that has recently been completed for the company, be postponed until Aug. 27.

The steamer was to have been launched last week, the postponement being due to the inability of the members of the launching party to arrive on schedule time. The William B. Dixon is named after the second vice president of the Pittsburg oompany. The new boat is 600 feet in length, and is expected to make a trip to the Head of the Lakes before the close of the present season.

FALLNG OFF IN VESSEL ARRIVALS.

Today's vessel arrivals are the lightest for weeks, while the arrivals yesterday afternoon and this morning were very few.

There is very little activity in the harbor, owing to the fact that there are few enough vessels at the Head of the Lakes today to make docking operations active. Coal receipts continue to hold up well, while the contract vessels have all the ore they can handle.

A vessel agent stated today that the situation as to the independent vessels had shown very little change, and that the outlook for heavy tonnage for independent boats was not very encouraging.

VESSELS HAVE ROUGHEST TRIP OF THE SEASON.

Vessels coming up the lake last night and yesterday afternoon experienced one of the roughest trips of the season. A large number of women passengers were on the Lakeland and many of them were not only frightened at the lurching of the boat, but were also made sick by the violent rocking. The Juniata got in this morning, and the passengers of that boat also had a rough ride for part of the journey to the Head of the Lakes.

While there was no danger in the storm, the lake was very rough at times; quite enough to cause all the vessels that were out last night to roll heavily.

The Electro-Radio Curatorium

At 800-801 Alworth Building, Does Not Cure Sickness With Grand Imposing Airs, Characteristic of Ignorance and Humbug the World Over, But With the Best Scientific Methods of Modern Therapeutics, Particularly Faradium, Galvanism and Electro-Radium.

No scientist ever put on grand airs. Only shallow pates do that, thinking thereby to gull the public into taking them for what they would like to be, but cannot be, for lack of brains and information, namely, great experts in their particular line of work. It is so in all professions, in journalism, law, theology, dentistry, commerce, or even in female catch-as-catch-can. Put the finest foot forward evermore, though it be but a wooden one! Some onlookers may yet believe it genuine! Lift your head like a king and many looklikers will imagine you are one! Pretend to scientific profundity and preeminent skill, and multitudes will swear by you in admiration! Thus reason all professional lollipops and nincompoops.

With Herbert Spencer, the physician and surgeons of the Duluth Electro-Radio Curatorium concede humbly the relativity of all human knowledge, their own included. Still they maintain that there always was and ever will be an impassable gulf between sham and genuine qualities, between ignorant pretences and scientic genuineness, between fraud and truth, particularly in diagnosticating and treating human disease successfully. The Electro-Radio Curatorium physicians therefore strive honestly to put on a minimum of "loud airs" and to put a maximum of sound scientific technique into all their curatorial work.

Does this "succeed?" "Does it pay?" Yes, both. The public like honesty and knowledge of the modest but genuine brand, in spite of Barnum's slur that the "American public loves to be humbugged." No people on earth love truth and fact more, nor hate worse to be swindled, than do native or naturalized Americans. They therefore keep the Electro-Radio Curatorium working overtime daily at its office in 800-801 Alworth Building, Duluth, where consultations without airs are free from 9 to 12, 2 to 4 and 7 to 8 on everydays, and from 11 to 12 on Sundays; also on reasonable terms, scientific treatments for all curable ailments without false pretences or placebo prestidigitations.

COUNTY FAIR AT BARNUM

Annual Event in Carlton County Will Be Better Than Ever.

Feature Will Be Made of Exhibit of Dairy Products.

The Carlton county fair which will be held at Barnum, Sept. 14, 15, 16 will be better than ever in spite of the fact that the present season has been a very dry one.

During the first of the year, the farmers were quite discouraged, but with the later rains and good growing weather, the crops improved wonderfully and at the present time no one is being heard to complain.

The Barnum creamery paid out $1,750 more during the months of June and July this year than it did during the same months in 1909. The farmers have delivered to the creamery more cream and eggs than any previous season since the creamery has been in operation. A feature this year will be made of the dairy products of Carlton county.

Those who have the fair in charge say that it will be better than ever. The farmers are taking a great interest in making a good showing and the vegetable exhibit will be of more than ordinary merit.

There will be good horse racing. This has been a feature of the fair for a number of years and this year the directors promise more and faster events than ever.

The state experimental farm has offered a prize of $20 for the best bull placed on exhibition.

COLDEST DAY OF THE SUMMER

Northeaster Sends Mercury Down to 48 Deg. in Duluth.

Duluth and its visitors are being treated to a sample of what the weather man can do for Duluth occasionally in summer. A northeast wind descended on the city last night with lowering temperatures and made the wearer of light summer finery decidedly uncomfortable.

The temperature dropped to 48 deg last night, the lowest point for many moons and light overcoats are not at all out of place today. The weather man says the unseasonable conditions will continue through today and tonight.

TWO BIG ANNUAL PICNICS ARE HELD

Grocers and Butchers Celebrating at Opposite Ends of the City.

Butchers and grocers of Duluth are enjoying their annual outings at opposite ends of the city today.

The wielders of the cleavers are holding forth at Lester park and the grocers are at Fond du Lac. Both have arranged lengthy, interesting programs of sports, which will consume the greater part of the afternoon. There will be tests of strength, foot races for the old and young, as well as the fat men, contests for the women and children, and several special features peculiar to the respective trades. The butchers will get to the picnic grounds by street cars and carriages while the grocers have chartered steamers to take them and their families to the pretty summer resort up the St. Louis river. Grocery stores and butcher shops have all closed for the day. Early reports indicate that despite the threatening clouds, the attendance at both picnics would be good, but not as heavy as would have been the case were the skies bright and clear.

CLOUDY

Br-r-r-r and B-r-r-r again!

One of those northeasters for which Duluth is famous swept down on the city last night and stirred things up a bit. Likewise the wearer of light summer finery did not find a light overcoat uncomfortable. The Duluthian doesn't mind the cold so much, but it's pretty tough on the visitors to our fair city. The weather man promises colder weather tonight, but don't put 'em on yet. Summer isn't over, and this is only one of the weather man's little jokes. The lowest temperature last night was 48 deg.

Partly cloudy and cool weather prevailed a year ago today.

The sun rose this morning at 5:18 and it will set at 7:02, giving thirteen hours and forty-four minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"Much cooler weather prevails in the Middle West and Northwestern districts in connection with a strong high pressure condition central over Wyoming. Light to heavy frosts occurred this morning in the Dakotas and killing frosts in Montana and Wyoming. The Iowa-Kansas low pressure has moved its center to upper Lake Michigan. During the last twenty-four hours it caused light to heavy showers over the lake region, the Upper Mississippi and Missouri valleys, the Dakotas and Saskatchewan. Another depression appears to be developing in the extreme Northwest. Indications favor generally fair and chilly weather at the Head of the Lakes during the ensuing thirty-six hours."

General Forecasts.

Chicago, Aug. 25.—Forecasts for twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m Friday:

Wisconsin—Part cloudy and cooler tonight and Friday.

Minnesota—Part cloudy and cooler tonight; probably frost; Friday fair.

Upper Michigan—Showers this afternoon and tonight; much cooler tonight; Friday fair and continued cool.

Iowa—Generally fair tonight and Friday; cooler.

North Dakota and South Dakota—Fair and slightly cooler tonight with frost; Friday fair and warmer in west portion.

Montana—Fair tonight and Friday; warmer tonight.

Upper Lakes—Brisk and high southwest shifting to northwest winds on Michigan and Huron, brisk and possibly high northeast on Superior, rain this afternoon and tonight; Friday fair. Storm warnings displayed at all upper lake stations.

THREE ORDERED TO FERGUS FALLS

One Woman Examined as to Sanity at Her Own Request.

After three examinations before Judge Middlecoff in probate court yesterday, the principal in each case was ordered to the state hospital for the insane at Fergus Falls.

Mrs. Alethe Johnson, 35 years old, was examined at her own request. She realizes her conditon and fears that she may do some one harm. Mrs. Johnson appeared rational part of the time, but at other times she thinks that she is under the control of the "Black Hand."

John Williams' case will be disposed of by the state board of control. He belongs in Ohio, having come to Duluth only a few weeks ago. He was declared insane. He imagines that he has money and a large tract of land just outside the city limits.

Pauline Dalhke was also adjudged insane.

STEALS TO ATTEND CHURCH CONFERENCE.

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 25.—Rev. August A. Huberch, pastor of a German Lutheran church in Middleburgh, Ohio, stole seventeen watches and $18 in currency from students of Eden college, St. Louis county, in order to raise money to attend the Pennsylvania district conference of the German Evangelical synod. The minister's arrest was caused by a former student of Eden college.

Huberch said he would plead guilty to the charges against him. His license to preach was taken from him by the Lutheran governing board a month ago.

On the night of the lynching a thrill ran through the gathering around the gallows pole when a woman, standing on an automobile, shoved through the crowd into the very heart of the throng. Standing on the seat she cried to the leaders: "Pull him a little higher so I can see."

COMPLAINTS SWAMP BOARD

Commissioners Busy Listening to Kicks of Property Owners.

Complaints are now coming in regularly each day before the board of equalization and the commissioners are buried under the avalanche of kicks on the part of property owners.

There is no time limit set in which to state the complaint. The owner is given all the time he wants while the commissioners listen with attention to all he has to say. He may be as loud as he likes and as eloquent as he likes. Many of them take the opportunity to get rid of some languages they have been saving up for some time.

This morning some of the lumber companies sent representatives to appear before the board and register kicks. Some of the wholesale grocers were represented also.

Yesterday a number of the larger concerns voiced their complaint on the amount of the proposed assessment. The Duluth Street Railway company was represented by Manager Herbert Warren and Luther Mendenhall; Marshall-Wells by A. M. Marshall; the Northern Shoe company and the Duluth-Edison Electric company by A. W. Hartman; the Duluth Log company by President Bradley; the Pittsburgh Coal company by its general counsel from Superior; the Standard Oil company by General Manager Lang for this district. Other concerns represented are the Schlitz and Pabst Brewing companies; the Duluth Shingle company, and the Duluth Lumber company.

WHERE TO GO TONIGHT.

NEW ORPHEUM—Advanced vaudeville.
LYCEUM—Pierce Players in "The Squaw Man."

ACROBATS HAVE NARROW ESCAPE

An accident was narrowly averted at the new Orpheum theater last evening.

Just as the curtain was about to go up on the act of "The Flying Martins," it was discovered that one of the wire cables, which holds the trapeze, was almost parted. It was holding by but two strands, and the acrobats would undoubtedly have had a bad fall if they had gone on with their act. The trapeze had been used at the afternoon performance but a few hours before. The weak spot in the cable was up close to the top, where it might easily have been missed, and the Martins are thanking their particular stars today that it was discovered.

It was too late to repair the cable, and the act had to be changed. They gave some exhibitions of hand balancing and tumbling in place of their regular sensational trapeze work. A new cable has been secured for the trapeze.

Only five more performances of the present bill will be given, tonight, Friday afternoon and night, and Saturday afternoon and night. The new bills at the Orpheum open with the Sunday matinee.

ORPHEUM AND LYRIC BILLS ARE POPULAR.

Both the Orpheum and the Lyric, the popular moving picture houses are drawing large crowds this week and both offer excellent programs of film drama to their patrons.

"An Old Story With a New Ending," is the feature film at the Orpheum, and while it has its humorous side, it is good drama also. "When We Were in Our 'Teens," is also an excellent film that is causing favorable comment, while the entire program is wholesome and enjoyable.

"Her Photograph," the first film made in America by the French Pathe company, is being shown at the Lyric. It shows American scenes, but is finished with all the beauty of the well-known Pathe French films. "The Attack of the Mill," is an excellent Edison film and is the top-liner of the bill at the Lyric. "The Silent Witness,' is a dramatic film and "Scenes in Holland," is educational. Miss Erd is singing, "Some Day We'll Be Happy."

STAGE SCENE BASED ON REAL INCIDENT.

One of the most intense scenes in "The Squaw Man," is that in the second act when Cash Hawkins, the "rustler," invites the cowpunchers in the Long Horn saloon to "drink with me," the invitation being emphasized with a drawn 44-Colt. It is not used, because Hawkins had the drop on every man present, and each individual knew it. This is one of the few cases on record where a "bad man" pulled a gun and did not use it, and the failure later cost Hawkins his life.

Edwin Milton Boyle has taken the incident from real life and it actually occurred in the Rocky Mountains sheep saloon, "West Cliff." "Young" Dick, one of the "bad men" of Wyoming, dropped into the saloon, loaded with bad whisky. Some of the "Bar L" and "Broken T" outfit, most of whom were Englishmen, had come in from the round-up and were quietly drinking. McCoy, with an oath, whipped out his gun, waved it toward the bar, and in a burst of profanity, declared "The house drinks with me. I'll kill the first coyote and 'short horn' who don't step lively."

When the glasses were filled, the rustler proposed a toast, as he lifted his glass high and swept his gun in a semi-circle—"here's to the beers,' a young Englishman, Hunter, stepped up to the desperado, whipped out his revolver and placed it against McCoy's side, blowing a hole through his body. As he fell dead, McCoy's trigger finger closed convulsively. When the smoke cleared away, it was seen that Hunter's left ear had been clipped off by the last shot of the "bad man."

"The Squaw Man" will be seen at the Lyceum all this week to be followed by "Strongheart" Monday night.

Intense Colicky Pains Relieved.

"For some years I suffered from intense colicky pains which would come on at times and from which I could find no relief," says I. S. Mason of Beaver Dam, Ky. "Chamberlain's Colic Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy was recommendey to me by a friend. After taking a few doses of the remedy I was entirely relieved. That was four years ago and there has been no return of the symptoms since that time." This remedy is for sale by all druggists.

FINNS ENTERTAIN SWEDES.

Two Nationalities Fraternize at a Celebration Near Zim.

Zim, Minn., Aug. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Finnish residents of the town of McDavitt fraternized with the Swedish settlers on that locality last Sunday by entertaining them at their new hall in Section 30.

The Finlanders treated their guests to coffee, tea and other refreshments, and about 6 o'clock p. m. the young people had a dance that continued until 10 o'clock; then everybody left for home satisfied with their entertainment. There was an attendance of about 150.

It is very remarkable the fine hall they have built, considering all the improvements they are constantly making on their homes.

TOURNAMENT ENDS IN BLAZE OF GLORY

Range Firemen Leave for Homes After Successful Gilbert Meeting.

Gilbert, Minn., Aug. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The third and last day of the Range Firemen's Tournament association meeting here ended yesterday or rather early this morning in a blaze of glory and today saw the exodus of those who took part in one of the most successful meetings ever held.

The main street was full of people until an early hour this morning. Dancing at the pavilion and in the halls was going on all evening. Horns were tooted and much confetti was thrown about. The temporary restaurants were packed all during the tournament. Several of the ladies' aid societies took advantage of the crowd by selling things from booths and rented stores.

The races yesterday morning were witnessed by a very large crowd and most of the contests were very close. The 100-yard dash was the most exciting of the day. Curtis Bent, the high school athlete broke the tape for Gilbert a few steps ahead of Joe Krone, the Schley mine man in 10 2-5 seconds. A Proctor man was third. In the heavy novelty races, there was an exciting race between Aurora and Biwabik for first honors. Both teams started out strong but Aurora finished in 57 seconds, with Biwabik second in 57 3-5 seconds. Schley mine took the coupling contest in 6 2-5 coming in far ahead of Proctor with 7 1-5 seconds.

Late in the afternoon there was a jockey race with six entrants. The two heats were very close for all the horses but John Jarvinen won both of the heats in driving finishes and pulled down the stakes.

Gilbert Giants Win Game.

The baseball game at the ball park between the Gilbert Giants and the Elba team drew a large crowd in spite of the chilly weather. Benson was on the mound for the Giants and he kept the Elba team well in hand all the time. The Giants scored most of their runs in the first innings, after which the game was close. The Giants winning by a score of 7 to 3. Batteries: For Gilbert, Benson and Hoskings; Elba, Moneky and Derick. The Giants will play Winton next Sunday, and will then go after Ely and Aurora for the amateur championship of the range.

The Proctor men have made a big hit here during the tournament, and a large crowd has been promised for the 1911 tournament at Proctor.

WILL INTRODUCE SOME NEW IDEAS

New Head of Hibbing Manual Training Department Has New Wrinkles.

Hibbing, Minn., Aug. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Prof. H. Diemer has arrived form Ottumwa, Iowa, to take charge of the manual training department of the Hibbing schools. Mr. Deimer, who has had considerable experience both in this and in foreign countries, will introduce a number of new ideas. It is Mr. Diemer's intention to have the pupils, in addition to the present course, do work in copper and brass.

A number of changes are being made at the school library and new plans are being inaugurated by Miss Laura Olson, one of the Hibbing instructors. About $500 worth of juvenile literature has been added to the library this summer. Miss Olson is assisted in her work by Miss Mary A. Smith, city librarian of Eau Claire, Wis., who is here on her vacation.

Mrs. W. Galloway has returned home after spending a few weeks in Duluth visiting with friends.

Miss Allen Anderson left Wednesday evening for Swan Lake for a few days' outing with friends who are spending the summer there.

M. B. Nides left Wednesday for Duluth to visit for several days.

W. J. West left Wednesday noon for Duluth on business.

James Geary left Wednesday for Duluth on buiness.

Mrs. L. C. Newcombe returned home from Duluth, where she attended the funeral of the 6-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Kirby.

STEEL TRESTLE NEARLY READY

Big Viaduct at No. 4 Spruce Mine Is Nearly Completed.

Eveleth, Minn., Aug. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The steel trestle at the No. 4 Spruce mine is almost finished except for a little riveting. The cement piers have been up for some time. The trestle at the No. 4 is about 125 feet long. Motors will be used on the trestle in place of the cables and more ore will be taken out of the shafts.. A steel trestle will also be erected at the No. 6. About 25,000 tons of first grade or is still in the stock pile at the No. 4 while about 35,000 tons of lower grade ore are yet to be shipped from the No. 6 stock pile. At the Fayal stock piles some ore is still to be shipped. Work at the open pits is going on very steadily. The Adams open pit is being worked hard night and day.

Capt. Moon of the Fayal has been transferred recently to the Leonidas shaft to take charge of the sinking of the steel shaft, which is now down 230 feet. Much water has been encountered, and this is hindering the sinking of the shaft. At the 300-foot level, to help matters, an auxiliary pump will be placed, the capacity of which will not be decided on until conditions at the 300-foot level are found out. This pump will be necessary as the shaft seems to be draining most of the shafts in the vicinity, as it will be the deepest around here, going down to 600 feet.

Steam shovels are busy at the Sparta open pit, stripping and taking out ore, as both are being reached. Camps are located at each end of the open pit, which now occupies the site of the main street of Sparta a year ago. The stripping is being dumped close to Ely lake.

To Preach Again in Eveleth.

Eveleth, Minn., Aug. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Rev. G. W. Dungan of Waverley, Neb., who preached at the First Presbyterian church last Sunday, has been secured by Rev. Mr. Johnson to preach the evening sermon next Sunday at the Methodist Episcopal church.

TWO LIVES LOST IN THE SHENANGO

Were Removing Debris of Cavein When Second Cavein Catches Them.

Chisholm, Minn., Aug. 25. — (Special to The Herald.) — The funerals were held today of Jacob Sanmalulona, aged 35, married, having a wife and two children in Finland, and John Wanlacalo, aged 30, with a wife and child living in the Myers location, who were killed by a cave-in in the Shenango, Tuesday night.

With two other men they were removing the debris from a cave-in when another cave-in resulted catching them both.

They were entirely covered and death was probably instant. One of the other men was covered up to his neck and the fourth up to his knees. They were quickly recovered and their injuries were not serious. It required four hours to recover the bodies of the men killed.

POISON ON VEGETABLES.

Horseshoe Lake Woman Seriously Affected and Brought to Hibbing.

Hibbing, Minn., Aug. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mrs. J. J. McCarthy was brought to Hibbing yesterday suffering from the effects of eating poison on some vegetables. The poison is claimed to be Paris green, which had been used on some vegetables in the garden to kill the insects. Mrs. McCarthy resided at Horseshoe Lake, near Sturgeon Lake. She will be able to be home again in a few days.

A COMMERCIAL COURSE.

Eveleth Schools to Continue Instructions in That Line.

Eveleth, Minn., Aug. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—A business course again will be had in the local schools this year to include typewriting, stenography and bookkeeping. Miss Grace Darah of Big Rapids, Mich., who has had much experience in commercial lines in Tacoma and Saginaw schools, will have charge of the department. Cora Williams of this city has been engaged for the local schools in addition to those previously appointed. A purchasing committee composed of B. O. Greening, A. M. Murink and A. Rohrer will attend to all purchases for the schools, while a teachers' committee composed of Dr. C. W. More, H. S. Sherman and B. O. Greening will attend to all teachers' appointments. The teachers will be assigned to the various rooms next week. Some of the teachers have already arrived in town for the fall term.

Eveleth, Minn., Aug. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Rev. R. C. Johnson of the Methodist Episcopal church yesterday was presented with a sum of $107 by the business men of the town with the simple but direct statement "In appreciation of your usefulness as a minister and a citizen." E. church has almost doubled its membership. Before coming to Eveleth two years ago Rev. Mr. Johnson was pastor at International Falls.

VIRGINIA LUMBER PLANT WILL CONTINUE OPERATIONS.

Virginia, Minn., Aug. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The officials of the Virginia & Rainy Lake Lumber company deny reports that have been current here that the mill here would be shut down during the winter.

The entire force will be kept busy all winter. It has been found necessary by the company to have the Mud Lake road removed from its course through the yards so as to give more room for the piling of lumber.

Two Harbors, Minn., Aug. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Yesterday afternoon Mrs. H. S. Bryan and Mrs. F. F. BIG STICK IS READY FOR GUILTY RICH

one opposing the principles for which I shall stand, yet if they do oppose them then it is their own affair and so far as I am concerned the issue shall be absolutely clean cut."

Talks of Great Lakes.

Mr. Roosevelt in his talk this morning first dwelt upon a subject of particular local interest—the necessity of preserving unpolluted "the wonderful fresh water supply of the Great Lakes." He said:

"State and nation must combine in preventing further contamination and in making the purity of lake water as absolute as possible. So also in the field of morals, public and domestic. There must be no pollution at the sources."

Nearly 400 members of the Ellicott club and other citizens representing leading professional and business interests and a wide variety of political affiliations awaited Mr. Roosevelt's coming from the New York Central station, where he had arrived from Utica at 6:20 in his private car Republic, attached to a regular train. The clubs' rooms are high up in one of the city's downtown business blocks, which was not yet astir with the day's work.

As the ex-president entered he was cheered and "America" was sung, with the backing of a regimental band. Breakfast was expeditiously served, as there was less than an hour before the scheduled time of Mr. Roosevelt's departure for Chicago.

Republican Leader There.

The presence of Fred Gresner, Republican leader of Erie county, was generally commented upon.

Among those who got an especially hearty greeting from Mr. Roosevelt was "Tony" Gavin, a Buffalo policeman, formerly a Rough Rider. The colonel shook his hand across the table and said some pleasant things in which the words "bully glad to see you," recurred.

Mr. Roosevelt made good use of the fifteen minutes available for his remarks.

"Distrust," he said, "financiers who can only see crookedness in grafting small politicians and grafting leaders; distrust also those who can see it only in the financiers. You must attack a man because he's crooked. If poor and crooked attack him. If rich and crooked, attack him. In fact, attack the rich crook a trifle stronger. Yes, I will put it—attack him very strongly."

The gathering of people at the station had been considerably augmented during the hour. Standing on the rear platform of his car, Mr. Roosevelt waved his hat as the train pulled out westward, shortly after 7:30.

Steam Drowned His Voice.

When Col. Roosevelt appeared at the rear end platform at Dunkirk, N. Y., he was met by a large gathering of railroad men. Within fifty feet of his car an engine was blowing off steam.

"I can't talk against that," protested Col. Roosevelt, nodding toward the locomotive.

The man on the locomotive said he couldn't stop the noise and the colonel attempted to deliver a brief address.

"I have always admired the railroad men because they have certain qualities I like to think of as typical of Americans. They know how to act, each for himself, and also in combination. They know how to work. They know how to obey orders and how to act, each on his individuality. The average American in our political, industrial and social life must show just these traits."

The constant noise of the steaming locomotive made speaking very difficult for the colonel, who again protested.

"It is really an outrage," he declared. "I cannot talk to that engine."

Then he told the crowd that an engine was "the only thing he could not talk against," and the train moved off.

As some of the men shouted, "Do them up in the convention, Teddy," Col. Roosevelt smiled broadly but made no reply.

Big Crowd at Erie.

Fully 5,000 people greeted Col. Roosevelt when his special train arrived in Erie at 9:28 this morning. The colonel spoke briefly, chiefly along the lines of the earlier speech he made at Buffalo regarding pure water in the Great Lakes cities.

He was met at Dunkirk by a reception committee from Erie, consisting of Congressman Arthur L. Bates, Frank D. Schultz, president of the chamber of commerce; K. C. Sturgeon, president of the board of trade, and William B. Trask. Congressman Bates was a member of the lower house during the seven and one-half years that Roosevelt was president, and a long consultation was held in the private car as the train rushed through the Northwestern Pennsylvania grape belt. At every town and hamlet hundreds lined the tracks, in hopes of catching a glimpse of the colonel.

Likes to be Called "Teddy."

"Hello, Teddy," was heard from the sea of humanity that lined the station platform when the train pulled into Erie, and it was some minutes before the colonel's voice could be heard.

In an undertone to Congressman Bates, who was on the rear platform, the African hunter said:

"I used to think it lowered my dignity to have them call me Teddy—but do you know I am getting to like it now."

Greeted by Twelve Thousand.

Ashtabula, Ohio, Aug. 25.—Twelve thousand persons greeted Former President Roosevelt when his special train stopped here. Mr. Roosevelt stepped on the platform of his car.

A policeman lifted a little girl to the platform and the child presented the former president with a bunch of American beauty roses. The child also held in her arms a small "Teddy bear" with an American flag sash tied around its body. Mr. Roosevelt talked to the child for a moment, then briefly addressed the crowd. The train left here at 9:50 o'clock for Cleveland.

EIGHT DIE IN WRECK ON THE GRAND TRUNK

underneath the engine to make repairs.

Brakeman Graham was sent back to place a torpedo on the track and flag the expected section, but No. 4 came rushing on at a speed of forty miles an hour and ripped its way through the Pullman car.

The shock of the collision sent the whole standing train a little forward, and Engineer Mitchell and his fireman, underneath the stalled engine, were badly hurt.

Placed a Torpedo.

Brakeman Graham declares that he placed the torpedo a mile from the rear of No. 14, but that No. 4 paid no attention to it. Engineer Spencer's story is different.

"We were almost upon No. 14 when we struck the torpedo," he said. "I heard it all right, but there was no time to stop. I jammed on the brakes and called to Nelson, my fireman, to jump. I made a flying leap and landed in the ditch. Nelson did not get away fast enough and was caught. Both my ankles were crushed and I could not move.

"I tell you, the tail lights of No. 14 were not going and the torpedo was placed so close to the rear of No. 14 that I did not have time to stop."

Hired During Strike.

The crew of No. 14, except the engineer and fireman, are said to have been hired during the recent strike and retained after the settlement.

Following is the list of passengers on the car Nebraska:

Section 2, Len. Festy; section 3, party in at South Bend; sections 4 and 5, Dodd party; section 8, Mrs. Doehler; section 9, Sheldon; section 10, Squires; sections 11 and 12, Archibald party; drawing room, no name, supposed to be Davis party.

Chicago Man Killed.

Chicago, Aug. 25.—James McBean, a Chicago letter carrier, was among those killed in the wreck, according to messages received by his family here.

Frederick T. Haskell, vice president of the Illinois Trust & Savings Bank of Chicago, his wife and six other Chicagoans had reservations on train No. 14, wrecked at Durand, Mich. A telegram received here from Mr. Haskell tells of his escape and that of his wife.

The full names of the other Chicagoans on the train are not given in the Pullman car books of the company here. As given the names are:

Mrs. Sanderson.
—— Doehler.
—— Jeffers.
—— Leutsester.
—— Sheldon.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—"The Workhouse as a Reformatory," was the first topic discussed today by Supt. Frank McDonald, at the Minneapolis workhouse, before the League of American Municipalities.

This address was doubly interesting in view of the visit made to that institution yesterday by the delegates, and where they were served with a luncheon consisting of the same food as that supplied to the prisoners.

"A city's control of outlying districts," was the subject of an address by John H. Gundlich, president of the St. Louis council, and Mayor R. F. Maddox of Atlanta, Ga., spoke on "Civic Responsibility."

And you will readily see where London Park Addition excels all others, and offers you better opportunities and advantages for home sites than any other high class, low priced and "on easy terms" property yet offered in Duluth.

As a First Word Let us suggest that you carefully compare this property with others, as to location, lay of land, nearness of improvements, view of lake, etc., which are the main features in Homebuilding Lots, and you cannot help but see the superiority of London Park Addition.

LOTS 25x140 Ft.

These lots are only one block from a schoolhouse, two blocks from a church—points that are well worth considering. These lots are only one block from water, gas and sewer, closer by many blocks than any other properties offered in the course of this summer. Every lot is on a graded street, with fine sidewalks, and every lot commands a fine view of the lake.

YOU WHO WOULD BE INDEPENDENT

Who wish to get out of the Rent Paying class and own a home in a desirable locality, should take into consideration the property best suited for your purposes.

All London Park Lots We offer, are situated between Fifty-first and Fifty-fourth avenue east, on Otsego street, in a progressive and friendly community, only 20-minutes ride from Duluth's business center.

Every lot is on the upper side of the street and can be put in condition for building at a minimum of cost on account of the even lay of the land.

The increasing demand for building sites in this locality is evidence enough of the quality of the land.

THE PRICES are remarkably low and the terms are very easy. You who appreciate a good offer will be on the grounds at the sale, commencing Saturday, Aug. 27, at 1 pm.

Remember The number of lots is strictly limited, and you must come early if you wish one of these lots. Don't pass up the chance for such a nice piece of land as this. Real Estate values are steadily advancing. Soon they will be beyond your reach.

How to Get There!

WANTS PRIMARY FOR PRESIDENT

Cummins Will Introduce Bill to That Effect in the Senate.

Des Moines, Iowa, Aug. 25.—Asserting as a reason the fact that the nominations for president and vice president may be and actually have been determined by the vote of delegates from states which cast practically no vote for the party ticket and never elect the party electoral ticket, Senator Albert B. Cummins declares his intention of introducing in the senate a bill providing for the enactment of a nation-wide primary law.

Senator Cummins points to the difficulty of making any change in the method of proceedure in national conventions relative to the basis of representation, and declares that if congress does not act within a reasonable time upon his national primary bill, he will propose a law regulating national party conventions making the basis of representation the party vote instead of population.

At the recent Republican state convention a plank was adopted in favor of a national primary law, and the Republicans of the state are committed to it.

Tribble and Congressman Howard filed notice of contest of the election. He charges irregularities at two points in the district which gave Tribble a majority of four votes.

The Important Problem

confronting anyone in need of a laxative is not a question of a single action only, but of permanently beneficial effects, which will follow proper efforts to live in a healthful way, with the assistance of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, whenever it is required, as it cleanses the system gently yet promptly, without irritation and will therefore always have the preference of all who wish the best of family laxatives.

The combination has the approval of physicians because it is known to be truly beneficial, and because it has given satisfaction to the millions of well-informed families who have used it for many years past.

To get its beneficial effects, always buy the genuine manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only.

DULUTH CELESTIALS HAVE DISCARDED QUEUES.

Celestial barbers in Duluth, were any located here, would have no occasion for spasms of joy at the thought that all Chinamen may be directed to hack off their queues simultaneously by an imperial edict. For Duluth has but two or three children of the Land of the Sun who persist in wearing pigtails. The others dispensed with them long ago. A canvass of China is being made to ascertain what public opinion says relative to the disposal of the long braids which have been worn for hundreds of years. If it is found that the verdict is favorable to their discontinuance, the emperor will order about 400,000,000 Chinamen to cut them off at the same time.

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 25.—Joseph Wess Moore, a paroled murder convict, who left California to escape reincarceration, dropped dead last night in the traction terminal station as he was about to board a car for Greenfield, Ind. Heart failure is said to have caused his death. Moore was about 65 years old and carried a pamphlet, "Glimpses of Prison Life," written by himself. In the pamphlet Moore says his wife died of a broken heart after his conviction. It also states that he was with Gen. Sherman in the Civil war.

ANOTHER MURDER BY A NEW ORLEANS GIRL.

New Orleans, La., Aug 25.—Katie Freitsch, 19 years old and employed in a local department store, shot and killed Frank Michlor, aged 27, a boilermaker, at Port and North Peter streets here last night. When the police reached the scene, the girl was holding the man's head in her lap and sobbing. She claimed that Michlor had wronged her. The killing comes on the heels of the acquittal of Mamie McLaughlin, a young girl, in the courts here on the charge of murdering Huey Smith, a saloonkeeper. The "unwritten law" was the main defense in her case.

CONVICT REARRESTED.

Harry Scanlon Taken In Custody as He Leaves Penitentiary.

Stillwater, Minn., Aug. 25.—Harry Scanlon, about 21, was taken into custody Tuesday when emerging from the state prison, where he had just ended a term of a year and a half for burglary in the third degree in Becker county. While in jail at Detroit he escaped by sawing off six bars of a window. He was at large for three months, but was apprehended and given the sentence which ended today.

Sheriff J. S. Billings of Fergus Falls was on hand to take him into custody Tuesday on another charge of burglary, said to have been committed in Otter Tail county in December, 1908, a short time before the burglary, for which he has finished his sentence.

It is said that the general store of Michael Goblisch in Fergus Falls was robbed of a wagon load of fur coats, suits of clothing and other goods to the value of $311. It is claimed that three men were engaged in the burglary and Scanlon is suspected of being one of them. He has been indicted. The goods were disposed of in Grand Forks.

Scanlon has a mother living on a farm of forty acres five miles from Columbus, Ohio. He is said to have been in prison before his term in the Minnesota institution.

LILLIS DENIES HE IS TO MARRY MRS. CUDAHY.

New York, Aug. 25.—Jere S. Lillis, who was bound and beaten and cut in the Kansas City home of John P. Cudahy, denies that he will marry Cudahy's divorced wife.

"Any report that Mrs. Cudahy is coming East to meet me," he said in his hotel here yesterday, "and that we are to be married, is absurd on the face of it. We have not corresponded, and I don't know anything about her. I have no intention of marrying anyone.

"Moreover, I couldn't marry Mrs. Cudahy if I wanted to. There are religious obstacles in the way."

Mr. Kerens also assured the officials that under the rigid inspection of the United States government every shipment would be guaranteed free from disease.

ACTIVITY ON THE STEEL PLANT.

Yesterday the Minnesota Steel company, a subsidiary of the United States Steel corporation, took out building permits aggregating $10,000,000, and work on the buildings that will contain the various branches of Duluth's great new steel plant will go ahead rapidly.

The preliminaries always are the most tedious part of a great work of this character, and they have taken a long time in this case. The site had to be bought from a far-scattered multitude of owners; land had to be condemned for lines of railroad to carry the ore to the plant and the finished product to the docks and warehouses, and these lines had to be built; permission had to be secured from the government to bridge the St. Louis river, and the bridge had to be built; the ground had to be prepared for the foundations of the buildings, and the foundations had to be built.

But now these tedious preliminaries are out of the way, the company has a permit to construct its buildings,—which must be about the biggest permit ever issued in this state, by the way,—and the remaining work will be swiftly done.

The ten millions involved in the construction of the buildings are but a part of the outlay on this great plant which marks the beginning of iron and steel manufacture in Minnesota on a large scale. The site cost a large sum, and several millions have been spent in the preparatory work. Nor is this the end of it. Ten millions provide for two units, and the plans of the Minnesota Steel company are said to contemplate provision for five units, to be installed as the demand warrants.

While the new steel plant, now that it is assured and its completion in sight, has come to be a commonplace in Duluth, it is just as important and just as pregnant with possibilities for a greater Duluth as it was when the announcement of its coming was first made.

FLOUNDERING.

Our ebulliently enthusiastic but not always discreet contemporary is floundering in a bottomless bog of confusion over the intricate subject of taxation, which is, it must be admitted, rather advanced work for the primer class.

After thinking it over for a week, it has this answer to The Herald's suggestion that the only way to eliminate the tax on personal property and improvements in Duluth would be to abolish the direct state tax and thus make local option in taxation possible: "The Constitution might have to be changed to permit cities of the first class to exempt property or improvements, or both."

We would enjoy hugely seeing a moving picture of this state at the moment when it was proposed to allow Duluth, St. Paul and Minneapolis to exempt their personal property and buildings from taxation. It would present the engaging spectacle of a large mass of rural residents hopping up and down in great indignation. If it could have a phonograph attachment it would show these excited citizens hotly demanding to know if the cities expect them to let the diamonds and automobiles and rich homes and fancy buildings of the purseproud city folks go free of state taxes, while the farmer's ox and pig and cow and stable and farm house assume the full burden of meeting the state's expenses.

Another interesting picture would be that of the Minnesota legislature when the proposal appeared before it. That body, dominated overwhelmingly by the representatives of rural communities, would throw the hugest fit of its fitful history if the statesmen from the three large cities proposed to exempt city personal property and buildings from taxation, while leaving country personal property and buildings subject to taxation.

We should like to see these pictures, but we hope never to see the real thing. It has too many possibilities of aggravating the existing prejudice of country against city.

CO-OPERATION IS THE KEY.

Slowly but surely co-operation is working itself out as the solution of the common problems of producer and consumer. Wherever co-operation has been given a fair trial by the farmers of this country it has proved its ability to do away with the losses involved in subjection to the caprices of the middleman.

It is having an interesting trial in Northeastern Minnesota, and the progress of the experiment thus far has done much to prove it worth while.

Sir Horace Plunkett, a shrewd, penetrating observer, came over to this country from Ireland some time ago, and now he has written a book, "The Rural Problem of the United States," in which he gives his observations. Of chief importance among his conclusions is his recognition of the fact that bad business organization among the farmers, or lack of any business organization at all, is responsible for a large crop of trouble.

He says that the weak spot in American rural economy is its bad business organization, and that the starting point of reform should be there. He would change Col. Roosevelt's formula of reform, "better farming, better business, better living," by putting "better business" first.

"Both Irish experience and continental study," he declares, "have convinced me that neither good husbandry nor a worthy social life can be ensured unless accompanied by intelligent and efficient business methods."

Mr. Plunkett tells the illuminative story of a Southwestern community which shipped to Eastern points in one summer a million dollars' worth of canteloupes, and after the season was over almost every grower found himself in debt to the commission men. This is an unusual case, of course, because of its sweeping nature; but it is no new thing to have a farmer get back from the commission man a bill instead of a check.

For the improvement of these bad business methods Mr. Plunkett thinks that the "agricultural organization societies" which have been the chief means of agricultural reform in Ireland would be equally efficient here. These apply to the farmer's business the principles of combination that have become the very keystone of modern business life in all its other phases. In agricultural life these principles of co-operation take more account of character and of social life than they do elsewhere, and although the societies are primarily economic, they soon make their influence felt in many ways.

"Gradually the society becomes the most important institution in the district," says this author, "the most important in a social as well as in an economic sense. The members feel a pride in its material expansion. They accumulate large profits, which in time becomes a kind of communal fund. In some cases this is used for the erection of village halls where social entertainments, concerts and dances are held, lectures delivered and libraries stored."

Pretty nearly everybody the farmer buys from is in a combination of some sort. Why shouldn't the farmer combine in his own interests? He most certainly should combine, not only for marketing service but for social improvement.

CLEANING UP.

Insurgency is not a party matter. It seems to be a Republican movement only because the Republican organization, after years of power, has become so corrupt that it offers more occasion for revolt than the Democratic party, which has been largely cleansed by the plain living and high thinking that go with absence from power and control.

Insurgency is not sectional. It seems to be a Western movement because the Western states have been largely in the control of the Republican party, and because these states have given the voters command of the situation through the system of direct nominations provided in the primary election.

Insurgency is the effect of an impulse for progress that possesses the American people, and that knows no boundary line of party or section.

The truth of this is made clear by a conspicuous result of Tuesday's primary elections in Georgia.

Leonidas F. Livingston and William M. Howard, Democrats, are the senior members in point of service of the Georgia delegation in the national house of representatives. Livingston has served for twenty years and Howard for twelve.

Neither will serve the state of Georgia in congress after March 4, 1911, because both were defeated for renomination in the primaries Tuesday. Both were beaten for the same reason: because they were members of the slender band of standpatters in the Democratic party.

In both of these congressional districts the leading issue was the fact that these men voted for the Cannon rule at the organization of the house. Though Democrats, they voted with the reactionary Republicans and in defense of the egregious system that made it possible for one stiffnecked, thickskinned and unrighteous old man to control the people's branch of congress in the interests of those that prey upon the people.

They reckoned, however, without their districts. Insurgency is as rampant there as it is in Kansas. The Democrats of Georgia had as little faith in those who made Cannon's power possible as the progressive Republicans of Iowa.

Insurgency is showing its head wherever it is needed. It is not needed, for instance, in a district like the Second of Minnesota, which is represented by Winfield Scott Hammond, a man who is not only a true Democrat but a true progressive. It is needed in districts like the Eighth of Minnesota, which is represented by a young man who has attempted the impossible feat of pleasing both progressives and reactionaries.

Insurgency is progress. It is a cleaning up. Kansas Republicans cleaned up by defeating the Kansas congressmen who had voted for and with Cannon. Georgia Democrats cleaned up by defeating the Democrats who were false to their colors and who helped to maintain the power that has made Cannon an object of hatred, the speakership a thing of undemocratic oppression, and congress a mockery of free government.

JOINING THE ISSUE.

While Garfield and Pinchot are beginning to circulate and to spread their positive doctrines of progress, the Colonel himself is taking the bull of the New York situation by the horns, and is giving delight to his followers everywhere by announcing an uncompromising war upon the "old guard" which has shackled the Republican party in New York to the chariot wheel of Special Privilege.

The "old guard" didn't want him to be temporary chairman of the state convention because he was loaded with a "key note" speech that would, they knew, jar harshly on their ears and disturb their plans. Now he says he is going to the convention anyway, and that he is "going to make that speech exactly as it had been planned originally." And if the "old guard" opposes him, he intimates that it will be at their peril, and that so far as he is concerned the issue will be "absolutely clean cut." All of which is interesting, and adds to the prospects of a pleasantly lively fall.

TWO NEEDED IMPROVEMENTS.

According to the health commissioner's report in The Herald last evening of the sanitary condition of the union depot, the first impression the visitor to Duluth gets is that of an exceedingly evil smell. The train shed is floored with planks, and the accumulations of years rot and fester beneath them. Drippings from boxes of fish and cans of milk trickle through and begin sending up noxious odors, creating an atmosphere ill suited to a gathering place for travelers.

The health office has ordered the union depot to clean up, and the order is timely.

Timely, too, is the health department's order to garbage men to use none but lined and covered wagons for the conveyance of the city's rubbish. Wagons dripping filth and scattering vile smells have been too common.

Both of these orders should be obeyed promptly in the interest of public comfort as well as in the more important interest of public health.

THE OPEN COURT.

(Readers of The Herald are invited to make free use of this column to express their ideas about the topics of general interest. Letters should not exceed 300 words—the shorter the better. They must be written on one side of the paper only, and they must be accompanied in every case by the name and address of the writer, though these need not be published. A signed letter is always more effective, however.)

THE OTHER SIDE OF IT.

To the Editor of The Herald:

In regard to Dr. Slade's letter in the Open Court last night about a national health bureau, I would say, any one interested in the article would do well to look up the June, 1910, Twentieth Century Magazine. It gives a very interesting view of the other side. For instance, Dr. Slade says it would conduct and encourage scientific study of disease. And it has already been shown that the less one knows of disease the better; that medicine has already killed more people than all the wars and plagues have. I am one of many that I know would be heartily sorry to see a national health department established. Yours truly,

W. T. CONNER.

NEW TRANSLATION OF FINLAND'S NATIONAL HYMN.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Many attempts have been made to translate into English the beautiful national song of Finland, composed by the greatest poet of the Northland, Carl Ludwig Runeberg, in the Swedish language, but none has succeeded in catching the spirit and using the same measure and rhyme.

I have been tempted to try it and I thought that perhaps my attempt might interest the readers of your paper. Of course, it is impossible to translate it without a great loss to the original in its simple beauty, but I've done my best to make it a faithful mirror of the real hymn, and your readers will judge how nearly I have succeeded.

"Our land, our land, our fathers' land,
Where heroes' spirits roam!

No hills or mounts that proudly stand,
Nor valleys touched by magic wand,
More loved than our own native loam,
Our northland hearth and home.

"Our land is poor and poor shall be
To all who seek for gold;
No stranger proud her gifts may see—
Her nature grand, her spirit free,
Yet to her sons her wealth untold,
A secret sweet unfold.

"We love her brooklets, rills and streams,
Her lakes so silv'ry bright;
Her forest dark through which there gleams
A golden thread of sun's bright beams;
Her clear blue sky on summer's night,
And glowing northern light.

"Here, fathers fought in days of yore—
For truth they bled and died;
Here sung the ancient bard his lore
Of freedom's cause midst cannons' roar;
On plain and hill and mountain side,
The tyrant's will defied.

"And could we dwell in paradise,
'Mong gold winged angels throng;
And dance on stars in purple skies,
Where ne'er are known nor tears nor sighs,
To this, our land, we still would long,
To sing our fathers' song.

"Her withered rose shall bloom once more,
Her prayer shall answered be;
Through dales, on mounts her sons adore,
Shall ring her joy as ne'er before;
A mighty chorus of the free—
The song of liberty."

WHY NOT REMEMBER PROCTOR KNOTT?

To the Editor of The Herald:

On Aug. 29 J. Proctor Knott of Lebanon, Ky., will be 80 years of age. His speech on Duluth forty years ago is one of the most famous examples of humor and sarcasm in the country's literature. His address in the house of representatives is still in demand, and the Duluth Commercial club is compelled to reprint the speech every little while in order to supply the demand.

It occurs to me that Mr. Knott, who is a helpless invalid and soon will lay down the cares and the burdens of this life, would be extremely gratified to receive a remembrance from the citizens of Duluth. I can fancy that nothing would so cheer the aged statesman as to receive a slight memorial or some object of the esteem of the city which he has watched from the time he ridiculed it to its everlasting advantage. He has a special place in his heart for this town, and its citizens should remember him on the eightieth anniversary of his birth. He has not much longer to live, and it would be fitting for the citizens of this town to add to the happiness of his closing days.

WORK FOR THE CITY HEALTH DEPARTMENT.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Have you ever noticed the condition of the alley between Fourth and Fifth avenues west and Superior and First streets? It's certainly "fierce." I venture to state that if you walk through it, particularly on a warm day, you will have difficulty in finding one window of the rear or sides of the office buildings abutting the alley, open. I have an office in the Palladio building, and it's a choice of enduring the odors which are wafted through in copious quantities, or of standing the close, stuffy atmosphere incident to a closed room on a hot day. I tried to harden myself to the former, but my constitution was too weak. I found that I'd sooner run chances of tuberculosis. The block between Fourth and Fifth avenues on Superior street contains a large number of saloons and restaurants. Between them the refuse deposited in the alley would create an unpleasant condition. Combine this with the delights of a big livery stable, and it becomes ideal. To cap the climax of the alley joys, open garbage wagons make daily trips through it. They reek with rotten filth, which can be sensed blocks away. Some of them leave a trail of drippings along the alley pavement which are strong enough to make an ordinary man faint. The health department ought to get on the job. Not only should the garbage wagons be compelled to be water-tight and covered, but the owners of the restaurants and saloons should be obliged to put their garbage in receptacles which would allow of no smell. Nor should the livery stable be overlooked. It's in the heart of the business district and should be obliged to exercise more care than stables in less important sections.

A Flinty Rebuke.

Popular Magazine: Long before the congressional investigation of the Ballinger-Pinchot row came to an end, its dullness and dryness impressed everybody. Even the senators and representatives on the committees began to be excessively bored by the protracted methods of the various lawyers engaged in the case.

"Now," said John J. Vertrees, counsel for Ballinger, one afternoon toward the close of the investigation, "referring to letter number forty-eight, which the members of the committee will find on page 377"——

"Does that number," asked Senator Flint of California, wearily, "refer to the page in the record or to the number of times the letter has already been read to this committee?"

Mr. Vertrees suddenly lost all interest in the document.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Boodler Nothing But That.

Coleraine Optic: Time was not far back when the boodler was called a statesman, or, at worst, a shrewd politician. It is to the great advantage of this country that he is now known by his right name.

"Coming His Way."

Northome Record: The daily papers now say that Lind is "undecided." That means Frank Day has got things coming his way and that Lind will accept in the end.

Burbanks in Congress.

Walker Pilot: There appears to be too many Luther Burbanks in congress, as far as professional grafting is concerned.

Past Master of Publicity.

Mankato Free Press: Theodore Roosevelt as publicity agent for the railroads in these United States. This is the latest piece of interesting news that has been wired from Washington. It is said that if the colonel will but signify his willingness to accept the position he can fix the size of his salary. The heads of the transportation lines recognize the bald fact that the former president is a past master at publicity.

Fate of That Surplus.

Perham Enterprise: There were over $4,000,000 in the state treasury when the treasurer's books were balanced last month, yet the state will be borrowing money to meet expenses before the first of next year.

Acrobatic Mr. Ballinger.

Red Wing Republican: Secretary Ballinger may be cleared from any charge of personal dishonesty but he convicts himself of extreme foolishness. Wherever he goes he puts his foot in his mouth by breathing out threatenings and slaughter against his enemies. He talks altogether too much.

Wilderness to Laboratory.

Warroad Plaindealer: There seems to be only one man who really cares to get a county job in this county. Come out of the bush, you men who figure on getting into the game, and give the voters a chance to get you under the microscope.

The Exchange Editor and the Political Prophets.

Chicago Record-Herald: When it is all over and the news has been telegraphed, the gentle reader accepts the results and forgets the political prophets. But the exchange editor cannot escape. The mails bring him papers from great distances—500 moles, 1,000 miles, 2,000 miles—and he is buried under the predictions of the prophets, songs of hope and joy, unanswerable proofs, reasoning that would convince the most skeptical if the dispatches after the election did not dethrone reason and slam it with hard facts. Nothing could be more incongruous than these sounds of exultation arising as it were from the tombs, and the exchange editor is more than ever convinced that all is vanity.

To illustrate his sad case, we give one little sample out of several heaps of newspapers. He has read the following in the dispatches:

"As returns come in slowly, the magnitude of Hiram Johnson's victory over the regular Republican machine becomes apparent. His friends now expect his plurality to run to 40,000. His vote exceeds the combined vote of his two strongest opponents, Curry and Anderson."

Johnson was the anti-railroad candidate for the Republican nomination for governor of California. And as the exchange editor takes up a California paper he discovers that on the day before the primary Johnson had no show. The prophet is Alden Anderson, one of the two other candidates. "I have been somewhat successful in business," he declares, "and I know something of human nature, and in the light of all my experience I can say in all sincerity and honesty that I feel positive that I will receive the Republican nomination for governor at the polls Tuesday."

He had gone direct to the people, he had talked with them personally, he had "got in touch with them as thoroughly as possible for a man to do in this great state." It was a convincing interview, and what with the confident prophecy and the noble tribute that the speaker paid to himself, it must have made excellent reading for his partisans.

But how stale, flat and unprofitable it is for the exchange editor. And think of those heaps of papers and the dose he gets after every election, and then tell if you can how he is able to be saved from cynicism.

"How Is It the Mayor?"

New York Globe and Advertiser: Solomon Bobbish, 70 years old and a pushcart peddler, has not been doing business for eight days. A white shawl over his head and fasting, he has prayed for Mayor Gaynor's recovery. "Mayor Gaynor," says Mr. Bobbish, "is it what say to the policeman to don't be hitting the peddler, to don't be chasing him. I didn't was locked up for peddling for it is now five months."

Does it pay to be humane and kind and square and to make the poor and the lowly as your clients rather than the powerful? We may imagine that Mayor Gaynor has thought so as he has fought his battle against death the last few days. We may imagine that the messages from his East side friends have cheered him even more than the telegrams from the conspicuous.

"How is it the mayor?"—this is the Grand street hourly inquiry. Others in the best part of the city are asking. For example, the little East Houston street girl who has written: I have saved a whole quarter, and if I would lose that quarter I wouldn't be sorry so much as I worry about you. Why? Your a good mayor."

A Soothing Sentence.

When you have read the headlines through
Which tell about an accident
Your fellings are uncommon blue
And life seems full of discontent
Until you read the tardy phrase
Appended by the scribe alert;
How joyously it meets your gaze—
"Nobody seriously hurt."

'Tis fortunate, you must agree,
That in 'most every affair
The line we so delight to see
Is written or suggested there.
The auto and the street car meet,
Explosives high their strength assert;
Then come these words serenely sweet—
"Nobody seriously hurt."

The fruit crop fails, the trusts grow strong,
The comet flares across the sky,
The voice of protest shows how wrong
Are half the arts that people ply;
The umpire holds the mob at bay,
The summer girl is still a flirt,
And yet the old world goes its way—
Nobody seriously hurt.

—Washington Star.

Cannon and Ballinger.

New York Press: Unquestionably Uncle Joe Cannon has the right to strive to retain the speakership by going before the next house, if he can, and submitting himself to a vote of defeat or election for that post. We have no doubt what would happen to him, and we are convinced that in the best interest of the Republican party he ought not to make the attempt or in any way to force his unpopular personality as an issue into the admittedly difficult campaign now beginning. But we are frank to say that it is his privilege to stick and try to stick as long as he pleases.

Nothing of the kind applies to Ballinger. He is in the cabinet by invitation, true, but, his welcome long ago worn out, he has no right to stay there waiting till he is put out by his host. We suppose that in such a situation even a fuddled caller in a private house could comprehend the imperative demands upon him to go. Walk or be carried, Ballinger's place is outside at once.

IN THE FACE OF THE STORM.

And thou sit'st smiling!
Well, the thought comes home,
Clearer and clearer as the days go by,
How seldom from the crowd rises a man
Built for the hour and molded of that clay
That feels the kindred heaving of the land
And knows her heartache ere the word take fire
Upon her angry lip. Thou should'st have filled
Some high judicial seat, where fold on fold
Of ancient precedent had clothed thee round
Secluded, with full mind to weigh the law
While all unseen life's quivering page went by.
Or if commanded forth to serve the state
With large, deft fingers patient of the knot,
Or smooth out action with thy kindly face,
Not thine to grip in times like these the wheel;
In times like these, when something greatly moves
Under the busy surface of the days
And the light talk of people in the street;
Signs not mistaken by the ear divine
Of one flung forth and molded for the place.
For seasons come when through the thin disguise
Of trade and temporal talk and marriage bells
The Fates are seen and the whole land is heard,
With something of the earnestness of prayer,
Uttering her troubled depths from shore to shore.
Then Man uprises in the hearts of men
And States and Cities at a common forge
Labor, and with high purpose day by day
Fulfill their casual tasks and wait the the hour.
With some such meaning now the days go back
In quiet grandeur not uncrowned with foam
And pregnant with a peril to the state.

And thou sit'st smiling!
Well, it must be said,
Against thy will thou were upraised to be
Helmsman, and now the storm is coming on,
Athwart the Rockies and the Middle states
The shadows gather, and the keen, blue flash
Licks through the clouds that are the nation's sky,
For Nature, that keeps green the heart of man,
With ever rounding cycles of the Law,
Leads on the seed time to the harvesting,
And they that ran the furrow know full well
That she that cometh bringeth bitter bread.
Therefore is Mammon seen with desperate speed
Strengthening her walls and towers, while the land,
Long patient, bowing to the iron days,
Upgathers with the whirlwind on her brow,
But looks to thee one moment ere she strike.

Hast lost thy way, O Mr. President?
Hast lost that clear, white image of thyself
That drew the shouts of freemen when through lies
They cut their way to thee ten thousand strong
And lifted thee on high, and clothed with power
Thy offered hands of seeming strength? For now
To see thee, now thy first year rounds its close
Hearkening the poisoners of thy better self
Who lure thee where the lights of Mammon burn
Among the hidden rocks, to see thee thus
Taking the backward drift and putting on
The robe of them that still must needs explain—
Hark, how with infinite pity through the land
The innumerable voices of the tide
That lifted thee on high withdraw the shout,
So fades the laureled name. Almost it seems
Thou shalt go down in history as a man
Whose great good nature and kind-heartedness
Make thee a sorrow in the nation's hour.

—Edwin Schoonmaker in New York World.

"We" Are Prosperous.

Omaha World-Herald: The champions of the Aldrich-Cannon tariff are quoting the customs receipts to prove that the new tariff law is making the nation prosperous. We are enabled, thanks to tariff prosperity, to buy more in Europe than ever before. This is the message that comes from the high tariff proponents.

And it is perfectly true. But who are "we" and what do "we" buy?

A quarter billion dollars of foreign made luxuries—that is what "we" have bought in the last fiscal year. It is more than ever before in the country's history. Diamonds, jewelry, laces, embroideries, furs, feathers, beads, perfumery, cigars, tobacco, liquors, wines and automobiles—these are the principle luxuries which "we" are buying abroad in such large amounts that the tariff revenues are reaching a record figure.

Who are the people that are getting these luxuries? Who are the beneficiaries of this tariff-made prosperity?

Have you, gentle reader, had your share of these imported automobiles and champaignes and cigars and diamonds and laces and feathers and furs and expensive perfumes? Has your wife had her share? Have your children had theirs?

Can you stand up and solemnly depose, from your own experience, that the country had been made more prosperous than ever by the new tariff, and that the good things you and your family have been enabled to buy from Europe prove it?

Or have you simply contributed your share?

Have you simply paid a little more for what you and the family had to have — worn poorer clothes, smoked cheaper tobacco, ridden less often on the cars, in order that the few who have profited by tariff prosperity could ride in French automobiles, deck their women in laces and diamonds and furs and feathers, drink the finest of wines and smoke the rarest cigars—all imported from the far corners of the earth?

"We" are very prosperous indeed; actually running over with prosperity. But who are "we"?

A MOMENT WITH THE WITS.

Boston Transcript: Riggs—Did your wife's father settle anything on you when you married his daughter?

Briggs—You bet he did. He settled himself on us, and we can't get rid of him.

Punch: New Vicar's Wife (who has just come from her first mothers' meeting)—And, my dear, you can't think how nice some women are. Far too respectable to be mothers, I'm sure!

Baltimore American: "I heard you were going to have an al fresco performance of Shakespeare at your country home, Mrs. Comup."

"No such thing, my dear; my husband can't bear them Dago actors. It's to be all in English."

Buffalo Express: "She's very mannish, don't you think?"

"Yes. Even rocked the boat when she was out with another girl."

Louisville Courier-Journal: "Do you think Canada will ever become Americanized?"

"Well, she plays baseball."

Fliegende Blaetter: Old Gentleman (to waiter)—Can you tell me if my wife is here?

Waiter—Yes, sir, eighth hat to the left.

New York Sun: Knicker—As a boy he liked to have his shoes creak.

Bocker—And now his car of fortune has flat wheels.

Judge: Patience—Do you enjoy going to the theater?

Patrice—No, I can't say that I do; the cars are so frightfully crowded, don't you know? But I always enjoy it after I get there.

Cleveland Leader: Teacher—I can't teach this young Dutchman to talk English.

Principal—But why?

Teacher—I've been working an hour and I can't make him see the difference between a flat head and a level-headed man!

Answers: "Where are you going with the goat little boy?"

"Down to the lake. Come along if you wanter see some fun. This here goat has just eat a crate of sponges, an' I'm going down to let him drink."

The Delineator: Little Paul had been accustomed to sleeping with the light in his room. One night he was put to bed and the light blown out. In a few minutes sobs were heard coming from the direction of Paul's bed.

"What's the matter, son?" said his papa.

"I can't see how to shut my eyes," sobbed the little fellow.

Judge: Bill—Do you remember that $10 I loaned you a year ago?

Jill—Yes, I recall it now.

Bill—I wish to gracious I could!

Chicago Daily News: "Alas!" sighed the poet, "the world does not understand me."

"Well, cheer up," rejoined the practical person. "That is something to be thankful for, I'm sure."

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: A few men are so lucky that when they ask a girl to marry them she rejects them.

If a man hasn't any morals, he'd better have a tidy sum of money if he wants a good reputation.

There may be red-headed angels in heaven, but how does it help things to have such tempers there?

It seems as if a woman would rather look pretty in her photograph than actually be so in her own person.

It's awful bad for the youngest child to get spoiled, and that's why the family think they don't do it, but they do.

True Independence.

Emerson: You will always find those who think they know what is your duty better than you know it. It is easy in the world to live after the world's opinion; it is easy in solitude to live after our own; but the great man is he who, in the midst of the crowd, keeps, with perfect sweetness, the independence of solitude.

The University School

Perhaps? Perhaps your child's work at school has not been all that you had hoped? Perhaps there is a lack of interest in school work? Perhaps there is confusion due to the faulty elementary instruction? Perhaps failure will result?

No doubt we can help you. Our classes are small. Our teachers are specially trained, and in the upper grades, are men. Every student recites every lesson every day, and all home work is carefully checked up and returned. Bell 'phone, 707.

ALBERT HEPPERT.

CONCERNING WOMAN.

If you were a school teacher and suddenly in the spring the dull outlook of life were changed by the only man you ever loved telling the sweetest story ever told, and giving you the dearest engagement ring, and asking you to name the day, and vowing to love you always, and if the day were set for early in August and then the question of being elected as a teacher for the coming year were put up to you, would you immediately separate yourself from your position, or would you accept the election and wait until the knot was firmly tied and the man could not pull out even if he were disillusioned—but, of— course, there could be no disillusionment with you—before submitting your resignation?

Duluth school teachers are firm believers in the ancient and overworked adage, "There's may a slip, etc.," and some of them believe that even when the cup is at their lips, it may be rudely knocked from their hands.

That mythical child who never grows up — little Danny Cupid — has made serious inroads into the teaching corps of the Duluth public schools this summer. Fully twenty-five of the young ladies, who last year carefully nurtured the young idea in the minds of Duluth's hopefuls, this year have the prefix, "Mrs." to a new name. All of which is well enough in itself, but the consequences of the numerous marriages are making demands upon the patience of Superintendent of Schools R. E. Denfeld that require much of his great resource of that very desirable quality to supply.

Every day, new resignations find their way to Mr. Denfeld's desk and in view of the fact that he is engaged in assigning the teachers for the coming year, each new resignation puts new difficulties in his way. Teachers who have already been assigned have come forward with letters sweetly conveying the information to the superintendent that they have decided to give up teaching children and confine themselves to teaching one young man the fact that he doesn't know nearly as much as he thought he knew about the eternal feminine — not in so many words, of course, but in effect. Such letters necessitate a rearrangement of assignments already made and add another gray hair to the increasing number on the head of the superintendent.

Certainly, if one is to be married in July or August one is reasonably certain of the fact in April or May, but Duluth teachers believe in assuring themselves of the support of the men of their choice before divorcing themselves from the exchequer of the independent school district of Duluth.

One young lady—she's married now—writes: "Please keep me in mind for I may want to return to Duluth to teach," which proves that she is cognizant of the uncertainty of the marriage bond.

Another ex-teacher wanted to be certain that the ship of matrimony on which she embarked would get fairly out to sea, so, although she was married early in July, she has just sent in her resignation.

Nearly all of the resignations being received are from former teachers who have been married during the summer, which proves that Duluth teachers have an eye to the probabilities as well as to the main chance.

Most of the resignations received this year are from teachers who have been married, but some teachers signed contracts last spring to assure themselves positions in Duluth and then proceeded to find positions in other cities where salaries are higher.

The contract between the district and the teacher provides that it may be terminated by either party on thirty days' notice, so that the teachers who resign now are not really breaking their contracts, although they might have saved Mr. Denfeld considerable annoyance by resigning earlier. The resignations are annoying now, but enough new teachers have been engaged to take the vacant places and the corps will be complete when school opens Sept. 6.

WILL LECTURE ON HER GRANDFATHER'S LIFE

—Copyrighted 1910 by George Grantham Bain.

MISS ITALIA GARIBALDI.

Miss Italia Garibaldi, granddaughter of the famous liberator, is in New York, where she is to deliver a series of lectures on the life of the great Italian hero. She will also give lectures describing the work of the Methodist church in Rome. Miss Garibaldi studied for two years at the Women's college in Baltimore and is therefore no stranger to the United States. As a teacher of the largest Methodist Sunday school in Rome, she has met many Americans. Their repeated inquiries as to why it was not possible to get a biography of her grandfather, gave her the idea of coming to the United States to lecture. There is little in the appearance of Signorina Garibaldi to differentiate her from a well-bred young American or English woman. She speaks English perfectly, with barely the trace of an accent. Her skin is fair, with the blondness of Northern Italy. Her manner is serious and she prefers to talk of serious things. She was greatly annoyed by reading an interview with her in a New York paper which made her say silly, flippant things about American women and men and customs. She will also lecture in other parts of this country.

Joint Recital.

Alfred Wiley will present Miss Alma Olsen in a joint recital of songs by American composers at the Endion Methodist Episcopal church, Nineteenth avenue east and First street, Tuesday evening, Sept. 6.

THE NURSERY

How to Keep Milk Sweet for Infants' Use.

Fill a bottle or two within half an inch of the neck, press a perforated rubber stoppel into each bottle, set them in a pot of water until the water begins to boil; then press a glass stopple into the rubber one, thus hermetically sealing the bottle, which should not be unfastened until required for use. Milk so treated is freed from all germs of life or disease and no amount of thunder will turn it sour.

No Feather Beds for the Babies.

A child should sleep on a mattress, never on a feather bed, and without too much covering, which should be of the lightest description, though warm.

Study Your Children.

Strength is the one great good life has to offer, but like most desirable things, there is no royal road to it. Sometimes it is only to be gained in devious pathways which appear to lead in quite another direction. Study your children; thus only will you be able to stake out their particular routes to health. Learn the strengthening power of cold water, out-door exercise, sleep in a cold, dark room, early bed hours and simple meals. Do not send for a doctor at each sneeze, or live with a clinical thermometer in your hand.

Fresh Air and Milk.

If a child is narrow-chested he should live in the open air as much as possible. Light dumbbells should be used for exercise and he should be given a generous milk diet.

A Nourishing Pudding.

Arrowroot blanchmange makes a simple and nourishing pudding for the nursery, and can be made in this way: Take two ounces of arrowroot, one and a half pints of milk, sugar to taste and a few drops of essence of vanilla. Mix the arrowroot in a cupful of the milk, bring the rest of the milk to a boil with the flavoring and sugar, and the arrowroot, and stir it over a clear fire until it is very thick. Pour it into a damp mold and when it is cold serve it garnished with fruit or with crystallized flowers.

THE EVENING STORY

Special Appointment

By C. Malcolm Hincks.

"I wish she wasn't so classy," said Mr. John Smithson for about the 100th time.

He referred to the girl on the seat.

For the full four days of his stay at Atlantic City Mr. Smithson had been consumed with a great passion; he had fallen violently in love with a tall, pretty girl, who generally dressed in white and who was generally sitting alone on the pier between the hours of 10:30 and 12:30.

He passed her on an average three times every ten minutes, eyeing her covertly from under his cheap straw hat with the vivid band. Except on one occasion she had always been immersed in a novel or looking out over the sea; on the exception her big, blue eyes had met his, and Mr. Smithson had flushed deeply and hurried on, not daring to pass the spot again for nearly an hour.

This morning Mr. Smithson had resolved to take a bold step; the previous day he had seen his divinity with an elderly lady, and, to his disgust, a by no means elderly and well-dressed man, and in three days' time his brief holiday was up.

So, after passing her for the tenth time, he mustered up his courage and sat down on the same seat.

The face of the girl in white was half hidden by a scarlet sunshade, a book was open on her lap. To Mr. Smithson's surprise she appeared to be totally oblivious of his presence.

He glanced down at the beautifully creased check suit and the spotless brown boots, then, after fidgeting with his neat pink tie, he cleared his throat and moistened his dry lips with his tongue.

"Nice day, miss," he faltered in a voice he certainly did not recognize as his own.

The scarlet sunshade moved, a pretty, proud face half turned towards him, then the haughty blue eyes met the little brown ones that spoke the admiration the tongue could never have expressed.

Instead of freezing the unconventional young man with a cold stare, she was half amused and smiled slightly.

"Yes," she agreed, and then turned again to her book.

Mr. Smithson carefully studied his boots for nearly half an hour; he was longing to say something, but having used the sentence he had previously thought out, his tongue was tied.

Before he could commence on another topic the girl rose slightly inclined her head towards him, and walked toward the pier gates. Before she reached them a couple of well-dressed men passed her and raised their hats.

"She's too toney," murmered the young man sadly as he made his way to the third-rate boarding-house where he was staying.

But the next day he was on the pier early, and the girl had no sooner settled down in her accustomed seat than he sat down beside her before she had time to open the book she carried.

This time he had prepared his conversation. The girl answered shortly. A more experienced man would have seen that she wished him to go, but did not like to be rude enough to tell him so, for the man's manner was honest and straightforward, despite his original ideas of etiquette.

Two or three times people passed and stared wonderingly at them, and the girl flushed guiltily.

And on the day before Mr. Smithson had to return to New York the thing she had half feared happened—he proposed. It was a strange proposal, but it left no doubt but what it was inspired by a great love. The girl heard it with her eyes half filled with tears and her lips half smiling.

"I am sorry," she said, when he had finished, "but I cannot marry you."

When she saw the man's face change she did not smile.

"I was a fool," he said hoarsely. "I ought to have known you was of a different class. Is it because I ain't your class, miss?"

"Partly," said the girl softly—even the "miss" did not seem strange now—"but there are other reasons. Believe me, you will be happier with some girl more—more in your own position in life."

Mr. Smithson sat silent. He was thinking, and then suddenly, to the girl's surprise, he burst out with his life's story, and told it in such a way that she had difficulty in appearing to be as impressed as he evidently expected her to be.

The phraseology was somewhat vague, but she gathered that he was twenty-nine, had just opened a big department store. There had been a previous attachment, he confessed, to a young woman in the ribbon department of the aforementioned stores, but the romance was over.

"She wasn't a bit like you," Mr. Smithson concluded in tones of mingled regret, relief and surprise.

There was a silence for some time when he had finished. Then the girl turned to him with a smile on her face.

"I want you to do something to please me," she said.

The young man blushed.

"I would do anything to please you, miss," he replied fervently.

"Then go straight back to the young lady you quarreled with, make it up, and marry her. She would make you a better wife than I should, really. You see, she has had business training and will be able to help you in your business. I could never do that—why, I don't known how many ounces make a pound."

"Now, don't you really," he gasped incredulously.

"So, you see, there's something in that, isn't there?"

"Yes," agreed the merchant falteringly. He saw that he had asked something impossible, and the girl was letting him down lightly. He murmured "real class" under his breath as the girl rose to her feet and held out her hand.

"I must say good-by, now," she said. "I should very much like to help you in your business. Suppose I could get you acquainted abroad with someone with a title, for instance, would it help you?"

"I should just say it would!" cried the grocer excitedly, as he kindly took the little gloved hand in his big red one.

Then sadly he watched her walk down the pier.

Remarks to the Mule.

The poets talk an idle thing, and they never talk by rule;
There isn't a song the plowboys sing,
but they make remarks to the mule.
And those remarks—
They'd never do
To set down here
For the eyes of you!
For a Georgia field, on a summer's day,
it isn't a singin' school;
And never a man would have you tell remarks he made to the mule.
And those remarks—
They'd never do
To set down here
For the eyes of you!

MAN WANTS BUT LITTLE

By ALVA ARMSTRONG.

What a man wants in a woman is somewhat as follows:

She must be a dream of beauty.

She must be an angel with the smile of a seraph and a great mass of magnificent hair, all her own.

She must possess a perfect temper and never raise her voice save in a song.

She must be a splendid housekeeper and not require any servants.

She must love children and be able to tend to them.

She must be a fine musician and have a mind stored with all the intellect and wealth of ages, but must never get the idea that hubby hasn't the superior intellect and doesn't know everything.

She must dress in the latest fashion, but must spend no money in doing so.

She must be interesting, elusive, gay, of a deep religious nature, lively, modern, retiring, self-sacrificing, brilliant, fascinating, but a lover of home and fireside, preferring the society of her husband to anything else on earth, but not worrying when she doesn't get any of it.

That is all that most men require.

A WORD TO HUSBANDS

By CLARA PALMER GOETZINGER.

Husbands are frequently accountable for the small amount of interest the wife exhibits in her domestic duties, simply because he takes too much for granted, and seldom compliments the neatness or artistic manner in which the cottage is arranged and never notices how the cake has extra white dabs of cream frosting like thimbles on the background of chocolate coating.

You must positively notice verbally changes which show the least effort upon the part of the wife, or gradually her efforts to please you will grow more and more indifferent. There is many a woman who would go to an aimless afternoon card party than stand over a hot stove coking all afternoon unless her efforts are to be rewarded with recognition.

Men and women ar equally provided with vanity, and to make it sincerely posible to notice and compliment the result of that vanity will make the receiver of considerate compliments your lifelong admirer. Notice the color of your wife's gown, how she wears it, and how charmingly it contracts with her eyes. If she made it herself—even if it is a big "fizzle" from a dressmaker's point of view—tell her that she would look well in it, even if it has lost all its curve and hang like a threatening storm, for her personality and charming ways would obliterate the poor cut of the goods. Next time she will cut the gown more carefully and prove she is worthy of all your praise.

This is not weakness in women only; it is human nature. Men love notice and considerate compliments over their efforts just as much as women. If a man learns from trial that his wife is satisfied with $2 out of $20 per week for her expenses he will generally give that sum to her. So also the wife who finds out that her husband craves nothing finer than liver and fried potatoes, will use no greater effort than these rations demand. Every married man or woman has an instinctive desire to live up to the ideals of their mate. Make your circumstances; live up to them yourself as an example; demand the same of mate and with the fulfillment reward with loving notice and tender compliments.

If you cry out that stale old "saw," so rasping to unselfish ears, "I am not given to compliments," then, in the name of goodness, learn some.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S DANCES

By MARGARET WATTS DE PEYSTER.

The boy and girl dances of today are informality brought to a perfect issue. The usual multiplication of chaperons is dispensed with, and hostesses ask large parties of debutantes and young men to dine with them and go on afterward to the scene of the ball.

Thus the premeditated atmosphere of the regulation ordinary occasion is routed, and a charmingly attractive al fresco spirit of enjoyment takes its place. One chaperon does duty sometimes for as many as forty or fifty "boys and girls" and does not find that duty hard.

There is more in this assertion than would appear at first sight. The cessation of the chaperon's arduous calling implies a totally different type of girl from the one of many years ago.

Imagine the shy damsel of the past fluttering to her chaperon's side after every dance in order to take refuge beside her and confide in her. To such a shy maid a chaperon was a necessary bulwark and shield from the terrifying experiences of the first plunge into society. Self-centered without knowing it, and therefore self-conscious was the cloistered "bud" of years ago.

Does the girl of today realize all she owes to the golden influence of the immediate past, and especially to the reign of the last nine years?

Can she ever remotely comprehend everything that has been done, in that best of all ways, quietly and yet persistently, to confirm and strengthen her individuality and to lead her to true happiness?

Ten years ago it was the young married woman who was the vital attraction of every ball, and to her dismay the debutante found that she was to be a most subordinate consideration expected to pay homage to the queens of society, to whom all the admiration and attention went. Now each dance has a specific subject.

One is the young married woman's dance, another the boy and girl dance. The more ceremonial affairs are both for the debutante and the young married women.

Naturally the point to be settled primarily is that the night chosen by one dance-giver shall not clash with that of another, for a poorly filled ballroom is a foredomed failure. Nor may it be fixed for a date upon which the dinner hostesses are certain to have engagements.

A considerable part of the joy of the evening's entertainment is the feast that precedes it. It is the lightest of menus that is ordered, with due consideration for the healthy appetites of young men and maidens accustomed to using every minute of the day in doing something or another.

"Pretty" dishes are chosen in order that the tastes of the present generation may be indulged.

Then there must be sweetmeats of all kinds; new and old in fashion; the chocolate de luxe side by side with quaint sugar apples each one wrapped in blossom paper with fringed edges, arranged in pyramids, topped by a flower.

Some hostesses give to each of their guests a boutonniere and posy so that they are labeled as of their party for the whole evening.

It is such a delight to the young people to make one another's acquaintance and to cement a fragile friendship before going to the dance, and in many cases there is preliminary dancing before starting for the party, trying steps, teaching a new dance or perfecting one that has not been quite mastered.

In a recent case a regular dance was instituted after the dinner, and the hostess had to be at some pains to shepherd her flock to the legitimate center of their revels.

Flowers are a great feature of the boy and girl party, and simple old-fashioned country ones are chosen. The stairs, dancing rooms, drawing rooms for chaperons, where jig-saw puzzles are provided for them as well as other entertainments, and the supper and refreshment rooms are decked with sweet peas, the exquisite iris, lilies of many kinds, roses and carnations. Schemes of white and mauve, cool, quiet, refreshing and youthful are popular.

The dance dress is not so short as it was, and is much more graceful in consequence. In some cases trains are being favored, but they are incommodious, and therefore not so acceptable to timid partners as the dress that is more easily managed.

It is becoming more and more the custom to serve all meals at small tables.

At the dinner parties that precede the dance this plan is pursued and supper is served at the dance in the same manner.

RULES FOR A WIFE

By POLLY PAGET

If your husband comes home tired at night and wants to throw himself on the sofa after dinner and rest, don't let him. Insist on him putting on evening clothes and going somewhere. He needs a change, not a rest.

Encourage his buying new clothes in every way in your power. This will always furnish you with an excuse to do the same.

If you have an engagement to meet him at a given place at a given hour, remember that promptness is an invaluable asset, and never be more than twenty minutes or half an hour late.

Do not burst into tears ever, unless you feel that it is absolutely unnecessary.

Have a scrap with him at regular intervals, in order not to let the good old home traditions die out.

If you have passed middle age, and have lost the charm of youth, always insist that you husband kisses you when, after a visit away from home, you alight from a railway train.

If he has some little imperfection which annoys him, the rule is to remind him of it six times in quick succession, then skip three, then six, and so on.

HER HAND AND ARM BURNED AND ITCHED

Could Hardly Sleep at Night for About 11 Months. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment and was Completely Cured.

"My mother had a red spot on her right hand which began to grow worse rapidly. The neighbors said it was a tetter. She got some medicine from a doctor, but it did not do any good. In about a week the tetter began to break out on her arm too. She used five or six different kinds of liniments and three different kinds of salves. Not one of these did her a particle of good. Her hand and arm would burn and itch so much that she could hardly sleep at night. Her hand was that way for about eleven months. Finally a friend of ours recommended Cuticura Soap and Ointment to us. She bought some immediately and began to use it. She washed her hand and arm with Cuticura Soap and warm water. Then she applied the Cuticura Ointment and bandaged her hand up. The next morning we all noticed a great improvement. Before she had used a half of a box of Ointment and a very little Soap her hand was completely cured. Now her hand is as well as ever. I think Cuticura Soap and Ointment is the greatest skin remedy ever discovered. C. E. Canady, San Leandro, Cal., Mar. 7, 1910."

Cuticura Remedies afford the most economical treatment for affections of the skin and scalp of infants, children and adults. A cake of Cuticura Soap (25c.) and a box of Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are often sufficient. Sold throughout the world. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., Boston. NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST

RED RIVER CROP YIELD

Estimates for Northwestern Minnesota Difficult to Secure This Year.

Highest Wheat Yield Thirty-Two Bushels, Lowest One and One Half.

Crookston, Minn., Aug. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—By the close of the present week the bulk of the thrashing will be finished in Northwestern Minnesota. It is the most difficult year in the history of the Red River valley to estimate what the total crop yield will be. A fairly close estimate as to the wheat yield on an average would be twelve bushels to the acre in the townships bordering the Red and Red lake rivers ten bushels from six to twelve miles back from the rivers and fifteen bushels in some favored sections about Fosston, Lengby, Fertile and a few other places with a general average in Northwestern Minnesota of from seven to nine bushels per acre.

This estimate is based upon reports received during the past week from seventeen owners of thrashing machines. The highest yield reported for wheat is thirty-two bushels per acre by J. J. O'Leary and the poorest yield one and one-half bushels per acre on a small forty-acre tract southwest of this city.

Barley Crop Poorest of All.

The barley crop is the poorest of any grain crop. While there is some good barley, there is very little of it and the crop of quite a number of farmers was not worth harvesting except for feed.

The oat yield will be about half an average crop. Macaroni wheat will average about fifteen bushels, which is three-fourths of an average crop, while the wild hay crop was lighter than usual, more acreage is being cut, and with the swamp hay that can be harvested this year for the first time in the history of the valley the total amount of hay put up will be far above the average, although the price will be high as a great deal of the hay is being put up for shipment. The fodder corn is coming along nicely and if the frost keeps off will go a long way toward solving the coarse food problem for the dairymen.

Nearly every farmer has started fall plowing, and the plowed acreage this fall will be the largest in the history of the valley by a very large margin being at least 25 per cent over the acreage ready for crop next year over any previous year.

SOME REVOLVERS, ALSO $21 STOLEN

Burglars Enter East Grand Forks Establishment Making Quite Haul.

East Grand Forks, N. D., Aug. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Gaining entrance through the skylight, burglars early yesterday morning secured $21 in cash, several revolvers and a quantity of ammunition from the W. H. Bird Hardware company store in this city. Harness stolen from a barn nearby, cut up and tied together to form a crude rope drop, was used as a means of gaining entrance to the building, and from the evidence it appears that the burglars must have been on the job for several hours.

BUILDING DAM AT PINE RIVER

It Will Furnish Light and Power for Cass County Village.

Pine River, Minn., Aug. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Work on the dam in the river here commenced the first of the week and the crew is driving piles and excavating for the bigger work which will commence next week. Wood of Minneapolis is superintending the work and he states that they expect to be able to furnish power by Dec. 1, this year.

It is estimated that the dam will not require less than 240,000 pounds of cement and the filling will comprise something better than 2,000 cubic yards of dirt. It will be eighteen feet wide at the top and thirty-six feet at the base. The top of the dam when completed will be used for the town line wagon bridge between Pine River and Walden townships.

Secretary Mackenzie is daily adding to the already most excellent program. While it has not been the intention of the fair management to hold any horse races this year in connection with the fair, yet it is possible that at least one day may be given up to pacing and trotting races of considerable merit.

He cordially greeted those that were there and said he was glad to get back home again. But a few moments were spent at the depot, when he entered a waiting carriage and was driven to his home. He noted the many changes that had been made in the city during his absence.

At his home he was met by his wife, who greeted him with a kiss and embraced him, and it was a most happy reunion.

Mr. Clement still maintains that he was not to blame for having wrecked the bank. Most of the citizens express themselves as pleased that Mr. Clement has been released and is again a free man. He has made no plans for the future.

TOO BIG FOR ARMY.

But 200-Pounder Is Accepted for the Navy.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Unlike Caesar, the army recruiting officials in Minneapolis have never been heard to murmur, "Give me fat men."

That is why Hans Volgner of La Crosse, Wis., was unable to enlist in the army. He weighs over 200 pounds and his patriotism ran in the direction of the cavalry. The recruiting officer decided that no army horse would be able to transport such a bulk of patriotism in the thickest of the fray, and his aplication was turned down.

Not discouraged, however, Volgner applied for enlistment in the navy and was accepted.

Naval affocials say he is big enough to hold down any job.

This Week's Sunday School Lesson

WRITTEN FOR THE HERALD BY REV. J. S. KIRTLEY, D. D.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON: AUG. 28. Matt. xxi, 1-17: Jesus Entering Jerusalem.

THE CONNECTION.

It is "the first day of the week," Sunday morning, April 2, A. D. 30. He had probably arrived at Bethany Friday, spent Saturday, the Sabbath, there and early Sunday morning inaugurated this impressive entry into the city.

He had planned everything, with full knowledge of the plans of His enemies, the fickleness of the crowds and the certainty as well as the manner of His death. He knew what He meant by this triumphal entry, knew what it would mean to His disciples, to the multitudes and to the maddened officials.

THE LESSON.

I.

Preparation for the march. 1-5.

"And when they drew nigh unto Jerusalem, and came unto Bethphage, unto the Mount of Olives, then Jesus sent two disciples, saying unto them, Go into the village that is over against you, and straightway ye shall find an ass tied and a colt with her; loose them and bring them unto Me. And if anyone say aught unto you, we shall say, The Lord hath need of them; and straightway he will send them. Now this is come to pass, that it might be fulfilled, which was spoken by the prophet, saying:

"Tell ye the daughter of Zion,
Behold, the King cometh unto thee,
Meek, and riding upon an ass,
And upon a colt the foal of an ass."

DECLARATION.—Not once had He declared His Messiahship in any public demonstration. He must sometime declare Himself, the Messiah and this is the time and this the way. This fulfilled the prophecy, expressed his own nature and was adapted to test the Messianic conception of the people. The air was athrill with expectation and he will address himself to it, not as a concession to the crowd, anxious for some demonstration, but as an address to the crowd on a test and a correction.

II.

The Exciting Event. 6-11.

And the disciples went, and did even as Jesus appointed them, and brought the ass and the colt, and put on them their garments, and He sat thereon. And the most part of the multitude spread their garments in the way, and others cut branches from the trees and spread them in the way. And the multitudes that went before Him and that following, cried, saying, Hosanna to the Son of David; Blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord; Hosanna in the highest. And when He was come into Jersualem all the city was stirred, saying, Who is this? And the multitudes said, This is the Prophet, Jesus from Nazareth of Galilee.

1. FORECAST.—He foreshadows His sway over men—unique, riding the steed on which no other man had sat; authoritative, and in His influence over the people foreshadowing the day when He would conquer the conqueror, Rome; pacific and conquering by love. Israel had not risen to the conception of the might of spiritual power, and Rome would have smiled at the thought. This is what the triumph meant to Jesus; His heart was yearning for His people; His eye was on the victorious future.

2. DISCIPLES.—They take proud care of their king, making a saddle and a carpet with their garments and starting loud and scriptural acclamations.

3. MULTITUDES.—They were mostly visitors to the feast, some from distant lands who had heard of Him with curiosity and hope; some from Galilee, with local pride in Him as one of their products. A few were residents of the city, not spoiled by their rulers, and a few from Bethany who knew of the raising of Lazarus. Part of them were camped along the road and joined His little party from Bethany as they went in, and another crowd came out from the city to meet them, for the excitement had spread in and drawn them out. Then they went into the city in two sections, one in front of Him and one following. Their shout was just about equivalent to "God save the king," as they all thought that a son of David was just about to take the throne of his father, for the long-looked-for Messianic reign of splendor. Possibly the two sections shouted these selections from the Psalms, antiponally as in the temple service.

4. IRRITATION.—Put all the accounts together and it seems certain that at a given point the ardor of the crowd was cooled. It was when He came around the shoulder of the hill and caught sight of the recreant city and wept over it, speaking His distress and her doom in the words beginning "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem," as quoted by Luke. He knew that the visitors were making the demonstrations, and that the city and the nation had rejected Him, her Messiah. He knew that some who were shouting "Blessed is He" would be persuaded to shout "Crucify Him." They expected Him to claim His own, and when he expressed disappointment and sorrow, they thought it was weakness and began to grow cold. But the demonstration was not useless. When He was glorified the disciples saw what it meant and were wiser for it.

III.

Some Sad Experiences. 12-17.

"And Jesus entered into the temple of God, and cast out all them that sold and bought in the temple, and overthrew the tables of the money changers and the seats of them that sold doves; and He saith unto them, It is written, My house shall be called a house of prayer; but ye make it a den of robbers. And the blind and the lame came to Him in the temple, and He healed them. But when the chief priests and the scribes saw the wonderful things that He did, and the children that were crying in the temple and saying, Hosanna to the Son of David, they were moved with indignation, and said unto Him, hearest thou what these are saying? And Jesus saith unto them, Yea; did ye never read, Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings thou hast perfected praise? And He left them, and went forth out of the city to Bethany, and lodged there."

1. JUDGEMENT.—Matthew is topical, not chronological, and he tells of the entrance into the temple as if it followed the entry at once, but we learn from the other writers that it was the next day. When he saw the officials taking advantage of the visitors in selling animals for sacrifice and in changing their foreign coins into local money, His noble indignation burned against them, as it did three years before, and He did what He did then, drove them out. It was then they resolved to kill Him; now they are still more determined. Very properly this is followed by deeds of sympathy for the unfortunate who are always near. Those deeds, wrought in the presence of the officials was a last appeal to them.

2. HATRED.—The vicious officials show their rage by complaining of the little boys around the temple, who were echoing the shouts of the multitudes the day before. They claimed that the boys were guilty of a ceremonial impropriety, and that Jesus did wrong in permitting them to call Him Son of David. He replied that God was recovering His praise in this way. All appeals were in vain; the people had made their final choice, and sorrowfully Jesus went out of the city to His friends in Bethany.

What the Masters Say.

The man who owned the colt and let the disciples take it for Jesus' use, was a better follower of the Christ than many of those who shouted at the triumphal entry. Deeds often show the state of the heart better than words. Loyal service is better than hosannas. —Tarbell.

Let us cultivate and reverently cherish the honest, indignations of our nature, for they are the life and fire that is in us. God has given them and the man is the most happy who has them, the warmest, the truest, the least wrenched by prejudice, the least dulled by sense and sin.

—Philips Brooks.

The King does not come on a chariot or on a war horse, but riding as rulers did in time of peace. The trained mule and donkey of Egypt and Syria are very pleasant for riding, and have there no ludicrous associations. In the imaginary of Rev. xix, 11, the Messiah appears again as conqueror on a white horse. It seems clear that our Lord arranged to ride the young ass into the city as an intentional fulfillment of the prophecy. The disciples quickly so recognized, though not fully understanding, and communicated to the multitude the idea that this was a Messianic entry into the capital, as the shouts of verse 9 show that all understood. Jesus has heretofore carefully avoided any public declaration that He is the Messiah, because it would be misunderstood and lead to political agitation, and because the disciples themselves were not yet sufficiently instructed as to the true nature of the Messianic. —Anon.

PERTINENT QUESTIONS.

1. Can peace be promoted by war?
2. What are the perils of religious excitement?
3. How may religion be cultivated "for revenue only?"
4. Why did Chirst fulfill the scriptures?
5. Why does zeal for religion require sympathy for people.

SPECIAL RATES TO STATE FAIR

All Railroads Offer Reduced Fares and Will Run Excursions.

Special rates on all railroads from stations in Minnesota have been made for all who will attend the Minnesota State Fair.

This will be welcome news to the 200,000 visitors to the Twin Cities during the week of Sept. 5-10, and will undoubtedly cause an attendance far in excess of any in past years. Every railroad leading into Minneapolis and St. Paul will charge one and one-half fares for the round trip, or 3 cents a mile. This action was taken at the last meeting of the Western Passenger association, when the managers of the passenger traffic on all lines voted to make this special concession on account of the three state fairs, those of Minnesota, Iowa and Wisconsin. No other state fairs in the country are favored in this way, which is a pretty clear indorsement of the importance of the Minnesota State Fair. Not even has this special rate been granted to delegates who will attend the forthcoming conservation congress, although as the state fair and the conservation congress will make the Twin Cities the news center of the nation during the big week of Sept. 5, a special reduction will probably be made so as to include every visitor to both of the great events.

CROWDS FOLLOW "TEDDY" IN NEW YORK.

"I had a good look at ex-President Roosevelt as he was swinging along with his strenuous stride on Fifth avenue, New York, the other day," said Frank Robinson, who is just back from the metropolis.

"I was hurrying along the famous thoroughfare with the rest of the throng when some one nudged me with 'look, there he is.' The 'he' proved to be Teddy who was hurrying to his office in the Outlook building. He wore one of his famous campaign hats, looked the picture of health, ready for fight or frolic, and frequently bowed and smiled in reply to the salutations of passersby. The impression is growing in the East that he will again seek the presidency as it is dawning upon the most ardent admirers of Taft that the man in the White House is not making good."

Health and Beauty Helps

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN.

M. L. K.: It is not half so difficult a problem as you think to keep the complexion beautiful in summer. You have not used the right thing—that is all. Of course, cream that contains lard or oil will give you a "shiny face" and powders are bound to "smear" with perspiration. You want a cream that will remove dust and dirt from the pores and leave the skin smooth, moist and pliable. You can make such a cream at home—and it will be absolutely free from grease or oil. Just get from your druggist one ounce of almozoin, put it in a fruit jar, add a half-pint of cold water, stir until dissolved, then add two teaspoonsful of glycerine, stir well again and let stand over night. In the morning it will be the consistency of ordinary face cream. Almozoin clears the skin of all pore-dirt and prevents blackheads, because it makes large pores small. Massage with it to keep off wrinkles, roughness and redness. Follow the advice given "Georgia Girl" in the next paragraph.

Georgia Girl: Use this liquid face wash and you will find it more satisfactory than any powder or cosmetic. Dissolve four ounces of spurmax in a half-pint of hot water, add two teaspoonfuls of glycerine and let cool. Apply to the face, neck and forearms with the palm of the hand, and you need not bother again all day about your complexion. It affords protection against sunburn, tan and freckles, although it is so dainty and delicate that its use cannot be detected. It is especially fine for anyone with dark or oily skin, for it is a true complexion beautifier and keeps the skin smooth, soft and velvety.

R. F. D.: No. 3. You can make your dull and expressionless eyes clearer and brighter if you use an eye tonic made by dissolving one ounce of crystos in a pint of water. Drop one or two drops in each eye whenever they are tired or feel weak. It strengthens weak eyesight, relieves inflammation and redness, and does not smart or burn. The regular use of this eye tonic has enabled many to discard their spectacles—a fact that will be appreciated by any woman who looks older than she really is when wearing eyeglasses.

W. C. T.: Don't feet so dejected at the approach of short sleeves. Those unsightly hairs on your forearms will yield to proper treatment. Just get from your druggist an ounce of delatone (it cost a dollar, but it's worth it) and mix a little of it with enough water to make a paste. Cover the hairs with the paste and let it remain for a few minutes; then wipe off and wash with warm water. Even if the hairs should come back, they will be light and thin, and a second or third application will keep them away for good.

Alcestis: You say you have tried dieting and exercising to rid yourself of superfluous fat and failed to reduce your weight. Many other women after the same experience have accomplished the desired result with parnotis—that harmless flesh reducer that is sold in most first-class drug stores. Dissolve four ounces of parnotis in 1½ pints of warm water and take a tablespoonful before each meal. In a few weeks, the overly-stout woman finds she has lost ten or fifteen pounds and that her flesh is firm and free from flabbiness.

X. Z.: To cleanse your blood of the impurities that cause pimples and eruptions of the skin, I know of nothing better than an old-fashioned home remedy, made as follows: Get from your druggist one ounce of kardene, dissolve it in a half-pint of alcohol, add one-half cup of sugar, then pour in enough hot water to make a full quart of tonic. Take a tablespoonful of this inexpensive blood remedy five minutes before each meal and it will aid digestion, make the liver active, and cleanse your blood. It strengthens and builds up the entire system and when you are well that wretched "tired," discouraged feeling will leave you.

C. C. K.: If you are blessed with beautiful hair by all means take the very best care of it you can. Yes, dandruff will in time destroy any head of hair if permitted to remain. If necessary shampoo every week with canthrox. Dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water, pour a little on the head, rub as you would with any other shampoo; then rinse well. Canthrox makes plenty of rich lather and thoroughly cleans the scalp and hair. It relieves itching and irritation of the scalp and the hair dries quickly and evenly without streaking. It leaves the hair soft, bright and fluffy, so that it is easy to dress in any style you prefer.

Virginia: You can overcome the trouble with your scalp if you will use a hair tonic made as follows: Get one ounce of quinzoin from your druggist, dissolve it in a half-pint of alcohol and add a half-pint of water. Rub into the scalp and hair roots once or twice a week. This is a soothing and refreshing treatment for a hot, hard and stiff scalp. It keeps the scalp soft, pliable and just moist enough to encourage hair-growth. Quinzoin gives strength and vitality, stops falling and splitting at the ends, destroys the germs that cause dandruff and baldness and you soon see a wonderful improvement in your hair as it becomes rich, fine and glossy. This tonic has given splendid results where ready-prepared tonics did no good. Use canthrox for shampooing, and avoid soaps which make the hair hard, brittle and coarse.

WEST END

AWAIT WORD FROM HEAD

West End Postoffice Proposition Is Before Washington Authorities.

A Favorable Decision Is Expected By the Local Officials.

Within the next two weeks it will be definitely known whether or not the powers that govern the postoffice department at Washington approve the establishment of a branch postoffice in the West end. Postmaster A. P. Cook stated this morning that the proposition is now before the authorities and he expects a reply in the near future. Mr. Cook said that he felt reasonably confident that the decision would be a favorable one, and that the branch would probably be in operation this fall.

The local authorities, lacking confirmation from the head of the department, have not, of course, made any arrangements for a location, but it is thought probable that the new store building which is to be erected during the next two months on West Superior street will offer a convenient and practical site for the new branch and in case it is established it will probably be installed there.

The postoffice project is one that has been agitated for some time in the West end, and the business men and residents there have been watching the progress of the matter eagerly. They feel that the establishment of an office there with a postmaster with the interest of the West end only at heart, should result in a material betterment of their postal service.

MISS YERGAR DIES.

Popular West End Girl Passes Away at Her Home.

Miss Minnie Yergan, aged 19 years, died at her home, 2226 West Sixth street yesterday afternoon after an illness of about six months

Miss Yergan was a member of the class of 1910 of the Central high school and would have graduated in June but for the fact that her failing health necessitated abandoning her studies. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Yergan.

Miss Yergan was popular in the West end and among her classmates in the high school. It is probable that some action will be taken by this year's graduating class to honor their former classmate.

The arrangements had not been completed this morning but the funeral will probably be held Saturday afternoon from the Second Presbyterian church.

Borgstrom of the Third Swedish Baptist Sunday school, Oscar Svenson, Bethel Swedish Baptist Sunday school, and Rev M. Berglund, Minnesota state Sunday school missionary, will make up the program.

Last evening was ladies' night and addresses by Rev. O. Bodien of Minneapolis, and Mrs. Frank Peterson, were the principal features of the program. The ladies of the church turned out in a body.

Give Fish Dinner.

Dr. C. B. Greene and John Magnusson returned last evening from a fishing trip on the north shore of Lake Superior with a fine string of speckled trout. They gave a fish dinner last evening to a party consisting of A. T. Conroy, A. Olson, M. T. Fortin and E. L. Wiley.

Big Endowment to College.

Rev. C. G. Olson, pastor of the Bethany Lutheran church yesterday received a letter from the administrators of the estate of the late C. J. A. Erickson announcing that Mr. Erickson had left $50,000 to Augustana college the educational institution of the church there. This will mean a great deal to the institution which is located at Rock Island, Ill., and the news of the gift is being received with great pleasure by the Lutherans of Duluth.

Dance This Evening.

The dance to be given by the Adams Athletic association this evening is to be the most elaborate of the affairs given by that organization this summer. Handsome decorations have been placed in the hall at Lincoln Park and the committee in charge has arranged to present each of the guests of the association with a handsome souvenir fan. Flaatens orchestra will play.

Thieves Still Present.

Petty thievery is still prevalent in the West end. A number of articles have been reported to the police as stolen during the past week, among them fifty feet of garden hose taken from the yard of David Adams, and other articles of less value. No clue to the identity of the culprits has been secured as yet.

West End Shortrails.

Robert Alder, Thirty-secoond avenue west and Third street, has returned from a surveying trip near Hibbing.

C. O. Johnson, who has been visiting for the past two weeks in Southern Minnesota, has returned. Miss Katherine Johnson, who has been visiting in the Twin Cities, came back with him.

Miss Anna Anderson of West Fourth street is visiting relatives in Ashland, Wis.

Mr. and Mrs. V. C. Oberly of Logansport, Ind., are visiting relatives in the West end.

Alexander Peterson, who has been visiting in the West end, has returned to his home in Crookston, Minn.

LOUIS HILL RETICENT.

Will Not Talk About Revolt of the Western Governors.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—"I haven't seen the story yet, so I have nothing to say."

President Louis W. Hill of the Great Northern, who has returned from Montana, will say nothing about the report that he and President Howard Elliott of the Northern Pacific had been responsible for stirring up the conservation congress revolt among the Western governors.

Mr. Hill left more than a week ago to accompany the board of army engineers on an inspection trip of the irrigation projects. The board has been authorized by the government to spend $20,000,000 to further the work in the country.

Mr. Hill went as far as Cutbank, Mont., about fifty miles this side of where the forest fires have been raging.

RAILROADS

COUNTING UP FIRE LOSSES

Railroads Begin to Get Reports on Details of Damage.

Puget Sound Line Has Suffered Over $2,000,000 By Flames.

Missoula, Mont., Aug. 25.—Early reports from the fire districts today were hopeful. At the forestry office the assurance was given that it was safe for refugees to return to their homes along the Coeur d'Alene line of the Northern Pacific and on the Puget Sound railway.

The exodus of refugees from this city continues and nightfall will probably find Missoula practically deserted by those whom early in the week sought refuge here.

The Northern Pacific reports the Deborgia bridge repaired and trains are ordered to run to Saltese today.

Puget Sound Road Hard Hit.

The Puget Sound railway officials report the situation on their line practically unchanged. A sweeping call has been issued for men and equipment to work on line rebuilding, and men are being moved to the west end of the Missoula division, where the fire damage is the heaviest. Nevertheless, it will probably be ten days before traffic is resumed.

Northern Pacific officials who have just arrived from the fire swept district report the loss of two stations on the Coeur d'Alene branch. They are Deborgia and Lookout. Taft was destroyed, but the company had no depot at that place. The station at Tuscor on the main line also fell before the flames.

Runs Into Millions.

Experts who have seen mnch of the damage wrought on the line of the Puget Sound estimate the loss to the company between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000.

Last night the Northern Pacific cancelled an agreement with the Puget Sound officials to handle time freight from Missoula to the coast.

SOO MAY ACQUIRE DEER RIVER ROAD

Said to Be Negotiating for Minnesota & Rainy River Railroad.

Bemidji, Minn., Aug. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Soo railroad is getting ready to take over the Minnesota & Rainy River road, according to reports from Deer River.

The Minnesota & Rainy River railroad runs between Deer River and Big Fork. It was built for a logging road but has had a passenger service for some time. At Deer River it connects with the Great Northern. The road runs into the heart of the big timber country and has no competition for fifty miles in any direction.

The Soo has been making an inventory of the Rainy River road property at Deer River for some time, and it is said that as soon as this inventory is completed, the actual transfer will take place. It is said that the Soo intends to extend the line north sixty miles north to the Rainy river, with a possibility of International Falls as a terminus, and south about fifteen miles to connect with the new Moose Lake-Plummer line now being constructed. At present the Rainy River road operates over about fifty miles of track.

AITKIN SOO DEPOT.

Officials Assure Citizens Structure Will Be Built.

Aitkin, Minn., Aug. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—All doubts respecting the Soo railroad building a depot here were dissipated yesterday when General Manager G. P. Huntington, Chief Engineer Thomas Green, Engineer George Huss and Peter Swanson, superintendent of bridges looked over the proposed site and announced that the compan ywould erect a building 14 by 112 feet.

It will have all the modern conveniences and will also have a concrete basement to house a hot water heating apparatus The building will cost $6,000. The road from Moose Lake to Cuyuna is rapidly getting into good shape, and General Manager Huntington states that passenger service will be inaugurated Oct. 15, between Cuyuna and Duluth.

FITCH'S RESIGNATION.

Marquette Rumors Say It Is Due to Come Sept. 15.

Marquette, Mich., Aug. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The annual meeting of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic railroad will be held Sept. 15. It is currently rumored that a feature of this meeting will be the resignation of the president and general manager, Walter F. Fitch, who will be succeeded by A. B. Eldredge of Marquette, now general attorney and vice president.

It is also said that the course of the road will be changed to avoid the heavy grades between L'Anse and Baraga.

SHORT LINE ROADS UNITE.

Lumber Carriers Plan Organization at St. Louis.

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 25.—Preliminary steps have been taken here looking to the organization of the Western Short Line Railroad association by representatives of 100 short railroads engaged in the lumber traffic. The main object of the association is to prevent the application of tariffs becoming effective Sept. 6, 7, 8, 9, 10 and 24, and doing away with the allowance by the trunk lines to the lumber roads as to the division of through rates.

The lumber roads wish to establish their right to be classified as common carriers and thereby gain a more fair division of the through rates. An appeal is to be made to the interstate commerce commission to modify its recent decision, especially by recognizing most of the lumber lines.

CHANCE WILL NOT BE FORCED TO TESTIFY.

New York, Aug. 25.—Judge Lacombe, in the United States court today vacated the order for the examination of Capt. Frank L. Chance of the Chicago National league baseball club in the action for an accounting instituted by Andrew Coakley, the pitcher. Coakley asked for the examination of Capt. Chance for the purpose of ascertaining the amount due him under a percentage contract allowing him a share in the receipts for all exhibition games. Capt. Chance, by affidavit, pleaded ignorance of the administrative affairs of the Chicago National league club and his inability to testify in relation to the facts at issue.

A supporting affidavit by Charles W. Murphy, president of the Chicago club, was also introduced. In consequence of the decision of Judge Lacombe, Chance will not be required to absent himself from any of the games scheduled with the Chicago club.

Woman Hurls Tub at Man.

Marinette, Wis., Aug. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Because Albert Junke cut down a tree in front of her premises, Mrs. Minnie Damke threw a tub at his head. When the police came to arrest the woman she refused to dress, and it was not until they threatened to take her into court draped in a blanket that she decided to make herself ready.

DOLLS DECKED WITH JEWELS.

Doll favors at grownup parties are one of the latest fashions. Not the ordinary doll found in the toy stores, though. Far from it, says the New York Sun.

At present the doll favors used at fashionable affairs are mostly made to order from samples seen only in the showcases of certain caterers and confectioners, the most original in fact being contrived by experts, who carefully guard their work from the public eye during transit from their workrooms to the houses of purchasers.

The idea of the use of dolls originated with a woman who is using this means to help herself out of financial straits, and is succeeding too. This woman originated the birthday doll, which now has the entree to the highest society, besides other dolls costumed after the women stars of recent dramatic and operatic successes.

The birthday doll is perhaps the most popular just now. At a birthday luncheon given for a 14-year-old girl the other day there was a huge cake in the center of the table topped with twelve dolls, one for each guest, arranged in pyramid fashion. In sending out her invitations, the hostess asked each child who accepted to tell her birthday month. As a result every one who attended the luncheon carried home with her a doll who wore an elaborate garniture of jewels corresponding with her birthstone. Two, for instance, had corsage and coiffure diamond ornaments, others were decorated with sapphires, turquoises and amethysts.

At a birthday party given in honor of a recent bride each guest found a birthday doll seated in state at her plate facing her.

"The little darling" cried one guest as rapturously as a child might.

At a large dinner given at a hotel the other evening the women guests, the hostess said, made far more fuss over the doll favors, costumed to represent theatrical and operatic stars, including Salome, than over the music or the menu.

With almost no exceptions so far the dolls used for favors are of French bisque, jointed so that they can be made to recline or sit in several different positions. They are 6 or 7 inches tall and they include the blue and brown eyed, the blonde and the brunette.

The sheerest of white accordion pleated liberty silk is used for the gowns of birthday dolls and the quantity of jewels used varies according to individual preference, sometimes skirt as well as waist being trimmed with them. At the bridesmaids' luncheon, which fell on the bride-elect's birthday, each doll favor displayed a short tulle veil fastened with a jeweleld coronet. The costumes of character dolls, as they are called, usually include jewels of several colors, a Salome, for example, necessarily requiring more than one kind of jewel to be effective.

At several of the recent fashionable weddings the bride's cake was surmounted by a tiny doll in regulation bridal array with tulle veil and orange blossoms.

That the character and the birthday doll may be used as a medium for the presentation of real jewels has already been shown. At a recent bridesmaid's luncheon the bride's souvenirs, pearl and diamond lace pins, reposed on the corsages of the dolls brought in and distributed along with the dessert. At a birthday dinner given for the hostess her husband's gifts, pearl earings, dangled from the doll's neck.

Place cards, the work of a woman who carefully shields her designs from the public, are among the novelties seen of late at fashionable luncheons and dinners. They are about 5 by 3 inches and are made of pure white, smooth or raised cardboard and decorated in one corner with a basket of flowers. The small fraction of the basket or the holder seen is painted in either silver or gold, and the overflowing flowers are made of imported French ribbon, scarcely wider than a thick strand of sewing silk, a half dozen shades of one color being used in some designs, as, for instance, a basket of violets, roses, or jonquils. The workmanship, which is independent of stitches of any sort, is exquisite. The lettering is done in gold or silver to match the basket or in colors to match with flours.

BRIDE WITHOUT A SMILE.

London Globe: From the quarterly report of the Borneo Mission association we learn that Bishop Mounsey has had some interesting experiences in Labuan and Sarawak.

Here is his account of the marriage of a Christian girl who is half Chinese and half Dyah: "It was a very picturesque service and one point was both amusing and interesting to me. The bride, a pretty girl who generally has a pleasant smile for one, was on this occasion the picture of misery. She looked very glum and never smiled." The bishop adds: "I am told this is quite the thing for a Chinese bride, in this as in other things their customs being very unlike ours."

Twenty-two runs is going some, even for the boostiest Booster Day on the calendar.

The Sox garnered a fulsome harvest of hits and runs yesterday, sending one regular pitcher off the firing line and cruelly mauling the alleged curves of two hired men that were called into the affray from their regular and settled positions.

The score, Will, was 22 to 2, and if the day hadn't been dark and the ball rather difficult to follow in its revolving course, we might have had more. As it was, the game breaks the high score record for the league, not to mention the fact that it lead to the general distinction of Booster Day.

One of the best ways to describe the comedy humanely is to state with simple directness that Harry Hughes, the text book kid, had all those little box tricks that are necessary in undermining the confidence of the opposing batters. The crude and awkward Lumberjacks were very, very fortunate to score the two lonesome runs.

Schieffer Is Very Nice.

There was nothing mean or contemptible about the delivery of Mr. Schieffer. This boy is sure one with appreciation of occasion. He didn't fling close-cutting and eye-dimming shoots: on the contrary his offerings were as soft as peaches that have been seriously delayed in transit, and the road-weary Sox had little difficulty in fattening their somewhat lean swatting averages at the Schieffer expense.

In the second inning the Wausau band scored one on a base on balls to Johnson, a sacrifice by Dolan, an infield out by Brody and a slashing two-base clout to left center by Walliser, on which that gent was thrown out at third, trying to stretch the elasticity of the clout.

The companion run to the first lonesome tally came in the sixth. Cahill hit safely to right, a Texas leaguer, and Duchien and Dunbar struck out. Johnson hit a short one to the same field, Cahill moving down the path of hope. Dolan also singled and Cahill was over. Brody went down, Altermott to Holstrom.

It is hardly fair to the patience of the reader to describe in detail how the twenty-two runs of the clinging, or climbing, Sox were scored. Up to the hilarious eighth inning we had planted ten men in the run column. That is going some for the average, every day contest. Then came the welsh rarebit eighth frame, which made the score book look like a Chinese laundry ticket that has been used to figure up the household expenses upon.

We first scored four in the third on hits by G. Anderson, a triple by O'Brien and singles by Altermott and Holstrom. One more run came in the fifth on G. Anderson's single, a sacrifice by King Kohl, a passed ball, an error on the part of Dunbar and some slow fielding.

Three more came in the sixth on an infield hit upon the part of Mr. Bouchart, a two-baser by Higher Thought Hughes, a single by Jay Anderson and a burning triple by George Anderson, who did it. In the seventh two more rubber dents were rung up on the run register, when Messrs. Altermott and Holstrom crossed the run Rubicon

These runs were garnered through the stick efforts of the gallant colonel, who hit for two bases, followed in logical order by a single on the part of Mr. Holstrom. Mr. Hughes gathered his second hit of the day sending his bench conferees across the platter.

At this point of the contest a girl in the grand stand, wrestling with a supply of pepsin, asked which side was ahead, and why the crowd was cheering. When Duluth scored the next twelve runs, some one told the small feminine fance that Duluth stood a very good chance of winning. Whereat she became duly animated and clapped two enthusiastic hands at the thought of a home victory.

It is hard to describe the eightn. After it was over the players of both teams anxiously inquired how many runs had been scored. The bat boy lost count, and he generally takes a deep and abiding interest in the game. Joe, the ground keeper, was also mussed in his noodle. Finally, after careful computation, it was discovered and announced to the breathless crowd that an even dozen runs had been collected and tabulated. It required work of no mean statistician to index and properly file the runs.

It is hardly the square thing to Wausau to describe in detail the eighth. Suffice it to state, that seventeen men faced alleged heavers Duchien and Walliser, and at times it looked to the thoroughly uninitiated as if the players of the Duluth team were putting on a Marathon race, so closely and persistently did they follow each other across the plate.

Finally three men were retired and the laugh light was turned off. One lean man said it had done his indigestion a world of good, and two girls said it was just loads of fun to watch the players run so fast. Everybody was tolerably well satisfied, with the possible exception of Wausau, and as we all can't be satisfied, why what's the use.

Below you will find an index and number key to the progress of the play. Study it carefully and you will gather something of the contest, if you are patient.

SCHOONERS LEAVE THE BALL FIELD

Angered at Decision Eau Claire Team Forfeits the Game to Superior.

Eau Claire became peeved in Superior yesterday and rudely refused to play after the fourth frame, in which inning Superior had driven in several large and needed runs. The Schooners quit and the contest was awarded to Superior by the score of 9 to 0.

The game while it lasted was a free hitting exhibition and was marred by the kicking of the visiting troupe. It must be that Thomas Heine Schoonhoven fears lest some team is going to tag him on the pennant path, for his peevishness of late has been of the grain of the villain in the play.

Winona, Minn., Aug. 25.—(Special to The Herald)—Red Wing shut out Winona in yesterday's game, evening up for the loss of the contest the day before. The score was 5 to 0 in favor of the Malloy crowd, the pitching of Johnson being too much for the Pirates, but four hits being gathered by Killian's cohorts.

Kelly was safe in the seventh on an error by Curtis, was advanced by Black's single and scored on a wild pitch. Gorman hit and Black scored on the attempt to flag him at the pan.

In the eighth Melding singled, Pearl made a wild heave over first, Johnson singled, Malloy sacrificed, Kelly singled, Black singled and Demmer hit out a long sacrifice fly, the result being three runs. Score:

BUNDY MEETS CHAMPION LARNED

Pacific Coast Player Wins From Wright in Finals at Newport.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 25.—For the second time in his career Beals C. Wright of Boston met defeat yesterday in the final round of the all-comers' lawn tennis tournament at the Casino courts here. The tournament was won by Thomas C. Bundy of Los Angeles. Bundy defeated Wright by the score of 6-3, 6-3, 6-8, 10-8.

Today the brilliant young Pacific coast player meets Champion William A. Larned of Summit, N. J., to decide the national title for the coming year.

EMPIRE CITY EVENTS WON IN STRAIGHT HEATS.

New York, Aug. 25.—Followers of light harness racing enjoyed another good day's sport yesterday at the Empire City track. A stiff wind blowing down the back stretch retarded the horses somewhat, but good time was made in every event, each of which was won in straight heats.

The Harvester, 2:02, driven by E. F. Geers, won the first heat of the free-for-all in 2:08½ and later called upon to break his own record, he took the heat and race in 2:03, despite the retarding wind.

HEDGEWOOD BOY AND MINOR HEIR MATCHED.

Galesburg, Ill., Aug. 25.—Interest in the great race Tuesday in which Hedgewood Boy nosed out his rival, Minor Heir, is so intense that another important race has been arranged between these great stallions for today. The majority of the horsemen at the track seem to expect Minor Heir to win. Yesterday's feature was Ross K's mile in 2:01¾.

PRACTICING FOR RACES AT ELGIN.

Chicago, Aug. 25. — A crowd estimated at 5,000 persons saw fast practice over the Elgin course yesterday. Ray Harroun lowered the practice record by making a lap, slightly over eight and one-half miles in 7:12.

The races will be run Friday and Saturday with what is claimed to be the most representative list of stock cars ever called out by a road race. The list of drivers is a distinguished one. The Elgin Road Racing association announced yesterday that indications were that the grand stand seating 10,000 persons will be too small and orders were given to construct 1,500 additional seats. The parking space extends around the entire course where the bulk of the crowd will be cared for. Race officials predict that 100,000 persons will witness the contests.

DOUBLE HEADER IS BILL AT BALL GROUNDS.

Two games will be played with the Wausau Jacks this afternoon. The Sox will make a strenuous endeavor to annex both games. With Dunbar at second for the Jacks the team does not look as strong as it did upon its earlier appearance here. The absence of Col. Nick Carter, who was recalled for labor in the Eau Claire outfield, has also served to rob the Jacks of some strength.

The Sox should at least secure an even break in the games of this afternoon and Darby O'Brien is confident that he will get both of them. The first game will be called at 2:15. Cummings and Kramer or Blancke will be the hill nominations for the Sox.

SCULLING RACES ARE PLANNED FOR SATURDAY.

One of the features of next Saturday's sport program at the Duluth Boat club, will be a single working boat race between different members of the rowing squad. A number of the men have been out in the working boats steadily since the return of the crews from Kenora, and are consequently becoming quite proficient in the art of sculling.

This kind of a race has not been put on at the club for a number of years. It should prove one of the most interesting of the varied list of sports that is being arranged for Saturday afternoon.

A great deal of interest is being shown in the outcome of the four-oared race between the bantam four, the senior four and the four composed of oarsmen from the junior eight. The bantams are the favorites for the event, but both the seniors and juniors are confident of victory.

JEFF GOES HUNTING TO AVOID SUBPOENA.

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 25.—Jim Jeffries went hunting in the mountains yesterday just in time to avoid a subpoena to appear as a witness in court today and testify whether he and Jack Johnson had a prize fight in Reno, July 4.

This is the important question in the case of the picture show men arrested in Arcadia last week for displaying the reproduction of the contest before an audience there. They were charged with conspiracy against public morals and will be placed on trial at Pasadena today.

HILDRETH'S ZEUS WINS BIG STAKE.

Saratoga, N. Y., Aug. 25. — S. C. (Lucky) Hildreth yesterday added another stake to his already long list when his colt Zeus easily won the $6,000 Adirondack handicap, six furlongs, and in doing so equalled the track record for the distance. Zeus closed at 12 to 1.

Cy Seymour Sold.

New York, Aug. 25.—Cy Seymour, center fielder for the New York Nationals, was sold to the Baltimore Eastern league team yesterday.

After City Championship.

The Adams baseball team, one of the strongest teams in the city, is anxious to secure a game for next Sunday, the manager of the crack amateur aggregation being willing to meet any of the teams in the city. The Adams has made a great record the present season, and is willing to meet any team of Duluth for the city championship. Games can be secured by telephoning the Adams manager at 1684-X, Zenith telephone.

TENNIS PLAY NEARS END

Two Men and Two Women Have Reached Semi-Finals.

Minnesota Association Gives Luncheon to the Duluth Visitors.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 25.—When the play in the Minnesota tennis tournament at the Town and Country club is completed today the men's singles, ladies' singles and the mens' doubles with one exception will have been carried into the semi-finals, while Miss Alice Burton, one of the best players in Minneapolis, is already in the semi-finals and Miss Gwendolin Rees of St. Paul, who won the Western women's tournament in Chicago recently, has also survived. It is very likely that they will oppose each other.

Storm of Minneapolis and Kennedy of Duluth are now in the men's semi-finals singles and when When Adams and La Fans have met today another position there will be decided. The latter two were to have met yesterday.

One of the biggest surprises of the play yesterday was the match between Stollwagen and Burton, both of Minneapolis. Burton recently won the Mill City championship but appeared much under class yesterday and lost. He gave doubles repeatedly and though he was very active and his form beautiful, he seemed to have lost the control which has marked his previous play. He exerted himself to win, however, and was unable to go on with Wheeler for the semi-finals position, though he entered the double play later in the afternoon and won his match with Gill as a partner.

Kennedy of Duluth had little difficulty in taking his match from Douglas, His serve was most accurate and he won many points by not playing, his opponent often going out in inches.

The Duluth men have two teams in the doubles, one still in the beginning rounds, and the other, composed of two stars—Kennedy and Washburn—has a show to enter the semifinals if they can beat Carlton and Careton of Minneapolis today and follow it up by winning from Wheeler and Jayne. Both Kennedy and Washburn are confident.

A bright light in the midst of the continuous labor at the nets will be a luncheon of the Minnesota association to Duluth men today. The affair will be in the dining rooms of the Town and Country club.

Hugh T. Halbert of St. Paul, formerly a favorite at the nets, will make an address of welcome for the Twin City men, and will be responded to by members of the Duluth team and by Julius Barnes, president of the Duluth Boat club.

Men's singles—Kennedy of Duluth won from Douglas of Minneapolis, 6-0, 6-4. Stellwagon of Minneapolis won from Burton of Minneapolis, 6-4, 6-3.

Men's doubles—Stellwagon and Gill of Minneapolis won from Thompson and Edwards of Minneapolis, 6-4, 6-0. Poehler and Tihame of Minneapolis won from Northrup and Earl of Minneapolis.

Consolations—Northrup of Minneapolis won from Dent of Minneapolis by default. Southerland of Minneapolis won from Sinclair of Duluth by default.

Mixed doubles—Miss Gwendolin Rees and Mr. Adams of St. Paul won from Mr. and Mrs. Gill of Minneapolis, 6-2, 6-2.

HUNTERS GETTING READY FOR CHICKEN SEASON.

With every indication of good chicken hunting this fall, several of the Duluth colony of hunters are preparing to start out at the opening of the season. Several are going to the vicinity of Crookston, where the prospects are reported very good. At the present time a party is being made up to make a hunting trip into North Dakota.

Early indications point to one of the best seasons of recent years, and many members of the Northwestern Gun club are already getting their hunting paraphernalia in shape for an early start.

Fitwells Want Game.

The Fitwells are anxious to arrange a game with the Big Duluths, and are willing to meet the clothing team next Sunday.

Easy for Kendig.

In the third pool game of the series between Frank Kendig and Mausolf, the former won last night, running out 125 balls while Mausolf was stringing 47. Kendig made high runs of 23, 18 and 18. The result of the play of last evening gives Kendig 375 points and Mausolf 296.

To the Common Council:

Your Committee on Streets, Alleys and Sidewalks, having had under consideration the matter of repaving Michigan street from Eighth to Twelfth avenues west, and having before it recommendations of the city engineer relative to said work and communication from J. A. Johnson, contractor, for the construction of a sewer along said streets from Eighth to Eleventh avenues west, is of the opinion that in the repairing of said street sandstone blocks should be used on a concrete base. We are advised that the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie Railway company will pave all of said street south of the north rail of the north track of the street railway line with sandstone blocks on a sand base, which would amply fulfill their obligation to replace said street to its former condition. We are also advised that the contractor for the sewer on the north side of said street from Eighth to Eleventh avenues west is willing to pay the cost of laying a strip six feet wide for the length of his sewer contract with sandstone blocks on a sand base in lieu of replacing the tar macadam pavement, figuring sandstone blocks on a basis of $2.00 per yard, which is the amount under the contract which he was to be allowed for replacing the tar macadam pavement, this leaves, according to the engineer's estimate, a cost of approximately $4,000 to be borne by the city in repaving said street from Eighth avenue west to Twelfth avenue west with sandstone blocks on a sand base. The city engineer strongly advises that a concrete base be used, which would make necessary an additional expenditure of approximately $4,000, making a total to the city, if concrete base is used, of approximately $8,000.

The permanent improvement fund is not in a position to stand this drain the present season, but the said railroad company and the city are both anxious that the repaving be done the present season. With that idea in mind your Committee has caused negotiations to be made with the officials of the Soo road and an understanding has been reached by which said company will entertain a proposition to construct or pay for the city's portion of said improvement if concrete base is used, if the city releases said company of its obligation to make repairs to said base and pavement which may occur by reason of any settling of the ground, but such release not to cover any settling occasioned by any defect in the construction of the tunnel underneath. We are advised by the city engineer that the chances of any material settling are very slight. After a thorough consideration of the question we recommend the adoption of the following resolution:

W. S. MOORE,
JNO. HOGAN,
J. A. MacDONELL,
Committee.

Resolved, That this council approves of the proposition of repaving Michigan street from Eighth to Twelfth avenues west with sandstone blocks on a concrete base as outlined in the above report of this council, and said question is hereby referred to the city attorney to negotiate with the official of the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie Railway company and with the contractor for the construction of the sewer in said street from Eighth to Eleventh avenues west, and to report to this council the proper method of proceedure in order to carry out the provisions of the foregoing report.

SEARCHING FOR FIREBUG

New Duluth Excited When Third Bad Fire Breaks Out.

Blazes During Past Week Have Done Damage Totalling $11,000.

New Duluth is on the lookout for a fire bug. The third fire within a week broke out in the western suburb about 11:50 last night and before it was extinguished it did over $5,000 damage.

The fire started in the freight house back of the depot occupied by Dan Kruger, which was filled with a fine stock of finished hardwood lumber. This was totally destroyed, with two box cars which were standing on the spur track by the freight house. The flames spread to the ice house owned by the East End Ice company and did damage to them approximating $2,000, destroying the engine house and the ice hoisting apparatus and burning out both ends and one side of the big ice store house.

All three fires have started within a few minutes of midnight and have been confined at the start to lumber yards. The W. H. Reickhoff company was the victim of the first two fires which destroyed about $6,000 worth of lumber, and it was thought that some one with a grudge against Mr. Rieckhoff was taking that means to satisfy it. The fire last night was on totally different property, however, and the citizens of New Duluth, fearful for the safety of their homes and property, are conducting a search for an insane person with fire lighting propensities.

Constable Otto Krueger stated this morning that a man was seen near the scene of last night's fire both before and after the blaze started, who acted suspiciously. He has a good description of the man and thinks he knows who he is, but has been unable to locate him today. He will have him examined for his sanity if found.

Great credit is due to the New Duluth fire department for its work at all three blazes, and to the Thompson Furniture company which loaned its fire fighting apparatus to the firemen, thus enabling them to get double the amount of water on the blaze that they could have with the engine alone. Numbers of the citizens of the town have also turned out at every fire and rendered able assistance.

ON SAD ERRAND.

William Johnson in Dakota to Learn Cause of Brother's Death.

William Johnson is at present in Columbus, N. D., investigating the sudden death of his brother, Henry H. Johnson, which took place there Monday in a mysterious manner. His West Duluth relatives believe that the young man came to his death by violence.

Johnson left West Duluth in June to work in the harvest fields, and when last heard from was working on a thrashing crew. Henry Johnson came to West Duluth in 1891. He lived with his parents at 6324 Wadena street until the outbreak of the Spanish war when he enlisted in Company A, National Guard. Later he served with the regular army. He is survived by six brothers and three sisters besides his parents. The brothers and sisters are Cahrles J., Martin, William, Arnold, Melvin, Richard, Mrs. O. T. Mitchell, Mrs. A. T. Gordon of Virginia, and Miss Inga A. Johnson.

William Johnson is expected to arrive from Columbus with the body this evening. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon from the family residence at 2 o'clock, with services at the West Duluth Baptist church at 2:30 and interment in Oneota cemetery.

STEWART TO SPEAK.

Ex-Chairman of Prohibition National Committee at Merritt Church.

Oliver W. Stewart, legislator from Illinois and prominently mentioned as Prohibition candidate for president before the last election, will address the congregation of the Merritt Memorial M. E. church next Sunday morning. Mr. Stewart will speak at meetings in Superior Sunday afternoon and evening.

Mr. Stewart made an enviable record in the Illinois legislature and is well known throughout the country. He has a great reputation as a speaker, and is well known in Minnesota as a result of his tour through the state with W. G. Calderwood in 1905 in the interests of the Prohibition party. He is ex-chairman of the national committee of the party.

On the occasion of their twentieth wedding anniversary, Mr. and Mrs. M. P. Carlson of 427 North Fifty-eighth avenue west, were pleasantly surprised last evening at their home by about forty of their friends. They were presented with a set of dishes, C. E. Johnson making the presentation speech. Mrs. O. P. Wick, sang. Refreshments were served.

Reopen Rialto Hotel.

K. Coleman of Duluth, has taken a lease of the old Rialto hotel building on Ramsey street and will reopen it under another name. About two weeks will be required to remodel and repair the structure. It is not certain as yet whether a cafe will be operated in the building. Other parties are considering the advisability of renting the dining room for this purpose.

TRANSFERRED TO ST. LOUIS

Col. Charles L. Potter in Charge of Mississippi River Work.

Capt. Ray T. Lewis received a letter this morning from Col. Charles L. Potter of the United States army engineer corps, containing the information that Col. Potter has been transferred from Tompkinsville, Staten Island, to St. Louis. Col. Potter has many friends here. He was stationed in Duluth for four years, from 1902 to 1906, and was one of the most popular engineers that ever came here for the government.

Col. Potter has been engaged in the East for four years in the lighthouse division of the engineer service. Since the passage by the last session of congress of a bill relating to this service many of the positions formerly held by army officers have been given to civilians. Before the enactment of this legislation, however, Col. Potter's duties were important and his responsibilities heavy.

At St. Louis he succeeds Gen. Bixby, who has been promoted to the position of chief of engineers at Washington. He now has charge of the engineering work on the Mississippi river from the mouth of the Missouri to the mouth of the Ohio and of the snag work from the Missouri to New Orleans.

FELL INTO WATER; LOST ONLY HIS HAT.

A few minutes after the Booth line steamer tied up at the Booth dock last evening shortly after 5 o'clock, a man who was making unsteady progress along the edge of the Booth dock suddenly lurched heavily and splashed into the water between the dock and the boat. He floundered around helplessly for a minute or two and then a line was thrown to him. At the end of the line was a bucket. The man overboard grasped eagerly at the pail and three men hauled lustily at the line. The cause of the excitement was quickly pulled to dry safety and the first thing he said was:

"Who's got my hat? I had a hat."

He got away without being identified

AMONG THE PAPUAN CANNIBALS. Beatrice Grimshaw in the June Wide World Magazine: It is well known that New Guinea is the home of cannibalism, and that the natives have murderous tendencies of a pronounced kind. Yet it may honestly be said that the life of the ordinary settler or traveler in Papua is rather safer than in Sydney or Melbourne. You could not, in Sydney or Melbourne, sleep on your veranda, in a house that has no doors to speak of and windows that are never shut. You could not, if you are a woman, wander alone at night in solitary places, secure from all annoyance. You could not spend a day in the sole society of leg-ironed convicts, and find them good company, decidedly polite and obliging. Yet you may do all these things in Papua the impossible.

PAVEMENTS ARE NEEDED

Business Men Consider Condition of Streets in West End.

Pavement on West Superior Street Is in Wretched Condition.

Having secured a new pavement for Garfield avenue the attention of business men is being directed to the pressing need of street improvements west of Twelfth avenue west.

At present there isn't a decent thoroughfare between Duluth and West Duluth. The Soo railroad will soon lay sandstone blocks between Eighth and Twelfth avenues west, but no steps have been taken to improve any highway west of that point.

A new tar macadam pavement was completed on West Superior street between Eighteenth and Twenty-fifth avenues in the summer of 1906, but this now is in a poor condition, being filled with holes which are getting steadily larger.

Many complaints have been made of this pavement, but because of the fact that the ground underneath contains quicksand and the pavement is without a concrete base, efforts to make effective repairs have been useless. Those who have investigated the situation declare that the only remedy which will give results is a new pavement laid on a concrete foundation.

It appears that at the time the macadam was laid the property owners were given ample warning that it would not give satisfaction, particularly in view of the big volume of traffic which would traverse it. City Engineer T. F. McGilvray recommended a sandstone pavement with a concrete base.

When the old cedar blocks were torn up and the plank base removed the true condition of the street was revealed. Seeing that it was worse than he had anticipated the engineer called a meeting of the property owners to urge upon them a change of the plans, emphasizing the need of a concrete base. But in order to get the base it was stated that the street would have to be closed a block at a time for about ten days, which is required to allow the concrete to harden. Feeling that their business would be too seriously interfered with, the decision of the property owners was that the original plans should be followed.

The contract was awarded to Hugh Steele, whose bid was far below that of the others. He put down the macadam between the curb and the street car tracks at the rate of $1.14 per square yard. Between the car tracks the cost was $1.43, the difference being paid by the street railway company.

When the pavement began to show depressions the contractor followed instructions given him by the board of public works and made repairs. He turned in a bill for the work, but it was never paid. The second time he was directed to make repairs he refused, although he had deposited a guaranty bond for 25 per cent of the contract price. In order to hold him to the requirements of the bond the city would have had to institute action in court. This was never done.

The contractor explained his position to the board of public works by saying that he followed the specifications in putting in the pavement. He stated that his bond covers the material and the workmanship, but not the condition of the street below the pavement. He maintained that he couldn't be held responsible for holes in the pavement, which were caused by quicksand underneath the macadam, as he had done all that was required of him. R. Murchison, clerk of the board of public works, said this morning that it appeared to him that as the legal department of the city had not taken the matter to court, that the city auhorities evidently thought that the position of the contractor was correct and that no remedy could be secured by taking the case to the courts in an effort to collect on the bonds for repair work.

HE GOT READY.

Chicago News: Hivling got out his evening clothes, including the one remaining clean shirt with a broad gauge bosom, and "that foolish hat," as Hivling always called his opera crush. Hivling didn't care much for society himself. He trailed along just to keep peace in the family.

When they were all ready for the start that night—and Mrs. Hivling kept remarking, peevishly, that they were going to be late, as usual, she supposed—Hivling happened to notice that his patent leathers looked sort of dingy. Even Mrs. Hivling admitted that he'd better take time to dab a little liquid polish on the footgear.

Just as he was finishing the other shoe he straightened up for a minute and dropped a wee drop of the polish on his shirt bosom. It was an infinitesimal particle, much smaller than the ordinary pinhead of commerce, and wouldn't have mattered at all. But finding it there just when he was hurrying to be off to that society affair ruffled Hivling's temper.

"Look at this, will you?" he shouted at his wife.

"I don't see anything but a little speck on your shirt," responded his wife, mildly.

"That's all you see, hey? Well, you'll see more, Mrs. Hivling and pretty quick, too, I'm here to remark! I'll just make this shirt front look good and punk while we're at it!"

Thereupon Hivling proceeded to do as his ruffled temper dictated. He took the dauber and drew two broad lines down the bosom and then two more crosswise—forming a double-cross effect.

"Now, then!" remarked Hivling, in a tone of triumph, not even noticing his wife's glare. "Now, then!"

"Yes! Now, then! Now, we won't get to the party at all," wailed Mrs. Hivling, "and after my getting a new gown for it! All on account of that abominable, detestable temper of yours! O-oh! oh! oh! It's just disgusting, the silly things you do when some little thing goes wrong."

She went into the other room and threw herself on the couch, sobbing.

Hivling had cooled down by that time. His wife was right. If they had to stay at home Hivling well knew that it would be many a week before he would be able to get forgiveness for that night's work. So he called a cab and sent Mrs. Hivling ahead, saying that he would come along as soon as he could dig up a shirt somewhere.

Half an hour later, Mrs. Hivling smilingly, was telling how she happened to be at the party alone.

"Mr. Hivling was called downtown on an important business matter," she said, "and the dear man just made me come alone. I thought it was mean to come when he was obliged to go downtown, but he insisted."

Then when Hivling finally arrived, looking sheepish, his first words to the group of women his wife had been talking to were these: "Well, I suppose my wife has been telling you how I got sore and painted a Chinese nightmare on my shirt front and came near not getting here at all, eh?"

IN SYMPATHY WITH CORN

Wheat Advances as Other Grain Is Bought on Account of Frosts.

Shorts Forced to Cover---Export Business at Montreal ---Flax Higher.

Duluth Board of Trade, Aug. 25.—Buying which sent shorts scurrying to cover, sympathy with corn and predictions of frost in the corn belt tonight which the longs figure should help wheat values, caused the market to advance sharply today. This market did not report any export business but Montreal wired that good export business in Manitobas had been transacted and that there had been fair sales of flour abroad. This news came toward the close and values strengthened immediately. Cash market here was dull and featureless.

September wheat advanced 1⅛c; December, 1⅛@¼c and May 1½c. Cash was on a parity with the September contract.

Oats advanced ⅜c in sympathy with wheat and corn. Barley and rye were unchanged and durum prices were firm.

Flax advanced moderately. Offers were scarce and there was some short covering on account of light frosts in the Northwest and predictions of frosts tonight. September advanced 3½c; October, 3½c; November, 3c, and December, 2c.

The wheat market was dominated by pit sentiment and professional opinion rather than by any news favoring the bull side of values. Frosts in Iowa and Nebraska caused the corn market to advance sharply and wheat values went up in sympathy. Frosts in the Northwest and predictions of cold weather tonight had considerable sentimental effect although frosts all over the Northwest could not do much damage to wheat now as most of it is cut and in shocks if not thrashed. Professional opinion favored the buying side and the market advanced steadily from the opening.

The market was oversold and it was easy to boost values as the shorts were driven to cover. They found it difficult to buy back their stuff and on account of a scarcity of offerings they were forced into the market with no likelihood of wringing any concessions from their opponents. Trading was active around the opening and toward noon it eased off although interest in the market was unabated. Toward the close trading increased, belated shorts getting under cover. The tone was easier, however, as bulls appeared to be willing to accept profits on the sharp bulge.

Cables came higher accomopanied by reports of unsettled weather in the United Kingdom and France. Shorts in the Berlin market were punished and that market scored a sharp advance. A cable from Argentine told of the continuance of drouth and the possibility of damage from locusts. Hitherto the Argentine crop has experienced favorable conditions except in scattered localities and the outlook has indicated a crop larger than last year.

Flour sales were moderate and were entirely for domestic account. The foreign trade is insignificant and is confined to low grade flours. The volume of this export business is small and not of sufficient importance to become a market factor. Millers are disposed to make concessions and the recent reduction in the prices of family patents apparently has attracted the interest of buyers. They are inclined to hold out for additional concessions, however. The future business is small in volume. Mills have moderate stocks of wheat, although the spring wheat millers report stocks lower than for some time and have been buying moderately.

Country acceptances of wheat are small today and there are well defined indications that the farmer is disposed to store his wheat. The winter wheat movement is falling off and the milling demand in the winter wheat territory is dull. In the Northwest farmers are sending considerable old wheat to market, but they are holding closely to their new wheat. The bulls think they will not sell except on a sharp advance of from 6 to 8 or 9c a bu. Many acres in North Dakota are being plowed up and some people are claiming a yield of 30,000,000 bu for that state. The northern half of the state, they say, averaged from 3 to 5 bu an acre. Most of the thrashing machines in North Dakota, reports say, will be housed within a few days.

Stocks of wheat continue to increase in the two Northwestern primary markets. Export business was prominent by its absence although more than 100,000 bu of Durum wheat is being loaded here, it was said, for export. Foreign reports did not indicate any pronounced demand for American or Canadian wheat. The exportable surplus of Canadian wheat is placed at 65,000,000 bu. An official Italian report made the yield of wheat in that country 132,000,000 bu, a reduction of 5,000,000 bu from the previous estimate. Last year the yield was 148,000,000 bu. The thrashing returns failed to bear out the early promise of the crop.

Stocks of oats are accumulating in all directions and shipments are comparatively small. The situation is not favorable to buyers. The heavy run of stuff has made the bulls few in number. Thrashing returns from the Northwest are more favorable than early indications.

Light frosts in the northwestern part of North Dakota, killing frosts in Montana and light frosts in some parts of Saskatchewan caused apprehension in the flax market. Values are so high, however, that there was a disinclination on the part of bullishly inclined people to boost values excessively in the face of the new crop. So far as could be learned the frosts in North Dakota were not of sufficient heaviness to damage the growing flax.

Miles City, Mont., wired The Herald that farmers in the low regions along the Yellowstone reported slight damage, but that on the plains there was no damage. The message added that the flax in the valleys and the unirrigated localities has lacked moisture and that it will not go over 5 bu an acre and in many places will amount almost to a total failure.

The Herald has located about 310,000 acres of flax in Montana although the government could not find more than 20,000. As there are some stations yet to hear from the acreage determined by The Herald will be increased, probably to more than 350,000.

This week two less mills are in operation, though the grinding capacity is not much less. The output should approximate 300,000 bbl. In the corresponding week a year ago the production was 228,675 bbl. Minneapolis and interior mills averaged a fair business in flour last week. Foreign traders still so light as to hardly count.

Broomhall cabled: Wheat at opening was affected by the easier American cables yesterday and liberal shipments estimated from Argentine for the week and values were ⅜d to ½d lower. Following opening a firm undertone developed as offerings became tight and shorts covered and values advanced ⅜d. Buying was attributed to the continued unsettled weather conditions from both the United Kingdom and France. The market on the whole was dull but about steady with values unchanged to ⅛d lower than yesterday. Corn was neglected and unchanged. Cargoes of wheat off coast arrived nil, awaiting orders, six. In distant positions, quiet with very little bidding. Corn firmer owing to a better inquiry. Weekly Argentine estimates wheat shipments 1,360,000 bu vs. 1,160,000 bu vs 144,000 bu. Corn, 2,800,000 bu vs 4,318,000 bu vs. 2,952,000 bu. The new wheat crop is making good progress.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Foreign Strength and Northwest Firmness Raise Wheat Prices.

Chicago, Aug. 25.—Wheat opened higher today, prices advancing generally ¼ to ⅝c, bulls finding encouragement in stronger tone in foreign markets and firmer conditions in the Northwest grain centers. In the first hour September and December gained ⅛ to ½c. The nearby option advancing to 99⅜@½c and December touching $1.03½. Strength in corn also contributed to the upturn in wheat. September opened ⅜ to ⅝c up at 99 to 99¼c. December opened ⅛@¼ to ½c up at $1.03⅛ to $1.03⅜.

Free selling on the bulge failed to take the edge off the market and a steady demand crowded values still higher. The close was firm with September ⅝@¾c to ¾c up at 99¼¾99⅜c to 99⅜c. December closed ⅝@¾c to ¾@⅞c up at $1.03⅝ to 7.03⅝@1.03¾.

Low temperatures in the West and cooler weather forecast excited the corn pit and the market opened at a sharp advance of from ⅜c to 1¼c. Shorts hastened to cover and light offerings were speedily absorbed. In the first hour prices advanced above the opening level. September opened ¾ to 1¼c up at 61¼ to 61¾c and added ⅛c soon afterward. December opened with a similar advance at 58¾ to 59¼c and also advanced, going up to 59½c.

The market held its firmness throughout the session. The close was strong with September 1¼c up at 61¾c. December closed 1⅜@1½c to 1½c higher at 59⅜@59½c.

Oats were firmer with the other grains at an advance of ⅛ to ⅜c. Shorts were eager purchasers and values went up slightly in the first hour. September opened ⅛c up at 34½c. December opened ¼c to ⅜c higher at 36⅝ to 36¾c.

Provisions moved in sympathy with the grain market and advanced at the outset a general commission house demand being noted. Opening figures for the September prices were: Pork, $21.30, 12½c higher; lard, $11.92½, 2½c up and ribs, $12.20, 5c up.

LAST PRICES ARE LOWER

Stock Market Closes Weak and Under Wednesday's Level.

Steel and Hill Stocks Conspicuous in the Late Selling.

New York, Aug. 25.—First prices were substantially above the closing of yesterday and there was a large absorption of some of the favorite stocks including Union Pacific, Reading and United States Steel. Canadian Pacific was up 1¼ and Reading, Union Pacific, Amalgamated Copper, Central Leather and American Hide & Leather preferred 1. St. Paul was a notable exception, showing a loss of a slight fraction.

The market made a greater headway upward, but became quiet as the rise progressed. Northern Pacific, Southern Pacific, Baltimore & Ohio, Chesapeake & Ohio, American Car and Tennessee Copper were lifted a point each. Later profit-taking wiped out the rise in Chesapeake & Ohio and lowered some of the leaders a half or so.

Stocks came on the market freely for a time and the leaders receded from 1 to 1½ below the high prices of the morning. Most of the favorites sold below yesterday's final prices. Atchison, Chesapeake & Ohio, Union Pacific and Reading were the most easily depressed. Atchison and St. Paul fell 1¼ below last night and New York Central 1. A rally of ½ to ¾ followed, but the market reacted again and was ruling at the lowest at 12 o'clock. The improved tone of the London market and extensive short covering caused the sharp early advance. Bear operators attacked the market afterwards when they found that they had been principal purchasers of stocks on the advance. Bonds were easy.

Reports of frost in the cotton belt helped along the decline in stocks, prices all along falling to the lowest on selling by both accounts. St. Paul was down 1¾ below yesterday's closing; Union Pacific 1⅝ and Reading, Southern Pacific, Erie first preferred and Minneapolis & St. Louis 1.

The market closed weak. Prices crumbled away slowly until the level of the market was between 1 and 2 points under yesterday's closing for the majority of the representative stocks. United States Steel and the Hill stocks were conspicuous in the late selling.

New York stock quotations furnished The Herald by Piper, Johnson & Case.

Cotton Market.

New York, Aug. 25.—Cotton opened steady at an advance of 2 to 3 points in response to rather better cables than expected, but soon eased off to a net loss of 6 to 8 points on active months under local bear pressure and scattering liquidation in the absence of bull support or of any general buying for long account. Showers at points on the East gulf coast were claimed by some to be forerunners of the tropical storm and there was a streak of cold running down from the extreme north to Oklahoma, with private wires reporting a slight northe in Oklahoma and Texas, but the bullish features of the weather map attracted little apparent attention during the early trading.

Spot closed quiet, 5 points lower. Middling uplands, 16.40; middling gulf, 16.65. Sales, 13,983 bales.

The ledges in the Scott are wide and are away inside of their sidelines. No possible reason for any dispute with the big company. Our ledges from the 1,200-foot level down to the apex under the Rarus Fault are ours without question. We own one of the best located mines on Butte Hill, and I do think the Scott will soon be a heavy producer of copper ores, and that it will continue unmolested forever. The Scott owns two big properties and the titles are perfect.
Amazon-Montana has opened up a mine, but the weakness in Ballaklava has caused a little selling in Amazon. No reason for it at all, and I might say that the title for this property passes from the United States government to Mr. Meyers and then to the Amazon Development Company. They own over 180 acres of ground with about twenty ledges passing through it. Buy the Scotts and Amazon, for they will come along faster than you think from now on. Markets change quickly.

ALMOST TOO FAR.

"Very good repartee. Very good. But, perhaps, a little strong."

The speaker was Henry E. Dixey, the noted actor. He resumed:

"It reminds me of a dialogue at the Lambs between a New England poet and a Scot.

"'Bah!' said the Scot, hearing that the poet had a press agent. Bah! you Americans are possessed with an itch for notoriety.'

The poet tossed back his long locks fiercely.

"'Well,' he cried, 'an itch for notoriety is better than a notoriety for——'

"But with a 'Tut, tut, gentlemen,'" said Mr. Dixey, "I ended this unseemly wrangle ere it went too far."

TROPICAL GARDENING.

Now is the time for transplanting and breaking up clumps of cannas, caladiums, dahlias, cyperus, papyrus, eulalias and other tropical grasses and everything of this nature up to the bamboos. It is also time to start the cactus garden and plant out spines, prickles and all the succulents generally found growing with cactus collections. It is safe at this time of the year to plant anything, no matter how tender, for the chances are against late frosts, though they occasionally come. One on the first day of April, three years ago, took the leaves and first crop of fruit from a fig tree in the writer's garden, but such freaks are almost unheard of.

CONCENTRATED FERTILIZER.

A plant fertilizer that is very effective can be kept in small compass, always ready for use, and is neat and clean, may be made from a mixture of chemicals. Get one pound of nitrate of soda, one pound sulphate of ammonia and one and a half pounds of sulphate of potash. Mix these well, and if not quickly dissolved in water, heat it and stir until no more crystals are seen. Keep in a Mason jar or corked bottle and dilute and use as needed. This solution should be weakened by the use of a tablespoonful to a gallon of water. For pot plants this is most convenient, and such a pot should last for an ordinary collection for a year. It is equally good for garden use.

ROOSEVELT HURLS DEFIANCE AT PARTY BOSSES IN NEW YORK

Issues Statement Placing Himself Squarely With Progressive Element.

Ex-President Is Waked Up Early to Talk to Iowa Crowd.

Is Joined By Senator Cummins on Trip Across That State.

Carroll, Iowa, Aug. 26. — Theodore Roosevelt definitely aligned himself with tho progressives of New York state in a statement which he issued on the train today as he was traveling across Iowa.

Col. Roosevelt declared that the main issue in the fight in New York was not on any specific reform measure, but bossism. Bossism, he declared frequently led to corruption and he said he would wage ruthless war on corrupt alliances between business and bosses. Col. Roosevelt was asked about remarks by Timothy L. Woodruff, New York Republican state chairman, in regard to the factional fight in New York. In reply, he issued this statement:

"The progressives are emphatically in favor of taking a real step forward about direct primaries substantially on the lines of Governor Hughes' proposition, but this is not the main issue.

The Main Issue.

"The main issue is that we stand against bossism, big or little, and in favor of genuine popular rule, not only at the elections, but within the party organization, and above all that our war is ruthless against every species of corruption, big or little, and against the alliance between corrupt business and corrupt politics, as to which it has been found that, too often in the past, the boss system has offered a peculiarly efficient and objectionable means of communication. We are against the domination of the party and the public by special interests, whether these special interests are political, business or a compound of the two."

Mineola, L. I., Aug. 26.—Col. Theodore Roosevelt will be chosen as a delegate from Nassau county to the Republican state convention the Republican leaders say here today. It was proposed that the colonel head the delegation from Nassau.

Wake Him Up Early.

Ames, Iowa, Aug. 26. — Speeding westward in his special car, Col. Roosevelt was not permitted to sleep late this morning. Scarcely had the state of Iowa been entered, when a stop was made at 6:40 a. m. at Marshalltown, where hundreds of people clamored to see Col. Roosevelt.

After some delay he emerged from the rear door of his car, smiling but protesting that he had not been scheduled to speak there. He then delivered his first speech in what he termed the heart of the nation. He told the audience he was glad to get back to his own country, although he had enjoyed the lions in Africa more than they enjoyed him.

Objected to Cameras.

Expressing interest in the children of the assemblage, he suggested that it would not be well to depend on immigration for an increase of the population of the country.

After brief remarks, frequently interrupted by cheering, he protested against the action of photographers who brought their cameras into action.

"It is an outrage," he said, "to take my picture in this garb."

He had time only to throw a raincoat over his pajamas and to don slippers when called to the platform.

The Roosevelt special will go thrugh Iowa and Nebraska, stopping at a dozen or more places, where Col. Roosevelt will make addresses.

On the Engine.

Boone, Iowa, Aug. 26.—The Roosevelt train arrived at Boone at 8:30 and departed at 8:42. The ex-president addressed an audience of 2,000 during the stop. Col. Roosevelt will ride on tho engine part of the time between Boone and Council Bluffs. The train stopped at Boone Viaduct over the Des Moines river to allow a picture to be taken. Senator Cummins boarded the train at Ames.

Paris, Aug. 26. — Special dispatches from Italy insist that the marriage of Miss Katherine Elkins to the Duke of the Abruzzi, in spite of all denials, has been decided upon, and that Senator Elkins and the affianced couple will soon arrive in Paris to arrange the details of the wedding. Both the queen mother of Italy and King Victor Emmanuel have, according to these reports, given their consent to the wedding.

The crew were all saved. The Tejo, which was officially rated as a torpedo boat destroyer, was 230 feet long, carried the usual armament of her class and had a complement of eighty-five men.

Grand Trunk officials began an investigation today at Battle Creek of the cause of the wreck.

Nineteen in Car.

Superintendent Ehrke says that the assertion that there were just nineteen passengers on the wrecked car is borne out by the train chart.

Following is a revised list of tho dead: James McBean, Chicago; Mrs. Alma Woodward, en route Belfield, N. D., to Port Huron, Mich.; nurse accompanying Mrs. Woodward from St. John's hospital, Halifax; Mrs. Squires, residence unknown; —— Squires, 10 years old, son of Mrs. Squires; Mrs. E. M. Detective Says He Was Told to Get Witness Drunk.

Sleuth Is Put on Stand for Defense---Talks of Beckemeyer.

Chicago, Aug. 26.—The tables were turned in the Lee O'Neil Browne bribery trial in the criminal court today, when Patrick Keeley, a city detective formerly assigned to State's Attoreny Wayman's staff, was placed on the stand as a witness for the defense. Keeley testified that he was placed in charge of Representative H. J. C. Beckemeyer at the time Beckemeyer was a witness before the special grand jury which investigated the bribery charges. Keeley said that one of Mr. Wayman's assistants told him to "take Beckemeyer out and treat him right."

On further questioning by lawyers for the defense, Keeley said:

"I understood that by 'treating Beckemeyer right' I would get him so that he would talk—get him drunk."

Judge Kersten ruled against evidence relating to an alleged debauch in which Keeley and the man he was guarding are said to have taken part.

Forest Fires Are Thought to Have Cost Over 200 Lives.

Western Washington and Utah Are Scenes of Outbreaks.

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 26.—Latest estimtaes of the loss of life in the forest fires place the number of dead at more than 200. The Italians and Austrians in the St. Joe valley, of whom many perished, were employes of logging camps. The list of government rangers dead, now 100, will probably be lengthened.

A message received here today from Pend d'Orielle, Idaho, says:

"The bodies of twenty men and five living men are at a ranch house on the opposite side of the river at Tuscar, Mont. The five men are burned severely and no doctor is obtainable. There are still twenty or more bodies in the woods.

Fires in Washington.

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 26.—Western Washington, which has been comparatively free from serious forest fires this year, became the scene of the worst fires in the state yesterday when the forests in the foothills of the Cascade mountains burst into flame.

A sudden gale fanned brush fires into a conflagration that baffled the entire force of the Washington Forest Fire association. Although several sawmill towns are threatened and many houses have been destroyed, no fatalities have been reported.

Breaks Out in Utah.

ST. PAUL GIRL IS KILLED BY AUTO

Machine Crashes Through a Fence and Turns Over ---Three Men Injured.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—A "joy ride" in an automobile early today ended suddenly in the death of Ellen Boyer, a waitress, 22 years old; the fatal injury of Henry Copenhauser, whose death is momentarily expected at St. Joseph's hospital; and the serious injury of Harold Bywater, the chauffeur, and W. E. Rogers, all young men. They were in a hired automobile.

The accident occurred about five miles outside of the city on Rice street and on a perfectly level stretch of road, banked high above the surrounding land.

The machine was going at a very fast rate and evidently became unmanagebale, for it suddenly shot down the embankment, went over a fence, turned completely over in the air and landed right-side-up faced in the opposite direction to which it was going, about fifteen feet inside the fence.

The girl was instantly killed. Copenhauser, who is a clerk in a local hotel, suffered a crushed skull. Rogers and Bywater, the chauffeur, are unconscious and unable to tell how it happened.

Former Chief Forester Denounces Nation's Course in Protecting Woods.

Heyburn, Carter and Mondell Given Special Dressing Down.

Work of the Forest Service Against Conflagration Receives Warm Praise.

Washington, Aug. 26.—Gifford Pinchot of the National Conservation association and former head of the government forest service, in a statement issued today, holds that the loss of property and life in the recent and present forest fires was unnecessary.

The disastrous results, he said, are traceable to the unpreparedness to deal with the fire situation. He scores members of congress who have opposed appropriations for the proper equipment of forest rangers, and in that connection names Senator Heyburn of Idaho, whose home town, Wallace, suffered serious loss; Senator Carter of Montana, and Representative Mondell of Wyoming. The statement follows:

"I am proud of the splendid work the men of the forest service have been doing against the Western forest fires. Many of them have given their lives to protect the homes of settlers and the forests on which the prosperity of the Western people depend. To my mind their conduct is beyond all praise.

Wholly Unnecessary.

"Forest fires are preventable. It is a good thing for us to remember at this time that nearly, or quite, all of the loss, suffering and death these fires have caused, is wholly unnecessary. A fire in the forest is the same kind of a thing as a fire in the city. There is only one way to fight either. The fire department of every city is organized with the prime idea of getting to the fire when it is young. So with forest fires. The time to conquer them is before they grow strong.

"If a forest is equipped with roads, trails, telephone lines and a reasonable number of men for patrol there is no more likelihood that great fires will be able to get started than there is that great conflagrations like the Chicago fire will get started in a city with a modern fire department. Under rare circumstances they may, but the chances are against it.

Service Has Done Wonders.

"The forest service has done wonders with its handful of devoted men. It has put out every year many thousands of small fires, any one of which, under favorable circumstances, might have developed into a conflagration which 10,000 men could not stop. This year, because of the great drouth, the worst in much of the West for more than twenty years, there were too many fires and too few rangers.

"The lesson from these forest fires is perfectly clear. When a city suffers from a great fire it does not retrench in its fire department, but strengthens it. That is what the nation must do on the national forests.

Heyburn, Carter, Mondell.

"The men in congress like Heyburn, Carter and Mondell, who have made light of the efforts of the forest service to prepare itself to prevent just such a calamity as this, have in effect been fighting on the side of the fires against the general welfare. If even a small fraction of the loss from the present fires had been expended in additional patrol and preventive equipment, some, or perhaps nearly all, of the loss could have been avoided.

"I believe our people will take this lesson to heart and insist that the settlers and their wives and children, the lumber men and the miners, and the $2,000,000,000 worth of national property in the national forests, shall be adequately protected."

GRADY PRESIDENT OF THE EAGLES

St. Lolis, Mo., Aug. 26.—President Frank E. Hering of the fraternal Order of Eagles, who collapsed during the meeting of the grand aerie at which four former officials were found guilty of having diverted funds of the order last night, had recovered sufficiently to preside at today's session. His collapse was due to nervouns exhaustion. The expulsion from the grand aeria of the guilty was recommended. The committee trying them held that they had no legal right to expel the men from the order, and recommended that this be done by the aerie to which each belongs.

The election of officers is scheduled for today. Thomas F. Grady of New York automatically succeeds President Hering.

The prizes for competition in the Eagles' parade yesterday were awarded this morning. The Class A prize for the aerie bringing 300 men and a band of thirty-five pieces, was not awarded, no aerie having complied with the terms.

BUTCHERS AT LESTER PARK

More Than 3,000 People Make Annual Picnic a Great Success.

Meat Dressing Contests Are Feature of the Day's Sports.

That the butchers of the city are royal entertainers is the verdict of more than 3,000 people who yesterday attended the annual picnic given under the auspices of the butcher's union at Lester park.

In spite of the cold weather the crowds began to head toward Lester early in the morning and the fun began. Aside from the contests held in the afternoon, lunch was the most important of the day's event. Each family had brought its own basket and so great was the crowd that the big park was none too large.

The feature of the day was the sheep and chicken dressing contest. In the professional sheep-dressing contest, Ernest Rickard won easily, dressing two, in five and one-half minutes. William Harvey in the amateur class, dressed two sheep in seven minutes. William Simpson did the same work in just two seconds more than the time required by Harvey.

Steve Klaus dressed twelve chickens in three minutes and took first prize. Fred Bede and Charles Fraser tied for second prize, finishing the same work in three minutes and a half.

L. P. Schnider took first prize for having the largest family on the grounds. The tug-of-war between the union butchers and the employes of the packing houses was won by the former.

The races resulted as follows:

Fat men's race, John Dahl, first; William Cole, second. Fat ladies' race, Mrs. Schmeninski, first; Mrs. J. Lang, second. Three-legged race, C. Lee and Frank Doherty. Married ladies' race, Mrs. Graham, first; Mrs. Leach, second. One hundred-yard dash, free-for-all, J. D. Hunter, first; Frank Doherty, second. Young ladies' race, Miss Emma Lee, first; Miss St. Arnold, second. One hundred-yard union men's race Paul Sabroski, first; Leo Bernhart, second. Boys' race, under 10 years, Henry Jenswold.

The evening was spent in dancing at the pavilion.

Tomorrow at Luery's, 109 East Superior Street.

GIVE MICHIGAN CENSUS SATURDAY

Population of State and By Counties Will Be Announced.

Washington, Aug. 26.—The census figures on the state of Michigan, as a whole and by counties, will be made public tomorrow. The computation has been made in advance in order to meet a legal demand of the state in connection with the elections. While as a rule, owing to the activity of manufacturers, most of the important cities show a great increase, there will be a falling off in some of the counties where there are no manufactures of consequence.

The figures on New York will not be available at as early a date as was expected. The census bureau had hoped to make its figures of New York public by tomorrow night, but by some technicality the statement will be deferred until next Tuesday or Wednesday.

BRANCH TO BE CLOSED

Bethel Society Is Unable to Stand Big Increase in Rent.

Bowery Habitues Will Miss Home at 508 West Superior Street.

Sept. 1 the Branch Bethel, which has been conducted at 508 West Superior street for about ten years and has done an immense amount of good among the habitues of the Bowery, will be closed and the fixtures will be moved to the main Bethel on Lake avenue south. An increase in rent on the Branch Bethel from $300 to $525 cash and much more in other conditions, is more than the Bethel society can stand at this time, so the officers have decided to close the branch.

When the Branch Bethel was first established in the building it now occupies, the rent was $283 a month, including heat. Five years ago the rent was raised to $300 a month, the tenants to furnish their own heat, and for five years the Bethel maintained the branch under that arrangement.

Recently, however, the rent was raised to $525 in cash, the tenants to furnish heat, make all repairs, pay the taxes and the premiums on $12,000 insurance. The Bethel society rebelled against the increase and the Branch Bethel will no longer furnish convenient shelter to the homeless wanderer on the fast disappearing bowery.

On account of its location in the heart of the Bowery, as it was in the days that are gone, the Branch Bethel was able to do an immense amount of good. Many of the men who made the Bowery their headquarters when they came to Duluth from the camps or from the unknown past, did not stray east of Fifth avenue west and thus did not turn to the Lake avenue Bethel when their money was gone and they were without food or shelter. The Branch Bethel held out a standing invitation to them to enter its doors, make its reading room their club until they could find work and no questions asked.

The old timers on the Bowery will miss the Branch Bethel. They know the Lake avenue Bethel will always be a refuge to them, but it will be unfamiliar and they will pine for the homely comforts of the home that is to be closed.

KAISER URGES NEED OF ARMS

Emperor Makes Militant Speech and Refers to "Our Neighbors."

Koenigsburg, East Prussia, Aug. 26.—Emperor William, who is making a tour of Eastern Germany in connection with his visit to Posen for the dedication of his new castle there, delivered a martial speech at the provincial banquet here last night, in which he urged the necessity of co-operation with him in his work for the welfare and defense of the country. Taking as a text the role of Queen Louise of Prussia during the Napoleonic wars, he extolled her virtues and pointed out how the memory of her had fired the courage of Prussian soldiers and saved the country.

"The lofty figure of Queen Louise teaches us," he said, "that we men should cultivate all the military virtues and be always willing to use them in defence of the country.

Strides by "Neighbors."

"Above all else it teaches us to maintain the equipment of our army, in view of the enormous strides made by our neighbors, for only on being prepared for war does our peace depend."

In closing the emperor said:

"Considering myself as the instrument of the Master, regardless of passing views and opinions, I go my way, which is solely devoted to the prosperity and peaceful development of our fatherland."

PICNIC AT FOND DU LAC

Grocers Have Good Time Despite Threatening Weather of the Morning.

Two Baseball Games, Races and Other Athletic Contests Held.

Threatening weather in the morning cut down the crowd that attended the annual grocers 'picnic at Fond du Lac yesterday, but those who did attend did not regret braving the threats of the elements and visiting the picnic grounds. In the afternoon, the clouds were swept away, the sun came out and under the more favorable conditions, the grocers and their families had a good time as the grocers always have.

There was a long list of races and other athletic events for which suitable prizes were hung up. Men, women and children took part in the events and the winners were rewarded for their unusual efforts, while those who did not participate found real enjoyment in watching the contests.

There were two baseball games, the grocers captained by George Schulenberg, winning from the commission men under the direction of Herman Oppel by a score of 10 to 2 in five innings. A six-inning game between the clerks and deliverymen was won by the clerks by a score of 14 to 6.

The attendance would have been much greater if the weather had been better, but the grocers are satisfied for those who attended had a good time and those who did not attend missed something.

DIRECTORY OF AMUSEMENTS

WHERE TO GO TONIGHT.

LYCEUM—Pierce Players in "The Squaw Man."
ORPHEUM—Advanced vaudeville.

ROSSOW MIDGETS ARE REAL ATHLETES.

The Rossow Midgets, whose burlesque boxing exhibition is the funniest thing on the Orpheum bill this week, are probably the strongest men for their inches, in the world.

The little fellows are as "hard as nails" thanks to their training. While small they are perfectly formed, and wonderfully developed. The two boxing matches which they hold daily are far from being ladylike affairs. While they wear soft padded gloves, to prevent making it a bloody encounter, they "sail into" each other from the tap of the gong, and it is a regular windmill affair for three rounds. Those three rounds provide much more exercise than the average man gets in a day, and the two performances a day keep the midgets in fighting trim all of the time. The "haymaker" that finally puts an end to the bout is no imitation affair and with fighting gloves, instead of the soft cushions the midgest year, it would be a real "sleep producer" to use the slang of the ring.

The present week's bill will close Saturday night, the new bill opening with the Sunday matinee. The house was sold out again last evening by 8 o'clock, and the audience was just as enthusiastic as the previous ones. Tickets reserved by telephone are not held after 7:30 o'clock.

SEQUEL TO "THE SQUAW MAN" IS DRAMATIZED.

In view of the engagement of "The Squaw Man" at the Lyceum it might be of interest to know that the sequel to "The Squaw Man" and called in book form "The Silent Call," has been but recently dramatized.

With the majority of persons, born and reared as they are under conventional circumstances, "The Silent Call" is little more than the thrill of youth or the aspiration to rise above an inherited position and accomplish something worth while. The majority can have scarcely any conception of the strength and persistency of the silent call in the breasts of these in whom different races strive for mastery as they did in the heart of the Squaw Man's son. He is the principle figure in Edwin Milton Royle's new novel, "The Silent Call." In him flows the best blood of two races, that of an English nobleman and that of an Indian princess. The latter, despite the long years of a white man's training and culture finally gains the ascendency, making the man dissatisfied with his English home and surroundings and leading him to cross the ocean and assume control of his father's property in one of the Western states.

It is with his life after he comes to this country, that Mr. Royle is concerned in the present book. Mr. Royle's pictures of the Western life in which the Indian plays a conspicuous part, his portrayal of Indian nature and character, and his perception of the emotion which govern their action, are the things which will be remembered about the book. They are the evidences of the author's skill and mastery, the things which make "The Squaw Man" really worth while.

The engagement of the Pierce Players in "The Squaw Man" will conclude with two performances Saturday. The company goes to Superior Sunday, returning to the Lyceum Monday night in a production of "Strongheart" to be followed Thursday by a screamingly funny farce "At the White Horse Tavern," said to be even funnier than "Charley's Aunt."

EX-PRESIDENT MADRIZ OVERTAKEN BY ILLNESS.

Washington, Aug. 26. — Illness has overtaken Dr. Madriz, the late president of the Nicaraguan government at Managua and he has abandoned his plan to go to Costa Rica. Such information is communicated to the state department by American Minister McCreery, accredited to Honduras. Mr. McCreery reported that the intention of the former president was to take a steamer for Mexico on Monday. Following out the original plans, the Madriz generals who accompanied their chief when he fled from Managua, left Amapala on Wednesday for Costa Rica.

McKenzie, in Burleigh county, has a number of cases, while Grand Forks has reported but one case. Only a very few deaths have occurred so far.

CAMPAIGN FOR BETHEL

Society Hopes to Raise Fund of $130,000 in Twenty Days.

Over One Hundred Business Men Will Engage in the Work Oct. 1 to 20.

Oct. 1 to 20 has been selected as the time for the whirlwind campaign to be conducted by the Bethel society for $130,000 to finance the building of a new Bethel and a Bethel Home for Women. The fund also includes the amount necessary to provide the sites and to furnish the buildings when they are completed.

Forces are being organized for the campaign, which will be conducted much as were those for the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. three or four years ago. An office has already been opened at 307 Sellwood building, and lists of names are being checked over and districted.

During the twenty days 110 business men will be engaged in the campaign. They will be divided into ten teams, each under a captain, and each team will be given a certain number of names of people whom they will be expected to solicit. Under a card index system, which will be kept at the central office in the Sellwood building, there will be no duplications of names, and a man will be approached by but one person.

All preliminary plans will be made before Oct. 1, and the campaign will open with a rush. The Bethel society has long done good work in the city, and the members believe there will be a generous response from the citizens of Duluth when the appeal for funds is made.

IMPROVES ON THE PRODIGAL

New Jersey Runaway Returns Rich After Fifteen Years' Absence.

New Market, N. J., Aug. 26.—William Steinfeldt, a youth of 20, was dissatisfied with life on the parental farm and without consulting his parents he took a quiet leave and struck out for the West fifteen years ago. During all these years no tidings came from him and at the age of 36 he has returned to his home—for a visit only—declaring that he has made enough to support his aged parents in comfort for the rest of their lives. Besides being the owner of an Idaho ranch, on which graze 40,000 sheep, Steinfeldt has accumulated nearly $100,000, which is invested in stocks and bonds, and has a farm of 550 acres under cultivation.

With the dream of his youth realized, Steinfeldt has risen like one from the grave only to astonish his parents whom he will take West with him and make the balance of their lives one of ease and comfort. Asked why he had remained silent for so many years, Steinfeldt declared that he did not want anyone to know what he was doing nor where he was until he could declare himself an independent man.

PRAISES ITASCA PARK.

Postoffice Inspector Says It Is Minnesota's Beauty Spot.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—M. C. Fosnes, postoffice inspector, who has returned from a three weeks' vacation at Itasca Park, is loud in his praise of the state reserve. He says it is unquestionably the beauty spot of Minnesota. Fishing is better there than any place he ever visited. Crappies are especially plentiful, he says, and the most of them are large. Pike are also to be found in abundance.

"There is a new kind of pike up there," said Mr. Fosnes this morning. "I suppose one who didn't know would call it a pickerel, but they are shorter and heavier than a pickerel and radically different from the wall-eyed pike. The name of Northern pike has been given them."

Former Motley Doctor Dies.

Brainerd, Minn., Aug. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Dr. Isaac N. English, aged 59, for many years a practicing physician at Motley who came here two weeks ago, died of cancer of the stomach. The body was shipped to Gray Eagle for interment. He was widely known in the Motley section.

BUTTER AND EGGS FIRM

Cool Weather Has Effect on Market for Dairy Products.

Home Grown Vegetables Coming on Market in Large Quantities.

The sudden cool weather in the Northwest had a noticeable effect on the dairy products market. Fancy creamery butter advanced 1c from a week ago and other grades were held firm. The rains which caused an easy tone in the dairy products market in the fore part of the week lost their effect toward the close.

Eggs, which were slightly weak, firmed toward the close and values were on a par with last week.

Rains over dairy districts caused improvement in pastures and more satisfactory condition for milk production. The extra creamery grade was firm despite favorable conditions elsewhere. On account of the cool weather speculators got busy and bought large lots for storage purposes. Elgin and New York quotations on fancy creameries were higher also. All grades of creamery and dairy butter, with the exception of the extreme fancy class, were weak, but receivers were not put to the necessity of reducing quotations.

Cheese strengthened in sympathy with the dairy market and because large supplies are being diverted to storage. While wet weather and cooler temperatures increased the prospects for heavy production there has been very little cheese on the market and values have shown a tendency to advance. The demand has fallen off considerably, but the lightness of receipts has minimized its effect. Fancy full creams advanced 1c and limburger sustained a similar increase.

Potaotes declined sharply on account of the arrival of home grown potatoes, which caused a flood of receipts after a period of stringency. For two or three weeks potatoes were scarce and there were few arrivals. This period immediately preceded the first marketings of the Minnesota potato. The arrival of receipts from the country in this territory caused a drop in prices from $1 to 90 cents. Recent rains have placed the potato crop beyond danger of suffering and there is no likelihood of crop being retarded through want of moisture. Sweet potatoes are arriving in barrel lots and are quoted at $5 a barrel. Minnesota potatoes are improving, but they are not up to the standard of the Southern grown.

* * *

Eggs benefited by the lower temperatures, which had a tendency to stimulate the local consumption and made shipments less hazardous. Arrivals just about met the increased demand. The market at the close of the week is firm and buoyant. Receipts probably will show a decrease in the near future and it will not be surprising if eggs are withdrawn from storage to take care of business. This will minimize chances of higher prices and it is not expected that values will advance so long as speculators are willing to let go of their reserves at prevailing prices.

Poultry trading has been moderately brisk and without feature.

Melon trade is active. Missouri is shipping heavily and watermelons from that state are plentiful and cheap. Cantaloupes are arriving from Colorado, the famous Rockyford district having started to end out its season's product. Osage melons and Indian gems have been having a large sale. Oranges are holding firm and about the only kind in the market are the late Valencias from California. Receipts are light and the consumptive demand is moderate.

California is being supplanted by Idaho and Washington, although California still is shipping some fine fruit to this market. Fancy apples from Idaho are of large size and fine quality. Grapes from California, pears from Idaho and fancy plums from California have had a big sale. Receipts of plums are rapidly decreasing. The fruit trade has been moderate, although the receiver has to contend with considerable inferior stock. There has been a scarcity of good, sound ripe fruit. There have been heavy supplies of Southern peaches on the market, but the bulk of them were poorly packed, ill assorted, small and specked and were not satisfactory to the best trade.

A good trade has been transacted in green goods. Homegrown tomatoes are on the market in large quantities and are first class in quality. A large share of the offerings of all classes of stuff consisted of homegrown supplies which took freely because of their freshness and excellent quality. Sweet corn took a pronounced slump because of heavy receipts. Cauliflower and dry onions were firm. Home grown cabbage is of first class quality and is selling liberelly. Hothouse cucumbers were slightly easier and were well taken.

NO EXTRA PAY FOR CENSUS ENUMERATORS.

Washington, Aug. 26.—The National Association of Census Enumerators, recently organized in this city for the purpose of collecting additional pay for the enumerators, has disbanded on the advice of attorneys to the effect that the extra work required of the enumerators was not outside of the requirements of the law. If the efforts of the association had been successful, an extra outlay of several hundred thousand dollars would have been necessary.

INTERNATIONAL FALLS BIG MILL

Expected One of Most Modern Sawmills Will Be Built This Year.

International Falls, Minn., Aug. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The work of clearing ground for the sawmill yards is now under way, which is taken as evidence that the mill is to be built this fall. The foundation is in for the mill; a large quantity of logs has been stored there; a boom and sorting works have been installed, and within a week the Loman line of railroad twenty-five miles long and built to haul timber to the mill will be ready for operation.

The further fact that the machinery for the mill has been bought and is in storage gives rise to the belief that the clearing of thirty-five acres of yards is the last act preceding the erection of the mill. The latter will be operated electrically, will have a hot pond and 60,000,000 capacity.

NEW CAMP OF WAR VETERANS

Charter List Will Be Held Open Until Sept. 13.

A meeting of those interested in the new camp of Spanish American War Veterans was held in Memorial hall last evening and considerable progress was made in the way of organization. The meeting was well attended and the enthusiasm displayed is said to insure the success of the undertaking. Since the first meeting, a few weeks ago, the charter list has been nearly doubled and about as many more have either made application or signified their intention of doing so. For this reason the camp decided to hold the charter open until the next meeting, which will take place Tuesday evening, Sept. 13. Regular meeting nights will be on the second and fourth Tuesdays of each month.

The matter of a name for the new camp has been left open until the next meeting. At that time the camp will also adopt its constitution and bylaws.

NEW WRINKLE IN CUSTOMS WORK

Loeb Has All First Cabin Rooms Searched After Passengers Leave.

New York, Aug. 26.—A customs innovation was put into effect late last night when the big Cunarder Mauretania docked. Every first cabin room on the vessel was searched by a corps of six customs inspectors, after the rooms were vacated by the passengers. It made no difference to the inspectors who had occupied the rooms.

While the Cunard line officials were annoyed by the precedent, the customs officials contend that some passengers, with malice aforethought, deliberately leave small luggage and articles of value in their staterooms and give orders to the steward to send them ashore.

Paul Morton, former secretary of the navy; Seth Low, Mrs. Potter Palmer of Chicago and Lord Northcliffe, owner of the London Daily Mail, were among the arrivals on the Mauretania.

SHERMAN NOT TO RETIRE, SAYS HIS RELATIVE.

Utica, N. Y., Aug. 26.—A story published at Watertown and elsewhere yesterday that Vice President Sherman would, upon the expiration of his term, retire from politics is declared here to be without authority. Mr. Sherman refused to discuss publicly any question of a political nature, but a relative declared the announcement of his retirement was without foundation.

SAYS IT IS EASY TO SHOW FRAUD

Garfield Talks About Corruption in Elections to Congress.

Sycamore, Ill., Aug. 26.—The fight against Cannonism is not against Speaker Cannon, but against the nonprogressive principles he represents, according to James R. Garfield, secretary of the interior during the Roosevelt administration, in a speech here last night. Mr. Garfield also declared it would be as easy to show corruption in the election of some of the representatives in both houses of congress as to prove that the sun shines.

Dividend on Goldfield.

San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 26.—At the regular quarterly meeting of the directors of the Goldfield Consolidated Mining company a dividend of 30 cents per share was voted. The dividend will amount to $1,779,579.

SMOKING ROOM FOR WOMEN IN THEATER

Chicago's New Play House Will Have That as One Feature

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 26.—A real estate deal involving $3,000,000 has been closed which is to give Chicago within a year a new twenty-story skyscraper in the loop district and a new theater bigger than any in the city and unique in that it will be the only real music hall on this side of the Atlantic ocean.

The theater will be unique because it will combine what are regarded as the good points of the London and Paris styles of music hall. Especial effort is to be made to get the patronage of women, and, with this in view, there will not only be a special box office for women, presided over by a woman, but a woman's smoking room and women's rest and lounging rooms.

Following the plans of the Paris music halls, there are to be three promenades on the theater floors—a large main promenade, a so-called "Elysian" promenade and a "de lux" promenade, finished in gold and white.

BELIEVE MANVEL MAN WAS KILLED

Murdered Either in Grand Forks or East Grand Forks Is Latest Theory.

Grand Forks, N. D., Aug. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—With the identification of the dead body found near Emerado last Sunday as that of Rudolph Holmes of Manvel, this county, the theory that he came to his death at the hands of murderers is greatly strengthened. Holmes had come to Grand Forks the night before his dead body was discovered and had about $50 in cash and a number of grain receipts. The cash and the receipts were all gone when the body was picked up.

Remains Badly Mangled.

The remains were so badly mangled that it has been impossible to determine in just what manner the man came to his death, and the theory held is that he was robbed and killed in either Grand Forks or East Grand Forks, and that his body was taken to Emerado and dumped on the track to be run down by a train, thus destroying evidence of foul play.

WOMAN FAILS IN FOOD PROBLEM

Thirty Ham Sandwiches and More Eatables Fail to Supply Five Children.

Atchison, Kan., Aug. 26.—How much does it take to feed three boys and two girls when served from a lunch basket on a train? An Atchison woman figured and figured, and decided that thirty ham sandwiches, forty cookies, two glasses of jelly, two dozen deviled eggs, a four-layer cake and three pies would be enough. She started with the five children at 8 in the morning; by 2 that afternoon not a crumb was left; by 4 two of the boys looked gaunt and pale, and at 6, when she reached her destination, two of the children had starved to death.

WANT MORSE FREED; NO MERCY FOR WALSH.

Washington, Aug. 26.—Letters sent to President Taft from all parts of the country urging a pardon for Charles W. Morse, the New York banker now in the Atlanta penitentiary, have been received at the department of justice. Many of the writers are women and no less than eight of them asked for the privilege of carrying the pardon to Morse if it is granted. There is no petition for a pardon before the department.

Since it has become known that attorneys for John R. Walsh, the Chicago banker now in the Leavenworth penitentiary, intend to ask for his pardon some time next month, several protests have been received at the department of justice. Most of them have come from the vicinity of the wrecked bank of which Walsh was the head.

NEWS AND VIEWS OF POLITICS AND POLITICIANS

S. B. Nelson of Luverne, Files for Democratic Nomination for State Senate, With Canfield and Duea as Republican Candidates—Boyle of Eveleth Prepared for the Battle—McKnight Makes a Trip Over the District—Justice O'Brien's Election Strongly Urged—Pinchot in First District.

STATE PRESS URGES HIS ELECTION TO THE BENCH

THOMAS D. O'BRIEN, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of Minnesota, Who Was Nominated by the Democratic State Convention for That Place and Whose Candidacy Seems to Be Leading the Way to a Non-partisan Selection of the Judiciary.

Nelson of Rock Visits Head of Lakes.

S. B. Nelson of Luverne, who filed Monday as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the state senate from the Sixteenth district, was in Duluth yesterday. Mr. Nelson was a member of the state board of equalization when that body was in existence and is one of the leading Democrats of Rock county. He is in the mercantile business, operating a large retail store at Luverne, and has interests that identify him with the interests of the whole district, which is composed of Rock and Pipestone counties.

E. H. Canfield, Republican, is now the upper house representative of the district. He is a candidate for renomination and is being opposed by S. P. Duea of Ruthton, who was a house member two years ago. Mr. Canfield voted with the optionists in the last session but is not making that issue prominent in his campaign. Mr. Duea is an avowed anti-optionist. It is probable that the contest between the Republican aspirants for the senatorship will pave the way for the election of Mr. Nelson, who possesses many elements of strength.

S. J. Adams af Jasper, Pipestone county, and W. B. Brown of Pipestone, both splendid citizens, are being urged to file for the house on the Democratic ticket, but they have not definitely decided whether they will do so. A number of Republican Barkises are in the field. The district is entitled to but one seat in the house.

Representative Miller and Insurgent McKnight.

The Moose Lake Star-Gazette, in taking editorial notice of the candidacy of Alex G. McKnight for the Republican nomination for congress, says it does so with great pleasure and remarks that throughout his career Mr. McKnight has shown an insurgency spirit. This it commends as the trait that should be possessed by an Eighth district congressman and as the characteristic which Mr. Miller two years ago promised would influence him in his official conduct. The Star-Gazette adds:

> However, after the insurgents of the Eighth district rolled up a big majority for Mr. Miller against Mr. Bede and he arrived in Washington as the representative of this district all of his promises and pledges were thrown to the winds and we find Mr. Miller lined up with the strongest "stand-patters" there are in this country, much to the chagrin of the voters. * * *
> If we elect representatives who are more interested in getting a few dollahs expended on some public improvement in the district than we are whether they vote right or not on some great public questions then we should not care what class of men we send as our representatives. If we care more for a few public buildings and public improvements than we do for the moral, upright representatives then we should not object to the renomination of Clarence B. Miller, but we believe the people of this district have arrived at a conclusion that the man who represents this district in the future must be a man of high moral standing and integrity. A man who will not give away his vote, his soul or his manhood for the sake of getting a few hundred dollars from the public treasury for some public building, but a man who prefers the respect and confidence of his constituents is the kind of a man to send to Washington from the Eighth district. If you are interested in the welfare of this district; if you are interested in your own welfare; if you are interested in the welfare of the people of the whole United States then when the time comes to cast your vote see that you vote for the man who has the moral courage to go to Washington and stand by the pledges that he makes.

Mr. McKnight spent the week in a tour of parts of the district where he lacks acquaintance. Reports received at McKnight headquarters by Richard Jones are to the effect that so far his chief has met with the most flattering reception wherever he has gone and that he is indeed pleased with the prospects as they have been made known to him.

At McKnight headquarters a careful and thorough campaign by mail is being directed throughout the district and a feeling of utmost confidence pervades the place.

Justice O'Brien and the State Press.

So far as the sentiment of the state press may reflect the sentiment of the public in general, the hope that Justice T. D. O'Brien will be elected to the state supreme court seems to be well founded and probably will be realized. Many papers have commented approvingly on the action of the Democratic state convention in favor of non-partisanship in judicial affairs. Several weeks ago the Chisholm Tribune-Herald said:

> It is to be regretted that partisan politics should remove Judge O'Brien from the supreme court. He is such a big, brainy level headed jurist and such a fair and withal, lovable man that one can easily forget his politics. His probable retirement is a real loss to the state—as every member of the bar will testify.

To this the Sauk Rapids Sentinel-Free Press replied:

> When as strong a partisan as Editor Arneson makes a statement like the above, it begins to look as though there was something to this talk of a "non-partisan" judiciary. The only thing to do is to turn in and re-elect Justice T. D. O'Brien.

Harold Knutson of the Foley Independent is another Republican editor who advocates the election of Justice O'Brien, saying:

> Why allow partisan politics to remove Mr. O'Brien from the supreme bench? All concede that he is one of the ablest jurists in Minnesota today. Let the newspaper men of Minnesota, who believe in a clean, wholesome judiciary, get behind the candidacy of Mr. O'Brien and his election will be assured. Let us for once throw aside the fetters of partisanship and show that our desire for a non-partisan judiciary is sincere.

Two Evelethians Spend a Few Hours Here.

Walter J. Smith and James P. Boyle, candidates for state treasurer and state senator, respectively, returned to Eveleth last evening, after a brief stay in the city. Mr. Smith came down on purely personal business and Mr. Boyle attended to certain political business that interested him. The west end of the city being part of the Forty-ninth district, which he is expected to represent in the senate next term, it is assumed that the political business that interested him had to do with his campaign plans. At least, Mr. Boyle did not deny that such might be the case.

In West Duluth the Eveleth candidate for the legislature is assured of a heavy vote. Peculiar conditions have been created in that part of the district, conditions that began to manifest themselves long before Mr. Boyle announced his candidacy, and these conditions tend to make his nomination surer than his most ardent followers believed it to be at the beginning. He had nothing to do with the creation of this fortunate situation, but as soon as he came out as a candidate it became apparent that he would benefit largely by it.

Mr. Boyle had nothing in particular to say about the outlook in the district, except that he is thoroughly satisfied with it and has no doubt but that the outcome will be his election.

Noting that the Cambridge Independent "deplores the failure of the Republican convention to indorse Justice O'Brien and thus take a stand for an independent and non-partisan judiciary," the Northfield News says:

> "It was doubtless a mistake—emphasized by the dignified attitude assumed by Judge O'Brien himself when it was suggested that while occupying a judicial position he become a candidate for governor. The supreme court will not be strengthened nor public confidence in it increased by Judge O'Brien's enforced retirement.

Another indication of the trend of sentiment is noted by the Sauk Rapids Sentinel-Free Press:

> "The Republican state ticket heads the editorial columns of many Minnesota newspapers. So far we have noticed the names of the candidates for supreme court omitted from such papers as the Long Prairie Leader, the Glenwood Leader, the Glenwood Herald and the Brown's Valley Tribune. The movement for a non-partisan judiciary is progressing. The chances of electing Judge O'Brien look brighter every week."

Summing up, Editor Arneson says that "the feeling is quite general that something should be done to bring about the selection of members of the supreme court in a non-partisan manner. That is the only way men of O'Brien's character can be retained in the public service.

Pinchot to Help Against Tawney.

Gifford Pinchot, until recently federal chief forester, will enter the Minnesota campaign, according to a Rochester dispatch, which says that Roosevelt's close friend will make a number of speeches in behalf of Sidney A. Anderson before the primaries. This is but one of the things that lead to the belief that the Tawney men have come to the conclusion that there may be something dangerous to them in the Anderson candidacy.

Mr. Anderson is making speeches in different parts of the district every day and is meeting with encouragement, but just what form the encouragement will take on primary day is in doubt.

Mr. Tawney has not appeared on the stump in the Rochester part of the district to date but is expected there at almost any time.

Candidates in the Fifty-sixth.

In the Fifty-sixth legislative district there is an interesting situation. Ray G. Farrington is a candidate for renomination and re-election to the senate. He is a Democrat and is opposed for the nomination by P. W. Bresnahan, who is said to have a good chance of beating the senator. On the Republican side there are four candidates for the senate—T. J. McElligott, Michael Ferch, O. E. Hogue and Bolsta of Ortonville. The latter is an out-and-out county optionist.

With the multiplicity of candidates on the Republican side, it seems reasonable to assume that the Democratic nominee will have a good show for election, whether it is Mr. Bresnahan or Senator Farrington.

In the district are two counties, Big Stone and Swift. It has one representative. Edward Lende of Appleton, a Republican, was the house member two years ago. He is not running this year. Knute Knutson of Swift Falls is in the field as a county optionist and John McCullum aspires to the place as a plain Republican. No Democrat has filed. It is said that Knutson and McCullum have an even break in the contest. The prohibition vote in the county two years ago was larger than the Democratic and about 300 less than the Republican.

Warner of Aiken Decides to Run for House.

Charles H. Warner of Aitkin, president of the Aitkin County Development association and for many years an earnest and effective worker in the cause of Northern Minnesota development, has decided to file for Republican nomination for the house from the Fifty-second district. In this district there are four counties, Aitkin, Carlton, Itasca and Koochiching. Mr. Warner will make a careful canvass of these counties and will in all probability be nominated.

Mr. Warner, who is interested in lands all through Northern Minnesota and was indorsed by the Aitkin county Republican convention for the house nomination, has taken a leading part in the work of the Northern Minnesota Development association, and will be supported by that organization, it is believed.

The Aitkin candidate was at one time at the head of the state immigration department, has a wide acquaintance and is a ready and forceful speaker. When he was first proposed for the legislature he was described as being of the type of man that will be needed in the legislature by Northern Minnesota next winter.

G. Gunderson of Mahnomen county is being mentioned as a possible candidate for the house. He is a farmer and business man, is prominent in the community, and was a delegate to the Republican state convention last June, voting with the county optionists.

* * *

W. A. Marin of Crookston, candidate for the house, wants the legislature to change the date of the primaries from September to June, "for the convenience of the country vote." That would make the campaign nice and long, at any rate.

* * *

Secretary W. R. Mackenzie of the Northern Minnesota Development association is receiving pledges from legislative candidates who subscribe to the tenets of the association in every mail that reaches Bemidji, some of them coming from the southern counties. Reapportionment is the big issue involved in the pledge.

The Faribault Journal mentions Sheriff Bates' pencil-pushing campaign in this paragraph: "One of the Republican aspirants for the shrievalty nomination in the northern country is distributing pencils with his name and the office which he seeks. That's getting close to the voters' vests."

THRESHING IMPEDED BY LACK OF HELP.

Jamestown, N. D., Aug. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The fact that men are so scarce in the state will cause thrashing operations to drag over a longer period than usual, as the machines nearly everywhere are being operated short handed. Many farmers are manning the rigs themselves, doing exchange work, as this is the only possible way of getting the thrashing done.

MEMENTO OF ROOSEVELT.

Placque in Fargo of His Chicken Hunting Days.

Fargo, N. D., Aug. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Timothy Costello, father of Special Officer Dan Costello of the Northern Pacific depot, has on exhibition in the First National bank two plaques, specimens of china painting that are exquisite. They are souvenirs of Col. Theodore Roosevelt's chicken shooting days in North Dakota. One of the plaques represents the ex-president slipping up on a covey of chickens and in front of him are three dogs. The second plaque is of a pair of chickens with their heads up, evidently on the lookout for danger. The painter Mr. Costello, is 84 years of age and is an artist in every respect. The two plaques were painted only a few days ago.

CONCERNING WOMAN.

The W. C. T. U. offered a $5 prize for the best report written on the lecture recently delivered in this city by Mrs. Mary Harris Armor on "Temperance." Mrs. Armor is president of the Georgia association. The prize was won by Miss Mabel Melin, 14 years old, of West Duluth. The following is the report as written by Miss Melin:

"Mrs. Mary Harris Armor spoke briefly, but pointedly, upon the curse of drink, in her temperance lecture, Wednesday evening.

"She opened her lecture, by testifying to the truth of the declaration, that we can have almost anything we want, if we want it bad enough and when we want temperance to such an extent, that we determine to have it, we shall obtain it.

"She told of the immense number of lives lost through the use of liquor. Not only the ones who fill drunkard's graves, are those who lose their lives through intemperance. All the lives lost through railroad accidents, caused by someone taking a glass too many; all the cases of tuberculosis, which are either caused entirely or made greatly worse by the use of liquor; all the infants killed by being lain upon by drunken parents; all the diseases made fatal by the use of alcohol; and all the patients who lose their lives because the doctor's senses are benumbed by maybe only one glass of liquor, form part of the harvest of intemperance.

"She then spoke of the things the public must know in order to overthrow the liquor traffic. First, one must know the true nature of alcohol and know that he knows it, that no person can convince him that it is a healthful beverage. Liquor is a sense benumbing, habit forming drug, as much as morphine or cocaine. Mrs. Armor declared that if nine out of ten of the saloonkeepers and distillers knew the character of the stuff they were selling and brewing, they would cease making and selling the soul-destroying stuff.

"Mrs. Armor continued, that many people declare, that it would be an impossibility to do without the saloons, because of the license money, received from them each year. They think that the city must have this money or increase the rate of taxation upon the public. Mrs. Armor explained specifically, that the public loses, instead of gains by retaining the saloon, as the people must pay into the saloon, enough for the license, insurance, furnishing and building for the saloon, also homes and luxuries for the owner, before they pay a cent to the city. The saloonkeeper pays his license with the people's money and anyone, who upholds the saloon, but refuses to drink his share of liquor, is the meanest one in the bunch, as then some other man must buy enough to pay his share of the license. It was declared that Macon would go so deeply in debt that she would never recover if she adopted prohibition. She adopted it, nevertheless, and with a large debt on her hands at the time. At the end of the panic of 1908 she had $800,000 in her treasury while Jacksonville, another Georgia town of about the same size was deeply in debt without prohibition.

"She asked the audience to consider the cost and result of the saloons. They cost, besides the large amount of money paid into them, the character, reputation and eternal soul of many a son, a father and husband, bread needed for starving children and the broken hearts of hundreds of mothers and wives. The return for this great cost is nothing, absolutely nothing. The community loses rather than gains by the saloon.

"Mrs. Armor gave one of the reasons why some people favor local option, rather than county. They claim that the county folk ought to have no voice, as to whether there should be saloons or not, as they are placed in the towns. This objection is foundationless, unless the town people guarantee that no person of the country shall be injured by the saloons, and that the people shall not be molested by them, in any way.

"Mrs. Armor spoke of the honor given old soldiers. She said that the public would think her crazy if she should state that we owe as much to a drunkard. The soldier risks his life for his country and the drunkard gives his honor, reputation and eternal life for his country. He ought to be the most honored citizen we have. Some one must drink enough liquor to support and pay the saloonkeeper's license and the drunkard does more than anyone else, if this is the way to raise revenue.

"We would not say that it paid to buy liquor and pour it in the lake; but we think it pays to buy it and lose character and soul by drinking it.

"It is asked, what would be done with all the grain that is bought for liquor, if temperance prevailed and yet there are hundreds of children, starving for the want of it. If the grain were burned in a furnace, it is asked what would Uncle Sam do, but as long as men's souls and bodies are burned with it, it is considered just.

"Mrs. Armor spoke of the personal liberty league, which has formed to defeat prohibition. Liberty is in the name to attract the youth's attention as every young man loves the word, liberty. She declared that there is no personal liberty. As long as there has been a law or more than one human being there has been no such thing. Prohibition does not say, 'Thou shalt not drink,' but 'thou shalt not sell,' and it is a prevailing rule, that the wishes of a few must be ignored when the welfare of the majority is concerned; and temperance must come for the nation's own good.

"The opponents of prohibition declare that it is impossible to enforce a temperance law, and that prohibition would not prohibit. Georgia shows that her prohibition laws are enforced as well as any other laws, if not better. There is more money in her banks, and fewer drunks than before the state voted dry.

"Mrs. Armor, in closing, spoke of each one's individual responsibility, in overthrowing the liquor traffic. The only way to get rid of this responsibility is, not to shirk it, but to discharge it, by standing up for the cause and aiding to abolish the saloon.

"In a train collision the engineer who was guiltless of mistake or neglect arose, amid the ruin and suffering about him, and called to the people, about, that he was not at fault but was 'running on his orders.'" Mrs. Armor put the question to the listeners: 'Are you running on your orders? the orders of conscience and the right, in overthrowing the liquor traffic.'"

WORK NECESSARY TO HAPPINESS

By HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD.

As necessary a stepping stone to happiness as there is in the whole work is to be found in work—enough work, and not too much. When we murmur about our work, we seldom reflect how much more pitiful would be the condition of the most laborious among us if we were suddenly to be deprived of it. We often look upon it as a burden, when it is in reality a blessing in disguise.

We picture to ourselves how much happier we would be without it, and envy those who are born to a heritage of idleness, when we should be, in truth, the most wretched beings alive could we exchange places with them for a day. What an angel of mercy it has proved to many!

What a solace for vacant hours! What a panacea for troubles, sentimental or otherwise! Did not John Bunyan bless it, think you, in Bedford jail, where he beguiled the time with toiling over his "Pilgrim's Progress?" Has it not ministered to many a mind diseased, plucked from the heart many a rooted sorrow? Is it not the only sure antidote to ennui? a remedy against a host of ills to which flesh and spirit are heir? Has it not rendered us oblivious to injuries and neglect?

That the money value of work is not its ultimate charm is well attested by those who, having been hard workers for the greater portion of their lives, retire from business, expecting to enjoy themselves and their hard-earned wealth, but finding the weeks and months heavy upon their hands, finally resume their old habits of industry, having made the important discovery that they had been enjoying themselves all their days; that their true contentment was like the statue hidden in the marble block—something to be wrought out by toil; that work was the only talisman against low spirits and hypochondria.

We rarely, if ever, hear busy people complaining of megrims; they do not often swell the number of suicides. They have little time to spare for their neighbor's affairs, since the sincere worker must pin his mind to his work, if he would accomplish anything worth dignifying with the name, and not some slop-shop make-shift.

We some times feel that if we could only choose our work or exchange with another we should be better pleased and more successful; then we should become earnest in its pursuit; then should we cease to slight and slander it; then would our efforts be as spontaneous as the bird's song. But is it not wiser for us to do honestly that which falls in our way, if it be only to darn stockings or to scour knives, without waiting for anything more worthy of our strength or talents? Is it not a reproach to Him who assigns it to suppose it a mistake and something beneath our abilities, as well as a vanity in us, to imagine ourselves capable of more ambitious tasks? And are we not assured that

"Who sweeps a room as by God's laws,
Makes that and the action fine?"

THE EVENING STORY

MOROCCO BOUND.

By Arnold Goldsworthy.

"I've got a month's holiday due to me, captain," said Dixon, as he joined the circle around the open window in the smoking room. "I thought of a little trip to Morocco."

The captain gave a contemptuous laugh. "This is no time of the year for Morocco," he said, "though, curiously enough, I remember having been about 100 miles south of Fez in the hot season and nearly got frozen to death."

"Fell into the meat safe, perhaps," suggested Griggs.

"Rubbish!" exclaimed the captain. "What you young men want is to get rid of some of your suburban ideas. The world isn't all made up of places like East Orange and Hackensack. As I was saying, at the time I was in charge of a private yacht, and we were going from Gibraltar to Maderia. One night the owner wakes me up as I was asleep in my berth, and he says: 'Cap'n, he says, 'the yacht's surrounded by pirates and they're trying to get on board! What shall we do?' I told him to throw a boot at them and tell them to go away, never dreaming for a moment that they really were pirates. The next moment, however, I got an official alarm from the first officer, and in a moment I was up on deck in my shirt and trousers directing operations"

"Did you apologize to the pirates for being only half dressed?" inquired Dixon.

"In my family, sir," replied the captain, "we fight first and apologize afterwards, if there's anybody left to apologize to. I ran to the side of the ship, and there were five of those confounded pirates already there, while others were coming up from a boat below. So I started the fun by picking up the whole five just as they stood, and bunching them together, flung them into the water—"

"But you are not going to tell us that you can lift five men, captain?" interposed Griggs.

"I couldn't now, perhaps," said the captain. "But I'm speaking of forty years ago. What did ye suppose I should do—stand still and wait for them to hit me first? No, sir. As it happened, however, it didn't make much difference. There must have been a couple of hundred of the beggars on deck a moment later, and we Britishers only counted ten men, including the owner, who was down below hiding behind the beer cask. I had come up in such a hurry that I hadn't a weapon of any sort about me, but I managed to get hold of a capstan bar, and I must have downed at least a couple of dozen of the ruffians before all at once I found myself coming over quite giddy—"

"The effect of turning around and around to slosh the pirates, no doubt," suggested Dixon.

"No, it wasn't that," said the captain, missing the sarcasm of the remark. "I had been wounded, and didn't know it. As I lay on the deck I counted at least fifteen bullet wounds on my body, and, in the excitement of the moment, I hadn't felt one of them before. My right arm was broken in two places, and I reckoned that I must have killed at least three of the pirates with that broken arm. Of course, when the excitement of the fight had passed away I collapsed, and the next thing I knew was that I was in a stuffy little room in Tangiers with a couple of native doctors binding up my wounds. In two or three weeks I was as well and as fit as ever, though my right arm has been a bit stiff ever since. As soon as I was able to discuss business, a couple of pirates called on me and said I was to write to my government and say that if 1,000 pounds sterling wasn't paid down to the chief of the tribe they would cut off my ears, and then ask for 2,000 before sending along a few of my fingers and toes."

"Did they cut your ears off, captain?" inquired Griggs mischievously.

"How could they—I've got my ears now?" inquired the captain angrily.

"I thought, perhaps, they might have grown again," said Griggs, with an air of innocence.

"If you go on thinking like that you'll land in a lunatic asylum at the finish," said the captain sternly. "But, as I was saying, all I could do was to bluff the fellows into believing that I was such an important personage that the government would pay ten thousand for me with pleasure. After that, they were a little more civil to me, and I was allowed to go the whole length of the street. One night I went out and forgot to come back. There was a horse tethered to a post, and I jumped on his back and rode straight ahead till morning. I reckon I must have done a good 100 miles—"

"On one horse?" queried Dixon skeptically.

"Yes," said the captain. "I never rode more than one horse at a time in my life. I leave that sort of thing to the circus riders. I don't mind telling you, however, that the poor beast got a bit lame by daylight, but as I couldn't afford to lose any time, and didn't want to leave him behind me, I hoisted him on my shoulders and—"

"But you couldn't carry a horse like that," protested Griggs.

"What's the good of you saying I couldn't when I'm telling you that I did?" said the captain. "I carried him for two or three miles, and then he'd carry me for a mile or two, and so on, till we came to a big ravine. I was rather glad to see the place myself, because the sun was beginning to be so hot that it actually raised blisters on a leather belt I had round my waist. The ravine was very deep and very narrow, and, as we descended by a winding path I noticed the air getting cooler at every step—"

"Till you landed on the ice at the bottom, I suppose?" said Dixon.

"There may have been ice at the bottom," said the captain, "but I never got near it that I'm aware of. About half a mile down I felt it a bit difficult to breathe; and as there was no object in going on, I made up my mind to turn back. Just out of curiosity, however, I thought I would try and see how deep the ravine was by dropping a stone down. You can imagine my surprise—"

"And ours," said Griggs, playfully.

"You can imagine my surprise," the captain repeated, with a stern glance at the interrupter, "when I saw that stone gradually slowing up till it stopped altogether—"

"In midair?" Dixon asked, derisively.

"In midair," said the captain. "I saw then what the matter was. It was so cold about twenty feet below me that the air had got frozen into a kind of jelly, and it was as much as the stone could do to work its way through the top layer. I felt glad then that I hadn't gone on, because I'd have been choked very soon in an atmosphere like that. When I went back to where I left my horse, I found him in a terrible way. To begin with, he had never struck a temperature much lower than our summer heat before, but what was worrying him most just then was the fact that, owing to his standing still in that atmosphere, he had frozen stiff just at the moment when he had turned his head round to rub his nose against his haunches. I had to walk him out of that ravine sideways for a mile or so before he thawed down enough to be able to move along in the ordinary way. As soon as we were above ground again, however, he got all right, and he carried me to the coast in about thirty hours without a stop."

"If I got a map of the country, captain," said Girggs, "do you think you could locate that ravine for me? It seems to me there's a fortune for an ice cream merchant in that district."

"Humph!" growled the captain. "How do you suppose I could locate it when I was there without compass or map of any kind? I can only tell you that the place is within 100 miles or so of Fez; but that was years ago. An earthquake might have moved it by this time. Even if it is still there, you might search for a year and not find it."

"Or for a thousand years," said Dixon, "if it comes to that."

There was a brief pause during which the captain stared pointedly at bis empty glass. But as no one offered to fill it for him, he rose with a sigh and went out.

THE KITCHEN

Jams and Jellies.

Currant and Raspberry Jam—To every pound of (stalked) red currants allow a quarter of a pound of raspberries, and one pound lump sugar to each pound of fruit. Stir and boil gently for about three-quarters of an hour, stirring and skimming well.

Red Gooseberry Jam—Top and tail the gooseberries, put them in a preserving pan, stir well for three-quarters of an hour. Add the lump sugar broken small, allowing three-quarters of a pound to every pound of fruit. Continue boiling for twenty-five minutes long, or until well set.

Green Gooseberry Jam—Top and tail the gooseberries and put them in a preserving pan and boil for ten minutes. Add the same proportion of sugar, three-quarters to every pound of fruit, and boil for about twenty minutes, or until the jam is set.

Plum Jam — Make like green gage jam, taking from three-quarters to one pound sugar, according to the kind of plums used.

Damson Jam — Allow one pound of sugar to each pound of fruit. Stone the fruit and boil for about forty minutes, skimming constantly. Then add the sugar and boil for twenty minutes or longer until it is well set.

Blackberry Jam — Make like raspberry jam, using equal quantities of blackberries and sugar.

Red Currant Jelly — Stalk the currants and put them in a double saucepan until the juice is drawn out, or into a jar, which should be placed in a saucepan of boiling water. Strain the juice and allow one pound of loaf sugar to every pint. Put into a preserving pan, stir the jelly until it is well set, removing the skum as it rises.

Apple Jelly — Choose bright red apples. Put them in a preserving kettle, cover with water and cook for an hour or longer. Then strain the juice and to every pint of this juice allow three-quarters of a pound of sugar. Boil until the jelly is well set.

Apple Skin Jelly—If you are of a very economical turn of mind you may like to try making jelly out of the skins. Pour on enough boiling water to cover the skins well. Add one or two cloves and boil until reduced to one-half. Strain and to every pint allow one pound of sugar; boil till it will jelly, skimming well.

FADS OF THE FASHIONS

Dutch neck blouses of sheer white lawn, trimmed with lace embroidery, or not are buttoned in the back and at the side.

Poetically lovely stuff for evening gowns or separate blouses is so gauzy and cobwebby that the average person would call it chiffon, but it is called scarf silk, coming as it does with a deep double border producing a scarf effect. The colors are exquisite. A white "scarf" has borders of parsley tints, grays, pale rose, soft green and pale mauve and dull powder blue. A gray scarf has borders of yellow and pale rose. The tones look as if made by water colors.

* * *

A bathing dress of black peau de soie is trimmed simply and effectively by a band of black embroidered with yellow silk flowers. The band outlines the square neck, the short sleeves and the front of the dress from neck to hem.

* * *

A shady brimmed hat of natural tint and a fancy straw has a soft scarf and a big, soft knot of white soft satin as trimming.

* * *

White duck pumps come with a small bow and an ankle strap.

* * *

An emergency box is a boon to the camper or the household with girls and boys that summer far from the haunts of drug stores and doctors, nor it it to be despised by the automobilist who takes long tours. The box is neatness and compactness personified. It contains witch hazel, plaster, sterilized gauze bandages, salve and an antiseptic, safety pins and cotton.

* * *

Malines pins are of tiny pearls set in fine wires and twisted into loops and bowknots. The center of each bowknot is gemmed by a bit of gilt set with colored stones. These pins are used to secure the fluffy malines bow to the gown or hat.

* * *

Fine edgings are used on frills of net, malines by itself is going into ruffs and flat shoulder scarfs.

NAVAL OCTOPUS IS SUGGESTED TO WOOD.

Washington, Aug. 26.—In the intervals between the transaction of such business as preparation of his annual estimates, writing of his annual report and supervising relief from the army to the forest fires in the Northwest, Gen. Leonard Wood, chief of staff of the army, has had his attention called to a novel method of naval warfare. An inventor sent to his office designs of a gigantic submarine boat, capable of approaching a fleet under water, at the psychological moment flapping a huge wing over an unsuspecting battleship, dragging it down to the bottom of the ocean, and holding the vessel there until its crew was "drowned."

Gen. Wood has forwarded the plan to the navy department.

THIEVES TURN ON THE GAS

Try Asphyxiation to Keep House Quiet While They Ransack It.

Burglar Drops Bureau Drawer and Awakens Woman Who Screams.

Green Farms, Conn., Aug. 26.—Burglars, while trying to rob the summer home of Mr. Charles E. Bedford, manager of the marine oil department of the Standard Oil company, in the summer colony here, nearly asphixiated Mr. Bedford, his three children, a nurse and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lewis, visitors, by turning on the gas in the rooms in which they were sleeping in order to render them insensible and prevent detection.

That the household was not overcome was due to the bungling of one of the burglars, who dropped the drawer of a bureau and aroused Mrs. Lewis. She was dazed to such an extent by the gas that she scarcely knew what was happening. She faintly realized, she said, that the room was in disorder and that a stranger was in it. Thereupon she screamed, awakening Mr. Bedford, Mr. Lewis and the others. All were so seriously affected by the fumes that they were hardly able to get out of bed.

Mr. Bedford believes that Mrs. Lewis saved the lives of all in the house by screaming when she did. He is convinced that the thieves would have left the house without turning off the gas and that all would have been asphixiated.

Made Safe Getaway.

The commotion which followed the awakening of Mrs. Lewis and the weakened condition of her husband and Mr. Bedford permitted the escape of the burglars. Silverware and jewelry valued at several thousand dollars was found in a hallway ready to be carried away by the thieves.

Although hurried calls were sent by Mr. Bedford for physicians, none could be found to attend those who had been overcome, and when medical aid arrived the next day all had recovered.

All of the occupants of the house were asleep when the burglars climbed one of the posts supporting an awning extending over the veranda. From the veranda roof the burglars crept around to an open window at the side of the house and into the room in which Mr. and Mrs. Lewis were asleep. Mr. Bedford was asleep in the adjoining room and in the next room were two of his children, Herbert and Charles. On the same floor, but at the rear of the house, Mr. Bedford's daughter, Gladys, and a nurse slept in separate rooms.

Took Out the Tips.

The burglars stopped in the room occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Lewis only long enough to remove the tip from each of the two gas jets and then turn the cock on full. This was done in all of the other sleeping rooms without awakening any of the occupants.

From the second floor the burglars went downstairs and made preparations to ransack the house. Despite the precautions they had taken to insure stupefying every occupant of the house they carefully unlocked all of the doors leading from it on the ground floor, apparently to escape the more easily if discovered.

Apparently satisfied with their exploration of the first floor and the value of the booty to be obtained there, one of the men returned to the room in which Mr. and Mrs. Lewis were asleep.

Mrs. Lewis is ordinarily a very light sleeper, and although almost overcome by gas, she was awakened at the noise made by the man in her room when he attempted to open the drawer of a bureau in which considerable jewelry was kept. She screamed and attempted to awaken Mr. Lewis, but could not arouse him.

Got Small Change and Cigars.

At the sound of Mrs. Lewis' voice the burglar dashed from the room and ran down stairs, escaping by way of the front door. It was several minutes before Mrs. Lewis succeeded in arousing her husband. About the same time Mr. Bedford, who had heard her screams, succeeded in dragging himself from his room, but before either of the men could raise an alarm the burglars had disappeared. It is the belief of Mr. Bedford that the burglars had an automobile waiting a short distance from his home.

They neglected to remove any of the valuables, which had been packed in the hallway. All that the burglars succeeded in carrying away was a small amount of cash taken from Mr. Lewis' clothing and some of Mr. Bedford's cigars.

WHISTLED LOVE FAILS TO HOLD

Railroad Romance Ends in Pennsylvania Divorce Court.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 26.—One of the most sensational romances in the history of Western Pennsylvania was shattered when, in the courts of Washington county, Mrs. Rose Cage entered suit for divorce against an engineer on the Washington & Waynesburg railroad.

Mrs. Cage six years ago was Miss Georgia Dunn, daughter of Thomas Dunn, a rich land owner for whom Dunn's Station, on the Washington & Waynesburg railroad, was named.

The road ran close to the Dunn house, and the daughter of the household became interested in Cage, the engineer who pulled the solitary train over the forty-mile line twice each way daily. Cage was forbidden the Dunn house, but the pair arranged a system of signals, he with his locomotive whistle, the maid with her apron by day and a lantern by night.

By this system they arranged to elope, which they did on July 5, 1905, going to Cumberland, Md. Miss Dunn on this occasion climbed to the engine and rode with her lover to Washington Pa., where they took a train for Cumberland.

NEW INDICTMENTS AGAINST CASHIER.

New York, Aug. 26.—The grand jury yesterday returned additional indictments against Erwin J. Wider, former cashier of the Russo-Chinese bank. The new indictments charge the larceny of $89,600 of Pennsylvania railroad bonds, $11,000 of New York Central bonds and $109,000 of Baltimore & Ohio bonds.

DOPE THE WEAK; MORE INSANITY

Doctor Tells Theory as to the Increase in Number of Insane.

New York, Aug. 26.—Dr. Albert W. Ferris, president of the New York Lunacy commission, thinks that one of the chief causes of the increased number of insane in the United States is to be found in the increased longevity of the race.

"Attention," he says, "has been drawn to the fact that the race is longer lived. In 1840 the average age at death was about 25 years. In 1900 the average age increased to 34.5 years, thus bringing more people into the third decade of life, which is the most fruitful decade for insanity.

"The number of insane properly to be expected in 1900, deduced from this basis of deaths and age distribution in 1840, is 27.8 per cent greater than in 1840.

"Thus do the refinements of medicine, so unfortunately for the race and so satisfactorily for the individual. prop up and fortify young people with feeble constitutions until they can marry, thus aiding in the service of the unfit and augmenting the number of insane patients."

BABY BORN ON TRAIN.

Stork Catches Up With New York Central's Fast Mail.

Syracuse, N. Y., Aug. 26.—Just before the fast mail from the East on the New York Central reached this city this afternoon Mrs. Peter Metzewasi of Oswego whispered to a woman passenger. The conductor was hastily summoned and search for a doctor made. None was on the train, but a gray-haired nurse volunteered her aid.

A comfortable couch was made of car seats, baggage, etc., and before the train rolled into this city Mrs. Metzowasi gave birth to a lusty boy. Bags were searched and a very serviceable wardrobe gathered. A Westerner passed the hat and raised a good sum of money for the mother. An ambulance took the mother and child to a local hospital, where both are doing finely.

RIVALS GET LICENSES

New Jersey Girl's Name on Two Legal Permits to Marry.

She Is Seeking Lawyer's Advice---Suitors Remain in Doubt.

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 26.—Miss Isabelle Conroy, a pretty Trenton girl, is facing one of the most serious problems of her career, inasmuch as two young men are carrying marriage licenses on each of which is inscribed her name.

Edward Billings and Arthur Denis, two well know youths, both press their claims to Miss Conroy. Both have shown the licenses to Miss Conroy, but she has not as yet announced her intentions, telling both suitors she is going to consult a lawyer and act upon his advice.

The girl admits that she cares a whole lot for both young men, but says her affections for them are equally divided. She intimates that she would make no objection to marrying one of them, but says she doesn't think it would be proper to take both.

Didn't Let Them Meet.

"Didn't you encourage both of them?" This question was asked Miss Conroy by a reporter.

"I liked both the boys and they came to see me frequently, but I arranged their visits so that they would not meet," was the girl's reply. She added that the thought one of them would propose, but says she had no idea that both would rush off and get marriage licenses without consulting her.

Billings declares that he has courted Miss Conroy for six months and says that, while he never actually "popped" the question, he took it for granted that he was the only suitor and that she was ready to marry him.

"Why, the night before I got the license," he said, "we talked as though everything was arranged. She kissed me and told me that she didn't care if I didn't have such a big income."

Never Really Popped.

Dennis also admits that he never asked Miss Conroy to be his wife, but he avers that she had given him to understand that she considered herself engaged to him.

"I was so sure of her," declared Dennis, "that after taking out the marriage license in regular form I engaged a minister and paid him his fee in advance."

The first time the suitors met at the Conroy house was when they went to present Miss Conroy with ther respective marriage licenses. She fainted when both exhibited the documents. The registrar who issued the licenses believed that there were two girls bearing the same name.

BOYS GO WELL HEELED.

Pair Start for the Wilds of Missouri But Are Caught.

Richmond, Ind., Aug. 26.—Prompted, it is believed, by the thrilling narratives of the "yellow backs," Elmer Williams, aged 16, and a companion whose name is unknown, secured a boat, loaded it with four revolvers, one rifle, two bowie knives, ammunition, rubber blankets and other supposed necessities, and started on a trip to Missouri via the Whitewater river. Disappearance of the boat caused complaint to the police, and when the invading party reached Abington, a few miles south, Williams was apprehended, his companion escaping.

FATE RELENTS FOR MUSICIAN

Paralysis Is Relieved That He May Play Once More Befor Death.

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 26.—When Frank W. H. Bracht, 65 years of age, a pioneer orchardist and rancher of Spokane county, died at his country home, ten miles east of here, the career of a musician of international reputation came to a close. The funeral was under the direction of Oriental lodge No. 74, of the Masonic order and was also attended by officers and members of Spokane lodge No. 228, B. P. O. E., of which he was a member.

Bracht, a native of Germany, was decorated by the emperor for service as leader of a military band in the Thirty Years' war, and was also honored by Napoleon III. In this country he served as acting leader of the Theodore Thomas symphony orchestra, also touring Europe twice as leader of Gilmore's band, and served as director of the orchestra at the Metropolitan opera house in New York for a time.

Seated at Piano.

The aged musician suffered a stroke of paralysis on Aug. 10 and until an hour before he passed away he was unable to lift a finger. Then he pleaded to be permitted to sit at the piano once more. His son, Edmund W. Bracht, who had just returned from Alaska, carried him to the instrument, where he sat about ten minutes. Tears welled to the old musician's eyes as his frail fingers strayed over the keyboard, picking out snatches of his favorite compositions. Soon afterward, when returned to his bed, the end came.

Bracht came to Spokane in the early '80s and here married Miss Mary Schulein of Peoria, Ill. He was engaged in the music business here for many years. He was elected commissioner of Spokane county in 1898 and served two terms as chairman of the board. When he retired he refused to be a candidate for nominations for the mayoralty of Spokane or for congress and instead retired to his ranch. He is survived by his widow, two sons, Edmund W. and Frank, and a daughter, Alina.

TELL FISH STORY THAT SHOULD WIN

Pennsylvania Man's Friends Say That He Hooked a Beer Keg.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Aug. 26.—Friends of Clerk of Courts R. M. Keiser, who has returned from Lake Winola, where he was fishing, declare that he made a phenomenal catch. Getting a bite, he pulled hard, but could not budge his line for some time. Then he slowly hauled to the surface a beerkeg.

A small bass had taken his bait and had dashed through the bunghole of the keg in an effort to escape. Anxious to get the fish, Keiser broke open the keg and was surprised to find in it a fifteen-inch pike.

A farmer said the keg was thrown into the lake ten years ago by some picnickers.

MAY YOHE IS STRICKEN.

Lady Hope's Singing Career Probably Closed By Paralysis.

San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 26.—May Yohe (Lady Hope) suddenly collapsed while singing in one of the downtown cafes, where she began an engagement several weeks ago. Physicians announced that she is suffering from temporary paralysis affecting one side of her body, and it is feared her public career is ended. The collapse come while Miss Yohe was in the middle of her act and when the place was crowded.

"HANDSOME HARRY" SENT TO ALMSHOUSE.

New York, Aug. 26.—Harry Mylette, an old-time clown who was once known to circusgoers from the Atlantic to the Pacific as "Handsome Harry," has been committed to the New York almshouse. He has been crippled for many years, and when his slender savings gave out he became a public charge.

Mylette received his injuries at a performance at which President Garfield attended. The clown tried to excel himself, and in one of his feats, a leap over three elephants, misjudged the distance and fell between two of them. He recovered sufficiently to return to the ring, but was never so clever again.

At one time he received a salary of $1,000 a week.

Alleged Confidence Man Held.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 26.—George Barnett, who is said to have attempted to relieve E. M. Brown, an aged Montana merchant of $1,200 in a Northern Pacific coach Tuesday morning, was held for the grand jury by Judge Finehout. His bail was fixed at $1,500.

POPE DISAPPROVES.

Instructs Bishops to Publish Letters Against Fashions in Dress.

London, Aug. 26.—A dispatch received from Rome states that Pope Pius & has requested all bishops to publish pastoral letters disapproving of the prevailing feminine fashions. Several Italian bishops, says the dispatch, have already done so at Milan, Turin and Venice. At these places the priests are denouncing in the churches the "scandalous attire" in which women have been appearing in public.

FAIR

Duluth shivered again last night when the temperature dropped to 46 deg., making a new low mark for this summer. The clouds were chased away yesterday afternoon, however, the sun is shining this morning and the weather man holds out a promise of fair weather with rising temperature for tonight and tomorrow. Fine weather prevailed a year ago today.

The sun rose this morning at 5:19 and it will set at 7 o'clock, giving thirteen hours and forty-one minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"The storm central yesterday morning over northern Lake Michigan has moved its center to the lower St. Lawrence valley, its easterly advance resulting in strong westerly winds and light to heavy showers in the lake region, Ohio and St. Lawrence valleys. Another disturbance overlying the Gulf of Mexico caused light to heavy showers over that section. The Wyoming high pressure has advanced southeastward to Kansas and has caused much cooler weather throughout the lake region, the Ohio, Mississippi and lower Missouri valleys and Texas. Falling pressures in the Northwest and Rocky mountain region are attended by rising temperature. Generally clear and somewhat warmer weather may be expected at the Head of the Lakes, this afternoon, tonight and Saturday. Light frosts occurred this morning in Minnesota and the Dakotas."

PARK POINT PROTESTS

Ire of Residents Aroused By Closing of Radisson School.

Declare That Whittier School Should Be Condemned as Fire Trap.

At a well attended meeting at the Mission hall, Twenty-eighth street, Park Point, last night, the people of that suburb took a decided stand against the closing of the Radisson school and a committee consisting of J. H. Cook, W. L. Jackon, Rev. A. H. Wurtele, R. G. Roberts and George H. Miles was appoitned to attend the meeting of the board of education today to present the claims of the people to the board.

The sense of last night's meeting was that the Radisson school should be kept open for instruction in at least six grades and Rev. A. H. Wurtele offered the use of the Mission hall for the housing of the Seventh and Eighth grades. Resolutions were adopted attacking the accommodations and sanitary condition of the Whittier school and protesting against alleged discrimination on the part of the board in closing the Radisson school.

The meeting was addressed by J. H. Cook, Rev. A. H. Wurtele, J. W. Marvin, J. H. Richardson, W. L. Jackson and several others. It was stated that the board is deliberately discriminating against Park Point in closing the Radisson school, that Park Point is paying about $2,000 more taxes for school purposes than some other districts which have adequate school facilities and that the free street car fare for the children to attend the Whittier school is not a solution of the problem.

It was stated at the meeting that there are 125 pupils in the Radisson school district and that many of them attend school across the canal, their parents not considering the Whittier school a proper place to send them.

Seats Already Removed.

Some indignation was expressed that the seats have already been removed from the Radisson school to the Whittier school, despite the fact that the board had decided to give the Park Point residents a hearing. Stress was also laid on the fact that the action of the board in deciding to close the Radisson school was a direct contradiction of the action last February in deciding to add three grades to the school and improve the building.

The resolution adopted last night follows:

"Duluth, Minn., Aug. 25, 1910.—To the Honorable Board, Independent School District No. 1, Duluth, Minn.—Gentlemen: We, the undersigned residents, parents and taxpayers of that portion of Duluth known as Park Point do most repectfully submit the following, that the board may be advised of our position:

"We contend that your honorable body in its seeking in good faith to solve the intricate problems of protecting the rights of all parts of the city and give adequate school advantages to all sections, handicapped by working with inadequate revenue to meet all the demands and keep the sum necessarily expended within the amount all too heavy on the taxpayer, your honorable body, however, has unjustly discriminated against Park Point, in that our children are compelled to attend school in a most inferior and inadequate building, without modern or proper heating, ventilation or sanitarily constructed sewage. Complaints are made by our children of this condition existing in the Whittier building to the extent that children have fainted from its extreme nauseating effect. The building is a firetrap and located at a point where fire protection is the poorest in the city owing to the location of the canal, and it should be the nearest fireproof. Also adequate provision for for proper exit instead of the present entrance, located immediately over the furnace room at a point at which fire is most likely to originate. This building was built for conditions and a population of twenty years ago and should have long since been condemned to follow other buildings in the city of its antiquated kind.

"In the board's action in closing up the Radisson school we must protest. Inadequate as that building is for the demands on its capacity, it would be far wiser to keep it open for the scholars, including those of the sixth grade living below the street car barn than to dump them upon the Whittier building, thus increasing the hazard to life, health and morals of our children by overcrowding. We contend that free car fare to and from school once a day does not justify the condition for those of us who live below Eighteenth street, nor do we feel the board should compel us to choose between sending our little ones who are in those lower grades away from home to be gone all day and be kept in a building of the Whittier class. The noon intermission extending from one and a half to two hours for the little folks, is too long a period for them to be left alone to their own resources. They should be at home and our only alternative is to keep them at home. Thus many will miss public school privileges. From a taxpayer's point of view we protest. Our property values are affected by good or poor school facilities. Many residents who can will leave Park Point if the board persists in its present policy, and many of the element desired are influenced by the reason of school conditions to make their residence elsewhere who, but for its school would select Park Point for a home. This is an unjust condition, for the assessed valuation of property southerly of the canal is $478,882 and we pay in taxes approximately $19,000 and of this amount your board will receive approximately $7,500. Exact figures cannot be given as the rate has not as yet been fixed. However, the board knows these figures can hardly be lowered from the amount of 1909.

"It is safe to say if other districts in the city were all paying as well, and who get the best service and buildings, the board would not have so many hard problems to solve. To compare valuations with other districts might be odious to some of the board, and we will just mention one district, what is knowon as Woodland district, comprising Hunters Park, six divisions of Glen Avon, Princeton Place, and the five divisions of Woodland, and will only say that Park Point is paying your board $2,000 a year more than the district named.

"All of which is respectfully submitted, feeling a confidence in the fairmindedness of the members of the Duluth school board, and that we of Park Point need have no fear that we will have to look further for justice and a square deal, and hoping that the action of the board will prove that our confidence has not been misplaced, we anxiously await your action."

La Follette Claims President, Despite Denials, Is Fighting Him.

Madison, Wis., Aug. 26.—A recent dispatch from Beverly, which stated that the president was not fostering any of the fights being made within the states by "regulars" against "insurgents" or "progressive" candidates, is believed here to be the inspiration of a leading editorial in La Follette's magazine of this week. In the editorial Senator La Follette declares that in Wisconsin, at least, the federal administration is back of the fight on himself and on the congressional and state candidates supporting him by running under his banner.

"Let the truth be plainly stated. Let the president stand out in the open. The administration has presumed to read Republicans out of the party for voting their honest convictions on legislation."

MURDERERS OF YANKEE MILL BOSS PUNISHED.

Washington, Aug. 26.—As a final chapter to the story of the murder of William R. Boggs, Jr., of Winston Salem, N. C., in Durango, Mex., on Nov. 28, 1907, the state department has just been advised by its consular representatives at Durango that one Jesus Monarres had been sentenced to death, and one Emilio Montenegro to imprisonment for ten years for the murder of Boggs.

Boggs was superintendent of the Topia Mining company and enforcing discipline at the mill when he incurred the enmity of several employes, notably Monarres, who was known to be selling liquor to men employed on night duty.

After nightfall on the road from the office to his boarding house, Boggs was waylaid, felled by a stone and his skull crushed.

HOTEL MEN BAR BARS AT THEIR CONVENTIONS.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 26.—Hotel stewards have set an example to convention gatherings by abolishing the drinking feature of their annual meetings. Whether the action was intended to be exemplary, or "because we can get all we want at home at wholesale prices," as was argued in the debate, is not expressly stated, but a resolution was adopted at the closing session of the International Stewards' association doing away with the temporary bar rooms established at their conventions, both state and general.

Chicago was chosen for the next convention.

THE GREAT QUESTION.

Underlying all issues of standpatism and insurgency, of Democracy and Republicanism, of progress and stagnation, is a fundamental need which Col. Roosevelt thus truly expressed in one of his speeches yesterday:

> The great question we have to face is to shape things so that every American citizen shall have a fair chance to earn his living and lead his life under the best and most favorable conditions, that he shall be protected in his rights and prevented from wronging others in turn.

That is characteristic Roosevelt doctrine, and in a large way it explains both his popularity and the hatred he has earned in certain quarters.

Roosevelt is popular among the masses of the people because he stands for their deepest aspiration toward real democracy and real government by and for the people.

Roosevelt is hated by Special Privilege and its beneficiaries for exactly the same reason.

Roosevelt is not the creator of today's irresistible impulse toward a purer democracy, toward the "square deal" for every man. In a larger sense he is the creation of that impulse. It was given to him, by virtue of a rugged firmness of character and a keenness of vision that few men possess, to express that which seethed, strongly felt but unexpressed, in the mind of every true citizen. That, and that only, is the secret of his popularity.

The great question this country has to face is indeed, as Roosevelt says, how to "shape things so that every American citizen shall have a fair chance to earn his living and lead his life under the best and most favorable conditions." When men are not only willing but eager to work for their living, and yet must tramp the pitiless streets in a bitter and unavailing search for the opportunity to coin their willing muscles into bread for themselves and their families, while a handful of other men riot in the greatest luxury the world ever knew, society has failed of its full duty to itself and to those who compose it, and the republic has failed to rise to the height of its splendid opportunity of service to humanity.

To awaken society to its duty to its members; to lead the republic away from the service of the few and into the service of the many; to scourge out of the temple of the law the wretched vassals of greed who have prostituted their offices and betrayed the people; to help to put in their places men of clean minds and strong hearts who will serve their fellow-beings and ask no greater reward than the glory of that service—the greatest thing in all the world, and the thing that alone makes life worth living; to do these services to God and man and country is to live truly the life that is given and to realize the power and the glory that is within.

Such service is needed, and such leaders must arise, if this country is to solve this vital and menacing question of how to "shape things so that every American citizen shall have a fair chance to earn his living and lead his life under the best and most favorable conditions."

The aim of solving that question is platform enough for any party, motive enough for any patriot, and ambition enough for any man who wishes to make his life worth while to his fellows.

THE PAY OF LAWMAKERS.

T. P. O'Connor, in a dispatch to a Boston newspaper, notes the near approach of the day when salaries will be voted to members of parliament, and when this is done Great Britain will have taken another step in the upward path of democracy.

Depriving lawmakers of pay for their work is a cunning device in the interests of the propertied classes. It is easy to get men of property to serve as members of parliament without pay, because they are guarding their own interests and can well afford to do it free. It is hard to get representatives of the disinherited masses to serve without pay, because they must live while they serve.

The only way the disinherited could keep representatives in parliament was by public subscriptions to provide enough to keep them. The Irish people, at home and abroad, have been under heavy expense to keep their four-score of home rule representatives in parliament. The labor unions have voted funds to maintain their representatives. John Burns, until he began to draw pay as a member of the cabinet, was supported by the labor unions, which paid him regularly the pound or so a week that he had earned as a stationary engineer before he was elected.

Now, however, the courts have ruled that labor unions have no right to vote money for the support of their representatives in parliament.

The effect of this ruling is to deny to the labor unions their right to representation in parliament. Few of their members can afford to serve without pay, and they cannot trust those who might offer themselves at their own expense.

Mr. O'Connor correctly judges that this ruling will force again to the front the old proposal that members of parliament shall be paid out of the national treasury; and when this action is taken Great Britain will have made as great an advance in democracy as it made when it loosened the property restrictions about the franchise.

If this step is taken, another will be necessary. Expenses of conducting elections—not campaigns, but elections—will have to be borne by the national treasury instead of by the candidates and their supporters, as at present.

So accustomed are the people of this country to having lawmakers paid out of the public treasury and election expenses provided for in the same way, that it doubtless will surprise many to find that Great Britain has no provision for conducting elections at public expense, and it will surprise some to learn that British lawmakers serve without pay.

Elections in this country have been held at public expense as a matter of course, and lawmakers have been paid out of the public treasury equally as a matter of course. The pay is not lavish. Though national lawmakers get enough since they raised their pay from $5,000 to $7,500 a year, state lawmakers, as a rule are paid but poorly. In few states does the pay cover campaign expenses and living expenses during the session. In most states it would pay the people to provide compensation large enough to cover expenses, at least.

However, any pay is better than no pay at all, for the no-pay system tends to restrict representation to the moneyed classes and to refuse representation to the disinherited masses whose advocates are usually slender of purse.

SWITZERLAND'S BOSS.

It is amazing to hear that Switzerland has a "boss." That country is pretty nearly the birthplace of popular government. From Geneva came the impulse that framed the English convenants, from the covenants came the American Constitutions, and from the American Constitutions real democracy is slowly taking form.

Switzerland, too, is the home of the initiative, the referendum and the recall, those primary tools of real democracy which in most places have been reserved for the last, but which will one time come into play everywhere.

So its is astonishing to find that Switzerland has a boss, and that he is a boss in every accepted sense of the term.

In a current magazine George Judson King describes this boss. Python is his name, and he rules in the canton of Fribourg. According to a university professor quoted by Mr. King, "M. Python is master of this canton, which he holds in the hollow of his hand. Nothing is done unless he first approves—appointments, elections of candidates, all legislation—everything. The people have nothing to say—but he helps our university."

How like a real American boss that is! If he were the ruler of an American city, he would be the chosen representative of a Tammany, the friend of contractors, the adviser of lawbreakers. If he were the boss of an American state, he would probably be the general counsel of a railroad, and a sort of brother-in-law of other large corporate interests. In either event he would work with other bosses in other cities and states in the operation of a system which reaches from the United States senate to the legislatures and the city councils.

But M. Python is a banker. He controls the two principal banks of the canton. This control of credit enables him to dictate the political attitude of business men, and through them to influence the working people. Friendly politicians are favored with banking privileges that are denied to others; wherefore it pays to be a friendly politician. Python, of course, controls nominations. Every public place, including positions in the university and excepting only the official mole catchers, are parts of his political machine. His task, says Mr. King, grows easier and easier, for the people, long aware of the seeming impregnability of his control, have grown apathetic and no longer are inclined to revolt against his rule, if they ever were.

It is interesting to find that the boss is not wholly an American institution. It will be interesting to bosses to hear of the success of this Swiss boss, especially now that American bosses find their machines losing their old-time efficiency.

But how can bossism survive in the same atmosphere with your boasted initiative and referendum, much vaunted tools of real democracy? This natural inquiry comes from those who hold real democracy to be a ridiculous infringement upon the preserves of the ruling classes.

Curiously enough, Fribourg is the only canton in Switzerland that does not have the initiative and the referendum.

Curiously enough, Python is the only boss in Switzerland, and Fribourg the only boss-ridden canton.

THE FRUIT OF AN ILL WIND.

Local stories in The Herald to the effect that large blocks of timber that were burned over by forest fires this summer will have to be cut this winter, show again that it is indeed an ill wind that blows nobody good, for these announcements mean that there will be a large demand for logging and sawmill workers this winter.

Green timber that is burned over is not destroyed, as a rule, except a small fraction of the stand. However, it is killed and must be logged at once if it is to be saved. Hence the announcements that the Oliver Mining company will cut more than 100,000,000 feet of timber this winter, and that other large owners of timber will be compelled to cut during the next season timber that they had not expected to clean up for years to come.

On the side of gain there is the employment of unusually large numbers of workmen in cutting and sawing the timber. On the side of loss is the fact that some timber has been destroyed, and that to cut in a single season a stand of timber that would have been cut in half a dozen seasons had it not been for the fires, increases the expense of logging operations.

Still more on the side of loss is the fact that the process of denuding the forests is hastened, and the further fact that the fires which made it necessary to cut these vast timber stands at once undoubtedly killed large quantities of young and growing trees that are yet too small to be available for commercial uses.

However, it is not all loss so long as a prosperous winter is assured for those who gain their livelihood from logging and sawing operations.

The Big Stick is swinging, and the force of its sweep proves that the Colonel, at least, was able to "come back."

The tang of frost in the air yesterday was merely a gentle hint of the many glorious sun-warmed, frost-invigorated days to come.

Roosevelt's reiteration of the fact that "no lion did its duty" has the sound of a false note of vainglory. What a man he would be if he had the virtue of humility!

(Readers of The Herald are invited to make free use of this column to express their ideas about the topics of general interest. Letters should not exceed 300 words—the shorter the better. A signed letter is always more effective, however.)

COMMISSION HOUSES NEED ATTENTION.

To the Editor of The Herald:

In an article appearing in the Thursday morning Tribune and headed "Says Union Depot Reeks With Filth" Dr. Webster, health commissioner, is applauded, and the applause is due him, but, there are other places in the city more needing the attention of the health commissioner and which said commissioner has refused to better.

The attention of Dr. Webster was personally called to the condition of some of the places on commission row where chickens, ducks, geese and pigs are continually housed and where the stench coming from such places has to a certainty menaced the health of those occupying surrounding and adjoining buildings.

When these conditions were brought to the attention of Dr. Webster he investigated same, and stated that he found that it would be impossible for him to prevent these people from keeping the above mentioned live stock and fowl as it would be interfering with their business. He was then asked what he would do in case he found some one living on the side of the hill in the vicinity of Twelfth street, keeping half a dozen hogs for their own use or for sale, to which he replied that he would compel the parties to remove same as it would be violating the ordinances of the city.

Will Dr. Webster, or anyone who feels so inclined, state through these columns where the difference is in keeping a place which is a menace to public health, whether on Michigan or Twelfth street and also state whether it is proper for Dr. Webster, in his official capacity, to discriminate in this matter.

THE NEW THEATER AND ITS PRICES.

To the Editor of The Herald:

While a good many words of praise have been said and written about the new Orpheum and that Duluthians should be proud of such house, etc., one fact was overlooked, and that is the prices of admission. I do not propose to regulate their prices, but I must say that, Duluthians are not getting a square deal in prices, as compared with prices of other large cities where the Orpheum is showing. I do not see why they can not afford a 25 cent matinee on Sunday as well as any other day. If Minneapolis and St. Paul are getting it why can't Duluth? Their prices read matinees 25 cents except Sunday. Why take advantage of people who cannot attend the show on any other day except Sunday? And that class of people are generally the ones that can not afford much but, will spend 25 cents to see the Orpheum. If the Orpheum people expect the Duluthian's support, let them do what is right and reduce their prices.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Railroad Crisis Met.

Life: "Gentlemen, we must retrench."

The president of the great railroad faced the board of directors. Every face there blanched at the thought.

"Yes," he continued, "something must be done to maintain our reputation for integrity and for that sound and conservative business policy which has been one of our distinguished traits. For, I regret to say, the interstate commerce commission does not understand or appreciate our condition. The cost of living has increased so much that alas! I fear disaster, in view of the fact that we are not permitted to raise our rates. Gentlemen, something must be done."

All eyes were turned to the speaker. At last, with a voice that trembled with emotion, one of the directors leaned forward.

"What can you suggest?" he whispered hoarsely.

"I fear the worst. We must cut our dividend."

A deathly silence ensued. It was felt that the fate of several steam yachts was in the balance. Every man there instantly realized what it would mean.

"Can nothing else be done?"

"Nothing."

Another director leaned forward.

"Gentlemen," he whispered, "let us defer this until, say, day after tomorrow. This will give us time to sell out our holdings at the present prices and buy them back very much lower after this dreadful news has passed out."

One by one they shook his hand.

The Great Man.

They said that his lips were white-hot with the touch
Of a coal from some fire divine;
They said that his will was of iron—he stood
For the Cause and hewed straight to the line;
They said that his courage was born of the God
That was in him, directing his might;
They said that his torch was a heavenly flame
To guide a vast people aright.
But, in his own heart, he was conscious each hour
That the faith of a woman was suckling his pow'r.

The Incurable Boy.

James Douglas, in London Opinion: Boyhood is an incurable disease.

His boyishness is the poetry of his soul breaking out.

If we could cure boys of boyishness how dull life would be.

The boy instinctively foils all attempts to standardize his personality.

He will have wild moments of lyrical revolt against the uniformity of things.

It is easier to make a boy suit your habits than to make your habits suit him.

There is very little fun to be got out of doing the things you are allowed to do.

He experiments with existence and tries to discover how much of him it will stand.

There are so many things that they may not do that boyhood is a sort of prohibition state.

There is a pure and beautiful joy in smashing a window which one never recaptures in after life.

There is no cure for a well-spent youth and there is no remorse so bitter as the remorse of the repentant prig.

Just as the Irish members used to learn the rules of procedure by breaking them, so our boys learn the rules of life by breaking them.

When a Chicago pig walks into the machine he is a pig. When he comes out he is a sausage. A boy can walk into any educational machine and come out a boy.

A MOMENT WITH THE WITS.

Chicago News: Little Eddie—Say, pa, do political enemies belong to different parties?

Pa—No, my son; they belong to different factions of the same party.

Lustige Blaetter: Town Child—What's that, father?

Father—A windmill.

Child—Where they start the winds, I suppose?

The Widow: "Brown has wired me to send him up some fishing tackle."

"A nuisance, isn't it?"

"No, that isn't it; but I can't remember whether he favors Scotch or rye."

Puck: Rich Man—Well, what is the result

Secretary—Our advertising chemists have carefully examined the prospectus of the Goldbrick Mining company and say that it shows about 5 per cent traces of veracity.

New York Sun: Damocles saw the sword suspended by a hair.

"Shucks," he cried, "my buttons have hung that way for months."

Thus it may be inferred that he was married.

Boston Transcript: She (pouting)—Today I am 23 and you haven't wished me many happy returns of the day.

He—No; don't you think you've had returns enough of your twenty-third birthday?

Philadelphia Ledger: "Don't you think it foolish for a country no richer than Brazil to buy a $14,500,000 battleship?"

"I'm not in a position to be critical. Fact is, I just bought an automobile myself."

Chicago News: Mrs. Newed—Oh, John, I baked a cake this morning and set it on the window sill and a tramp came along and stole it. I feel like crying.

Newed—Oh, don't cry. One tramp less in the world doesn't matter.

Scraps: Young Sparker—Bobby, tell me (handing him sixpence) how many fellows have been to see Ethel this week?

Bobby (aged 6)—Let's see—four.

"That doesn't include me, does it?"

"No; I heard sis say you don't count."

Chicago Post: "I will say this for your place," remarks the newly arrived scientist, "it is thoroughly disinfected by natural means."

"You think so?" asks Mephisto. "Certainly. Burning sulphur is a simple means of sanitizing."

August Lippincott's: "I cannot understand," wrote the college boy, "why you call yourself a kind father. For three weeks I've had no check from you. Pray, what sort of kindness do you call that?"

And the father wrote back: "Unremitting kindness."

Philadelphia Record: Rollingstone Nomoss—Wot does "superfluous" mean?

Tatterdon Torn—A bath robe an' a cake of soap.

Puck: Education is the contrivance by means of which we manage to make our ignorance more and more variegated.

Cleveland Leader: "When did you commit your first fatal extravagance?"

"When my boss referred to my wages as my 'salary.'"

"And when did you perpetrate this latest folly?"

"The day my wife called my salary my 'income.'"

DESPAIR.

Don't scold me, friend, I've tried and tried
To drive that hungry wolf away;
And on my knees to God I've cried
To save what's left of this poor clay.
I've erred, and oh, how bitter now,
When to misfortune I must bow,
To think of all the happy past,
When in my foolish youthful dream,
I thought my paradise would last
Forever, floating on life's stream.

Yes, now, when I am growing old,
And all my friends of days gone by
With hearts of stone and gaze so cold,
Or laughing scorn will meet my sigh;
'Tis now, when I am most in need
Of friendship's clasp—a kindly deed—
That I find all my friends are gone;
Not one from whom I'll hear the cry:
"Cheer up, old man, you're not alone,
For we are brothers, you and I!"

Oh yes, I've been a fool, that's true—
A circling moth around the flame;
And yet, my friend, I've tried, like you,
To reach the heights of worldly fame;
I've failed where others would succeed,
And I am slowly going to seed;
Before me I can plainly see
The coming doom of grim despair;
Ah, well I know that not for me
Again will life look sweet and fair.

And from the slough of souls despond
My dying song shall reach the sky;
Perhaps up in the clouds beyond
A loving God will hear my cry.
He will not judge as mortals do,
For man, not God, is man's sworn foe;
And there, among the poor at rest,
I'll know at last that I am bles't.
—Charles Line.

Duluth, Minn., Aug. 24, 1910.

Fate.

The sky is clouded, the rocks are bare,
The spray of the tempest is white in air;
The winds are out with the waves at play,
And I shall not tempt the sea today.

The trail is narrow, the wood is dim,
The panther clings to the arching limb;
And the lion's whelps are abroad at play,
And I shall not join in the chase today.

But the ship sailed safely over the sea,
And the hunters came from the chase in glee,
And the town that was builded upon a rock
Was swallowed up in the earthquake shock —Bret Harte.

Jettisoning a Jonah.

New York Globe: The following is not from the chronicles of Beverly:

But the Lord sent out a great wind into the sea, and there was a mighty tempest in the sea, so that the ship was like to be broken.

And they said every one to his fellow, Come, and let us cast lots, that we may know for whose cause this evil is upon us. So they cast lots, and the lot fell upon Jonah.

Then they said unto him, What shall we do unto thee that the sea may be calm unto us? For the sea wrought and was tempestuous.

And he said unto them, Take me up and cast me forth into the sea; so shall the sea be calm unto you; for I know that for my sake this great tempest is upon you.

So they took up Jonah and cast him into the sea; and the sea ceased from raging.

It thus appears that there is a definite procedure to be followed in handling a Jonah. To make the casting out effective for calming the waters it is necessary for him to be a willing and repentant victim—to acknowledge that he is the cause of the trouble. It is to be gathered that if Jonah had kicked and scratched and said he wasn't to blame and wouldn't go, the storm would have gone on and no whale would have been prepared to receive him.

If the plan thus is to jettison a Jonah, a way must be found to secure the Jonah's consent. Alas! Ballinger is as loyal to his presidential chief as Mrs. Micawber was to her lord and master—advertises in the loudest manner that he will never desert him. The precedent is that his unloading will do no good unless he requests it and willingly unwinds his affectionate arms. To get rid of Jonah, as in hunting a shark, prescribed methods must be followed, and its needed factors are not present.

THE DUKE OF BRIDGEWATER.

From "Huckleberry Finn:" One of these fellows was about 70 or upwards and had a bald head and very gray whiskers. He had an old battered-up slouch hat on, and a greasy blue woolen shirt, and ragged old blue jeans britches stuffed into his boot tops, and home-knit galluses—no, he only had one. He had an old long-tailed blue jeans coat with slick brass buttons flung over his arm, and both of them had big, fat, ratty-looking carpet bags.

The other fellow was about 30 and dressed about as ornery. After breakfast we all laid off and talked, and the first thing that come out was that these chaps didn't know one another.

"Gentlemen," says the young man very solemn, "I will reveal it to you, for I feel I may have confidence in you. By rights I am a duke!"

Jim's eyes bugged out when he heard that; and I reckon mine did, too. Then the baldhead says, "No! you can't mean it?"

"Yes. My great grandfather, eldest son of the duke of Bridgewater, fled to this country about the end of the last century to breathe the pure air of freedom; married here and died, leaving a son, his own father dying about the same time. The second son of the late duke seized the title and estates—the infant real duke was ignored. I am the lineal descendant of that infant—I am the rightful duke of Bridgewater; and here am I, forlorn, torn from my high estate, hunted of men, despised by the cold world, ragged, worn, heartbroken, and degraded to the companionship of felons on a raft!"

He said we ought to bow when we spoke to him and say, "Your grace," or "My lord," or "Your lordship"—and he wouldn't mind if we called him plain Bridgewater, which he said was a title anyway, and not a name; and one of us ought to wait on him at dinner and do any little thing for him he wanted done.

Well, that was all easy, so we done it. All through dinner Jim stood round and waited on him and says "Will yo' Grace have some o' dis or some o' dat?" and so on, and a body could see it was mighty pleasing to him.

But the old man got pretty silent by and by—didn't have much to say and didn't look pretty comfortable over all that petting that was going on around that duke. He seemed to have something on his mind. So, long in the afternoon, he says—"Looky here, Bilgewater," he says, "I' nation sorry for you, but you ain't the only person that's had troubles like that."

"No?"

"No, you ain't. You ain't the only person that's been snaked down wrongfully out'n a high place."

"Alas!"

"No, you ain't the only person that's had a secret of his birth," and by jings, he begins to cry.

"Hold! What do you mean?"

"Bilgewater, kin I trust you?" says the old man, still sort o' sobbing.

"To the bitter death!" He took the old man by the hand and squeezed it and says, "The secret of your being; speak!"

"Bilgewater, I am the late Dauphin!"

"You bet you Jim and me stared this time. Then the duke says—

"You are what?"

"Yes, my friend, it is too true—your eyes is lookin' at this very moment on the pore disappeared Dauphin, Looy the Seventeen, son of Looy the sixteen and Mary Antonette."

"You! At your age! No! You mean you're the late Charlemagne; you must be six or seven hundred years old, at the very least."

"Trouble has done it, Bilgewater, trouble has done it; trouble has brung these gray hairs and this premature balditude. Yes, gentlemen, you see before you in blue jeans and misery, the wanderin', exiled, trampled on and sufferin' rightful king of France."

It didn't take me long to make up my mind that these liars warn't no kings nor dukes at all, but just low-down humbugs and frauds. But I never said nothing, never let on; kept it to myself; it's the best way; then you don't have no quarrels and don't get into no trouble. If they wanted us to call them kings and dukes, I hadn't no objections, 'long as it would keep peace in the family; and it warn't no use to tell Jim, so I didn't tell him. If I never learnt nothing else out of pap, I learnt that the best way to get along with his kind of people is to let them have their own way.

The "First" Woman.

Prof. Graham Taylor in the Survey: From Ogdensburg to Boston is a far cry in the experience of the National Education association. When Ella Flagg Young first attended the association it met at Ogdensburg and the women present sat in the gallery and looked down upon a meeting in which they had no part. Then a woman was not thought to be eligible for the principalship of a public school.

Now in Boston this woman is elected president of American educators, defeating the man officially nominated by a vote of two to one from the floor. And her nomination was suggested by the fact of her appointment to the superintendency of the Chicago public schools, in which there are more than 100 women serving efficiently as principals.

But Mrs. Young's election to the presidency was not due to this fact, for the woman who nominated her said to the women who elected her, "we are presenting her not as a woman, but as the best human being for the presidency of this association."

She combines the human touch with the most self-exacting standards of thoroughness and reality. Her spare form, her grave face pale with the "cast of thought," and her womanly dignity of carriage—are all lighted up by a gentle yet incisive eye, a friendly but very direct manner, a considerately deferential attitude, which is yet firm, independent and fearless. "Superb common sense and breadth of human kindness" sum up a well-considered appreciation of her.

Of the mainspring to which her tireless energy is due, she says herself it is "love of my work. Teaching is a passion with me. I never tire of it. Of course there are times when body and mind get tired. Then I go away where I can mingle with people who will give me new perspectives—to be a human being with human beings."

FOR NORTHERN MINNESOTA.

Not the Way to Do It.

Cass Lake Times: If the coming legislature passes a reapportionment bill, you may be sure it will not become operative until the senators' terms end, says the Anoka Union. Why, is that the way you would do? For shame, Granny!

Aeroplanes of the North.

Northome Record: Wonder what happened to that $4,000,000 surplus? Would make great stuff to build roads with. But then, we don't have any use for roads up this way; our farmers all use aeroplanes nowadays to bring their products to market. In plain English the call 'em packsacks.

Problem of Road Widths.

Warren Register: Whether or not wide roadways waste land, they often times cause a great waste of money and labor in the effort to maintain them in a passable condition.

Salvation in the Soil.

Bemidji Sentinel: Boost for the success of the Beltrami county fair, which will be held in this city Sept. 14, 15 and 16. When the timber has all been cut from the country hereabouts, dairying and diversified farming generally will be the only salvation of this country. Anything that can be done to promote the agricultural interests of Beltrami county is building for the present as well as the future. Again we say, "boost" the county fair.

Room Here for Millions.

Red Wing Republican: There are 90,000,000 people in the United States, but there is room for millions more. Minnesota alone can accommodate a million or two more inhabitants on its fertile acres, and then some.

They Need to Be.

Brainerd Tribune: The farmers of Northern Minnesota are more alive to the advantages of the good roads movement than ever before.

Our "Mason and Dixon Line."

Bemidji Sentinel: As far as reapportionment is concerned, the "Mason and Dixon Line" of the present campaign may be said to extend east and west through Minnesota a short distance south of Brainerd. The country north of that line is unjustly represented in the legislature, according to both area and population, and the legislative candidate who does not stand on reapportionments as his first "plank" should be marked for slaughter at the polls.

Signing the Pledges.

Warren Register: All over the northern part of the state candidates for the legislature are signing written pledges promising to stand for reapportionment, good roads, rural consolidation of schools, aid for the immigration bureau and state assistance for roads through state land, so W. R. Mackenzie, secretary of the Northern Minnesota Development association reports.

There was a large quantity of refreshments on the car and the farmer was allowed to join the others. Finally some one asked him: "Are you an alumnus?"

"No," said the farmer earnestly; "but I believe in it."

PUTS BLAME ON GRISCOM

Woodruff Issues Statement Regarding Roosevelt Turn-Down in New York.

Says the Chairman Took the Committee Completely By Surprise.

New York, Aug. 26.—The conference at Sherry's on the night before the Republican state committee meeting in which Vice President Sherman was chosen temporary chairman of the coming Republican convention has assumed still another complexion. Timothy L. Woodruff, state chairman in a statement given out from Republican state headquarters, puts the responsibility for the action of the committee squarely up to Lloyd C. Griscom, president of the Republican county committee, and flatly denies that he had even an intimation of any plan to present the name of Col. Roosevelt to the committee until Mr. Griscom made the nomination. Mr. Woodruff's statement follows:

"Nothing has transpired since the meeting of the Republican state committee nor anything that has been since then should mislead anyone as to the conditions or the situation which then existed.

According to Precedent.

"In accordance with the precedent established two years ago in the selection of Senator Root as temporary chairman of the state convention, I and some of those who have been associated with me in the management of the Republican party through the two last political campaigns, met the night before the meeting of the state committee, and after the consederation of several names, decided to present to the committee the name of Vice President Sherman as temporary chairman, a selection which we had every reason to believe would be highly satisfactory to the Republicans of the state.

"Much to my surprise and entirely without warning, Mr. Griscom, who sat in the committee as a proxy and who had been in the state committee rooms for nearly an hour before the meeting, without saying a word to me about it moved to substitute the name of Mr. Roosevelt for that of Mr. Sherman, with a full knowledge which every one had had all the morning that a majority of the committee were committed to Vice President Sherman's selection.

Coup by Griscom.

"What Mr. Griscom's motive was in placing Mr. Roosevelt in the position of being defeated I could not then comprehend, nor is it important to discuss it now.

"President Taft was in no way involved in this matter, as the members of the state committee acted entirely within their authority in selecting a temporary chairman without, as far as I know, a single one of them consulting with him about it; but, in view of the apparent affront to Mr. Roosevelt caused by the action of Mr. Griscom, I felt called upon, as chairman of the committee, to send the following letter to the ex-president:

"My Dear Col. Roosevelt:

"It cannot be possible that it is necessary for me to tell you that the action of the state committee yesterday, in which I participated, was in no sense intended as an act of hostility toward you or one of reflection upon you.

Surprised at Nomination.

"I saw Ward and Barnes after their talk with you and they told me what you and they had said about this whole matter, and I hope you know, despite some things to the contrary which the newspapers contained this morning, that they told you the exact facts. Not one of us supposed that your name would be presented without your notifying Ward, the national committeeman, or me, the chairman of the state committee, that you wished it done, and I never was so much surprised in my life as when Griscom made the motion which he did. Not a word had been said to me before the meeting by anybody that indicated this course was to be taken, and I understand that neither Griscom nor anyone else told Ward or Barnes, or any of the other men of the committee, that this was their purpose.

"Believing that you must appreciate the position in which, under these circumstances, we suddenly found ourselves, after having agreed upon the selection of Sherman, in conformity with the precedent established by the selection of Senator Root two years ago as temporary chairman, I beg to remain with best wishes,

"Yours respectfully,
"TIMOTHY L. WOODRUFF."

Beyond his formal statement Mr. Woodruff was not anxious to talk. His only comment on Col. Roosevelt's speech at the Ellicott club in Buffalo was this:

"Col. Roosevelt is no more anxious to get the crooks out of the party than I am."

FAMILY COW GUARDS BODY.

Woman Who Drank Acid Watched Over By Bossy.

Johnstown, Pa., Aug. 26.—Guarded by the family cow as death came slowly from self-destruction, Mrs. L. A. Lambert, aged 36 years, was found unconscious in a field near her home. Beside her were two poison bottles, both empty. She died at noon. Melancholia, due to illness, is given as the cause for the suicide.

Her only child, Irvin, aged 16, noticed that the cow had not come to the barn for milking, and he started to find the animal. He found the cow standing beside the body of his mother, who had slipped from the house during the night.

CAT NEARLY KILLS SLEEPING MAN

Landlady Finds Lodger Almost Dead With Pussy on His Breast.

New York, Aug. 26.—When Samuel Rabinowitsch failed to appear at the breakfast table in his lodging house, 148 Guernsey street, Williamsburg, his landlady, Mrs. Anna Herman, went to his room. As she entered it a big cat sprang from the man's chest and leaped through an open window into the yard below.

Rabinowitsch was senseless, and Dr. Cohen, whom Mrs. Herman summoned from the Eastern District hospital, worked over the man for an hour before he could bring Rabinowitsch back to consciousness. The man was weak, but according to the doctor he will recover, although he was near dead.

Mrs. Herman said that the cat was lying so that its mouth was close against that of the sleeping man, and the weight of its body pressing upon his just over the heart.

SELLS CITY HALL TO A STRANGER

Pittsburger Closed Deal for Building and Mayor's Office Furniture.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 26.—The bunko limit has been reached in Pittsburg. A slick foreigner sold the city hall to a fellow countryman for $11,000. Mayor Magee's mahogany office furniture was disposed of for an extra hundred.

Two hours later Frank Spatola, the purchaser, awakened. He went to claim possesion. Comptroller Morrow objected to getting out of his office, and John P. Dailey, secretary to the mayor, wouldn't give a quit claim deed to the mayor's desk, which now is installed in his offices in the Oliver building.

Spatola went before Magistrate Kirby and made information against one John Doe for the larceny of $11,000. There is little hope of catching the swindler.

This makes the third big bunko in Pittsburg within a week. Foreigners have sold $22,000 in counterfeit bank notes. They were in packages which, when opened, proved to be newspapers.

Another foreigner purchased an oil well in the heart of the city, and now the city hall has been sold.

Wife Files Divorce Suit After Twenty-Four Years.

Delaware, Ohio, Aug. 26.—Belle Robbins has filed suit against Charles A. Robbins, seeking divorce after twenty-four years of married life.

She alleges that her patience has ceased to be a virtue. And accuses Charles of spitting tobacco juice on the floor and on the porch and walk, and cleaning his shoes on the dining-room carpet to annoy her; of dressing and undressing before open doors, and eating his meals without a shirt.

Mrs. Robbins asks that her husband be restrained from interfering with her in use of their property.

FINDS $1,800 IN PAPER RAGS

Sorter in New Jersey Mill Gets Good Money at $6 Job.

Newark, N. J., Aug. 26.—Herbert Streuble finds the job of ragsorter at a paper mill in Whippany, N. J., a most remunerative position. His wages are only $6 a week, but during the past week, he has earned $1,800 from valuables which he found concealed among the old rags and waste which daily passes under his rake.

Five days ago he picked up an old stocking, which contained two diamonds worth $500 each. Yesterday he came upon a large sapphire and a ruby tied up in a handkerchief.

As a result of the recent publication of the finding of precious stones in waste rags and paper the superintendent of the factory has received several letters from people who say they have lost precious stones.

A woman, writing from New York, said she lost diamonds valued at $2,000, which were tied in a wrapping tissue paper.

KEEP WATCH ON SHIPPERS

Milk Inspector Tests Shipments Into City From Outside Dairies.

Finds Dirt in Milk and Will Demand Improved Conditions.

Grant E. Owens, milk inspector, has started a campaign against outside dairies to compel them to send in milk which is free of dirt of all kinds, as well as come up to the butter fat standard of 3.5 per cent required by the state law.

He took samples of milk from over a dozen outside milkmen at the depots this morning. About seventy shippers are sending milk into the city, and samples will be taken from all of them today and tomorrow.

The sediment test of part of the samples taken this morning shows a crying need of improvement. Part of them disclosed an unsuspected quantity of dirt in the cans. The milk is run through a contrivance made to retain the dirt, and the screens were almost black in several instances.

Inspector Owens states that he will not make arrests in these first instances, but that he will give the dairymen an opportunity to improve conditions. He explained this morning that his object is not to persecute them, but to educate them. But he very emphatically declared that if they did not take advantage of the opportunity given them, he would either cause warrants to be issued for their arrest or stop them from shipping milk into the city.

When the inspector and his deputy made their last examination of the outside dairies he found practically all of them complying with the suggestions given them in the past. Some were improving the sanitary conditions, some were putting in better ventilation systems, and a few were erecting new barns with the latest modern appliances. In view of which he is confident that the next time he takes samples of their milk little if any sediment will be shown. A considerable percentage of the city's milk supply comes from the outside and the officials of the health department state that the shippers will have to come up to the mark as much as the local dealers.

Y. M. C. A. BOYS IN UNIQUE STUNT

With Night Shirts Over Their Clothes They Paraded to Deerwood From Camp.

Deerwood, Minn., Aug. 26.—(Special to The Herald.—Tuesday night the colony of Duluth Y. M. C. A. boys marched from their camp on Serpent lake to the village of Deerwood and certain long flowing garments fluttered in the breeze and lent their name to the parade, which one of the fifty-five participants said was technically described as a nightshirt parade. As the evening was chilly these garments of all sizes and dimensions were simply worn as an outer covering.

At the head of the procession marched John R. Batchelor of Duluth, the physical director of the boys' department of the Duluth Y. M. C. A. At his side was the general secretary of the boys' department, N. D. McLeod. Mr. Batchelor is a good cornetist and enlivened the parede with music. At the postoffice a circle was formed and bunches of boys entered the charmed circle and gave their various college and school yells. At an ice cream parlor the performance was repeated and then there was a rush for ice cream sodas and sundaes. The boys filled every chair in the house and sat on the steam radiators. When the appetite for ice cream had been satiated the boys gave three cheers for the ice cream parlor one for Peck, one for Batchelor and one for McLeod.

E. W. Peck, the state secretary of the Y. M. C. A. visited the boys at their camp several days.

Tried For Killing a Mouse.

Tuesday evening the camp enjoyed the novelty of a mock trial. E. W. Peck was the prosecuting attorney and Willis Hamblin was the assistant attorney. Ledru Bevis was counsel for the defense and J. W. Batchelor was his assistant. A. Bousfield of the Grand Union Tea company of Duluth was the judge who heard the case. The accussed, Russell Duncan, was up on the awful charge of murder in the first degree, killing a mouse. The state won.

The camp pitched its tents on Aug. 15 and the boys expect to return home Saturday. The encampment consists of seven sleeping tents, one cook tent and one dining room tent. They have a cook and a cookee to attend to the culinary department. One bakery in Deerwood is doing nothing but bake bread for them, sixty loaves being consumed every day. The healthy and invigorating air of Serpent lake has engendered such an appetite in these boys that the physical director has written the parents of the lads, so that they may in a feeble measure at least be able to stand the homecoming cf the hopefuls.

Call Strike Off.

Scranton, Pa., Aug. 26.—At a meeting in Old Forge last evening 800 Pennsylvania Coal company miners who have been on strike for the last two weeks voted to return to work at once. The men go back without any concessions. Two miners were shot by troopers and scores were injured during the strike period.

South Dakota Child Killed.

Custer, S. D., Aug. 26.—By the toppling over of a heavily loaded tie rack, the 2-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George Porter of this place was killed. With two other children the baby was playing around the rack, when it fell, crushing him.

WELL KNOWN IN DETROIT

John K. Teetzel Under Arrest Here, Prominent in Michigan City.

Preliminary Hearing Begun Before Judge Cutting in Municipal Court.

The preliminary hearing of John K. Teetzel, arrested last week on the charge of swindling, was begun in police court this morning before Judge Cutting.

The complaint is that he obtained a check for $43.50 from the Kelly Hardware company by false representations. It is alleged that he represented himself as having the power to sell the exclusive rights to the "addiphone," a telephone attachment claimed to make hearing over telephones easier, when in fact the company was not in existence. The Kelly Hardware company wired to the address given as his headquarters and received a reply that the Acme Electrical Manufacturing company was not known.

Two witnesses were put on the stand by the state this morning. R. D. Haig, Jr., of the hardware firm testified as to the transactions with that company. W. P. Sherrick of the Zenith Telephone company said that the attachment is practically the same as the ordinary ear attachment in use on its lines. He stated that as far as he could see there was no difference. The preliminary examination will likely be completed this afternoon.

Teetzel was released on bail of $1,000 furnished by the National Casualty company. His attorney, Charles V. McCoy, has a telegram in his possession from Henry Walters, counsel for the casualty company, with headquarters at Detroit, stating that he has known Teetzel for many years. It is asserted that Teetzel is in comfortable circumstances, with considerable property in Detroit, where it is said that he is well known. He is also said to be a cousin of James B. Teetzel, queen's counsel at Osgood Hall, Toronto, Can.

CAPTAINS WILL BE REWARDED

Those Who Finish Season Without Accident Will Receive Substantial Sum.

Lake captains who pilot their boats without accident during the season of navigation will receive, for their efforts, a substantial sum of money by the provisions of the new insurance arrangement for lake vessels, in effect this year for the first time.

As an incentive to caution, the captain of a boat valued at $340,000, who goes through the season without mishap will receive a purse of $443 at the close of the season. At the valuation named with the 6 per cent rate, the gross premium is $20,400 and the net premium $17,748. Of this amount the underwriters return 10 per cent for no claim, which would amount to $1,774 of which $443 goes to the master.

It is said that the new insurance plan has already lessened the number of accidents. The captains are more careful and don't take so many chances. The money looks pretty good at the end of the season. Many of them have come through up to this time, with have come through, up to this time, without accident and they are all anxious to finish up with a clean record.

STEAMER COLE IS RELEASED

Big Freighter Is Towed Into Detour By Wrecking Tug.

The Thomas F. Cole, the big freighter of the Pittsburg fleet, which grounded Wednesday on the Gravel island reefs in St. Mary's river, was released yesterday afternoon by the tug Favorite.

The tug General was alongside to render assistance, but it was not necessary, the anticipated difficulty not being encountered.

The big freighter was brought to Detour at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, where W. J. Olcott, president of the Oliver Iron Mining company, and party, who were aboard, were landed. Mr. Olcott will arrive in Duluth tomorrow.

The steamer went aground in the smoky haze which hung over the lake for several days. Several compartments were punctured and filled with water, but the complete extent of the damage will not be ascertained until she is drydocked. A heavy wind and rain storm broke at the Soo yesterday, causing maany boats to tie up or seek shelter until it blew over.

REPORTS ARE PESSIMISTIC

Outlook for Lake Trade No Considered Good---Boats Laid Up.

Lower lake reports continue to be rather pessimistic regarding the freight situation on the Great Lakes.

From Cleveland comes the report that two more big vessels have been added to the number of boats that have been forced into temporary retirement. Scarcity of cargoes is given as the cause of the docking of these vessels.

Reports from both Buffalo and Cleveland lend to the belief that the coal business up the lakes has shown a slight letting down. From these two ports comes the reports that there is more inquiry for cargoes among the vessel owners, and that the boats have to hustle to keep busy on up lake business.

Here the coal has begun to move more freely from the docks, and this, it is stated here, will result in more coal coming up from the lower ports.

The ore movement has shown no decrease, rather a steady increase since last month and the grain movement promises to be fairly heavy during next month.

With the lumber market in the prese)nt condition, there is not a very heavy business in sight for the lumber vessels. Agents of package freight lines report a fair average of business, both up and down the lakes.

LUMBER BARGE IS DISMASTED.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Aug. 26.—A heavy wind swept past the west coast of Michigan last night. The lumber barge Alice B. Morris of Chicago was dismasted on Lake Michigan near Whitehall.

The consort of the barge, bound from Lake Superior to Chicago, picked it up.

The Graham and Morton steamer Puritan, which went aground at Holland was released last night.

STEAMER PURITAN RUNS AGROUND.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Aug. 26.—The steamer Puritan of the Graham & Morton line ran aground last night in Black Lake, near Holland, having broken her steering gear en route from Chicago. Tugs have been summoned from St. Joseph, Mich. The steamer is resting easily and in no danger, having been sheltered from the 50-mile gale that was blowing last night on Lake Michigan.

REVOKE LICENSE OF CAPTAIN OF WOOD.

Port Huron, Mich., Aug. 26.—Vessel Inspectors Stewart and Van Lieuw who investigated the wreck of the steamers James B. Wood and Frank H. Goodyear, which cost eighteen lives in Lake Huron, May 23, have returned their finding. The inspectors held that the steamers violated laws relative to running at full speed in fog.

They revoked the license of Capt. Thomas D. Gibson of the steamer Wood; suspended Frank H. Eminger of the steamer Goodyear for sixty days, and also suspended Donald MacLachlin, mate of the Wood for thirty days.

ASHLAND HARBOR LINE WILL BE MOVED.

Lieut.-Col. Graham D. Fitch has returned from Ashland, where he went to preside at the hearing on the petition to move the harbor line closer to the shore. There was no objection to the petitions of the property owners, and as soon as the necessary consent of the various property owners interested has been secured the petition will be forwarded to the secretary of war and very probably, favorably acted upon.

The object in having the harbor line moved closer to the shore is that property owners are at the present time compelled to dredge or to extend docks clear out to the harbor depth, where vessels can navigate. If the line is moved nearer shore the necessary dredging which would have to be done in any event in some part of the harbor will be done where it will save the property owners expense.

At the present time the Ashland Advancement club has taken up the matter of securing the consent of all the interested property owners, and when this work is completed all preliminary details will be out of the way.

ELECTION WIT AND HUMOR.

Tit-Bits: More often than not the heckler has the best of it and Ian Malcolm hits the nail on the head when he says apropos of the "voice in the crowd," "You are powerless in face of it; the lilt of your sentence is ruined. Your withering scorn is turned to laughter and after laughter no rettort appears effective."

Even Bernal Osborne, the wit of the Victorian age, was nonplused when after a glowing speech at Waterford upon patriotism and a soldier's duty there came a voice from the gallery: "Och, what's the world to a man if his wife's a widow?"

Another election story of the Emerald Isle which Mr. Malcolm tells is that concerning a leading member of the Irish bar who in an eloquent speech upon the woes and injustices of his native land sought to impress his audience still further by squeezing out a few tears which trickled over his expansive cheeks. But the sublime was turned to the ridculous when the wit of the gallery shouted out: "Shure, boys, there's a fine field for hydraulics."

This was as disconcerting as the reply made to Sir Richard Temple, who returned posthaste from his duties in India to contest a seat. In the course of a speech he remarked that he "had traveled 8,000 miles and surrendered £5,000 for the privilege of representing this great constituency," and the audience were impressed until the remark in a loud voice came from the crowd: "Oh, what a fool!"

And the heckler silenced Lord George Hamilton on one occasion when the latter, describing the late Mr. Gladstone as "a political adventurer who always had his eye on the treasury bench," was met with the shout: "Yes ,and he'll have his body there soon if you don't watch it!"

During the last general election a speaker at one meeting was somewhat irritated by a member of the audience who continually repeated, "We won't have our food taxed; no taxes on food." But it was not long before he silenced the interrupter with the cutting remark, "Console yourself, my friend; Joe isn't going to tax thistles."

"The voice" at another meeting shouted out, "Talk to us in language we can understand," because a speaker had quoted some Latin phrases. Like a flash came the cry from the platform, "Hee-haw! Hee-haw!" And the heckler vanished.

Lord Morley is one of the few political speakers who can silence a heckler with a smiling retort as effectively as the famous Campbell of Monzie, who, when he asked an Edinburgh burgess to vote for him and received the angry answer, "Vote for you! I'd sooner vote for Satan himself," sweetly replied, "Yes; but if your friend doesn't stand, may I depend upon your support?"—a remark that earned him a stanch adherent.

The son of a certain lord was addressing a meeting and was interrupted every few seconds by "the voice" saying, "I'm's good as you; what'sh the duff'rence 'tween you'n me?" Suddenly the answer came, "One difference is that you drink and don't work, and I work but don't drink."

The fact that a blind man, Mr. Walter King, is standing as a Liberal candidate for one of the divisions of Somersetshire recalls a story of Prof. Fawcett, who as a candidate for Brighton was asked by an elector how he, a blind man, was going to "catch the speaker's eye," and vote in the right lobby. Mr. Fawcett scored effectively by replying that he would depend on the kindness of friends. But, as to mistaking the lobby, he said he might occasionally vote wrong, "but at all events that would not be so bad as your present member of parliment, who is always in the wrong lobby, and he does it on purpose!" The answer was cheered to the echo.

THE GOVERNORS CLUB.

The uninformed might suppose the Governors club to be an exclusive social organization of the governors of commonwealths, says Leslie's Weekly. Far from it. The humblest private citizen may enjoy all the privileges of membership. The Governors club is a movement for moderation in the use of tobacco and stimulants, started at Battle Creek, Mich.

As its accepted standard the club suggests a maximum use of stimulating beverages and tobacco not to exceed two portions of each a day. To every individual signer it is left to establish the maximum for himself, but prospective members are advised not to waste time setting a wide open limit that would require no development of the restraining power of the governor.

While total abstinence is not the primary purpose of this movement, its promoters say nevertheless that a "total abstinence is worthy of careful consideration." In every instance of violating the agreement a fine of $1 is to be self-imposed. The fine, the covenant and everything connected with it rest solely upon the personal honor of the individual.

MAKING A SERMON STICK.

Cumberland Presbyterian: One of the reasons why we so easily forget the teachings of the Bible is because we do not put them into practice. Dr. James S. Gale tells of a Corean who learned the whole of the Sermon on the Mount and then walked 100 miles to recite it to his pastor. When he had finished he was told that he must practice the teaching.

He replied: "That is the way I learned it. I tried to memorize it, but it would not stick, so I hit on this plan: I would memorize a verse and then find a heathen neighbor of mine and practice it on him. Then I found it would stick." All of us would know much more Scripture than we now konw. and the knowledge would be of far greater value to the world, if we would follow the Corean's method of making it stick.

THIRD OPERATION PREVENTED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Chicago, Ill. — "I want to tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. I was so sick that two of the best doctors in Chicago said I would die if I did not have an operation. I had already had two operations, and they wanted me to go through a third one. I suffered day and night from inflammation and a small tumor, and never thought of seeing a well day again. A friend told me how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had helped her, and I tried it, and after the third bottle was cured."—Mrs. ALVENA SPERLING, 1468 Clybourne Ave., Chicago, Ill.

If you are ill do not drag along at home or in your place of employment until an operation is necessary, but build up the feminine system, and remove the cause of those distressing aches and pains by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration. DOCKS NOT UP-TO-DATE

Harvard Instructor Says America Can Learn Something From Germans.

Leads World in Handling Bulk Cargoes, But Not Package Freight.

Edwin J. Clapp, an instructor in the department of economics at Harvard, is in the city making a study of harbor and dock conditions at the Head of the Lakes. He has been making a tour of the lake cities from Buffalo to Duluth to inquire into this subject with thoroughness and care, and is primed with information about shipping facilities.

Mr. Clapp has made an exhaustive study of harbors and docks both in this country and abroad, and he holds decided views on every phase of the problems presented here.

In his opinion, it would be good policy on the part of the lake cities, through united action, to secure the services of the best engineer obtainable and send him to Hamburg to make an investigation of the means and methods in use there, with a view to adopting such features of the German system as may be adaptable to local needs.

While willingly admitting that in the handling of bulk cargoes, such as coal and ores, this country leads the world, Mr. Clapp says that in the handling of package freight the harbors and docks of the Great Lakes cities are woefully deficient.

It is for the purpose of eliminating this handicap to the proper development of American commerce that he suggests the sending of a qualified engineer to Hamburg, where package freight is handled in the most approved and up-to-date manner.

TICKER TAPE FOR TAMMANY.

Wall Street Brokers Get Annual Parade All Mixed Up.

New York, Aug. 26.—When the John Annidhiari association of the Second assembly district turned from Wall street into Broad street the other morning on its way to New Dorp, Staten Island, every one of the 150 marchers and the twenty odd guests in the carriages spruced up for close inspection.

But within two blocks enough ticker tape had been thrown from the windows to break the ranks of the paraders and stop the music and provide much amusement for spectators.

The association which is a Tammany body in "Big Tim" Sullivan's district, the Second, was on its way to New Dorp for its annual picnic.

The paraders enjoyed the joke as much as the brokers, and hurried away good-naturedly.

SOME PEACHES. THESE.

Missouri Men Call Eleven-Inch Beauties Commonplace.

Joplin, Mo., Aug. 26.—Oldest inhabitants declare that the peach crop of Joplin and Jasper county has never been approached in the Middle West. Peaches measuring eleven inches in circumference, sound and sweet, have ceased to arouse interest. Numerous trees are bearing peaches weighing three-quarters of a pound, while F. W. Cheysteamn picked a half bushel off one tree, the largest of which was twelve and one-half inches around both ways and weighed seventeen ounces. None were smaller than eleven inches around. W. E. Grattis picked thirty-two bushels from four trees.

STUBBORN ECZEMA CASES YIELD TO POSLAM

Called "Greatest Skin Remedy in Europe or America."

"Poslam did for my wife, who is spending the winter abroad, what no doctor could do. Half the jar entirely cured her of the most disfiguring form of scaly eczema, which simply covered her face. Fourteen days after the first application her face was fair, smooth and without a spot or blemish. We look upon it as nothing short of a miracle. It is the greatest skin remedy we have ever found either in Europe or America and we have tried celebrated specialists, all sorts of cures and many patent remedies." This statement, made by Mr. A. E. Gardner of Bridgeport, Conn., is but one of the thousands of similar expressions regarding the actual accomplishments of poslam in the eradication of every form of skin disease, eczema, acne, tetter, barber's itch, psoriasis, shingles, etc., besides the minor skin affections (such as pimples, blemishes red noses, hives, fever blisters), in which results are seen so rapidly.

Poslam is on sale in 50-cent boxes and $2 jars at all druggists, particularly the Lyceum Pharmacy and W. A. Abbett's in Duluth and the A. E. Holmberg Drug Co., in Superior. A free sample may be obtained by mail, in plain wrapper, by writing to the Emergency Laboratories, 32 West Twenty-fifth street, New York city.

GOOD TIME FOR YOUNG CHARLTON

Self-Confessed Wife Slayer Spends Time Reading in the Bath Tub.

New York, Aug. 26.—Porter Charlton, the self-confessed slayer of his wife, whose body he threw into the waters of Lake Como, Italy, is taking things very comfortably in the Hudson county jail.

The warden says that two or three times recently he has found the young man sitting in a bath tub half filled with water, devouring a magazine. On the first occasion the warden expressed astonishment that Charlton should want to stay in the water so long, but the prisoner laughingly said:

"Oh, I could stay here all day long."

The bath tub is in a room adjoining Charlton's cell, and the prisoner has access to it almost any time during the day. Charlton spends much of his time reading magazines and books, in the tub or out, the warden says.

The Best Hour of Life

is when you do some great deed or discover some wonderful fact. This hour came to J. R. Pitt, of Rocky Mt., N. C., when he was suffering intensely, as he says, "from the worst cold I ever had, I then proved to my great satisfaction, what a wonderful Cold and Cough cure Dr. King's New Discovery is. For, after taking one bottle, I was entirely cured. You can't say anything too good of a medicine like that." It's the surest and best remedy for diseased lungs, Hemorrhages, LaGrippe, Asthma, Hay Fever—any Throat or Lung Trouble. 50c, $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by all druggists.

SUNDAY SCHOOL IS THEIR PRISON

Law Breakers in Ohio Town Are Sentenced to Go to Services.

Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 26.—Mayor W. A. Chalfant, of Byesville, Ohio, five miles south of Cambridge, elected to office on a reform ticket, sentences lawbreakers to church, instead of to prison.

So far the idea has proved to be a success, and the church memberships have grown through the mayor's court.

Instead of assessing a heavy fine on citizens committing misdemeanors, Mayor Chalfant sentences them to a year in Sunday school. Unless they report at his office each Monday that the day before they attended divine services, they go to prison.

PREDICTS EARLY, BITTER WINTER

Keeper of New York Zoo Says Animals Are Getting Ready.

New York, Aug. 26.—"We are going to have an early winter this year and a long and severe one," said Head Keeper Snyder of the Central Park menagerie. "All signs point that way and I have been studying these things for a quarter of a century.

"Blackbirds, chipping sparrows, blue birds and other summer visitors have been flocking for over a week. I saw a flock of several thousand blackbirds flying south ward over the city last week. Migration to the South is unusually early this season.

"The chipmunks are very busy laying up a supply of beech nuts and other provender for a long winter. Woodchucks up the state are going into their burrows for the winter with a big layer of fat on their ribs. Usually they stay out until September. You had better get your fur overcoat out of the tar barrel for an early cold snap, for frost will be here early."

BUNCHED HITS ON THE HAWK

Game Rooster, Turkey Gobbler and Pet Cat Kill Barnyard Robber.

West Livingston, N. J., Aug. 26.—A chickenhawk that hovered over the Demarest farm, in this town, finally descended in a flock of Plymouth Rock and bantam hens that were eating a pickup supper. The hawk clutched a young bird and was about to carry it off when the head of the [illegible] a game rooster, engaged it in battle.

The hawk held its own with the rooster until a turkey gobbler came warbling to the fight and pitched into the hawk. At that moment [illegible] a lame cat, Gimp, streaked across the poultry yard and grabbed the hawk by the back of the neck Presently the hawk lay dead.

The rooster did a war dance. The cat took itself off for dry cleaning. The gobbler stalked back to his harem.

BEAUTY VISION HINDERS WORK

Convicts Cannot Make Shirts; Pretty Girl Stands in Window.

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 26.—Because of time lost by convicts employed in the shirtmaking department of the state prison, Principal Keeper Osborne has asked the local police to induce a certain attractive young woman of Second street to keep away from her bedroom windows, which are directly opposite the floor on which 150 convicts are employed making shirts. It is said that the damsel frequently appears so attractive to the convicts that they lose much time enjoying visions of her. The name of the young woman is not given in the complaint, but the police will endeavor to have her screen her windows.

X-RAY LOCATES REBEL BULLET

Man Wounded at Spottsylvania Carries Lead in His Lung.

Danville, Pa., Aug. 26.—A rebel bullet which Joseph W. Miller has carried in his left lung ever since the battle of Spottsylvania, forty-six years ago, has been definitely located by means of the X-ray. An attempt to remove it would be dangerous, and Mr. Miller will continue to carry about with him the leaden compliment so rudely handed him long ago.

When first wounded Mr. Miller's recovery seemed out of the question. For seven years after he was wounded he expectorated pus, but later he recovered from all ill effects. For nearly forty years he was in the best of health, but recently began to suffer ill effects. He is conscious of the presence of the bullet and experiences at times a nervous sensation, which he can scarcely endure.

COP KIDNAPPED BY 300 POUND GIRL

Tries to Arrest Pittsburg Lass for Flirting, But Bertha Is Too Big.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 26.—Bertha Bender, a twentieth century amazon, kidnaped Policeman Frank Leffler and kept the policeman prisoner in her room for six hours.

Bertha weighs a trifle over 300 pounds. Leffler thought he detected her in the act of flirting this morning.

He tried to arrest her, but the amazon tucked him under her arm and lugged him to her room at 1413 Fifth avenue. After being a prisoner for six hours Leffler managed to get to a window and blow his whistle.

It took three officers to arrest Bertha. She got off with a $10 fine.

CAT ADDS RAT TO FAMILY.

Not in the Usual Way, But as an Adopted Child.

East Moline, Ill., Aug. 26.—The strangest thing that any inhabitant hereabouts claims to have seen is the sight of a Maltese cat nursing a little rat among her own four little kittens. The cat and her composite family are now on exhibition at the City hotel, East Moline.

A gray Maltese cat recently gave birth to four kittens, which have not as yet got their eyes open. Monday the old cat was seen coming from a barn near by with a little rat in her mouth. The cat has always been a terror to rats and mice in the neighborhood. The cat carried the little thing by the nape of the neck, in the same manner that she always carried her own little kittens, to the box in the kitchen in which was her own little family, and placed the little stranger inside, and there it has remained ever since.

The cat nurses the little rat, licks it and takes care of it just the same as she does each one of her kittens.

BUFFALO SICK OF ELEPHANT

City Has Rogue in Its Zoo That Has Way of Raising Cain.

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 26.—Away out in the show-me state, at Lancaster, Mo., to be explicit, lives a man whose eye caught the advertisement of the Buffalo park board to sell or otherwise dispose of the big elephant now doing stunts with his keepers, his chains and other things that come within his reach at Delaware Park. Superintendent Seymour of the park department got a letter from this man, whose name is William P. Hall, and whose title is the horse king of the world. Mr. Hall says he will make a dicker with the park department "if the elephant is gentle."

"That lets us out," said Mr. Seymour. "The only reason we're trying to get rid of the beast is that he is vicious. He cut open the throat of his keeper a couple of years ago and he has broken loose several times, the last time being quite recently, when there was some trouble getting him back into irons."

Elephant on His Hands.

"It's a case, to my way of looking at it," said Curator Crandall of the zoo, "of either chloroforming the elephant or building a house big enough and strong enough to hold him without keeping him chained. He's 18 now, old enough to feel his oats, and I'm safe in saying we won't find any circus man or anybody else that wants him. The circuses have to kill all their male elephants after a certain age. If they are let live there is always the danger of them breaking out in a street parade or of stampeding while the circus is in camp.

Not long ago a band of elephants stampeded from the circus grounds in a Western city and killed a number of people, besides destroying property. Ordinary things stand no chance against a mad elephant. They go through a stone house about as easily as through a wooden one."

The Missouri man, conditioning his offer on the proposition that the Buffalo elephant be gentle, which it isn't, says he will trade one or more of a number of animals in his possession, the list embracing sacred cattle, leopards, lions, tigers, pumas and camels.

Now, the park zoo is without a camel, but it appears that, if one is to be obtained, it will have to be from some other source, or, at least, by some means other than a trade for the rogue elephant.

Like Rock of Gibraltar.

On the matter of a proper and safe house for the rogue, Dr. Crandall says there is one at the zoological garden at Washington, D. C., which cost $40,000 to build.

An elephant house for a rogue is, according to Curator Crandall, built something along the lines of the Rock of Gibraltar—hardly as high, but almost as thick. Cement and steel beams, with an outside covering of glazed brick, are the materials used.

MORE TIME FOR INSURANCE FIRM

Filing of New Policy Forms Is Extended to Oct. 1.

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 26.—It is announced in the state insurance department that the time within which insurance companies doing a health and accident business must submit forms to State Supt. Hotchkiss for approval under the new standard policy provision law had been extended from Sept. 1 to Oct. 1. This action was taken after the companies had declared that it was practically impossible to submit the policy forms on time.

Companies in this state have appointed a committee to urge united action on the part of the insurance department and the companies of New York and Massachusetts, the only state that has yet adopted the uniform law.

It was stated at the insurance department that the new law is intended not merely to bring about uniformity of policy in health and accident insurance, but also to eliminate from such policies in the future indefinite and elusive clauses, which, it is declared, have crept in through competition. The uniform policy plan in this state now embraces fire, life and health and accident insurance business, and the state superintendent believes that it will be extended to all other fields of insurance by subsequent enactment.

S.S.S. FOR SUMMER SKIN DISEASES

Smooth, healthy skins are a rarity in Summer. Most persons are annoyed with pimples, boils, rashes or eruptions, while others suffer more severely with Eczema, Acne, Tetter, Salt Rheum, or some kindred skin disease. All skin affections come from humors and acids in the circulation. The blood, as it circulates through the system, deposits these acids and humors in the sensitive membranous flesh which lies just beneath the outer skin or tissue covering the body. This acrid matter causes inflammation and a discharge which breaks through the delicate cuticle, and skin diseases are the result. To cure any skin trouble the blood must be freed from all acids and humors, and for this purpose nothing equals S. S. S. This great blood purifier goes down into the circulation and completely removes every particle of impurity, enriches the blood and in this way permanently cures skin diseases. S. S. S. cures, because it purifies the blood and allows it to nourish, soothe, and soften the skin instead of irritating it with fiery acids and humors. Book on Skin Diseases and any medical advice free. You'll enjoy Maud Powell's exquisite violin solos

"Our" Maud Powell, as her admirers love to call her, is one of the few artists who shows year after year greater development in tone, technique and interpretation. There is nothing of pose or virtuoso affectation about her—she loves the work she is doing and her heart and mind are wholly in it.

So eminent a musical authority as Henry T. Finck says: "When Maud Powell plays, one thinks not of bowing and fingering, of staccato or legato, of harmonics or double-stops, of trills—though they be, as hers are, Melba-like in their perfection; one thinks only of the music. Like a great actor, she makes one forget the player in the art."

And the perfection reached by the new Victor process of recording was never shown to better advantage than in these three marvelous new records, which reproduce perfectly every little detail and delicacy of tone with all the original brilliancy.

WILD DUCK NOT EATEN

Cass County Officials Deny Report That Law Was Violated July 28.

Much Talked of Case Against Federal Dam Merchant Is Dropped.

Cass Lake, Minn., Aug. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Chicken dumplings were served to several Cass county officials at Federal Dam last month instead of wild duck, as reported, and the law was not violated. This was the outcome of the case against Edward Warren of Federal Dam, alleged to have violated the law against serving game, which was tried here yesterday before Justice of the Peace Frank Ives.

As County Auditor Byhre, County Treasurer McKeown, Judge of Probate Jamison and Sheriff Delury were subpoenaed at witnesses the village courtroom was packed with spectators long before the case was called.

Each of the above named officials in answer to the questions as to what they had for dinner on the day in question swore that they had chicken dumplings and that they did not see nor taste any wild duck. After the state had rested the county attorney made a motion to dismiss the action on the grounds that the state had failed to prove a cause of action and asked that the defendant be released from custody. The motion was granted.

All Started From Joke.

E. L. Warren, the defendant, is proprietor of the general merchandise store at the new station of Federal Dam and on July 28 a party of Cass county officials went to Federal Dam by boat and were furnished with dinner by Mr. Warren. Upon their return to Walker one of the party jokingly made the remark that they were royally treated to a "wild duck" dinner. One of Walker's zealous citizens hearing this informed the game and fish commission in St. Paul of the alleged duck dinner, who in turn asked Deputy Game Warden M. L. Tolie to file a complaint. The result of the trial plainly showed that some one wished to maliciously injure Mr. Warren.

RIVER MAY FREEZE SOLID NEXT WINTER

Unusual Problem Is Confronting Grand Forks Water Supply.

Grand Forks, N. D., Aug. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The city council will be asked at its next meeting to take steps towards insuring the city a supply of water during the coming winter season, as Red Lake river from which the supply is now secured, is so low that there appears little possibility of its being able to give the amount of water needed. If no rains fall during the time intervening before the river freezes, the entire flow will be stopped, as it will freeze to the bottom. The plan of action favored is the construction of a large dam across the mouth of the river at once, thus storing up a large quantity of water that would become available for use after the freezing up time arrives.

PROPOSED DITCH IS BEING FOUGHT

Opponents of Work Claim It Will Cause Overflow of Their Lands.

Crookston, Minn., Aug. 26.—(Special to The Herald.) — One of the biggest ditch controversies that have arisen in this section is on over the construction of a proposal judicial ditch which starts in Southern Marshall county, east of the Thief river, cut a corner off Northwestern Red Lake county and then run practically due west through the northern townships in Polk county to the Red river. About 100 farmers in the Polk county township principally west of the St. Vincent line of the Great Northern, have banded together to fight any assessment for the ditch and prevent its construction altogether, on the ground that if constructed it will necessitate the cutting through the sand ridge known as the Pembina trail, the old ox cart route from St. Paul to Pembina, making it necessary to drain the swamp water east of the sand ridge clear through Polk county. The contention is that this will cause an overflow of the land during the flood waters in the spring, and wash great quantities of the sand over the farms overflowed, thus ruining some of the farms.

Begin Fight in Courts.

W. E. Rowe has been retained to fight the case for several of the townships and the town board are taking action to prevent the construction of the ditch. A hearing was held before Judge Grindeland last Saturday and the case adjourned. George A. Ralph, engineer of the state drainage board, has been appealed to by the opposition to the ditch and every means will be exhausted to prevent the construction of the proposed waterway which would cost an immense sum. It is further claimed that the natural drainage for the water in Southern Marshall and Northwestern Red Lake county, would be towards the Thief river, on the theory that it would be impracticable to cut through the several sand ridges which have heretofore acted as a barrier to prevent any of the swamp land water to the east, finding their way to the Red river direct, all the water having first found its way to Thief river and Red Lake river and thence to the Red river at Grand Forks.

There are now five school buildings in this city, one new one, the Garfield, being opened this fall. CANDIDATES FOR REAPPORTIONMENT

Only Three in Northern Minnesota Have Not Declared Themselves.

Bemidji, Minn., Aug. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—"Candidates for the legislature, both for the senate and the lower house, are clambering on the reapportionment band wagon with an alacrity that augurs well for Northern Minnesota being eventually justly represented in the state law-making body," says W. R. Mackenzie, secretary of the Northern Minnesota Development association, who sent pledges to all legislative candidates, wherein they were bound to reapportionment.

"Pledges of support have been received from all over the state, while in the fourteen districts of the north only three contain candidates who have not signed the pledges," continued Mr. Mackenzie.

"Beltrami county is vitally interested in the movement for reapportionment, as this county would probably be given a representative of its own, and a senator would be given to Beltrami and Clearwater, in all probability. As the representation now stands Beltrami, Clearwater, Red Lake, Mahnomen and Norman counties have one senator, while but one representative is given to Beltrami, Clearwater and Red Lake counties.

Demand to Be Universal.

"It is hoped that when the legislature meets there will be such a universal demand for a just and equitable representation that the three larger cities of the state, Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth will be lined up beside the country representatives in demanding reapportionment from the legislature and that other measures considered of vital interest only to certain sections and not to the whole state at large will be allowed to take precedence and so embroil the members that clashes will result in disagreements as to reapportionment.

Albert Berg of Spooner, who is a candidate for the Republican nomination in this (the Sixty-first) district, has gone on record as favoring reapportionment above every other issue.

Andrew Davis of Elk River, says that "rank injustice is being done the northern part of the state," and he heartily favors reapportionment. The same decisive expressions have been given by Donald Robertson of Argyle, L. D. Brown of Little Falls, T. M. Ferguson of Barker, I. J. Courtright of Staples, John Holton of Fertile and others who are members of the legislature and are seeking a re-election this fall.

(BY BRUCE.)

Life is filled with startling shifts and is one swift show of passing emotions, as Miss Laura Jean Libbey or Bertha M. Clay would inform us.

And so baseball has its little up in the mountain of joy and down in the damp valley of tears periods. Wednesday we thrashed with heavy hand the Wausau Lumberjacks to the sweet and reverberating tune of 22 to 2; alas, Yorrick, yesterday they returned with systems filled with revenge and pepper and trod on us twice, the first game going to the invaders by the score of 3 to 2, and the second sad session being lost by the sob score of 3 to a large nothing.

Mr. Albert Chevalier Cummings was on the elevated strata in the overture contest. He allowed the rough Lumberjacks but three hits, and but for errors might have pulled out the contest. In the fifth inning Walliser drew four that didn't come nigh the plate, if Mister Schuler is to be relied upon, and came all the way home when George Anderson threw wild on Schieffer's infield dump. Schieffer went around to third, scoring on an infield out.

The other run of the enemy came in the eighth and was the result of some strenuous clouting. In this round Fennell surprised the talent, including himself, by stinging one to left for two sacks. Father Cahill struck out, but Mons. Duchien, who speaks with a Paris accent, stung one to right and the Iron Man was over.

If Smiling Al was pitching good, air tight baseball, so was lean Fennell. Our batters who had waxed so fat the day previous, found the going hard, and when hits would have produced results gratifying to those intensely interest in the climb of the Sox, they were as hard to get as vegetables from one's own back yard.

Our two were placed on the sign board in the jolly fourth round. In this gay frame Thespian Kohl drew four that Mr. Fennell had not tamed sufficiently. The young actor went down to second on a passed ball, Darby O'Brien flew out to center field and Altermott skied to left field. The king came down to third. Both runners scored on a wild pitch that went clear by shorty Johnson. Bouchart struck at the flying spheriod going to first before the ball could be recovered. Kramer ended the inning by grounding at first.

Thus it will be observed that the two runs scored by the Sox were gathered without exceeding labor with the cudgel. None of the Sox will have calloused hands as the result of heavy swinging with the hickory.

In the sixth Altermott hit for two bases, but died on the middle sack. In the seventh Kramer was thrown out at the plate, being foolishly coached to try for home when there wasn't even a chance to make the pan. We had no more chances after that. A double play cut off a threatened score of the enemy in the ninth.

Manager Bond of the Wausaultes, who, during his temporary retirement, takes coupons at the portcullis and smokes cigars with bright colored bands, that smell funny—the cigars—chose to pitch Fennell in the second game. Mr. Bond figured that if his twirler had the goat of the Sox in the first game, there was reason and hope that he might also win the second The logic of Mr. Bond was perfect.

Sadness and sorrow, Gertie, we failed during the nine innings that lasted past even the time of the maid's meal, to score even one. In seven of the nine innings we went down with precision equaling that of a crack drill squad. At no stage of the game did we get a man past second base. If Fennell was good in the first game, he was gooder in the second.

The story of the Wausau runs is as simple as the story of Mary McLane's life. They were driven in as the result of use of the old oaken bat.

In the fourth, Cahill hit for three sacks, through some slow retrieving upon the part of the opera bouffe outfield that was in our garden yesterday. After DuChien had hit at three where they lurkethed not, Mr. Dunbar cracked one to Marion in the center pasture. Knowing the delicate state of health of the Marion heaving arm, Cahill had not the least hesitation in coming home on the catch

Johnson and Dolan singled in this round, but with Johnson on third Brody flew to Altermott.

In the ninth, just to make the game sure, two runs were added to the score of the twice hated enemy.

Pitcher-First Baseman Dunbar, who also works in a mine when he is not otherwise engaged, and who therefore shows versatility, hit one in this final round to left for one bag. He went to second on a passed ball and scored when O'Brien let one from Johnson get away from him. Dolan hit cleanly to right, Johnson going to third on the paste. Brody flew to right, but Wallinder hit to right and Jonnson was over. Schieffer ended the round by going out from Altermott to Holstrom.

It was indeed sad to lose both of the games, as our climb to the seventh position is put off just that much further, and with the brand of baseball played by the soulless Sox yesterday, the climb to a posish ahead of that brazen band from Red Wing may be postponed for another session.

Eau Claire comes this afternoon and we will see what we shall see.

For yesterday's details, sad though they be, gaze with heavy lids below, on the grave of our hopes:

ANGELS WIN FROM DUKES

Nicholson Proves Enigma, Schooners Taking Final Game 4 to 0.

Yesterday Eau Claire handed a package to the Superior Red Legs, taking the final game of the series by the score of 4 to 0. Nickolsen was a puzzle to the Dukes all the way through, while poor Josie Frick did not hinder the Schooners from pounding out an easy victory.

Bailey and Nicholson earned $50 each in excess of the regular and settled emulument that they draw from the management of the team. Both players hit the bull sign, for which stunt there is a standing offer of half a century of American money. This is the first time the bull has got his at any of the Minny league parks.

Only two Superior players got beyond first, snappy fielding cutting off several chances to get around the diamond. Nickolson had the Red Legs eating out of his paw.

HIGH WIND PREVENTS RECORDS AT EMPIRE CITY.

New York, Aug. 26.—The third day of the grand circuit meeting of the Empire City tracks drew a good crowd and in two of the three events the largest fields of the meeting so far were on the track. A high wind prevailed during the afternoon, precluding any record time being made.

General H, the bay stallion by Combineer, won the 2:09 class trot in straight heats, and Teasel and Alice Roosevelt divided second and third moneys after two close finishes.

The first split heats of the meeting occurred in the Beacon stakes for pacers, 2:05 class. Baron Whips won the first and Ess H. Kay the second. Only the winners of heats were allowed to go in the third heat and while the starter did not give them the word, the two flew away, neither driver evidently having heard the bell. Ess H. Kay finished first and after some discussion it was mutually agred that Ess H. Kay should get first money.

Although scheduled for five days, the meeting will end today with the Matron futurity stakes of $15,000 for 3-year-old pacers; a 2:20 class for pacers and the Bonner Memorial stakes of $2,500 for trotters in the 2:05 class.

DULUTH GETS TOURNAMENT

State Tennis Players Will Come to Head of Lakes in 1911.

Duluth Men Eliminated From Play, Kennedy Losing to Adams.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 26.—Pausing in the midst of the excitement at the nets, the Minnesota tennis stars who are striving for the state title met yesterday at the Town and Country club to elect officers, decide on the location of the 1911 tournament, and incidentally and especially to regale the members of the Duluth team, who have put up a gallant fight all through the meet, but who were eliminated from play yesterday.

The banquet was a successful affair. The address of welcome for the Twin City players was extended by Hugh T. Halbert of St. Paul. He was heartily applauded, as was C. E. De Witt of the games committee of the Duluth Boat club, under whose auspices the Zenith City men were sent to St. Paul. Mr. De Witt invited the officials of the Minnesota Tennis association to hold the 1911 tournament in Duluth, stating that Duluth would make it one of the best ever held.

Officers Elected.

The enthusiasts adjourned into a short business session, and it was unanimously decided to accept the Duluth invitation. J. H. Wheeler, who is often called the "Father of Tennis" in St. Paul, was elected president of the association, with Ward Gurton of Minneapolis a vice president and the following men on the board of directors:

C. K. Dickerman of Duluth, George Lyon, Interlocken club, Minneapolis; F. C. McGill, Bryn Mawr club, Minneapolis; John Adams, White Bear club, and J. J. Armstrong of the Kewatin club, St. Paul. The board will later select a secretary-treasurer, who will undoubtedly be a Duluth man.

Yesterday's play was not up to the standard set in the previous days. The courts were hard and the sun shone clearly, but the air was too chilly for fast play.

The ladies' matches were interesting, Miss Gwendolyn Rees defeating Miss Barrows and winning her way into the finals, where she will meet Miss Chase of Minneapolis this afternoon for the single championship. The winner will have an opportunity to play Miss Marguerite Davis of St. Paul, who won the state championship last year. Adams played a hard match with La Fans and the latter gave him a pretty run in the last set. Adams then went into his match with Kennedy, Duluth, and beat him in three straight sets, 6-4, 6-1 and 6-2.

Kennedy Is Eliminated.

Kennedy netted many attempts and missed many hard swings. He lost the first three games, but in the fourth he volleyed brilliantly and began a series of deuce games in which Adams killed every loose ball. The Duluth man seemed unable to cover his court and Adams smashed deep at all times. Neither player came to the net with frequency. Adams' back court game was winning and he stayed there, using a heavy lawford to keep his opponent back on the line where he was forced to take the ball on a low bound and was frequently aced while on his approaches to the net Adams killed the ball so heavily that it bounded high over his opponent's head. Kennedy was unsteady at all times and his drive flew out or netted oftener than it reached the goal.

Wheeler won from Stellwagon without difficulty and should take his match with Storms, while many at the tournament think that he will be able to triumph over Adams Saturday morning.

Amundsen and Davis of Duluth were put out of the running in the doubles by Wheeler and Jayne, and Stellwagon and Gill of Minneapolis then triumphed over Kennedy and his teammate Washburn, while Northrup of Minneapolis put Dickerman in the consolation, completing the eliminating of the Duluth men, who cheered up on the thought that they are carrying the 1911 tournament with them which will be worthy compensation. The summaries:

Men's Singles.

Wheeler of St. Paul won from Stellwagon of Minneapolis, 8-6, 6-3.

Adams of St. Paul won from La Fans of Minneapolis, 7-5, 6-4.

Adams won from Kennedy of Duluth, taking him into the final round, 6-4, 6-1, 6-2.

Men's Doubles.

Wheeler and Jayne won from Amundsen and Davis of Duluth, 6-1, 6-1.

Stellwagon and Gill of Minneapolis won from Kennedy and Washburn of Duluth, 6-4, 6-0.

Consolations.

Northrup of Minneapolis won from Miss Jackson of Minneapolis, 6-1, 6-4.

Miss Chase won from Miss Burton of Minneapolis by default.

Miss Rees of St. Paul, won from Miss Barrows of St. Paul, 6-4, 6-2.

VETERAN TED SULLIVAN MAKES SHORT TRIP.

Ted Sullivan, former baseball player, one time scout, author and historian of the game, was in the city yesterday and this morning. He is on his way to Rainy River to visit friends. The veteran says with a slight trace of impatience in his voice, that he is not a scout, and that his visit to this city is not for the purpose of spotting out diamond gems in the rough.

Mr. Sullivan says he has an agency for supplying minor leagues with players, but is in no way connected with the major leagues. He also stated that baseball was in a very prosperous condition, and that it was on a higher plane than ever before in the history of the game.

The authority on baseball was an interested spectator at the two games of yesterday afternoon.

READY FOR BIG RACES

Illinois National Guardsmen Patrol the Elgin Automobile Course.

Three Races on the Program Will Be Run Simultaneously.

Elgin, Ill., Aug. 26.—Illinois national guardsmen this morning took charge of the Elgin automobile race course and cleared it of all vehicles preparatory to stretching their patrol over every foot of its approaches. All through the night automobile after automobile load of spectators arrived and the vantage points within and at the side of the big course took the aspect of a bivouac. Here and there in the maze of motors was observed a horse drawn vehicle, testifying to the interest in the great road race which is scheduled to begin today.

The clear stretch of road and its difficult turns proved too alluring in the bright moonlight for some of the drivers who are entered in the races, and George Robertson, the first American to win the classic Vanderbilt cup race; Harry F. Grant, another Vanderbilt cup winner and Ray Harroun, took a practice spin around the course finishing in less than nine minutes.

The program today includes three races: The Fox River trophy, distance 135.57 miles, 16 laps; the Kane County trophy, 169.46 miles, 20 laps, and the Illinois trophy, 203.35 miles, 24 laps.

It was decided to run the three races simultaneously. The entries in the three races for today are:

BIG PROGRAM AT BOAT CLUB

Yacht Races, Rowing Contest and Motor Boat Events Planned.

A big sport program will be put on at the Duluth Boat club tomorrow afternoon. In the 28-foot sail boat class the Feather, Scud and Undine are tied with fourteen points each in the contest for the Commercial club cup, and the race tomorrow afternoon will decide the winner of this trophy.

In the 32-foot class the Allegro and Minotaur will fight it out for the Joseph B. Cotton cup. Both of these races give promise of being the best sailing races of the season.

There will also be a race for green sailors in the club boats. The last race was won by Kent Harrison. This race will be called at 2:45.

There promises to be a great contest in the four-oared races between the crack bantam four, a four picked from among the best oarsmen of the older men, who have won laurels in the past, and the four chosen from the junior eight.

While the bantams are the logical favorites, because of their great showing the present season, the other two crews may be counted upon to give the smaller men a race.

Motor boat races will round out the program. There will be races between the 20 and 26-foot classes.

Following the talk of leaving the Inland Lakes Yachting association, there is a plan on foot to hold a regatta here next season, during the rowing regatta between the three Minnesota clubs. The Duluth sailors are heartily in favor of this idea, and some definite action may be taken before the close of the present season.

ROUND THE WORLD MAKES FAST TIME.

Saratoga, N. Y., Aug. 26.—Round the World, at the very liberal price of 9 to 10, easily won the Wellesley handicap for fillies 2-year-olds here yesterday. Walsh had the mount and he broke the filly off in front and let her step right along. The filly won easily by four lengths in the fastest time of the meeting, stepping the 5½ furlongs in 1:06 flat.

MINOR HEIR SETS RECORD

Savage Horse Paces Mile at Galesburg in Two Minutes Flat.

Mark Set in Special Race in Which Hedgewood Boy Is Beaten.

Galesburg, Ill., Aug. 26.—A new world's pacing record, in a race, of 2:00 was set yesterday by Minor Heir in a special race at the Great Western Circuit harness meet. Brisk breezes were blowing and the weather was cool during the race in which M. L. Hersey of Saavage, Minn., drove Minor Heir to victory against Hedgewood Boy. The fastest quarter, the third, was covered in 29 seconds.

The previous record of 2:00½ was held jointly by Minor Heir and Star Pointer. Hersey drove Dan Patch when that animal paced a mile against time in 1:55 but he declared yesterday's drive was the greatest that he ever had made, everything considered. He asserted that the wind made the track two seconds slow and that the temperature was too low for the best work.

J. B. Ewing of Roseville, Ill., breeder of Minor Heir, a bay horse by Heir At Law, saw yesterday's race. Ewing sold the record-breaker two years for less than $5,000. As a two-year-old, Minor Heir soon made a phenomenal record. He was purchased a year ago last February for $45,000 from P. C. Isaacs of Johnstown, Pa., by H. M. Savage of Minnesota.

In addition to the special race between Minor Heir and Hedgewood Boy, a good card of trots and paces was presented to an unusually large crowd.

CLERICAL FIELDING ERROR CUT DOWN AVERAGE.

Yesterday afternoon Loyal Citizen Holstrom received a letter from the office of John A. Elliott, informing him that his clouting average had been increased considerable by the running down of a clerical fielding error in the home office. The error in question credited Holstrom with being at bat 264 times, while he was only up 180 times for the games up to Aug. 8.

There were some plum suspicious fans around these parts, who wondered muchly when they read the official averages in The Herald, stating that Holstrom was only connecting to the tune of .201. The true bill of baseball health puts the Duluth hitter up among the 400 of baseball in this league, and also makes him the only Duluth player in the charmed .300 hitting group.

As Mr. Holstrom is one of the kind most solicitous regarding his batting average, often inquiring anxiously about it, the notice of the high standing will be as meat and drink to his rugged personality.

The final matches for the cup, of which the Australians are the defenders for the third successive year, will be played in December.

"STARVING IMMIGRANTS" PROSPEROUS AND WELL FED

"Bu-z-z" went the telephone in the office of the Omaha railroad. That may not be exactly the way the telephone sounded, but neverthless it rang out, sharp and impatient like.

One of the young men of the office answered the imperative ring. Phones have different ways of ringing—this was one of the answer-me-quick kind of rings.

The voice that came over the wire was excited; in fact, very much so.

"There are thirty-five Russian immigrants down at the union depot," it went on to say, "and they have not had a thing to eat since they left Eau Claire. They are almost famished for the want of food."

To add to the anxiety of the young man employed by the Omaha, for he was very young, and hunger is a most realistic and terrible thing to young men, the voice over the telephone added that the immigrants had not had anything to eat since they left New York, barring the slight fragmentary eat-as-you-can feed at the Eau Claire station.

Here was a most alarming situation. Thirty-five Russian immigrants in the charge of the Omaha, and not one of them, father, mother, or child having eaten what you would call a square meal since the little old boat docked at New York! The young man looked alarmed, grabbed his hat and started out to right the situation.

He dashed into the Missabe office, over which presides C. W. Kleswetter. He was very much excited. He breezed into the office, informal like, and breathed his message of woe out, like a man relieved at getting trouble out of his system.

"The Omaha road is responsible for the lives of these people," the young man almost sobbed out. He was calmed, perturbed though he was, and in company with the Missabe agent set out for the union depot, where the near-starving thirty-five men were supposed to be in the last pangs of that nauseating feeling that comes before the throes of death remove from this vale of tears those who are going for lack of even one of the fifty-seven varieties, or corn meal mush, or any sustaining or highly nourishing food.

"We must make haste," cried the young man, and he grabbed the arm of Mr. Kleswetter, much as a quarterback would assist a team-mate through the rioutous line of scrimmage, before the new rules cut rough actions.

"Be calm," Mr. Kieswitter kept constantly reiterating, seeking thus to cool and also collect the nerves of the young man.

And all the time the beautiful August sun shone down with benign complacency, seemingly unaware of the trouble that lurked within the bosom of the young man.

The longest journey must come to an end, wrote some expert in misery. Finally the depot was reached. Down there is the third class waiting room, huddled no doubt in corners and on benches, faint and wan, would be found the cheerless people of dark and gloomy Russia, who had not eaten one long, thorough and Fletcherized meal since the train bore them westward from little old Neo York.

The young men hesitated on the brink of the door, if doors have doors. Then he set his lips, in two, thin, determined lines, and said: "Come on, let us see the worst."

They entered the big, dingy room. Childish laughter and some words that sounded like some of the more difficult accomplishments of Noah Webster, floated out to meet the incoming railroad officials. Starving people don't laugh, at least, not in heart rending novels. It is considered very poor form to laugh when you are subsisting on scenery and imagination. Then they came head-on, to use a railroad term, upon the huddled groups of rustic Russians.

Several were eating sanwiches that would make a large stage sandwich look like those sometimes offered at bazaars. Others were laughing; one fond mother was chucking a fat baby boy, who, heavens 'twas eating candy. One young Russian was contentedly smoking a cigerette, in a manner one smokes when one has eaten to the point of extereme fullness. No, there were no starving people among those Russian immigrants; every one seemed in that state of mind that comes often when one has done extreme justice to a varied assortment of the material, but nevertheless necessary things of this life—namely, food.

The young railroad man gave a sigh, that denoted with simple eloquence, relief. Mr. Kiesweitter laughed, though he did not sigh, as if the weight of a nation has been lifted suddenly from his mind.

Over in the corner was a box filled to the topmost level with canned goods of various sorts.

"Guess they will exist until they get to Winnipeg," remarked Mr. Kiesweitter, and his fears vanished like the morning mist, the young man, the natural flush of youth returning to his once wan face, was forced by the very logic of the food supply to agree in the view.

The thirty-five immigrants are on their way to Winnipeg. They came from the lower provinces of Russia, and will, presumably, join the Russian colony in Manitoba. They will leave this evening for their last point of stoppage.

How did the message come? That is what the young railroad man set out to discover, as he left the depot.

COPPER LEADERS SLIGHTLY HIGHER

Market Is Dull and Bears Oversell It---Professionals Optimistic.

The copper market opened moderately firm and after a fractional advance, values declined, but quickly rallied and closed strong indicating that the market had been oversold. Trading was light and professional. The bears endeavored to use the frosts in the corn belt as an argument to depress prices. Stocks sold off, but the recovery was good. The bears were aggressive, but they quickly overreached themselves. The market closed mixed, the leaders being slightly higher than yesterday, while the rest of the list was about on a parity with the closing prices of yesterday.

Professional sentiment was pessimistic but the foreign market came strong and caused a better feeling on this side. The political and crop situations are the two chief factors in the market and neither can be construed as bullish at the present time. The bank statement tomorrow is expected to be unfavorable. A wire to Paine, Webber & Co., said: "For the week ending Aug. 25 copper exports were 6.597 tons, 24,345 tons since Aug. 1, compared with 19,533 tons in the same period last year.

Trading was light and the market was weak. Amazon responded to the heavy decline in Butte-Ballaklava and sold from $3 to $2.75. Butte-Ballaklava was exceedingly weak and was liquidated by small holders. The price declined from $7.50 to $6 and at the close less than fifty shares were sold on the Boston exchange for $6.50. The full paid Butte Alex-Scott sold at $6, and Butte-Ballaklava sold here at $7.62½ at the opening. Copper Queen sold at 29c; Denn at $3.18¾, $3.25 and then at $3.18¾; Red Warrior opened at $2.43¾ and sold at that figure, declined to $2.37½ and rallied to sales at $2.50. It was one of the few local stocks to advance. Shattuck sold at $22.25 and Calumet & Montana at $1 and $1.06¼. Mowitza sold at 76c and North American at $3.12½.

Amalgamated sold at $64, $63.75, $64.50, $64, $64.62½ and $64.50; Greene at $7.12½ to $7.25; North Butte at $27.75 to $28.25; Calumet & Arizona at $60.25 to $60; Superior & Pittsburg at $12.

SAYS OUTLOOK IS ENCOURAGING

McKnight Returns From Tour of District---Miller on Way Home.

Alexander G. McKnight Republican candidate for congress, returned to Duluth this morning from to tour of the district and Clarence B. Miller, Republican candidate for congress, is expected to reach Duluth from Oklahoma Monday morning.

Mr. McKnight came home much encouraged as a result of what inquiries he made during his trip. He says he has no doubt that he will carry Mille Lacs county and Isanti county with votes to spare. Wherever he went, Mr. McKnight said, he found reason to believe that strong support would be accorded him. Many voters declared themselves in his favor.

Mr. Miller has been engaged in investigating Indian land contract affairs in the Southwest as a member of the congressional committee named to inquire into the sensational charges of corruption and bribery uttered by Senator Gore in the closing hours of the last session of congress. The work has occupied several weeks. Mr. Miller is expected to relieve R. M. Hughes, his secretary, of many of his campaign duties that have devolved upon him in the absence of his chief, and to take up the threads of his argument with Mr. McKnight and the voters.

Next week should witness a decided increase in the tumult of battle.

ON THE IRON RANGES

GOOD PHYSIQUE SAVED WILCOX

Mining Company's Special Officer Nearly Recovered From Brutal Attack.

Virginia, Minn., Aug. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Harry Wilcox has left for Detroit, Mich., to visit his parents for several weeks. From there he expects to go West to locate. Mr. Wilcox is the Oliver Iron Mining company police officer who was so badly cut up a few months ago. He has fully recovered from his injuries with the exception of his right arm which is still in a feeble state owing to a number of the arteries having been severed. Wilcox owes his life to his splendid physical condition, as the shock from the loss of blood and numerous serious wounds, would have resulted fatal to a majority of men. Five of the assailants of the young officer are now serving terms in the Stillwater penitentiary.

HUNTING BARRED ON RESERVATION

Uncle Sam Will Not Allow White Men to Hunt on Boise Fort Reserve.

Nett Lake, Minn., Aug. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—If there are any Duluth or Twin City nimrods planning on hunting on the Boise Fort Indian reservation they better change their plans, as Supt. Reagan of the Nett Lake Indian school has received advices from the Indian department that no permits will be issued to whites to hunt on the local reserve. The letter is self explanatory and follows:

"Department of the Interior, Office of Indian Affairs, Washington, Aug. 20, 1910.

ALBERT S. REAGAN, Esq.,
Superintendent Nett Lake Indian School, Nett Lake, Minn.

"Sir:

The office has received your communication dated June 20, 1910, transmitting a petition from the Indians under your charge requesting that white men be permitted to hunt on the reservation on payment of a permit fee.

The office appreciates the advantages which would accrue to the Indians, were hunting permitted on the reservation, but this is a matter controlled by the United States law and not by the regulations of the office. Section 2137, Revised Statutes, provides that:

"'Every person other than an Indian who, within the limits of any tribe with whom the United States has existing treaties, hunts, traps or takes and destroys any peltries or game, except for subsistence in the Indian country, shall forfeit all the traps, guns and ammunition in his possession, used or procured to be used for that purpose, and all peltries so taken; and shall be liable in addition to a penalty of $500.'"

"The office is therefore unable to comply with the request of the Indians. Very respectfully, C. F. HAUKE, Second Assistant Commissioner.

WHAT'S IN A NAME? PRECIOUS LITTLE

Namesakes of Washington, Dewey, Roosevelt and Hobart in Poorhouse.

Van Wert, Ohio, Aug. 26.—George Washington Baker and Dewey Roosevelt Hobart Baker are on the way to the poorhouse. George Washington, the father of Dewey Roosevelt, etc., etc., went handcuffed, having become violent when the local humane officer took charge of the family.

Officer Charles Kirk was called to the village of Wilshire to investigate a family of five children starving and half clad that were begging from house to house.

The family came here from Indiana about two years ago. The father is a day laborer, but has worked little for many months, and the family was in dire distress. Shortly after the Bakers arrived in this vicinity, one of the larger boys accidentally shot and killed his little brother. The boy is now serving a term in the workhouse for another offense.

When the authorities took charge of the family the father became abusive, and had to be handcuffed. He, with Dewey, aged 10, one 12, Avery 7, Cecil 5, and Roosevelt Hobart, 4, was sent to the poorhouse pending action by the probate court. The mother and her babe were cared for in the village.

EXPECT TRAINS FROM THIS CITY

International Falls Looks for Direct Trains From Zenith City.

International Falls, Minn., Aug. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—An engineer of the public works department of the province of Ontario visited Fort Frances this week to inspect the piers and site of the proposed Terminal company's international bridge, stating that the work of erecting the superstructure was to be started soon and that before it could be done it would be necessary to determine the amount of bonds to be required from the builders, hence the necessity of his visit. It is confidently believed that the Canadian Northern will be running its Duluth passenger trains through this town across the bridge before the first of the year, and that depots will also be erected here in the menatime.

A crew of cruisers, comprising twelve men in all, is looking out a line from the end of the Terminal company's Loman line to Thief River Falls, presumably for the Soo but possibly for the Terminal company, as the latter is understood to be in position to finance the 125 miles of road necessary to be built to connect with Thief River Falls.

COMPANY WILL NOT DO LOGGING

Manager of Oliver Company Says Burned Over Timber Will Be Sold.

General Manager J. H. McLean of the Oliver Iron Mining company denies that the company will log the tract of timbered land near Mesaba, in township 60 north, range 12 northeast.

"There is no truth in the story published this morning," said Mr. McLean. "The Oliver Iron Mining company will not do any logging; it will not employ thousands of men in the woods. The report is unfounded.

"The company will sell this timbered land. Negotiations for the sale are practically completed. Some details remain to be attended to, and when the deal is closed the Oliver Iron Mining company will have no interest in the lands involved.

"It is safe to assume that the tract will be logged. That is what the purchaser is buying it for. I am not prepared to say anything about whom the purchaser may be. That is not necessary until the negotiations are concluded and the deal closed."

This tract contains in the neighborhood of 100,000,000 feet of white pine timber. It is supposed that the logging operations when they are undertaken will occupy two seasons and that the timber will be brought to Duluth for manufacture into lumber.

Forest fires ran through this tract in the spring and this fact may have samething to do with the sale, as much of the timber will be worthless unless logged soon.

ACTION IS POSTPONED

School Board Will Consider Petition of Park Pointers.

"Open the Radisson School for Four Grades," Is Request.

"The mind of no mother on Park Point would be at ease if her children were away from home all day. Open the Radisson school, at least for the first four grades, and heat it and ventilate it as well as you can until we are big enough to warrant the erection of a fine brick school building, with all modern improvements and absolutely fireproof," said J. H. Cook in presenting the petition of Park Point residents to the school board this afternoon, asking that the Radisson school be reopened in preference to the transportation of the children to the Whittier school.

The board took no definite action today, the matter being referred to the school committee for a report next Friday evening at the regular meeting.

W. L. Jackson, J. H. Cook and J. W. Marvin presented the claims of the Park Point residents. They stated that the Whittier school is reported to be insanitary, but that the principal objection is that the children would be left to their own devices for two hours each day at noon and that the street car service would be uncertain in winter.

The board's position was explained as wishing to determine what would be best for the children. Dr. Boyer said it would be impossible to grade the Radisson school, while the Whittier is graded and would give better instruction to the children. Supt. Denfeld said the authorities are all urging centralization of school districts and transportation of children.

The only clash was between Mr. Marvin and Mr. Denfeld over the qualification of the teachers that were sent to Park Point. Finally, the entire matter was allowed to rest with the committee on schools for the time.

The employes of the Lakewood pumping station presented a petition that the children from there be transported to the Lester Park school. The matter was referred to the committee on schools with power to act.

FULL OF MEANING.

Richard Croker, a few days before his departure for Florida, was the guest of honor at a dinner at the St. Regis.

Mr. Croker, praising Judge Gaynor's oratory, said:

"His oratory is so concise. He packs so much meaning into so few words. He is like the old clerk whose master said to him:

"'John, that's a very shabby office coat you're wearing.'

"'Yes, sir,' said the clerk, meaningly. 'I got this coat with the last raise you gave me.'"

Shrubbery Planted on Courthouse Grounds Survived the Drouth.

By Next Year the Lawns Should Be in Excellent Shape.

A great part of the shrubbery planted on the courthouse grounds has come through the dry weather in fine shape and the improvement is now more than noticeable.

At first it did not seem probable that more than one-half of the small shrubs and trees that were set out early in the spring would live. Lately, however, they have blossomed out into vigorous growth.

The season has been dry and that has kept them back to a very large extent. Up until a short while ago they were a spindling lot of weaklings.

Only a few have died and their places will be filled with others. The hill behind the building is now in fine shape. The wire screening that was sunk into the ground has keep the terraces almost as true as they were at first. Incidentally the screening has saved the county hundreds of dollars, for without it some of the hard rains of late would surely have washed the newly made bank away. As all this earth was hauled for a distance of several miles and graded at great expense, the screening has proved to be very valuable. It was the first experiment of the kind in the city.

The lawns are green and well kept and in another year they will be almost perfect. The Fourth avenue west grounds are now in fine shape. The rains have come at just the right time to necessitate much of the work being done over, but at the present time the ground is firm and it is believed that a hard rain would not now effect it.

The grass sown early in the spring is coming up in great shape. The grounds were gone over recently with a garden rake and more seed scattered in. By the middle of next summer the ground that has long since been an eyesore to many should be covered by one of the most beautiful lawns in the city.

The kiosk adds much to the beauty of the grounds. Not only is it an ornament but it is useful as well. It is surprising to notice each day how many people go out of their way to read the signs on the kiosk. It has been in working order for some time past.

The gravel paths that were made across the ground are popular for people on their way to or home from work.

The government has been engaged for some time in grading its grounds to conform with those of the courthouse. The old high board fence, which has separated the two properties for years has been torn down and in its place a beautiful terrace is being made.

The stone fences are also to be torn down and when the improvements are finally finished the grounds will conform with the improvements made by the county commissioners.

HE KNEW THEM.

Collector Loeb, at a dinner in New York, praised a certain customs inspector.

"His success," said Collector Loeb, "is due to his knowledge of human nature. He is like a boy I used to know in Albany.

"This boy got vaccinated on the right arm, and the doctor gave him a red 'I've been vaccinated' ribbon to wear on his coat sleeve. But the lad proceeded to tie the ribbon on his left arm.

"'Why,' said the doctor, 'you are putting the ribbon on the wrong arm.'

"'No,' said the urchin; 'you don't know the boys at our school.'"

EX-CONGRESSMAN HELD FOR TRIAL

Sibley and Four Others to Face Election Fraud Charges.

Warren, Pa., Aug. 26.—Waiving a hearing on information charging them with conspiring to debauch the electors of Warren county, Joseph C. Sibley who recently resigned as candidate for congress on the Republican ticket in the Twenty-eighth congressional district of the state, Frank R. Taylor of Franklin, Charles D. Crandall, George B. Munn and D. M. Howard of this county, were held for trial here today by Justice of the Peace H. S. Perry.

The proceedings occupied over an hour and a half. All of the defendants were present except Mr. Sibley, who, according to physicians, is suffering from heart trouble.

TRY TO HOLD UP TRAIN FROM MINNEAPOLIS.

Des Moines, Iowa, Aug. 26.—Eight men attempted to rob the Iowa Central passenger train south-bound from Minneapolis, near Northwood early today. Members of the crew succeeded in placing five of them under arrest, and they are held at Northwood.

WIFE AND COUNTRY.

Paul D. Cravath, the noted New York lawyer, said at a luncheon at the Lawyer's club:

"Vacation time is here, and already that dreadful song about the wife gone to the country is being resurrected. But a variant to the song was furnished by a conversation I overheard the other night.

"'Hello, Smith,' said one man to another. 'I'm glad to see you back at the club again, old fellow. Wife off to the country, eh?'

'No,' Smith growled. 'She's got back.'"

STABBED BY DRUNKEN FRIEND

Body of West Duluth Man, Killed in Dakota, Brought Home.

William Johnson returned to West Duluth last night from Columbus, N. D., bringing with him the body of his brother Henry H. Johnson.

Henry, according to his brother, was stabbed to death last Sunday night by a fellow workman on a thrashing crew near Stampede, N. D. Johnson and Albert Benson had been to town together and driven home. Benson went into the house and Johnson returned to town with the rig. Benson being in more or less intoxicated condition did not understand that Johnson was to take the rig, which belonged to Benson, and when he discovered it was gone flew into a rage. Going back up the road he met Johnson returning, climbed into the buggy and stabbed him with a pen knife, severing a large vein in the neck.

As soon as the deed was done, Benson came to his senses, and at Johnson's request tried to hurry him to a doctor. They drove to Stampede first and being unable to find a physician there drove back to Columbus. Johnson was dead from loss of blood before arriving in Columbus.

Benson gave himself up and is awaiting a hearing.

The funeral will be held this afternoon from the residence of Johnson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Johnson, 6324 Worden street, at 2 o'clock, and from the West Duluth Baptist church at 2:30. Interment will be at Oneota cemetery.

COMMERCIAL CLUB.

Several Important Questions to Be Considered at Regular Meeting.

At the meeting of the West Duluth Commercial club this evening the report of the committee which has been investigating the advisability of permitting the vacation of a number of streets and avenues in the territory to be covered by the Canadian Northern yards, will be considered. It is very improbable that any objection to the vacation as a whole will be made, though a request may be sent to the council Monday to refuse the vacation of one of the streets in order to make an outlet for the district above. The streets asked to be vacated are Sixty-fifth, Sixty-sixth, Sixty-sevents, Sixty-eighth and Sixty-ninth avenues and parts of Gosnold, Nicollet and Bristol streets.

About 650 feet of each thoroughfare is sought to be closed up.

The Ramsey street extension will also be considered. The club will also propably lend its sanction to the movement on foot to secure a flag station at the foot of Sixty-ninth avenue west for the benefit of workers at the steel plant living in that vicinity.

The report of the committee on a union depot for West Duluth is not due for two weeks, and nothing will be done on that proposition until that time.

FAMILY IS DESTITUTE.

Without Food or Fuel and Ordered to Leave House.

In response to a telephone call last night from neighbors, Officer Anderson went out to the residence of John Hagen, 301 South Seventy-first avenue west, to investigate conditions. He found Mrs. Hagen and her six children in a pitiable condition. Hagen had been drunk for some time it is claimed, and his wife was destitute. There was no fuel and no food in the house. In addition the Hagens have been ordered to move out within four days by the Canadian Northern engineers who are now working close to the house.

The police got busy and hunted up Hagen who promised to get work this morning and provide a place for his family to go to.

FRAME RESIDENCE IS DESTROYED BY FIRE.

Fire destroyed the residence of Joe Lanthier on the bay front this morning, doing damage amounting to about $1,000. There was about $300 insurance on the property. The fire started from a defective chimney and spread so rapidly that little could be saved.

The West Duluth fire department were called to the scene of the blaze at 10:30, but on arriving there found the house practically destroyed. The house is located at 324 South Fifty-eighth avenue west.

Incendiary Still at Large.

Constable Otto Kreuger of New Duluth reports no success in his search for the incendiary who is said to be resonpsible for the midnight fires which have afflicted that suburb. The man he is looking for mysteriously disappeared after the blaze Wednesday night and a thorough search of the town failed to locate him.

NOT PLANNING TO BUY OTHER FIRMS

New Wholesale House Will Have New Building on Lake Avenue.

Rumors have been in circulation that the Rust-Parker-Martin company, the new wholesale grocery firm, was negotiating for the purchase of one or two of the other local wholesale houses in that line of business in Duluth. The firms mentioned as possible sellers were the Wright-Clarkson Mercantile company and the Barthe-Martin company. The Barthe-Martin company has no connection with the Martin interests in the new concern.

C R. Rust, head of the new firm, denied today that there is any truth in the rumors that have been heard concerning such negotiations.

"Our company does not plan to buy out any house," he said.

The permanent home of the new company will be at the head of the Lake avenue slip, where a new building will be erected.

GRANGER MAY SUCCEED RUST

Former Secretary of Wholesale House in Charge Temporarily at Least.

J. E. Granger, formerly secretary of the Stone-Ordean-Wells company, who resigned that position about a year ago, is again with the concern, and it is understood that he has taken or is about to take the position left vacant by the recent resignation of Cameron R. Rust, who was general manager of the company.

Mr. Granger said today that the company has no announcement to make at this time but intimated that within a few days definite information as to the concern's plans would be available. He is now busily engaged in the business of the firm and apparently is in charge.

Mr. Granger has been a resident of Duluth for many years and during the time he was secretary and buyer of the Stone-Ordean-Wells company he was well known in the business world at the Head of the Lakes.

Country Sells Liberally for the Immediate Future---Wheat Declines.

Fall Run Expected to Be Short---Longs Take Profits ---Flax Lower.

Duluth Board of Trade, Aug. 26.—Wheat declined today under freer offerings from the country, continued large world's shipments, dull cash market and profit-taking after yesterday's bulge. There was no export business. September wheat lost ⅞@¾c, December ¾@⅞c, and May ⅞c.

Flax was slightly weaker on scattered country offerings to arrive. Trading was light. September lost 1½c, October 1½c, November 1c and December was unchanged. The deferred futures occupy a comparatively strong position and held more firmly than the September contract.

Cash wheat was on a parity with September to a discount of ⅛c. Durum lost ¼c, oats ½c and rye and barley were unchanged.

Sentiment was mixed and the crowd was uncertain in its expression in the pit. Cash markets were weak and there was some profit taking after the opening which caused values to decline from a weak opening. As the session progressed values firmed. Trading was exceedingly light and offers in the pit were scarce.

Country offerings were more free and increased receipts at primary markets in the Northwest are expected. The run of spring wheat this fall will be small, most people believe, as the farmer is storing a large amount of stuff and is disposed to hold for higher prices. In the Southwest the run of winter wheat is greatly reduced. Winter wheat thrashing is completed and farmers are holding their choice stuff for advanced values. Returns from thrashing in the Northwest are generally greater than was expected. New wheat is delivered in an exceptionally clean condition and is of good quality.

Flour sales were moderately liberal today and millers were interested in cash markets but did not buy much stuff. Offerings were larger than for some time but the demand was slow. This market made scattered sales of flour to New York and New England. Southwestern millers continue to do a small amount of business on domestic account and a little business abroad. The export transactions are confined to low-grade flours. Winter wheat mills have an advantage on spring wheat mills regarding prices. Eastern millers Briefs .... compared with winter wheat and buyers of flour regard spring wheat patents too high compared with winter wheat flour.

Cables were mixed, but most foreign markets were higher including Liverpool. Wheat shipments this week are expected to show a slight decrease. Shipments from India and Argentina are expected to decline. Unsettled weather prevails in the United Kingdom and an absence of moisture is reported from Argentina. A big estimated yield of the Russian crop was regarded as much too high.

Traders held aloof from the market as they looked for liquidation in the September contract and they were not surprised when that option developed an early weakness. It became oversold quickly, however, and rallied, but at noon it was still under the cosing prices of yesterday. The trade is entirely professional and the public is not interested.

Drouth in the Northern part of Argentina is hurting the flax crop and moisture is an imperative necessity. About two-thirds of the acreage of Argentina is in the Northern part of the country. The flax in that region is said to have suffered considerable damage. The latest figures on acreage are as follows: Santa Fe, 660,000 hectares, Buenos Ayres, 441,000; Cordova, 170,000, Entre Tios, 230,000. A hectare is 2.471 acres.

Frosts in the Northwest were reported by the government, but the trade was unable to locate as much frost as the government indicated. In the successive nights light frosts have been reported from the Northwestern part of North Dakota and the flax crop is in more or less danger so long as the cool weather continues. There have been no reports of damage to flax on account of frosts except from two or three scattered localities on the plains of Montana.

The demand for linseed oil has improved considerably and the inquiries are abroad. Paint manufacturers and other consumers are taking a lively interest in the market, as their supplies are at a minimum and many are buying sparingly for immediate needs. Crushers' stocks of oil are exceedingly small. Buyers are disposed to contract only for oil for immediate necessities.

MARKET GOSSIP

Paint, Oil and Drug Review: Flax is the oldest and best known of fibers—from flax is manufactured the linen of the world.

Even before the children of Israel were brought captive into Egypt, Egyptologists tell us that flax-growing and linen-weaving were the principal industries of the people.

"Millions of tons of straw have been burned each year, much of which in quality and length for the production of fiber far excels the average straw from which the Russian peasant makes the fiber which chiefly supplies the linen fabrics of the world."

In analyzing this government report and in discussion with Dr. Dewey, the head of the department of fibers for the United States, and Dr. Charles Richard Dodge, formerly special agent in charge of fiber investigations for the department of agriculture, one of the recognized authorities of fiber in the world, we find that every four tons of this straw so destroyed will produce one ton of flax fiber, which when extracted has an appraised value, as appraised by Robert Andrews of Andrews & Co., linen, flax and tow importers, New York, linen products appraisers for the department of customs, and others—at an average of $300 per ton.

So that, on its very lowest valuation, 2,000,000 tons of flax fiber destroyed last year meant a loss to America of $600,000,000, and the same amount annually.

Many attempts have been made both in America and abroad to solve this perplexing problem of preparing the flax for the use of the spinner by some shorter, more economical and less laborious method than that which has been in use for over 4,000 years.

But the same type of brains, energy and ingenuity which invented the telegraph, the telephone, the electric light, and scores of other marvelous inventions were at work, and to Dr. R. R. Roberts belongs the credit for the solution of this great problem.

First, 2,000,000 tons of flax fiber, worth $600,000,000, can be produced from 8,000,000 tons of flax straw.

Second, the production of flax fiber ready for the spinner in America will stimulate manufacture in every department. All classes of linens now imported will be manufactured at home. Linen cloth, twine, cordage and thread mills will spring up in every flax-producing state. And linen in this century will take its legitimate place among the commercial products of America as cotton took its place in the last century.

"United States has some surplus wheat," says King of Toledo. "A while ago it looked like a domestic proposition. Both winter and spring wheat crops have turned out better than expected. Government August report indicated crop 666,000,000 bu, but next report should show trifle larger. Our bread and seed requirements are about 600,000,000 bu. This leaves at least 65,000,000 bu for export. Last season we exported 25,000,00 bu wheat and flour during July and August, but only 106,000,000 bu during the cereal year, smallest since 1905. Present season exports have been exceptionally light. France has been the chief buyer. Two years ago we exported 113,000,000 bu and three years ago 163,000,000 bu."

Thrashing returns to B. W. Snow, covering six of the leading oat states, show increases in yields as compared with those indicated by the government report of Aug. 1 of 4 to 6 bu per acre, which is equal to about 86,000,000 bu more than the aggregated estimated yield Aug. 1. This should make the total crop over 1,100,000,000 bu or about 100,000,000 bu more than last year. Yields in Kansas, Oklahoma and Nebraska show no change from the government report. Thrashing returns in other states follow:

Barrell said: Our St. Petersburg, Russia, correspondent cables us—Harvest is not yet ended. Final results will not be known until about Sept. 10. An official communication this week offers estimate of 895,000,000 bu of wheat. The estimate is greatly exaggerated. Rye crop is about an average. The wheat crop is small; 20 to 30 per cent of expectations have not been realized. Crop has been damaged by drouth early in the season and rain three weeks before harvest. The quality of the crop is poorer than last year. If rain continues, damage will be serious. Export business is at a standstill. Market dull. Holders are firm and buying is chiefly for consumption. Prices have slightly declined for all grades. During this week sellers were holding off and show no signs of weakness. Volga is selling wheat at good prices. Odessa is inclined to sell, supposedly on bad quality of wheat. The government is contracting wheat at higher prices than export prices.

Following the opening the market became firm and values showed an additional advance of ⅝d to ⅞d. Wheat Opens Weak and Short Sales Lower Values.

Chicago, Aug. 26.—Wheat opened weak today. In the first hour shorts who covered yesterday sold freely and values sagged about 1⅛c below the opening point. Foreign markets were firm, but were ignored and a quiet cash situation governed the market. Reports from the fields showed harvesting progressing rapidly. Elevator interests absorbed car lot offerings and disposed of futures. September opened ⅛@¼c to ¼@⅜c off at 98⅛@99c, added a fraction and then fell off to 98⅞c. December opened ¼c up to ¼@⅜c down at $1.03⅞@$1.03⅜ and sagged to $1.03¼.

The market continued heavy and fluctuations were within narrow limits. The close was easy with September ⅜@½c to ½c off at 98⅞c. December closed ½@½@⅝c down at $1.03¼.

The frost scare vanished with higher temperatures in the corn belt and values in the corn pit slumped accordingly, opening figures being from ½@¼c off. Commission houses were active sellers and the offerings were absorbed on resting orders at the lower levels by local traders. The cash demand was moderate and country sales were little in evidence. September opened ⅞@⅝c to 1c off at 58⅞@58½c.

Later the market dragged and closed weak with September 1¼c off at 60½c. December closed ⅞@1c down at 58½c.

Oats declined moderately in sympathy with the other grains and buying was scattered. September opened ¼@⅜c off at 34½@34⅜c. December opened ⅜@½c down at 36⅝@36¾c and both deliveries kept within the opening range in the first hour.

Provisions started weaker with corn after a comparatively steady opening. Pit traders took the selling side and commission houses bought. Opening figures on the September hog products were: Pork, $22.10, 12½c off; lard, $11.92½, 5c lower, and ribs, $12.10, 10c off.

Cotton Market.

New York, Aug. 26.—Cotton market opened steady at a decline of 21 points on August, but generally steady 3 points lower to 3 points higher. There were some August notices issued and scattering liquidation of that position caused the initial break while cables were lower than due and when it was seen that the absence of rain in the Southwest was not stimulating, but the support local, traders turned sellers and the market eased off to a net loss of about 25 points on August and 2 to 5 points on later months.

Spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 16.40; middling gulf, 16.65. Sales 7,700 bales. Futures closed steady. Closing bids: August, 16.54; September, 14.20; October, 13.57; November and December, 13.48; January, 13.46; February, 13.46; May, 13.56; June, 13.54; July, 13.53.

CLOSE DULL AND STRONG

Stock Market Develops Much Buoyancy---Grain Carriers Advance.

End of Frost Scare Gives Impetus to Security Values.

New York, Aug. 26.—Higher prices prevailed at the opening of the stock market, with Union Pacific, Reading, Southern Pacific and Interborough Metropolitan making gains of a point each. American Smelting, Brooklyn Transit, United States Steel and Chesapeake & Ohio were ½ to ¾ better.

The market wavered a bit and then went on upwards with the buying stimulated by the passing of the frost scare in the corn belt. Round amounts of United States Steel and some of the railroad stocks were bought, but the general buying fell off and the list became dull. Union Pacific, Consolidated Gas and Chicago Great Western advanced 1½, United States Steel 1¼ and Atchison, St. Paul, New York Central and International Harvester 1. Rock Island preferred broke 2⅜ and Pittsburg C. C. ⅞ St. Louis 1.

A more cheerful sentiment pervaded speculative circles today. The failure of the frost scare to materialize, which was responsible for the heavy selling yesterday, left the bears in a plight and they covered heavily at levels materially above yesterday's final figures. Speculation on the whole was purely professional, the recent introduction of politics as a factor in the market and the general concern over the money and crop conditions being sufficient to discourage much of the usual public interest in the market. Northern Pacific, Illinois Central, Great Northern preferred, Wabash preferred, Amalgamated Copper and Utah Copper gained a point. Southern railway preferred fell 1⅜, and United States Realty, 1½. At noon prices were in some cases ½ below the best. Bonds were steady.

The market closed dull and strong. The market developed a great deal of buoyancy and most of the grain carriers got back to the high level of yesterday before the crop scare broke the market. Advances from yesterday's closing reached 2½ in Reading and Consolidated Gas, 2¼ in Union Pacific and Southern Pacific and 2 in United States Steel and Inter Metropolitan preferred.

The market looks better and I believe Butte-Ballaklava struck the low point today. It should now be a money maker for those with a little nerve.
The Butte-Alex Scott company owns their vein system without question. Today they struck rich ore on the 1,600-foot level. We can not help but believe that this is the best purchase on the board.
Amazon is developing a big ore body and will soon be a big shipper and now that the general market is picking up I think this stock will move along toward higher prices. Markets always change. A couple of days more and you will have forgotten about the setback received on account of the Ballaklava law suit. It will soon be history. Ballaklava will simply bound toward higher prices very soon.

GREAT NEW ENGLAND WILLOW.

Boston Globe: There is an enormous willow tree on the estate of the late Thomas Groom, Humphrey street, Dorchester. Probably it is the largest willow in the commonwealth and perhaps in all New England. More than breast high from the ground, or to be exact, five feet, its girth is twenty-eight feet two inches and its tallest twig is about seventy feet from the ground.

It is a great shadow maker on sunny days, having a branch spread of 110 feet, and its limbs, all of which have been broken by years and the storms of years, are greater in diameter than many old trees. Nobody knows the age of this ancient willow. Seventy-five years ago when Mr. Groom acquired the place this huge tree was one of the neighborhood attractions and was mentioned as the big willow.

400 MEN AT WORK ON NEW STEEL PLANT

Progress Made Speaks Louder Than the $10,000,000 Building Permit.

Seven Big Dippers Are Now Excavating For the Foundations.

Men Being Brought From Gary---1,000 Will Be Employed.

To a large number of people the announcement in The Herald on Wednesday last that the Minnesota Steel company had taken out a $10,000,000 permit for the erection of the steel plant at New Duluth, was the first real indication that the big plant was about to become a reality. To those who have visited the 1,600 acre tract up the river owned by the steel company, however, the progress already made speaks far more eloquently than the formality of the building permit of the purpose and intentions of the steel corporation in regard to the plant at New Duluth.

Though there are no towering steel stacks, no roaring open hearth furnaces and no pounding trip hammers working yet, the visitor to the site of the great plant cannot but be impressed with the immensity of the operations and the hugeness of the industry which is to be established there.

At various points on the grounds seven great derricks equipped with the efficient "orange-peel" dippers are at work excavating for the foundations for the buildings. Two steam shovels and one derrick are at work getting out gravel for concrete. A complete cement mixing plant, 150 feet in height has been erected and is being used in mixing the concrete for the foundations. A cement block factory with five presses and a capacity of approximately 1,800 blocks a day is in working order and working under a full crew. In the power house is a 750-horse power engine and a dynamo through which some 450-horse power is being used today on the grounds, operating the derricks, pumps and the machinery in the cement block factory.

400 Men at Work.

About 400 men are at work on various parts of the site the majority of whom are at present engaged in the tremendous job of installing the foundations for the two new blast furnace stacks which will take 35,000 cubic yards of concrete.

The foundation for the machine shop, blacksmith shop and supply house is already in place, and the workmen are at work preparing the concrete floor for the reception of one of the great steam hammers which is the first piece of the operating machinery of the plant to arrive.

Work has not been commenced on the excavation for the set of 110 coke ovens, but one of the derrick shovels is in place there and work will be commenced in the near future. Ground has not been broken as yet for the foundation of the seven open hearth converters. An attempt was made to put a crew of men on this site yesterday morning, but brush fires made

There is evidence that Maitland committed suicide by pulling the gun trigger with his toe.

COLD JOB TO FIGHT FIRES

Soldiers on Duty in Rocky Mountains Are Suffering.

Reports From Conflagrations Received at Washington.

Washington, Aug. 27.—With the temperature below freezing and the soldiers clad in the light uniform worn in the military maneuvers from which they were suddenly withdrawn, much suffering from the cold was today reported to the war department from the troops fighting forest fires in the Northern Rockies.

Capt. Frazier of the Fourteenth infantry, who is in commande of a camp about thirteen miles north of Delton, Mont., reported that the snow and rain which had fallen had helped greatly in subduing the fires. The need for troops, he reported, was about passed, provided the foresters and rangers did their duty.

Want Troops on Yakima.

Five fires are now burning on the Yakima Indian reservation in Washington according to a telegram received at the Indian bureau today from Supt. Young. High winds and the dry condition of the forest makes the situation dangerous. Supt. Young wants troops sent to the scene at once. He has been able to enlist only thirteen fighters, and laborers having horses are very scarce. Fire condition on the Flathead reservation have improved considerably, according to a telegram received from Supt. Morgan today.

Will Not Use Big Guns.

Estimating the cost of the experiment at about $100,000, the war department officials have declined requests to order a bombardment of the skies by all its guns on Puget Sound and at the mouth of Columbia river in an effort to bring on rain in the burning district of the Northwest. In addition to the objection of cost, the army officials regarded the proposal as certain to prove futile. The navy department, to which a similar request was made, expressed its willingness to co-operate with the army with six or ten guns, the only ones at its disposal.

To fire the biggest gun in the coast artillery costs about $250 each, it has been estimated. To fire the twelve-inch mortars costs about $70 each.

BUMPS INTO LAW ON ALIEN LABOR

North Dakotan Who Got Hotel Girl From Canada, Is Arrested.

Fargo, N. D., Aug. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—C. J. Davis, proprietor of a hotel at Hannah, N. D., was arrested by a United States deputy marshal today on a charge of importing alien labor. He had secured a Miss Collins from Mowbray, Man., to work in the hotel. This is the first arrest in North Dakota for years on that charge.

SURPRISED AT SWEDISH ACTION

Washington Has No Official Knowledge of Lagercrantz's Recall.

Washington, Aug. 27.—State department officials profess to be entirely ignorant of the reasons which prompted the Swedish government to recall Minister Lagercrantz from the Washington mission. As far as known his residence here has been without embarrassing incidents and the services rendered to his country were regarded generally as being satisfactory. The department has not been officially notified as to the recall.

Mr. Lagercrantz, his wife and two daughters left for Europe last June and have not returned.

NEW RECORD FOR COTTON

Season's Highest Figure Is Reached in New York Market.

Covering By Belated Shorts in August Contracts the Cause.

New York, Aug. 27.—A new high record was established for the season in the cotton market today, when August contracts sold at 16.90, or 36 points above the closing figures of last night and over $4 per bale above the low price of yesterday morning.

This sensational gain was due to covering by belated shorts following the issuance of notices yesterday which appeared to represent all the cotton available here for delivery to the big leaders, and which left the remaining short interest without protection.

But Little Selling.

There was a little selling by spot people, who were believed to be selling against cotton which might come here from nearby points on the advance, and reactions occurred from the best, but the bulls seemed to be in control. Trading in August will be over at noon on Wednesday, and it was established that no more than 4,000 or 5,000 bales changed hands on the advance this morning.

The advance in August carried the price above the high figures recorded in May and July, and the movement was regarded as a continuation of the bull deal which began last Saturday. The fluctuations had comparatively little influence on the rest of the market, however, and after opening 5@10 points higher, new crop positions eased back to about the closing figures of last night.

TWO BRITISH WAR VESSELS AGROUND

Torpedo Boat and Destroyer Are Blown Onto Scotch Coast By Gale.

London, Aug. 27.—Two British naval vessels, the torpedo destroyer Success and torpedo boat No. 13, were blown ashore on the Scotch coast by a gale this morning. There were no casualties in the crews.

The Success is a destroyer of 380 tons, built in 1901. She carried a crew of 62 men. The No. 13 a new boat, of the program of 1907, 182 feet long and with a displacement of 256 tons. Her crew is made up of 35 men.

TAKE KOREA ON MONDAY

Japan Will Assume Complete Control on That Day.

Resident General Talks of Plans---Terms of Convention.

Seoul, Korea, Aug. 27.—The Associated Press is permitted to state that Korean sovereignty has ceased and that Mutsuhito, emperor of Japan, will become absolute ruler of Korea next Monday, when the agreement between Emperor Yi Syek of Korea and Mutsuhito, which was signed Aug. 22, will be officially promulgated.

This unprecedented annexation of the population and territory of the "Hermit Kingdom," has long been regarded as inevitable, even by the late Prince Ito, Japanese resident general in Korea, who before he was assassinated by a fanatical Korean at Harbin Manchuria, last year, realized the impracticability of the maintenance of a pretense of Korean independence and self-government.

It may be stated positively that Emperor Yi Syek and Former Emperor Yi Heui, who abdicated in 1907, willingly consented to Japan's proposals for annexation, the terms of which were generous.

Tells of Plans.

Lieut. Gen. Terauchi, Japanese resident general in Korea and negotiator of the convention of annexation, said today in a statement to a correspondent of the Associated Press regarding the annexation:

"No stone will be left unturned to make the Koreans and the world feel that Japan's rule in Korea is a beneficient thing. It will and must imply

MUST DIE FOR DOUBLE MURDER

Cletus Willaman Found Guilty By Jury in Ohio.

Canton, Ohio, Aug. 27.—Cletus Willaman today was found guilty of murder in the first degree for the killing of Mr. and Mrs. Warren E. Koons, Mrs. Willaman's parents. As the jury, which was out fifteen hours, made no recommendtaion for mercy, the verdict carried with it the death penalty.

Mr. and Mrs. Koons were killed last April and their 9-year-old son was the only witness to the tragedy. Willaman was arrested in Chicago a few days after the murder.

"IF GUILTY AT ALL, I SHOULD BE HANGED"

Jackson McPherson Says He Committed First Degree Murder, If Any.

Takes Exception to Use of Words "Scab" and "Bowery Tough."

Claims He Shot in Self-Defense and Is Innocent.

"If I am guilty, I am guilty in the first degree and should be hanged," says Jackson McPherson, who is in the county jail convicted of murder in the second degree, in a letter to The Herald today. The letter follows:

"To the Editor of The Herald:

"Judge Ensign in denying my motion for a new trial defined 'scab' as a word that has a regularly defined meaning, according to the dictionary, and said it is not such a slang word as to make it improper for use in addressing a jury.

"Perhaps he has forgotten the meaning of the word in the way Mr. Norton used it. In looking over the word scab in the Webster dictionary, we find it defined as the "increstation of a sore." When the word "scab" is used by union men or otherwise the meaning is obvious. The use of the word in such meaning has in several instances resulted in libel suits, where decisions have been granted against the perpetrators or persons using them.

"It seems very clear that Mr. Norton's meaning was highly prejudicial to my interest when there were several union men on the jury.

"In regard to the expression 'bowery tough,' I simply wish to state that any man familiar with the harbor precinct of New York city, more or less drift to it while following the profession of seamanship, as the shipping offices are located in that district, it being handiest to the shipping interests of that port. It seems to me that the judge takes it that a man going through a dictrict numerous times becomes imbibed with the spirit of the locality.

"As an illustration, we take a business man of the Superior street district having business which demands his frequenting the Bowery as the occasion requires, it would be perfectly justifiable to call him "a Bowery tough" of Duluth.

"If they take time to look up my record in New York they will find that although more or less a frequenter of the shipping offices in the Bowery district, I have never been arrested there, or for that matter, in any city in the country, a record which speaks for itself.

"I wish to make a positive assertion

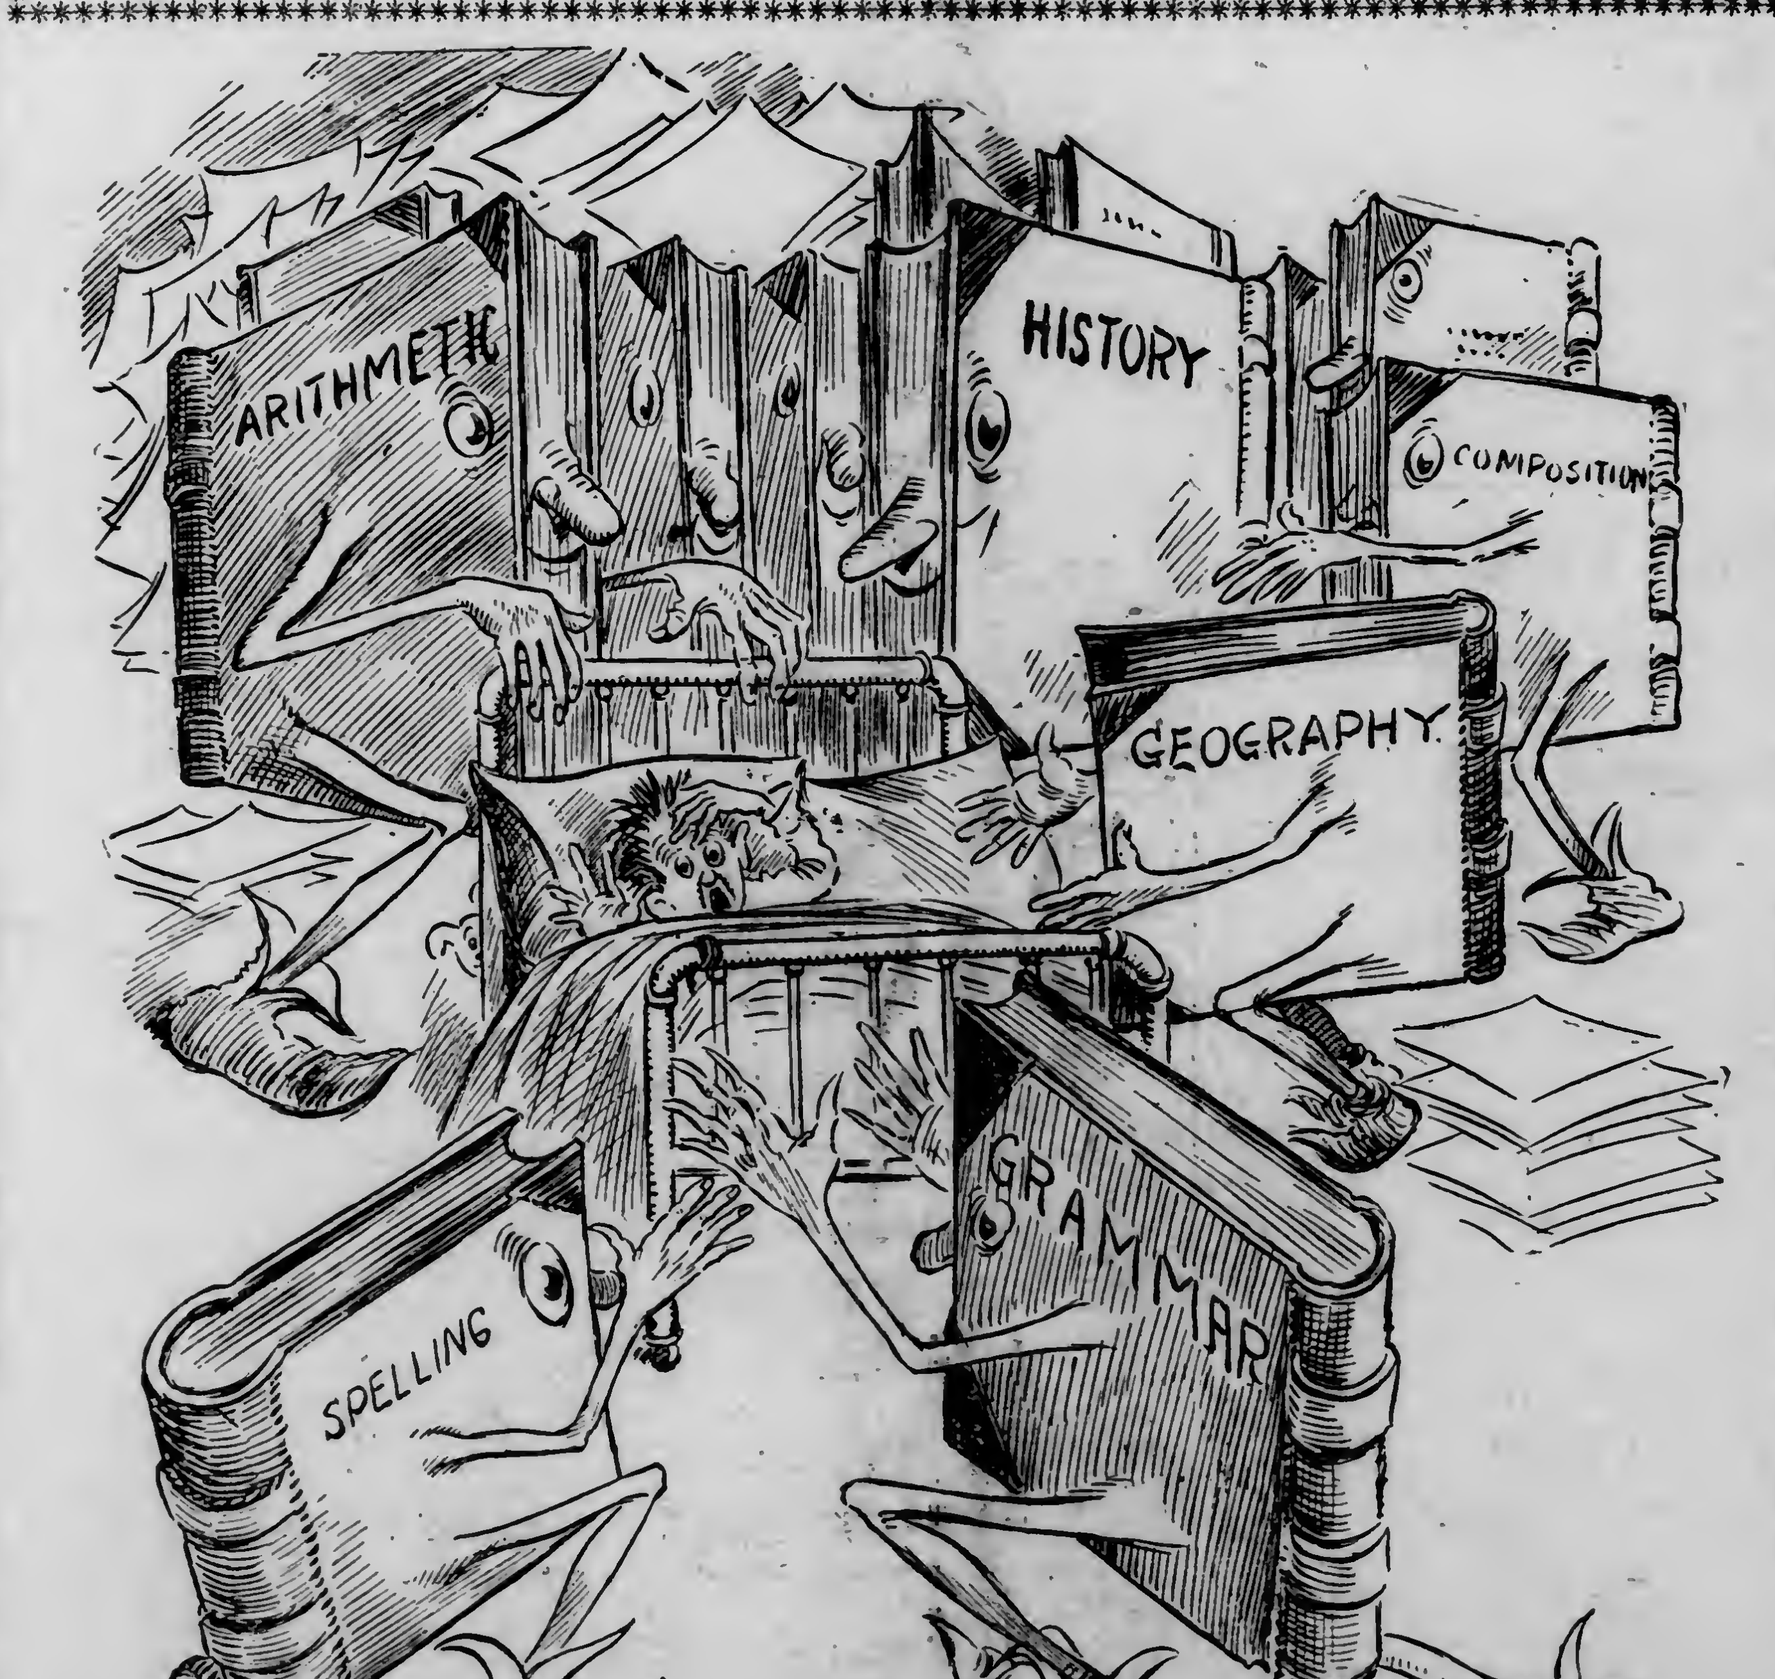
LITTLE WILLIE IS HAVING STRANGE DREAMS THESE DAYS.



ROOSEVELT IS GIVEN TYPICAL WELCOME AT CHEYENNE, WYO.

Is Greeted as Westerner Rather Than as an Ex-President.

Cow Punchers, Indians and Soldiers Meet Him at Station.

Thousands Take Part in Parade in Honor of Visitor.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Aug. 27. — The thousands who gathered at the station here today to meet the Roosevelt special train did not come to greet a former president of the United States. They came to cheer Theodore Roosevelt, the cow man who ran a brand on the Little Missouri years ago; the former broncho "peeler," and Dakota deputy sheriff, and to greet him as a comrade of the range and extend him a typical Western welcome.

Cow punchers by hundreds urged their ponies along the trail with joyous yells, while Sioux and Shoshone braves again in paint and war bonnets, threaded silently through the great crowd to see the chief of whom they had all heard. Some of the Indian chiefs had visited Col. Roosevelt in Washington and crowded close, hoping to shake his hand again. To complete the scene so typical of the old West, soldiers in blue and khaki from Fort D. A. Russell massed themselves about the station.

Party Is Growing.

When Col. Roosevelt left New York, all of the members of the party traveled in two cars, which were attached to regular trains. The number of cars has grown until now there are six of them, made up in a special train. At Chicago one car was attached carrying a party of men who are along merely to see what happens. George Ade is one of them. Three more cars were added yesterday and the railroad officials gave up all hope of handling them on the regular trains.

When he arrived, Col. Roosevelt was greeted by Governor B. B. Brooks, Senator F. E. Warren, Gen. F. A. Smith, commanding the Department of the Missouri, and members of the frontier committee.

From the station he was conducted to the Industrial club, escorted by a squadron of United States cavalry and a mounted band.

Reviewed Big Parade.

From the porch of the club, Col. Roosevelt reviewed a great parade arranged in his honor. The parade was headed by regular troops from nearly every branch of the service, including infantry, cavalry, field artillery and mounted batteries and signal and hospital corps from Fort D. A. Russell, numbering more than 5,000 officers and men. The regular troops were under the command of Brig. Gen. Hoyt.

Following the soldiers rode 1,500 cowboys and cow girls and 200 Sioux and Shoshone squaws and papooses. Civic and secret societies completed the parade, which required an hour and a half to pass the reviewing stand.

See Championship Contests.

After luncheon at his hotel, Col. Roosevelt drove to the frontier grounds where he was scheduled to deliver an address and witness the finals in the championship riding and roping contests and frontier sports. He will be the guest of Governor Brooks at dinner, and later will attend a smoker given to the visiting newspaper men and distinguished visitors.

The mayor of Galesburg, Ill., telegraphed to Col. Roosevelt a request that he try to settle the strike in the coal fields. The colonel replied that it was the fourth strike he had been asked to settle since his return from abroad, and he could not consent to act as he would be obliged to devote several weeks to such a task and he has not the time to spare.

Archie Roosevelt met his father in Omaha and rode with him as far as Fremont, Neb. He has been staying on Seth Bullock's ranch in North Dakota.

Will Go to Saratoga.

When Col. Roosevelt was informed that he had been elected a delegate to the Republican state convention at Saratoga, N. Y., by the Republicans of Nassau county, he said he was glad to hear it and would of course accept, as he had said he would do if he were chosen.

Col. Roosevelt declined to make any further comment or to indicate whether he would give any encouragement to the movement begun by the Republicans of Orleans county to elect him as temporary chairman over the head of the state committee, which

CRIPPEN ON BRITISH SOIL

Dentist and Miss Leneve Are Landed at Liverpool.

Great Crowds Gather to See the Couple Taken Ashore.

Liverpool, Aug. 27.—The steamer Megantic, carrying Dr. Hawley H. Crippen and Miss Ethel Leneve, brought back from Canada on a warrant issued in connection with the supposed murder of Dr. Crippen's wife, Belle Elmore, was sighted off the port here shortly after noon today. Great crowds gathered in the vicinity of the landing stake during the morning and stood waiting for hours in the hope of catching a view of Dr. Crippen and the young woman whose romantic flight with him across the ocean in the disguise of a boy had made her not the least interesting figure in the supposed crime.

Strong barricades have been erected about the landing stage specially to prevent any one approaching the ship, and the crowds were kept at such a distance as to give them slight prospect of a close view of Inspector Dew's prisoners.

Dr. Crippen and Miss Leneve disembarked at 2:15 p. m. at the regular landing stage. Officers of the local police were on hand to assist the Scotland Yard officials.

Inspector Dew with his prisoners immediately boarded the train and left for London.

MISSISSIPPI TOO LOW FOR MONITOR

War Vessel Meant for St. Louis Tied Up at Memphis.

Memphis, Tenn., Aug. 27.—Owing to the low stage of the water in the Mississippi river, the United States monitor Amphitrite, which reached this port several weeks ago on its voyage to St. Louis, where she will be used as a training ship for the Missouri naval reserves, will remain anchored off the Memphis wharf all winter.

The navy department is taking advantage of the enforced stop here to completely overhaul the machinery of the war vessel.

Mayor's Charge Regarding Street Railway License Upheld By Court.

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 27.—President John I. Beggs of the Milwaukee Electric Railway & Light company was fined $10 and costs by Judge Neelen in the district court today, the court holding that there had been a technical violation of the city ordinance requiring a license fee of $15 to be paid for the operation of a street car on Milwaukee streets. The case will be appealed.

President Beggs was arrested about two months ago on complaint of Mayor Emil Seidel that the street railway company was violating a city ordinance.

DISTRICT OF FINE HOMES

Congdon Park Will Be Surrounded By Beautiful Residences.

Promises to Become Most Fashionable District in City.

Congdon park, which has just been improved by the park board, and made the most beautiful of Duluth's many public "breathing spots," promises to be surrounded by the most magnificent residence section to be found in any city in the West.

The park itself is most picturesque, and the land adjoining it promises to become the most exclusive and fashionable residence district of the city, as a result of the conditions imposed on purchasers of residence sites in the new Congdon Park division, which will be put on the market by R. P. Dowse & Co.

The division has been platted by a syndicate of four prominent Duluth men, who bought the property when Mr. Congdon donated the park to the city. No residence site is less than 100x150 feet in size, and the restrictions are such that only people who can afford to erect beautiful homes will locate there. Congdon Park division is destined to be a residence district that will add distinction and beauty to Duluth and increase its reputation as a city of beautiful homes.

Congdon Park division consists of sixty-six acres lying on both sides of Congdon park, through which Tischer's creek runs. Of a tract of 100 acres, thirty-four acres were set aside some time ago as Congdon park and the syndicate purchased the remaining acres to preserve them as a fine residence district. The purchasers were interested in seeing a district of fine homes built up.

The sixty-six acres have been platted into fifty-four fine residence sites, no site containing less than 100x150 feet of ground and most of them much larger. The tract extends from the top of Congdon park to Superior street and the view is beautiful from every part of it. The title has been put through the Torrens process, the plat has been recorded and the property will soon be ready to go on the market.

Restrictions and conditions are such that no apartment houses, flat buildings, double houses, stores or other buildings except fine residences can be erected in the division or within some distance of it. C. A. Congdon's beautiful home and grounds lie to the south and east, Idlewild division being on the south also. S. H. Jones' property and a restricted district, for which Richardson, Day & Harrison are agents, lie to the west and Woodland and an unplatted tract that will eventually be a fine residence district, lie to the north.

Every lot in the new district is large enough to give a site for a beautiful residence with ample grounds around it. Duluth's fine residence districts have all been unable to attain their full beauty on account of the crowding allowed by platting in small lots, but that condition has been eliminated in Congdon Park division and the fact will make the division attractive to those contemplating the building of fine homes.

WILL WORK FOR GOOD ROADS

Commercial Club Committee Will Go After Needed Legislation.

W. I. Prince, chairman of the state and county sub-committee of the Commercial club public affairs committee, said today that there will be a meeting of the committee probably next week, when several important subjects will be taken up, among them the good roads question as it relates to St. Louis county.

"This subject is of much importance and is closely allied with the problems that are grouped under the head of Northern Minnesota development questions," said Mr. Prince. "We expect to give the subject some attention. Its importance will be more immediate later, when the legislative session draws nearer, than it is now, but it should be studied and discussed thoroughly."

The last legislature failed to pass a bill empowering the county to create a road commission, and another attempt will be made to secure this legislation. Back of the bill as presented to the lawmakers was the controlling idea that the county, to get the worth of its money and make the most rapid progress, must have a definite road building system. While good results have been secured here and there under the present system, it is conceded that with an executive commission or an expert engineer in charge of all the road building in the county, the results would be vastly more valuable.

The importance of improved highways in St. Louis county is expected to prove a powerful leverage in the fight for this legislation next session.

HORR TAKES RUST'S PLACE

Widely Known Michigan Grocer to Manage Stone-Ordean-Wells.

Resigns as Manager of Big Concerns Main House in Detroit.

It has become known that the new general manager of the Stone-Ordean-Wells company will be R. A. Horr, the widely known Michigan grocer, who will succeed C. R. Rust.

Mr. Horr comes from Detroit. He has resigned his position as manager of the main house of the National Grocery company at Detroit. The National Grocery company is a large concern that operates, besides the main house in Detroit, branches in these thirteen cities: Saginaw, Bay City, Jackson, Grand Rapids, Traverse City, Sault Ste. Marie, Lansing, Port Huron, Escanaba, Cadillac, Manistee, Mich., South Bend, Ind., and Decatur, Ill.

Mr. Horr is a son of former Congressman Roswell G. Horr of Michigan, and is one of the most prominent business men of that state. He is a man of strong personality, unusual ability, and has had wide experience in the business world. It is felt that in securing the services of Mr. Horr as general manager, the Stone-Ordean-Wells company has added a potent personality to the commercial and social life of the city.

Just when Mr. Horr will come to Duluth is not known. He will need some time to close up his business affairs at Detroit, but it is expected he will be here in the near future.

Just one more opportunity left this season to enjoy one of those Herald low priced excursions up the river to Fond du Lac, down the south shore of Lake Superior to Port Wing, or along the north shore to Two Harbors. The Herald excursion season ends next Monday and Tuesday, so if you have not yet enjoyed one of the delightful outings, or wish to enjoy another, come to the Herald office as early as possible and secure a ticket.

Why not give the children one more outing before school begins? It will be a long time before they will have another opportunity of a picnic at Chambers' grove, with boating, bathing, etc.

The Herald knows that there are a lot of people planning on the last trip to Fond du Lac, Monday morning, at 9 o'clock, so arrangements have been made for two boats. Everybody will be carried in comfort. The steamers Newsboy and Mascotte will leave Fifth avenue dock at the time mentioned and the fare will be only 25 cents.

For an all day outing on the water, get aboard the Mascotte at 8:30 Tuesday morning and coast along the beautiful south shore to Port Wing. Fare only $1; return by moonlight. An eighty-mile ride. Then, on Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, that never-to-be-forgotten ride on the steamer America for thirty miles down the lake to Two Harbors, returning by glorious moonlight. If you cannot take time for an all day outing, this is certainly the opportunity you ought not to miss. Round trip fare, only 30 cents.

SUPERIOR

CLAPP ON STUMP FOR LA FOLLETTE

Minnesotan Talks in Superior in Behalf of Insurgent Senator.

Senator Moses E. Clapp of Minnesota addressed a crowd of about 500 persons in Sons of Norway hall last night in behalf of the candidacy of Senator Robert M. La Follette. Senator Clapp spoke in the highest terms of La Follette and Congressman I. L. Lenroot. Mr. Clapp spoke on national issues, the tariff, railroad rate regulation and Wisconsin politics. He pointed out that it was to La Follette that Wisconsin owed the purification of her politics during the past few years, and commended him warmly for his fight against the primary law. Senator Clapp said that a tariff commission with powers similar to those possessed by the interstate commerce commission was inevitable and would be a good thing.

In closing Mr. Clapp advised his hearers to vote only for candidates who were for La Follette through thick and thin.

Senator Clapp is on a five days' tour of Wisconsin, leaving for Ladysmith last night.

Conference of Engineers.

A conference between City Engineer Banks and Chief Engineer Carlson of the street car company within the next few days is expected to settle the question of whether or not the Twenty-first avenue viaduct will bear the weight of big cars on the Billings Park line. Alderman Kennedy interviewed General Manager Warren of the company on the matter yesterday and from the result of the interview, stated that it was his belief that big cars would be running on the line within the next few days.

DYNAMITE UNDER PICK

Tom Sorenson Just Missed Striking Hidden Package of Explosive.

Sidewalk Construction Crew Has Narrow Escape From Certain Death.

Tom Sorenson and a crew of men working for W. H. Kilton, sidewalk contractor, just missed being blown into eternity by a fraction of an inch yesterday afternoon. They declare that only a beneficent Providence saved them.

While laying a walk on First street between Mesaba avenue and Eighth avenue west, Sorenson very nearly drove his pick into about ten pounds of dynamite that had been hidden there some time ago.

He was removing some debris and stone in order to level up the ground for the stringers when he drove the pick into an apparently innocent bunch of old rags and pieces of board. As he pulled it out the rags clung to the pick. He picked them off and was just raising the pick into the air again for another blow when he chanced to glance downwards. Lying partially exposed was the big package of dynamite.

Stooping down to examine it he nearly fainted when he realized how close he and the men with him had been to certain death. There was enough of the explosive to make a respectable start towards the removal of the Point of Rocks. The pick had just grazed the edge, leaving a faint scratch, in mute testimony of the fact that the escape had been close.

When Sorenson recovered sufficiently to collect his dazed senses he sent one of the gang to summon a policeman, to whom the stuff was transferred. It is thought that the dynamite had either been stolen or that in the past some workmen had forgotten it after finishing a blasting job.

RAILROADS

FORCE TO BE INCREASED

Canadian Northern Will Rush Construction Work This Fall.

Contracts for Fourteen Bridges Will Be Let Next Week.

Chief Engineer Hazen of the Duluth, Winnipeg & Pacific Railroad company, has returned from Winnipeg, where he held a conference with the Canadian Northern officials over the work that is being done at the present time on the extension between Duluth and Virginia.

As a result of the conference, the contract for the construction of the fourteen steel bridges, to span the streets encountered in entering the city and the creeks between Duluth and Virginia, will probably be let next Saturday. Work on the construction of the bridges will be started this fall.

Mr. Hazen stated that the present force of men employed on the grading and heavy timber work of the road, about 800 laborers, will be increased to a force of 2,000 men. The force of men is being steadily increased at the rate of about 200 men a week. A force of 2,000 men will be employed all winter, doing the rock and heavy work on the grading.

About twenty-five miles of track will be laid this fall, according to the present plans of the company, though a greater number of miles may be laid before snow flies.

At the present time Mr. Hazen has an engineering force of about sixty men and all are kept busy solving the problems encountered in the construction work.

It is the intention of the Canadian Northern people to rush the work as rapidly as possible, according to Mr. Hazen's statement today, and with that idea in view the force of laborers is being increased to the number that can accomplish the most work without confusion.

With the large force employed all winter, much of the preliminary work will be accomplished by spring when work on the laying of steel will be started.

McKENNEY IS TRANSFERRED

City Agent Will Be District Passenger Agent of the Northern Pacific.

J. T. McKenney, city ticket and passenger agent for the Northern Pacific railroad in this city, will shortly be transferred to the St. Paul district of the company, where he will assume the duties of district passenger agent. Before coming to Duluth to take up the position he holds at the present time, Mr. McKenney was district agent in the St. Paul territory.

There is not a railroad man in Duluth who will not feel a personal regret at the announcement of the decision to transfer Mr. McKenney. He is one of the best liked railroad men in this city, and has made hundreds of friends for the company here by his courtesy and devotion to duty.

Mr. McKenney has one of the widest acquaintances among the railroad men of the Northwest, of any of the Northern Pacific officials. He has been in the employ of the Northern Pacific for a number of years, and during that period has traveled over the Northwest and Pacific coast country.

As soon as the business here is checked up and ready for his successor, Mr. McKenney will take up the work at the St. Paul office of the company.

ASSOCIATION ON REPORTS ON SUPPLY OF CARS.

Chicago, Aug. 27.—A bulletin issued by the American Railway association shows a decrease of 25,264 cars in the existing surplus. This is 25.4 per cent of the total surplus reported in the association's last bulletin. Of this decrease 13,756 are box cars, the decrease amounting to 33.56 per cent of the last surplus reported for this class. Coal cars decreased 6,232, or 21.7 per cent. The largest decrease is reported from the central group, where the surplus was reduced from 25,256 to 16,602.

New Berry Shipping Record.

Negaunee, Mich., Aug. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—A new record in the number of cases of blue berries handled by the employes of the American and Western express companies here was established one day this week, when 1,402 cases were transferred from the Western to the American for shipment to Milwaukee and Chicago. All of the berries, with the exception of about 150 cases, which were picked up at points along the South Shore line between Seney and Newberry, came from Grand Marais.

IN A COCOANUT WALK.

"In the tropics, where the cocoanut is wanted for planting, the nuts are picked up when they fall from the tree where they have hung for about fourteen months in ripening. It is a fact not generally known," says the Bakers' Weekly, "that a majority of the nuts drop at night, which probably accounts for the small loss of life by cocoanuts falling upon the heads of the natives.

"The action of the heavy dew at night loosens the seal with which nature has provided the nut and allows it to fall. The nuts wanted for planting are either gathered into heaps or placed under sheds where they are allowed to sprout before planting in order that good healthy 'sprout nuts' may be selected, thus avoiding the possibility of planting 'blind' nuts that would not sprout, in which case much time would be lost in starting the 'cocoanut walks,' as the orchards are called. When holes are dug about three feet deep and twenty feet apart, the nut is carefully placed in the hole and covered with about one foot of soil. The hole is filled as the sprout grows until it reaches the surface, when it is left to itself, requiring no further attention. Should the place where the cocoanut is planted be any great distance from the seashore, a quantity of salt is placed in the hole; it will grow in luxuriance, however, but a short distance from the shore, nearness to salt water being absolutely essential to its welfare.

"An interesting story is told by a gentleman who resided for some years in the tropics. He planted a cocoanut tree behind a board fence some distance from the sea. The tree grew perfectly straight until it reached the top of the fence, when it began to grow toward the ocean, leaning a foot or more; then a shed was built quite near the fence, but several feet higher, and the tree again grew straight until the roof of the shed was reached, when it again leaned toward the sea, forming a very curious and odd-looking tree.

"The irregular growth was wholly attributed to the influence of the salt air. No magnet is truer to the pole than the root of the cocoanut tree to the ocean, for when the root breaks through its husk it points directly towards the sea, no matter what the position of the nut when placed in the ground."

NEWS AND VIEWS OF POLITICS AND POLITICIANS

Secretary Mackenzie of Northern Minnesota Development Association in Duluth—Candidates Being Pledged for Reapportionment—Woods of St. Paul Youngest Senatorial Aspirant—Healy of Hibbing Makes Bid for Votes—Retirement of DuToit.

Mackenzie of Bemidji is in Town.

W. R. Mackenzie of Bemidji, secretary of the Northern Minnesota Development association, is in the city today, coming here this morning from Minneapolis and St. Paul. He is his usual optimistic and energetic self, characteristically full of Northern Minnesota ideas. Just now he is especially interested in the work of collecting pledges from legislative candidates that they will fight for reapportionment.

"We have sent out about 125 of these pledges to candidates in the northern part of the state and of that number about 75 have been returned signed," he said. "Many of the candidates are away from home, out working for support, and for that reason there is some delay in completing our list of pledged candidates. Additional candidates will file before the filings are closed and they must be reached. We expect that all but eight or ten of the Northern Minnesota candidates will sign.

"These pledges are being sent not only to those who have filed, but also to men who are mentioned as probable candidates. Very few of them raise objection to this or that object of the association. These few objections are met and overcome in almost every case through correspondence.

"Southern Minnesota sentiment as reflected by the press of that part of the state is friendly to the reapportionment movement, fair minded editors realizing the justice of the claims of Northern Minnesota to equality of representation."

Finds Insurgency Strong And Flouishing

Alex G. McKnight, discussing his trip through the Eighth congressional district, said this morning that Kanabec, Mille Lacs and Isanti counties are "real, simon-pure insurgent territory. Miller's wobbling makes no hit in that region and I will be very strong there at the primaries. Men who were for Miller two years ago, who worked for him and voted for him, are against him now. They are insurgents, first, last and all the time. That let's Miller out."

Quite a few of the papers in the district are reprinting an editorial published last October by the News Tribune, which is generally considered a Miller supporter. This editorial pays Mr. McKnight a high compliment and is calculated to forestall any attempt on the part of that paper to disparage the insurgent candidate. It reads:

We Like His Kind.

If it is true that Alderman Alex McKnight of the First ward has definitely decided not to be a candidate for re-election, it should be, and will be, a matter of regret to all citizens of Duluth. Mr. McKnight has served but one term; we believe his re-election without opposition would have been conceded.

In a second term he would have been of greater value, through his experience, than during the past two years, in which he has served the city with ability, markedly disinterested fairness, and with no other thought than to do what was right.

Mr. McKnight has not always agreed with the News Tribune, nor the News Tribune with him. He is a Scotchman and consequently so dearly loves an argument that he cannot pass one up even when, if he wins, he loses. But he has, too, the Scotch fearlessness and integrity, his ideal of citizenship is high, and he comes mighty near practicing what he preaches.

As a public official he has stood squarely and openly for cleanness, decency, a wise, not a foolish, economy, and yet has not been a prude, nor wasted his time chasing purist rainbows.

The News Tribune will regret Mr. McKnight's retirement from the council, and feels like telling him so, publicly. He deserves such recognition. We like his kind, and his successor will have no easy mark to aim at in following him.

Mr. McKnight is extremely well pleased with the situation and has no doubt that he will be nominated. He says the anti-Miller sentiment is strong all through the district.

"They say that Miller pledged himself to do a certain thing, and that he did not do it," said Mr. McKnight, speaking of the voters' point of view as he has learned it. "That is the sum and the substance of their philisophy on Mr. Miller. A good many of them go farther than that, however, and I am convinced that Mr. Miller has no chance of being renominated."

This afternoon Mr. McKnight went to Two Harbors to get in touch with the Lake county situation. He expects to garner large sheafs of votes in that part of the district.

Insurgency is the burden of all McKnight's talk. Morning, noon and night he insurges, and it begins to look as though he insurges to some purpose. Information from different sources is to the effect that Mr. Miller's following is dwindling, many of his former supporters declaring they will not vote for an ally of the house machine. One phase of this feeling is illustrated by the remark of a Kanabec county man, who said: Mr. Miller pretends to be an insurgent. Mr. Miller was appointed to membership on the congressional committee sent to Oklahoma. Cannon appointed that committee. Cannon has never appointed his opponents to such committees for these appointments are plums. What's the answer? Why, Mr. Miller's a deuce of an insurgent, he is!"

Wants to be Infant of The State Senate.

George W. Woods of St. Paul, a young lawyer, has filed as a progressive Republican candidate for the state senate in the Thirty-fourth district. This district is now represented in the upper house by Henry McColl, one of the best known Democrats in the legislature, who is being opposed for the nomination by James Handlan, who was a member of the house two years ago. In the district are the Third and Ninth wards and part of the Eighth ward of St. Paul.

Fifteen years ago Mr. Woods was a newsboy on the streets of the capital city. He is the youngest candidate for the senate who has filed in the state, being 28 years old on the day he placed himself before the people as a candidate. He is a native of St. Paul and a graduate of grade and high schools there. While engaged in newspaper work he attended the night law school at the University of Minnesota and was admitted to the bar.

Senator McColl is likely to win in his contest with Mr. Handlan for the Democratic nomination, and while Mr. Woods can be expected to give him an interesting fight, the probabilities strongly favor Senator McColl's return to the senate.

Healy Puts It Up To the Range.

John A. Healy of Hibbing, who has filed as a candidate for the Republican nomination for representative from the Forty-ninth district, makes a special plea in his own behalf that seems likely to count with range voters. Mr Healy is very widely and favorably known on the ranges, and his candidacy has been received with favor in many parts of the district. The candidate's statement is headed, "John A. Healy, Hibbing's Candidate," and reads as follows:

Hibbing is the largest of all the Range towns. It is the town that always rolls up handsome majorities for candidates from other Range towns, yet Hibbing has never been represented in the legislature or in the county courthouse. In the candidacy of Mr. Healy for representative our good neighbors now have the opportunity to return the expression of good will that Hibbing has always shown in the past, and at the same time elect a man to the house who by reason of his long residence in the district and his large and varied business experience, is especially qualified to represent us. Mr. Healy has been a resident of the Mesaba range for eighteen years—five years in Eveleth, four years in Biwabik and nine years in Hibbing. During the entire time he has been prominently identified with the development of the county and has always taken an active part in Republican politics. His acquaintanceship extends over the entire state and in the house of representatives he would be in a position to protect and promote the interests of St. Louis county probably better than any other man this district might select. Hibbing people should not only voto for Mr. Healy; they should boost for him whenever they meet people from the neighboring Range towns, not particularly on account of personal friendship, but because he is the Hibbing candidate and because Hibbing is entitled to the place.

When in Duluth several days ago Mr. Healy said that although this is his first dash into the political arena he liked the looks of things and hoped to win his fight. He looked fit.

Auditor Halden Plans Range Trip.

Odin Halden, auditor of St. Louis county who has been suffering seriously from rheumatism for some weeks, is recovering his strength gradually and the pain is decreasing. Although he is far from well, he is busily engaged every day at his office or in the room occupied by the board of equalization in the court house. The problems of the Duluth assessment are taking much time for their proper solution.

Mr. Halden plans to visit the range towns some time next week. He does not know just when he will be able to do so, but hopes that he will be able to get away early in the week. However, the pressure of official business may force him to postpone his trip until later.

As to the primaries, Mr. Halden does not seem to be concerned about the result, and it is apparent that there will be no Democratic nominee against him.

Du Toit, Veteran Senator, Retires.

F. E. Du Toit of Chaska, the veteran Democratic state senator from the Carver county or Twenty-fifth district, has announced that he will not be a candidate for renomination. Mr. Du Toit has been a member of the senate since the legislature of 1899 and is one of the most widely known Democrats in Minnesota. He was a house member in the legislature of 1873.

Senator Du Toit's announcement is to the effect that when he ran for the senate four years ago he agreed that he would not again be a candidate. He is simply standing by that agreement.

The senator is a native of New York state and is 64 years old. He publishes the Valley Herald at Chaska and was sheriff of the county for twenty-one consecutive years. He served in the Union army during the Civil war.

Little Falls Herald: "Every man who knows T. J. Meighen, Democratic candidate for auditor, knows there isn't a man in the state more able or more sincere and earnest in the advocacy of real reforms. His name on a strong ticket makes it still stronger and still more entitled to respect. He is a banker who owns no allegiance to financial cliques anywhere, a farmer who believes in a square deal for the farmer and everybody else and a merchant of independent thought."

Wheelock's Weekly: "Of course, Mr. Lind will not 'accept' the nomination. He has already said that he would not. Nobody expects that he will. But he may be willing to serve if elected governor—which is the thing that the state wants. The fear of the Republican press that he will do this is great. The editors are doing their best to bully or cajole their readers into the belief that Mr. Lind cannot, must not and will not become the governor upon any terms whatever.

In the Ninth legislative district, which is Freeborn county, two new men have come out as candidates for the house. They are Alva Henion and John A. Severson, both Republicans. Mr. Henion lives at Geneva and Mr. Severson at Manchester, and both are farmers. The district was represented two years ago by William Wolhutter, a Republican, and T. E. Noble, a Prohibitionist, both of Albert Lea.

"Judge Jaques is a very pleasant, scholarly gentleman, and is said to be eminently qualified to fill any position in the gift of the people of the district," says the Cloquet Pine Knot, in mentioning that the Duluth Democratic candidate for congress called on old acquaintances and made new ones there. "Having no Democratic opponent for the nomination," says the Pine Knot, "Judge Jaques will probably not enter into the campaign work very extensively until after the primary election."

To the Voters of St. Louis County:

I desire your suport for the nomination of Judge of Probate on Sept. 20, 1910.

During the past six years I have been County Superintendent of Schools, and believe that my work in building up an efficient system of schools has not been a failure.

Every energetic man is desirous of promotion at some period in his life. I desire promotion. It is the established system of every well organized business, railroad, and departmental service.

I wish to thank you for your support in the past, and hope that you will vote for me at the primary election. Yours very truly,

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

As I understand, some of my opponents for the nomination for county commissioner are circulating reports that I have withdrawn from the race. Now, this is false, as I am in the race to stay, and win if possible. Being in the livery business and having autos for hire and knowing every foot of county roads and their needs, I believe I have the best reason for asking for your vote. To all of my friends whom I have not seen personally, I desire to ask them to go to the polls and vote for me if they want a good business administration of the office and a square deal to all.

MONEY FOR PARK PLANS

No More Cash Needed for Years If Bond Issue Is Passed.

Board May Purchase Several Desirable Sites for Playgrounds.

Members of the board of park commissioners state that if they succeed in realizing $50,000 on the proposed bond issue the needs of the park system will be taken care of for the present.

At the council meeting Tuesday night, Sept. 6, the second reading of an ordinance authorizing the sale of a bond issue for that amount is expected to come up for its second reading. The ordinance was introduced last Tuesday night, and cannot be taken up next Monday night because a week must intervene between the first and second readings.

The board explained that it needed the additional funds for the purchase of a small tract adjacent to Fairmont park, twenty-three lots in the West end, and places adjoining Lincoln, Chester and Lester parks. The property is said to be particularly desirable and the members of the park board believe they should be acquired by the city before the prices becomes too high.

L. Mendenhall, president of the park board, stated today that if the sale of the bonds is consummated no further money will be needed for several years. He explained that the property which would be secured at this time would not finish the park system as it has been planned, but that more money would not be asked for, for three or four years. In its plans the park board has laid out an extension of the boulevard at least as far westward as Fairmont park. The latest extension was from Twenty-fifth avenue west. The last touches are being put upon it this summer. Those who have made the drive declare that the view is extremely beautiful. Many claim that it is prettier than the scenery of the original boulevard.

The money secured by the bonds would also aid the playground movement, which has proven popular in this city. The board has several desirable pieces of ground in sight which could be used for this purpose. They are in populous neighborhoods and would be used daily by hundreds of children. The playgrounds in Duluth are not much more than an experiment as yet, but the experiment has abundantly disclosed their need and the fact that they are a boon to the children. The apparatus installed has not been elaborate, but it has been used from morning until night by numerous groups of small girls and boys. It has been the wish of the park board to go into the playground proposition on a big scale, but it has been hindered by lack of funds. With money available from the sale of bonds, the board would do this, using funds from the regular levy if necessary.

DISOBEYED ORDER OF THE COURT

Jacob Stubler Finds That Judge's Instructions Are to Be Respected.

Jacob Stubler, the Superior street saloon-keeper, evidently thought Judge Dibell of the district court was joking when he ordered him to keep away from the house occupied by Mrs. Stubler.

Yesterday Stubler was found to be in contempt of court for interfering with his wife and family, and was ordered to pay a fine of $25 or go to jail for a period of not more than twenty days.

The complainant was Mrs. Anna Stubler, who is suing her husband for divorce. He is said to have disobeyed the order of the court last Saturday when he went to the house and told his wife that he was about to put the children where she would never see them again.

Mrs. Stubler also stated yesterday that he appeared at the house Sunday and created a disturbance by kicking on the door and walking into the house unannounced. She sought safety at the home of a friend.

Stubler claimed that while at his wife's home she removed a picture from the wall and attempted to hit him with it. This Mrs. Stubler denied.

Some time ago Stubler filed information of insanity against his wife in probate court. After an examination it was found that she was perfectly sane.

Rev. E. R. Pope Gives Interesting Figures on Duluth's Religious Tendencies.

An address by Rev. E. R. Pope, D. D., of Minneapolis, superintendent of Baptist Missions in Minnesota was the principal feature of the closing exercises of dedication week at the First Swedish Baptist church last night. The occasion was the union meeting of all the Baptist churches of the city held in the big auditorium.

Mr. Pope talked on "The Value of Baptist Unity" and one interesting feature of his talk was a set of statistics gathered by his department in regard to Duluth's population and church capacity. According to Mr. Pope, in 1906, Duluth had a population of 67,000 people with a church seating capacity, which was never taxed, of about 27,000. The number of people professing to belong to some religious denomination was at that time 22,006. Mr. Pope argued that this showed the necessity of concerted action on the part of the churches to bring the other 45,000 into the places of worship.

The address by Mr. Pope was followed by ten-minute talks by Rev. H. P. G. Sellinger, Rev. Bennett Ericson, Rev. Gideon Nylander and Rev. J. W. Loughridge. Axel Henry rendered "The Plains of Peace," very beautifully. The meeting was well attended and included representative delegations from all of the Baptist churches of the city. It was the first occasion on which the church was thrown open to visiting guests and the visiting delegations were enthusiastic over the architectural beauty of the new edifice.

Hillside Residents Want to Cross Creek at Thirteenth Street.

The West End Hillside Improvement club will at its next meeting consider ways and means for inducing the city to replace the bridge over Miller's creek at Thirteenth street, which was washed away over fifteen years ago The district west of here is becoming thickly settled and the residents say that owing to the absence of a bridge they are unable to get coal, wood or other commodities hauled into their homes without incurring extra expense. The club will try to secure a bridge substantial enough to carry street cars when the street railway company gets ready to extend its Piedmont line westward.

FALL EXPANSION IN TRADE BEGINS

New York, Aug. 27.—Dun's Review today says:

Crop prospects are improving. Business confidence is strengthened as the harvests are being gathered and the period of the midsummer inaction draws to a close. On the other hand, renewed political activity makes for that uncertainty that tends to retard enterprise. That there has been and still is contraction in a number of important lines cannot be denied. But the contraction consists mainly in the reduction of speculation and in the cutting off of transactions for the future. There still remains the great business of supplying current needs; and reports from leading trade centers indicate that this business is beginning to expand as the fall season approaches and the harvests are assured.

In the dry goods market, notwithstanding the moderation displayed by buyers in purchases for the future, there are signs of expansion among the jobbers, as the result of a better retail trade. The footwear and hide and leather trade are unsatisfactory.

Recent developments in iron and steel appear to warrant expectations of a brisk revival in demand as the season advances, and sentiment is somewhat more cheery than for some time past. It is customary for some improvement to occur with the approach of fall, and while at present the volume of actual business is only moderately increased, the larger number of inquiries being received hold out promise of greater activity in the not distant future. Advices from practically every section of the country indicate that consumers show more willingness to cover anticipated requirements, while evidences are not lacking that producers in many instances are unlikely to make any further concessions in prices. Low prices on steel billets and sheet bars have brought out considerable inquiry in the Pittsburg district, and several sheet and tin plate plants are reported to have covered their requirements on sheet and tin bars for the balance of the year.

Slight concessions in prices which developed last week in the West on low and medium grades of footwear are now being made quite generally, but business is otherwise quiet and steady.

CROWDS OF INVESTORS FORCE HAND OF W. M. PRINDLE CO. IN NEW PARK

Crescent View Park, Although Not Yet Ready Either to Show or to Sell, Is Being Snapped Up by Eager Insistent Investors.

So much impressed are the better class of home seekers with Crescent View Park that, notwithstanding the frequent announcements of the W. M. Prindle company, that this property would not be in shape, either to show or to sell, for some time, they swarm the property every day, selecting their sites and insisting on being allowed to purchase them.

A member of the firm said yesterday that, had it been possible to cover the entire property with a blanket until it was ready they would have done so, as then all could have seen the property at once, and made their selections at the same time.

There is considerable amount of speculation going on in this land already—on three lots purchased two days ago the cost of which was $4,800, and on which $75 had been paid, an offer of a bonus of $200 was made and refused.

Another party owning six lots was offered an advance of $50 a lot on the entire six, but refused to sell.

Competition for choice sites is so keen that it seems probable that before the W. M. Prindle company have finished selling at their original prices, the people to whom they have sold will be selling again at two or three times what they paid.

The work of beautifying the park, of laying out the curving driveways and erecting the massive gateway is progressing rapidly, but the park is not expected to be in shape to show until Wednesday or Thursday.

The imposing gateway does not seem to be sufficiently imposing to keep out the crowds of speculators and investors, however, and it would seem that the only way to be assured of a site in this park is to get there on the next car!

MAY EXTEND NEXT SPRING

Street Railway Line to Steel Plant Impossible This Year.

West Duluth People Fear Superior May Step in First.

The street railway extension to the steel plant site came up again at the meeting of the West Duluth Commercial club last night, and a committee was appointed to confer with Manager Herbert Warren of the street railway company in regard to the matter, and if necessary take the matter up with the city council. The committee includes Aldermen L. A. Barnes and W. B. Getchell and J. J. Frey, Emil Zauft and C. F. Joltz.

Mr. Warren is somewhat skeptical as to the need of such an extension as yet.

"The matter has not been brought up at any meeting of the officers of the company for the past three months," said Mr. Warren this morning. "It has been seriously considered, however. I can state positively that nothing will be done as to such an extension this fall, as it is now too late to consider it. I think it probable, however, that the matter will be given careful consideration this winter, and definite plans in regard to the extension will probably be made before next spring. I am not authorized to say anything definite in this regard."

Mr. Warren stated that there would be no trouble about getting practical grades between the end of the Grand avenue line and the steel plant.

The feeling among business men in the western part of the city is very strongly in favor of the line. They believe that there is some danger of street car service being secured from the Superior side before the western extension here is built and think that such a result would lead to a majority of the steel plant employes taking up their residence in Superior. There is, however, no immediate danger of a Superior extension being built, according to Mr. Warren. The big bridge across the St. Louis river at the steel plant is without approaches to the street traffic deck for several hundred feet, it being up to the cities to build these approaches if they are desired.

The Commercial club also heard a report from President Barnes on the Ramsey street extension. Mr. Barnes said that the committee on streets, alleys and sidewalks of the city council had reported favorably on the condemnation of the strip between Central avenue and Grand, and that favorable action would probably be taken by the council Monday evening.

The men who are engaged in circulating the petition for the establishment of a flag station for local trains at the foot of Sixty-ninth avenue west reported that they had a large number of signers, and that the petition would be sent in to the Northern Pacific officials today.

The preliminary hearing of John King Teetzel, arrested on a charge of swindling, was not finished in police court yesterday and was continued until Monday afternon at 2 o'clock. It is alleged that Tretzel obtained a check for $43.50 by false representations from the Kelley Hardware company. The allegations is that he sold an agency for the "addiphone," a telephone ear attachment, when the company he claimed was making it was not in existence.

Bids Are Opened.

Bids for pavements and sewers costing a total of about $50,00 were opened yesterday morning by the board of public works, but no contracts will be awarded until Monday. Bids are opened for a big sewer at West Duluth, another at Lakeside, the paving of Eleventh avenue east and the grading and paving of Seventh street from Wallace avenue to Irving place to Sixth street.

Mayor Returns.

Mayor Cullum returned yesterday from the annual convention of the League of American Municipalities at St. Paul. He reports that the meeting was highly successful and that all delegates went back to their respective homes with a vast fund of new information. Municipal ownership was discussed probably more than any other one feature.

Duluth Men Get Patent.

Papers were received from Washington today granting a patent to C. S. Olson and M. C. Albenberg on a unique article, a salt and pepper shaker in one. Both salt and pepper may be placed in one shaker, so partitioned that either article of seasoning may be obtained by pressing a button. The owners of the patent have been informed that some Eastern parties are anxious to become interested in the article and Mr. Albenberg or Mr. Olson will leave soon for the East to contract for the necessary machinery to manufacture the twin shaker in Duluth.

MENDOZA WITHDRAWS FROM RACE FOR OFFICE.

Panama, Aug. 27.—After repeated conferences with prominent members of the government and of the liberal party, Dr. Carlos Mendoza announced today his retirement as a candidate for the position of acting president of the republic, for which he is considered constitutionally ineligible by the United States. Dr. Mendoza is a negro. He had earlier determined to diregard the opposition of the American government.

With Mr. Mendoza out of the race for the election as acting president, the candidates with the greatest chances for election are Samuel Lewis, Conservative, and Belizario Parras, Liberal.

CAUCUS OF DELEGATION

The St. Louis county delegations to the last legislature met in the office of Chester A. Congdon this afternoon and subscribed to the pledge for reapportionment and other demands of the Crookston and Bemidji conventions.

The session was a brief one and was attended by Senator Dan Gunn of Grand Rapids, in addition to the St. Louis delegation, composed of Senators Pugh and Laybourn and Representatives Congdon and Borgen.

This action sets St. Louis county clearly and strongly in line with all the rest of the northern part of the state. It means, in the opinion of many political observers, that reapportionment will come at the pending session of the legislature.

BOOKKEEPER IS ARRESTED

Employe of Peter Grignon Charged With Falsifying Payroll.

G. E. Herbert, a young man 25 years of age, who has been employed as a bookkeeper by Peter Grignon in the West end, was arrested today and will be held on either a grand larceny or forgery charge. According to the claims of his employers he had been putting extra men on the pay roll under false names and then forging their names as receipting for their pay.

THE HEIGHT OF TREES.

The Field: A tree 100 feet high, accurately measured, is not as tall as it looks. There are not many trees in the gardens and parks of this country that exceed 100 feet, notwithstanding the records of reputedly much higher trees than this. We have been told that the highest tree in Kew Gardens carefully measured with a tape was 103 feet and that the tallest pine, a Corsican near the entrance is eighty-six feet.

There are some fine specimens of Atlas and Lebanon cedars in these gardens, but not one of them is seventy feet high. A larch that had been drawn up by surrounding beeches and was looked upon as a giant was blown down in 1902 and it proved to be 110 feet long. Beech, among the tallest of our trees, rarely reaches 100 feet, though Dr. Henry measured one in Kilkenny in 1904 which was 117 feet. The famous deciduous cypress, Tarodlum distichum, in Syon park, Brentford, is, according to Mr. Elwes, 110 feet high, the tallest of its kind in Europe.

The same authority gives 105 feet as the height of the tallest horse chestnut he had seen, though there are others estimated to be even higher than this. The tallest walnut is from eighty feet to eighty-five feet, and the tallest black walnut, at Marble hill, Twickenham, was ninety-eight feet high when measured by Dr. Henry in 1905. Oaks have been measured up to 130 feet, but they are quite exceptional 100 feet being above the average for our tallest oaks.

The height of trees is influenced by the company they grow in. For example, a larch growing in the open would most likely fail to reach 100 feet in height, whereas larches growing close together or pressed upward by other trees have been known to exceed 130 feet in this country. The California giant trees of the wellingtonia owe their great height to the same influence. Not even in that country would this tree have grown to 300 feet or more if it had not been forced to grow upward because it could not grow outward.

According to Mr. Elwes, one of the talest wellingtonias in this country is at Fonthill abbey, which in 1906 measured "certainly over 100 feet and probabaly 105 feet high." This is at least ten feet higher than the taliest at Strathfieldsaye. It is next to impossible to ascertain the correct height of a tree by any other means than that of careful measurement; there are, we know, ingenious contrivances for doing it otherwise, but they are not reliable. Of course the approximate height may be near enough and yet be a long way out.

If a few more table guests would make it profitable for you to keep boarders, then you have business for a Herald want ad.

A BOUQUET FOR HALDEN

Public Examiner Praises Manner in Which Office Is Conducted.

Detailed Report Says Business Is Carefully and Accurately Done.

Public Examiner A. Schaefer of St. Paul has nothing but words of praise for the manner in which the work of County Auditor Halden's office is carried on. His official report which has just been received by the county auditor states that notwithstanding the great amount and the complicated nature of the work it is nevertheless done in a most efficient and competent manner.

Assistant Public Examiner M. F. Kain spent a number of months at the St. Louis county auditor's office checking up the accounts and taking a general survey of the manner in which the work is turned out. The report is from July 31, 1909 until June 21, 1910.

The report is lengthy and shows how carefully and how much attention to detail the public examiner exercised in going over the figures in the office. Every phase of the work is gone thoroughly into.

In a congratulatory letter from Mr. Schaefer accompanying the report he says: "We enclose Mr. Kain's report of the accounts of your county which speaks for itself. We are pleased to note the excellent condition of affairs and congratulate you heartily thereupon."

Mr. Kain who did the actual work in the local office says:

"The auditor of St. Louis county is one of the most efficient and competent auditors in the state. He has a well organized corps of assistants who, collectively, are giving the taxpayers an intelligent and economical administration of county affairs."

The report states that the office force employed in the county office is as efficient as any in the state. It also states that the clerks are courteous, obliging and that their work is thoroughly reliable.

Again the report says: "Claims allowed by the county board were examined as to their execution and legality. They show great care was taken by the auditor, assistant auditor, county attorney and county board in auditing and the payment of claims against the count."

The system of the county board in building roads and bridges is approved as are all the other departments of the county office. The report shows that $160,000 was spent for roads and bridges during the year.

ROOSEVELT IS GIVEN TYPICAL WELCOME AT CHEYENNE, WYO.

recommended the election of Vice President Sherman.

In his speech here today Col. Roosevelt proposed the building of a monument to Frederic Remington, the painter-sculptor of scenes in the battle country. Col. Roosevelt will be the custodian and Homer Davenport, the cartoonist, secretary of the monument fund.

Col. Rosevelt in his address here said:

"When, at the close of my hunting trip in Africa, I reached the borders of civilization, the first invitation I accepted was this, to visit the capital of Wyoming on the day when the people of the frontier came together to commemorate their achievements. I was glad it was so, because I have a peculiar feeling for the men and women of what used to be called the 'Far West,' and especially for those of the cattle country.

Recalled Western Life.

"For a number of years I lived on a ranch on the Little Missouri, sharing work and play, good fortune and bad fortune, with my neighbors; working on the roundup, serving as delegate from the Little Missouri roundup district to the Montana Stock-growers association, and even at times acting as deputy sheriff at my end of the country.

"I count those years as among the most valuable of my life, because nothing breeds such community of feeling as to work with one's fellow men at their life tasks, and to learn to know their feelings by actually sharing them.

"The man of the West, throughout the successive stages of Western growth, has always been one of the two or three most typical figures—indeed, I am tempted to say, the most typical figure—in American life. The Westerner is an American first and foremost; for this is the great lesson, friends, that all of us need to learn and to keep, the lesson that it is unimportant whether a man lives North or South, East or West, provided he is genuinely and in good faith an American—that he feels every part of the United States as his own, and that he is honestly desirous to uphold the interests of all other Americans in whatever sections of the country they may dwell.

West Stands for Progress.

"The West stands for growth, for progress. So must the whole American people stand. A great democracy must be progressive or it will soon cease to be either great or democratic. No nation, no state, no party, can stand still. It must either go forward or go backward; and it becomes useless if it goes backward. Therefore I greet you, men of the West, and I stand for progress as all men must stand who are progressive.

"The pioneers and their immediate successors won victory only by proving that they possessed the great, masterful qualities which lie at the foundation of national greatness. The pioneer days are over, save in a few places, and the more complex life of today calls for a greater variety of good qualities than were needed on the frontier. But these new qualities can only supplement, and never supplant, the old, homely virtues. These include the power of self help, together with the power of joining with others for mutual help, and, what is especially important, the feeling of comradehsip, of social good fellowship.

For Social Betterment.

"We need to strive for the general social betterment of the people as a whole, and yet to encourage individual initiative up to the point where they become detrimental to the general welfare.

"Sometimes a wrong represents the deliberate wickedness of the wrongdoer, in which case the remedy is to punish him; but sometimes it represents the effects of a false social system, in which case the right course is to alter what is false in the system. Both principles need to be kept in view as guides to our conduct, and it is necessary sometimes to work in accordance with one and sometimes in accordance with the other.

Statue to Remington.

"Before ending I wish to say a word on something which I believe should epsecially interest all men who live in the open country. The phase of our national life in which the stockman, the mining prospector, the frontier farmer and their associates were the chief characters, was not only a very important, but also a very picturesque phase. Often such a phase passes without any great artist arising to commemorate it. But in our generation, for our good fortune, a great artist arose who was capable of seeing and of recording the infinite picturesqueness of the life of the plains and the Rockies.

"Of course I speak of Frederick Remington. He was one of those Americans who by his achievements distinctly deserved well of America. He worked with pencil, with brush, with chisel; he was both a painter and a sculptor. His pictures and his few bronzes are equally good. In Remington's pictures, all the most vivid and characteristic features of the Western pioneer life, which is just closing, were set forth, and he has commemorated forever the men of the plains and the mountains as they actually were.

Urges the Plan.

"Now I wish very much that these men themselves would in turn provide a monument for the great artist, the sum of whose activities represents such a feature of American achievement, and, above all, represents the commemoration of some of the most interesting features that have ever appeared on the stage of American life. A statue should be raised to Remington by some really first-class artist. Here at Cheyenne, in this gathering, many hundreds of the men have come together who were themselves typical leaders in, and representatives of, the very life which Remington so portrayed that it will always live. I hope that these men will join together, arrange the appointment of a committee, and start to raise funds for the erection of such a statue."

DULUTH MEN ARE INTERESTED

Local Capital Developing New Gold District in Nevada.

"Folowing close on the heels of the Goldfield boom, given a setback by a two-year panic and six months of labor trouble, the Seven Troughs gold mining district, in Humbolt county, Nev., has been carrying on development work and actual operations of mines for only eighteen months, yet the district is now classed among the big producers," declares A. A. Williams of Seven Troughs, who is a business caller in the city this week.

This district has something of local interest for the reason that the capital invested there is largely from St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth. One of the largest producers, the Florence mine, is said to have over $2,000,000 worth of ore blocked out and among its stockholders are Frank Crassweller, W. A. Hicken and Dr. Webster of this city. The company holds the property on a lease that runs for some time yet.

"There are fourteen properties now producing ore," says Mr. Williams, "and the estimated production for July is $500,000 in bullion. I have reliable information that one day last month one property in that district produced 2,200 pounds of high-grade ore that ran from $25 to $75 per pound, with a fair average of $50 a pound. One chunk weighing fifty opunds has an approximate value of $3,600. Another lease is producing $20,000 per day with a ten-stamp mill and its output of high-grade ore is over $200,000 ahead of the mill. Two shipments from one of the properties in a week totaled $150,000.

"This district was discovered four years ago and the namo was taken from the fact that there are seven water troughs in the immediate region. There are four lively mining camps—Vernon, Mazuma, Seven Troughs and Farrell—all within a radius of eight miles and the nearest railroad is the main line of the Southern Pacific, at Lovelock, a distance of twenty-eight miles, with splendid automobile and stage roads connecting with the camps. The trip over Affinity range by automobile can be made in an hour and twenty minutes."

HAS POWER TO REGULATE

Council May Require Mining Companies to File Reports.

Ordinance to Protect Citizens Against Swindles Will Be Drafted.

The city authorities may regulate copper brokers and promoters of mining schemes which may be floated in Duluth.

An ordinance incorporating the provisions which will be required of them is now being prepared in the office of City Attorney Bert Fesler, who has given it as his opinion that the city has plenty of authority in this direction.

The primary object of the ordinance is to save the public from itself by falling an easy prey to fakers who sell them stocks not worth the paper they are written upon.

The resolution calling for the opinion of the city attorney upon the question was introduced by Alderman Shartel. He asserts that the people of Duluth have been unmercifully fleeced with worthless stocks of all kinds of mining concerns. He explains that the stock of many good reliable concerns have been put on the market in Duluth, but that many flotations have been little better than robbery. He claims that men with hardly anything but an acre or two of ground, about 1,000 miles from nowhere, with a digging about ten feet deep, have organized companies and become independently wealthy selling this property in the shape of mining stocks. He also states that it has been brought to his attention that hundreds of clerks and small-salaried office men have sunk the savings of years into propositions of this kind, some of them even going so far as to mortgage their homes or their furniture in order to get in on the "ground floor." Under false representations and the "get-rich-quick" lure they have been stripped of everything they ever had, he goes on to say. Holding forth the promises of automobiles, servants and carriages in a year's time it is alleged that these men have wrung hundreds of thousands of dollars from people in Duluth.

It is to prevent schemes of this kind that the ordinance is being drawn. Each of the companies will be obliged under the ordinance to file reports containing complete information of its holdings. These reports will give information as to assays, the size of the property, the kinds of ore, the men backing it, the prospects, any other details to enable the public to determine whether or not the proposition is worth anything or not.

The largest penalty which be imposed under the charter is a fine of $100, but each person to whom the promoter sells stock without complying with these provisions will constitute a separate offense. In case he sold stock in this manner to 100 people he would be liable to a fine of $10,000.

The ordinance meets the approval of the brokers of the city and the members of the stock exchange. The requirements of the latter are rigid and will be carefully examined by those preparing the ordinance or investigating the question. The council committee and the legal department had a meeting with some of the brokers during the week and the matter was thoroughly discussed at that time. The ordinance will be introduced in the council in the near future.

DEATH RESULT OF FALL FROM WAGON

Little West End Boy Receives Fatal Internal Injuries.

As the result of injuries received from falling from a load of slabs on Twenty-eighth avenue west last Wednesday, Nicholas, the 5-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Shubik died at the family residence, 2606 West Railroad street last night.

The boy was stealing a ride on one of the wagons coming from the mills when he fell to the ground, a distance of about ten feet. His injuries were not at first thought serious, but his condition became worse, Dr. Lepak was called. He found evidences of internal injuries which proved fatal last night.

The funeral will be held Monday morning at 9 o'clock, from the Polish Catholic church, and interment will be at the Polish cemetery.

NECK BROKEN BY FALL FROM WAGON

Unknown Man Is Instantly Killed Near Pike Lake.

A man whose name is unknown to the coroner or other authorities in the city, was almost instantly killed last night at Pike lake. He fell from a wagon, striking the ground on his head and fracturing the spinal column. He was in the employ of M. W. Barnard at Leonard's camp. He had been in the city to hire a crew of men for the Canadian Northern railroad construction work. It is claimed that all had been drinking and took a quantity of liquor with them from the city when they left for the country. Further than that he was about 35 years of age, little is known of him. The body will be brought to Crawford's undertaking parlors.

EAGLES' SCANDAL AIRED.

Names of Members Involved in Division of Funds Given Out.

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 27.—The report of the Eagles' committee which tried and convicted four former grand officers on charges of diverting funds of the fraternal order of Eagles, was made public in part today. It brings into the case a new name, that of John S. Dodsworth of the Topeka, Kan., aerie. Upon his own confession, the report states, he was found guilty and his expulsion resulted. Past President Edward P. Keyause of Wilmington, Del., Martin Gray of New Haven, Conn., Thomas Hayes of Newark, N. J., are the others involved. It is further stated that Bernard D. Monahan of Philadelphia had knowledge of the affair but had not profited by it. No action was taken in his case.

At Least Seven Killed.

Durand, Mich., Aug. 27.—At least seven persons lost their lives in the Grand Trunk wreck near Durand. This was established late last night when H. I. Jeffries of Washington, D. C., identified the supposed body of Mrs. Catherine Squires as that of his wife. Coroner S. C. Hatchel is inclined to believe that two or three others were killed besides those whose bodies were recovered.

OLD STORY.

Chicago News: "Well, I declare, it's another agent!" cried Mrs. Curfew, despairingly, as she opened the front door. "Now, mister, there's no use in your saying a word, for I simply won't buy anything. I can tell by the looks of your valise that you're selling some new kind of cement that will mend broken crockery, but I haven't any broken crockery, and if I had I wouldn't mend it.

"A man who might have been your twin brother, only that he had a black eye and a red necktie, came here six months ago and sold me some cement that he said would make a broken dish better than ever. One of my six blue and white soup plates was broken, my husband having thrown it at the cat, so I bought a bottle, fixed the soup plate with the cement, and next day Uncle Hiram, who's a real pious man, was here to eat dinner with us, and I had tomato soup, and he happened to get that mended plate, and it came apart, and the soup ran down all over his black broadcloth trousers—the same pair he wore when he married Letitia Campbell forty years ago—and the language he used was dreadful. So, you see, there isn't a bit of use in opening your valise and trying to sell me cement."

"But, madam," said the agent, fumbling with the lock of his grip, 'I am selling no worthless compound of that nature. I regard the whole cement business with unspeakable loathing and contempt. No! I am selling a preparation that brings sunshine into every home. I see a number of hens on the premises. I suppose they are yours?"

"Yes, they are ours. I have urged my husband time and again to wring their necks, for they never lay any eggs, and we have to buy all our eggs at the grocery, and the grocer has just bought a new automobile and seems determined to pay for it by robbing his customers, and the eggs he sends to this house are no larger than thimbles, and every once in a while I get one that must have been laid before the Mexican war, and—"

"That's just the point, madam. Here you are spending your hard-earned savings for the inferior eggs of commerce, enabling a plutocratic grocer to go around in arrogant pride, like Cleopatra on her barge, when you might have fresh, sweet, home-grown eggs without a bit of trouble and at a trifling expense. I am the agent in this territory for Dr. Popsmith's poultry powder, the most marvelous preparation ever offered. You mix a spoonful with the chicken feed every morning, and, lo and behold! your chickens at once begin to lay eggs with a zest and enthusiasm that will do your heart good.

"These idle and trifling hens that I see here, wasting the best years of their lives on downy beds of ease, might be as profitable as a gold mine. Give them Dr. Popsmith's powder, my dear madam, and the nests will be filled with hen fruit, and the cares that infest the day will fold their tents like the Arabs and as silently steal away. This powder is also a disinfectant. A small quantity sprinkled in the shoes will relieve tired and swollen feet. Your husband will find it better than talcum powder for use after shaving, and a spoonful mixed with the flour improves the quality of your biscuits wonderfully."

"Well, I suppose I'll have to take a can," said Mrs. Curfew, wearily, "but I know I'm a goose for doing it. My husband says we'll wind up in the poorhouse if I don't quit buying of agents. A man who was here yesterday sold me a new substitute for coffee that he said was made of California fruits and flowers, and the coffee I made from it was pale green and tasted like verdigris. I suppose your poultry powder will kill all my hens, but it'll be a good riddance, for they haven't laid an egg since last spring."

HE DIDN'T UNDERSTAND.

Wilbur Wright was discussing in Dayton a very imaginative magazine story about aeroplanes.

"The story," he said, "was full of errors. Aeroplanes can't do what this chap claims. He doesn't understand them.

"In fact, he's like old George Kettle of Trotwood. George rushed into the Trotwood telegraph office the other day with a small package wrapped in a newspaper under his arm.

"'Telegraph this to my wife down to Dayton, Harvey,' he said to the telegraph clerk, thrusting the package through the little window.

"'No, no, George; we can't do anything like that,' laughed the clerk.

"'Drat ye,' said George angrily, 'ye got to do it. It's my wife's teeth.'"

A VALUABLE INSTITUTION PERMANENT

The Duluth Electro-Radio Curatorium Is Here to Stay—Being Now Owned by Duluth People, and Restoring to Health Patients From All Over the Entire Northwest.

On the eighth floor of the Alworth building in Duluth, the ill are still getting well in increasing numbers, though pronounced "incurable" by eminent old fogies. The Curatorium patients, nearly all of them, were thus condemned to die on short notice. But nearly all of them don't. They are not hankering after a life of bliss beyond this just yet. They prefer to live on where they have their homes and dear ones on earth, and can dispense with wings until they have to wear them. So they flock to the Duluth Curatorium to deposit their ills in this omnibus health resort, and after completed treatments, go home rejoicing.

The subtle forces from the heart of nature, electricity and radio-radiations, have revived their spirits and rejuvenated their vitality. For these forces are irresistible. They in holy communion penetrate anything or everything, and in diseased bodies or minds they always find their way to the subnormal, unhealthy spots of least resistance and go about disinfecting and upbuilding them by accelerated circulation and revived nerve energy, located no matter where.

At the head of the medical staff stands a man who has his diplomas in medicine, surgery and philosophy from New York city and from Illinois. His assistants are erudite and skillful, and they spare no efforts to bring each and every case of sickness under curatorial care to a successful issue.

The offices of the Electro-Radio Curatorium are easy to find, being located on the eighth floor of the tallest "skyscraper" in Duluth, the Alworth building, where medicated ozone is inhaled for all catarrhal or lung affections with very happy results, and where consultations are still free, not "for men only," but for all the sick and suffering, from 9 to 12 and 7 to 8 p. m. on workdays, and on Sunday from 11 to 12 a. m., at Suite 800-801.

ON THE IRON RANGES

VIRGINIA GLAD MILL WILL RUN

Action of Council in Vacating Mud Lake Road Cleared Situation.

Virginia, Minn., Aug. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Since the city council granted the petition of the Virginia & Rainy Lake Lumber company for the vacation of the Mud Lake road which runs through the yards of the company and was more or less trouble as it required the company to keep it open, all doubt about the company not running its big mill this winter has been dissipated.

The company needed the space taken by the Mud lake road for piling lumber and so long as the road ran through lumber insurance companies would not insure the lumber. Before the council granted the request to vacate the road Supt. Rogers had received word to close down until the company could dispose of the lumber on hand.

The farmers of the Mud lake district made the chief objection against the road being vacated. As the matter has been adjusted and the big mill will continue to run employing about 1,500 men and distributing $60,000 per month in payroll it is evident there is much cause for gratification here.

Biwabik, Minn., Aug. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—This community was shocked early in the week by the sudden death of Mrs. J. F. Toeller, wife of the Missabe agent, who passed away while riding in an automobile with her husband to visit some relatives in Aurora. Mrs. Toeller had been suffering from tuberculosis but her relatives did not think death was near when her husband proposed giving her an outing by motoring to Biwabik. She was unable to walk to the machine, being carried by her husband. Mrs. Toeller was accompanied on the trip by her husband, J. F. Toeller, and her mother, Mrs. A. M. Graves. She had found it difficult to breathe for some time, and desired strongly to get into the fresh air. When the party was about a mile from Aurora, Mrs. Toeller was noticed to sink to the seat in apparent collapse. She breathed heavily for a minute or so and then was at apparent ease. Those in the auto with her hurried to Aurora and secured medical assistance, but it was too late.

The body was brought back to Biwabik and Deputy Coroner Seeley called. He decided that there was no reason for investigation and the body was taken to the Toeller home at the Missabe depot.

Although some such end of the patient had been expected for some months the manner in which it occurred, somewhat, shocked the people. The body was sent to the old home at Waterville, Minn., for interment.

TAKE KOREA ON MONDAY

no degradation for the natives, who, under the annexation, will enjoy exactly the same rights as the Japanese. It is the wish of the emperor of Japan that every effort be made to make the Koreans feel no humiliation, but rather relief at the annexation.

"The policy of Japan in administering the new portion of the empire will be directed toward a steady improvement of conditions and the development of the resources of Korea."

It may be stated with authority that although the treaties of Korea with foreign powers lapse with the annexation, the present customs tariff of Korea, which is much lower than that of Japan, will be continued for an indefinite period under Japanese rule.

Details Made Public.

Interesting details of the negotiations leading to the annexation are made public. The assent of Emperor Yi Syek and of his predecessor Yi Heui, to the annexation, was given willingly, it is said, the only hesitation shown when the terms were being discussed being in regard to the titles which will hereafter be borne by the former emperors.

The original Japanese terms proposed the title of grand duke, but the emperor of Korea insisted upon being styled "whang" or king, to which Japan assented. The princes of the Korean imperial house would, it was conceded, be treated as Japanese princes and an annuity of $75,000 was granted them. The royal family will be allowed to reside where they please and will probably remain in Korea.

Will be Made Peers.

Members of the imperial family and some of the high dignitaries of the kingdom will be created peers of the Japanese empire, substantial grants of money being awarded to them. Koreans will also be appointed privy councilors.

The upper classes of the Koreans are now generally acquainted with the facts of the annexation and appear satisfied with it. The attitude of the resident general is regarded as generous, and no apprehension of protest or disturbance when the details of the annexation are published is entertained. These will not be promulgated before Aug. 29.

It is expected that Resident Gen. Terauchi will remain in Korea as governor general for several months, after which he will probably be succeeded by Baron Simpei Goto, Japanese minister of communications.

the smoke so bad there that the men were forced to quit work.

The big bridge about a mile up the river from the plant is practically completed and will be ready for train service within a few days. No steps have been taken by the steel company to erect approaches to the wagon and street car triffic deck, and it is thought that it wil be up to the cities of Duluth and Superior to defray the cost of such approaches if they are built. Several tracks are open between the steel plant and the big bridge, but the main work of installing the yard, which is to occupy the land between the plant buildings and the bridge, and which will be done by the Duluth, Missabe & Northern railroad, has not yet been commenced.

Huge Gravel Pit.

A huge gravel pit has been opened up to the south of the projected buildings and the two-plant locomotives are kept busy hauling gravel from this pit to the cement plant. A locomotive crane carries the cement in huge buckets to the seat of operations, swings them over the molds and dumps them.

One derrick shovel is at work digging the trench for the fifteen foot sewer which is to carry off the waste water from the blast furnaces. This trench is thirty feet deep and about twenty feet across.

As the work progresses a number of workmen are being imported from the Gary plant of the steel corporation, and the force will be increased steadily between now and winter. It is stated that approximately 1,000 men will be at work on the site by the time snow flies. The work will be carried on steadily all winter.

Everything about the construction work is being carried on in the big, quiet, efficient manner which characterizes the work of the steel corporation on such jobs, nothing being spared to secure the most up to date and economical machinery available. As the walls of the new buildings rise, and the huge steel stacks of the blast furnace are put in place, the site will take on more of the appearance of a great steel plant than it has today, and as the walls of the shops are already rising rapidly and the furnace foundations are fairly well along, it is probable that within the next three months Duluth's second Gary will have taken on much of the appearance which will characterize it as one of the greatest steel producing plants in the world.

"IF GUILTY AT ALL, I SHOULD BE HANGED"

that if I am guilty of murder in the second degree, I am also guilty of murder in the first degree according to law, as I can see no difference from my point of view and, as such, should be hanged.

"I claim and always will claim, that I shot, firmly believing that my life was in danger; to stop him, aiming at his arm, which was the only spot I definitely saw, as his body seemed enveloped in a haze to me. If a man has no right to defend himself from dangerous and bodily harm, I am guilty and as such should be punished to the full extent of the law of the state.

AVIATOR MARS GETS A DUCKING

New York, Aug. 27.—While attempting to fly his aeroplane from Sheepshead track to Fort Hamilton this morning, J. C. Mars, the aviator, was caught in a heavy blast of wind and carried out over the lower bay, where his machine suddenly collapsed and fell into the water more than 100 feet below. Mars was picked up by the tugboat Hustler. The wrecked aeroplane was taken aboard a lighter off Craven shoal buoy. Mars was shaken up by the fall.

It was shortly before 7 o'clock when Mars in his aeroplane arose from the Sheepshead Bay track and he headed for Manhattan beach. He rose to the height of about 2,000 feet, and after circling around two or three times, flew to the westward towards Coney Island, where he planned to fly to Fort Hamilton. A sudden gust carried the aviator out over Gravesend bay, where Mars lost control of the machine in the wind.

When brought ashore Mars said he was not hurt, but that his machine was wrecked.

North Dakota Exhibits.

Mandan, N. D., Aug. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Commencing next week, the North Dakota exhibit of grains and grasses, which has just been collected for the year of 1910, will be placed on display at five fairs in the state of Wisconsin and at five fairs in the state of Iowa. The exhibit this year is a remarkably good one, even the dry weather failing to have any depreciating effect upon it.

Rain Will Release Logs.

Marinette, Wis., Aug. 27. — (Special to The Herald.)—The heavy rain of Thursday will release the drive on the Menominee river, which has been hung up for a couple of months. It is estimated that there is about 40,000,000 feet of logs on the main drive and only 9,000,000 feet have reached the sorting gaps so far this season.

Drunken Indian Killed.

Tokio, N. D., Aug. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—While in an intoxicated condition, Joe Greyeagle, an Indian residing near this place, was killed. He was driving to his home from Devils Lake and supposedly fell from his buggy under the wheels, his skull being crushed in as a result. Officials are making an investigation of the case and prosecutions are probable.

SEPT. 6 WILL BE ROOSEVELT DAY

Former President Will Be at State Fair on That Date.

There was an exciting five minutes at the state fair grounds last week, when the following telegram was received at the administration building:

"New York, July 20, 1910.—C. N. Cosgrove, Secretary, State Fair Grounds, St. Paul, Minn.: You may announce that Col. Theodore Roosevelt accepts our invitation and will be our guest Tuesday afternoon.

"C. M. GRIGGS."

This places at rest all speculation concerning Former President Roosevelt as a state fair visitor. On the morning of Tuesday, Sept. 6, he will arrive in St. Paul and will address the conservation congress, then in session. Early that afternoon he will start for the state fair grounds, and while there will address the throng of loyal citizens who will be on hand to give him a welcome that, for warmth and cordiality, if not for numbers, will rival even the great demonstration which greeted his return to New York after his triumphant tour through the hunting wilds of Africa and the courts of Europe.

COL. THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

It has been stated as probable that the original members of the Roosevelt club, the first organization of its kind in the country, having been established during the years preliminary to the first Roosevelt presidential campaign, will climb on horseback as a guard of honor and escort the former Rough Rider president to the fair. That such a plan would delight the nation's most popular citizen goes without saying.

Yes, it certainly was important news that Mr. Griggs flashed over the wires to the state fair secretary. Some uncertainty had developed as to the probability of Col. Roosevelt's attendance, so every official and employe in and about the fair grounds had been in a state of nervous suspense ever since Mr. Griggs went East a week ago to definitely lay before the ex-president the formal invitation of the people of Minnesota to be the guest of honor at their state fair. The emphatic success of Mr. Griggs' visit is expressed in the telegram quoted above. Col. Roosevelt's coming is a big compliment not only to the state, but to the national greatness and importance of the fair itself, and it will endear him more strongly than ever in the affections of all Minnesotans.

CLOUDY

"Yesterday was about the most pleasant day of the week, but the temperature dropped again last night to 48 deg. Today is cloudy and threatening, but the weather man doesn't hold out any rain predictions. Moderate northeast winds," is the cheerful prediction for tonight and tomorrow.

Beautiful weather prevailed a year ago today.

The sun rose this morning at 5:21 and it will set at 6:58, giving thirteen hours and thirty-seven minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"A disturbance of considerable intensity has developed over Western South Dakota, the principal results thus far being increasing cloudiness throughout the Northwest and much warmer weather over the Rocky mountains, Eastern slopes and Northern Lake region. The depression overlying the Gulf of Mexico has caused further showers there and in Atlantic states. The high pressure condition central Friday morning over Missouri has advanced its center to the Upper Ohio valley, cooler weather resulting along the North Atlantic coast. Conditions favor unsettled and occasionally threatening weather at the Head of the Lakes tonight and Sunday."

General Forecast.

Chicago, Aug. 27.—Forecasts for twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m. Sunday:

Upper Michigan—Unsettled tonight; cooler in north portion; Sunday partly cloudy.

STRENUOUS POLITICS IN SOUTH CAROLINA.

Laurens, S. C., Aug. 27.—A riot was narrowley averted at the Democratic state convention meeting here yesterday following an assault upon Attorney General J. Frazer Lyon, while he was attempting to address the voters. When his assailants crowded on the speaker's platform, Mr. Lyon struck Henry Wright and kicked him several times in the chest.

The excitement was intense and for several minutes a policeman stood by the attorney general with a drawn revolver.

The trouble arose when J. T. Crews, editor of a Laurens paper, which opposed the re-election of Mr. Lyon, leaped upon the platform and demanded that the attorney general read certain letters. Almost instantly four friends of Crews made a rush for Lyon, but he met the onslaught with closed fists.

LONG MARRIED; DECREE ASKED

Wedded Life Proves Failure to Sarah Bingham After Thirty-Two Years.

After thirty-two years of married life, Mrs. Sarah M. Bingham has begun suit in the district court for a divorce from her husband, Samuel Bingham.

They were married in England in 1878, but have lived in the United States twenty years. She is 54 years old and he has attained the same age.

Cruel and inhuman treatment is the basis of the action brought by the wife. She also asserts that her husband has been intemperate and that for a long time past has failed to provide for her.

She alleges that on March 6 of the present year, he, after refusing to give the young daughter money to attend a school entertainment, threatened to shoot his wife if she continued to ask him for it She alleges that on the same occasion he told her she was crazy and should have an examination in probate court.

In her complaint she states that she has suffered from a systematic course of ill treatment covering the last ten years.

She asks a divorce, the custody of the children, and alimony. She claims he has an income of several thousand dollars a year from a lumber business and property that he owns.

DEMANDS BANNS BEFORE MARRIAGE

Proposal as to Laws Is Laid Before Meeting at Chattanooga.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Aug. 27.—The commission on uniform state laws, in conference here, had one of the most important sessions in its history today.

The committee on marriage and divorce, in its drafts of a marriage act, recommended that something in the nature of banns should be published as prerequisites of a valid marriage. The object of the provision is to take the matter to a court for adjudication as to the validity of the objection. This is along the line of previous legislation in a few states, although regarded as an advance over all such legislation.

The committee proposing the laws, with the conference acting as a committee of the whole, are: Edward W. Frost, chairman, Michigan; J. R. Thornton, Louisiana; Senneccia M. Taylor, Missouri; F. L. Siddons, District of Columbia; Robert Snodgrass, Pennsylvania; John Semey, New Jersey; and Ernest Freund, Illinois.

(BY BRUCE.)

They call him "Tacks" De Lave, because he won't behave, and because he is the troubled possessor of a temper that would make Bluebeard's, even in one of those notorious matrimonial melees, seem a meek and lowly. This De Lave person may be a "bug," as they say in baseball, and may cause as much trouble as Col. Roosevelt in Noo York state; but when it comes to gently guiding the destinies of a baseball, he is there. Yesterday the Sox secured one lone hit, Eau Claire taking the opening game by the score of 2 to 0.

She was a good game to watch. Those Eau Claire boys play baseball with an enthusiasm sometimes shown by the newly rich at banquets, where the soup course is thick and possesses infinite musical qualifications. These Schooners go after everything in sight. They are up and coming all the time, and, after witnessing their play, it is not difficult to understand why they have a double girthed cinch on the dear old Elliott calico.

Yesterday we had no chance to win. Cranky De Lave held us to that solitary blow, which Mr. Cummings garnered. Three times during the game we shunted a runner along to second base, and each time he died there. There were these occasions when a hit would have scored, and the hit was as hard to get as consolation in congress.

Blancke pitched a nice, gentlemanly game; a game that would have won nine times out of ten afternoons, eliminating double-headers, of course. Only five hits were harvested by the Eau Claire hands during the frolic, and these hits were kept fairly well scattered.

But when the other hill laborer is keeping the hits of your side down in the solitarie class, and is backed with errorless support, it is indeed hard to win. Mr. Blancke has encountered several of these hard luck contests of late, and all the time he has been pitching good baseball.

How They Scored.

Eau Claire gathered its first counter in the second, and thus early in the contest splashed a wee bit of mud on our white party costumes. In this round Mr. Bailey, who played part of the present season with Milwaukee, slapped the little spheroid up against the left field fence, reposing gracefully on second when the ball was returned to the diamond. He was sacrificed by Kading. Carter struck angrily out, but Bailey scored when Benrud hit a single to left. Moore ended the inning by flying to O'Brien.

In the next inning the next run came. De Lave drew a base and was sacrificed along by Kick. Breyette flew to Cummings in center, but Calahan doubled to left and the score was in. Bailey fouled out to Shorty Anderson.

How We Might Have.

In the fourth frame, with Boutchart down, Kohl drew a base. O'Brien was unable to do anything, but Altermott drew the second walk of the inning. Holstrom was at bat and with his brand new batting average, there were those of us who expected that he would bang the ball. He forced Altermott at second and our hopes retired for the time being.

In the seventh Altermott drew another base, just like the first. Holstrom also was walked. Kramer struck out, but Cummings got the only hit of the day, soaking it over second. There were three on and one out. The psychological moment, like the iceman, had came. Blancke was up and pitchers in books and poems have been known to win their own games. Blancke struck out, G. Anderson grounding out to Kading.

We went out one, two, three in the eighth and ninth. Bravely we tried, but the enemy was stubborn and perverse. Three home runs would have won the game—but what's the use to dream?

Despite the fact that we lost, the game was one good to see. The Sox have lost the last three games 'tis true, but nevertheless the team is playing good baseball. Eau Claire will be here today and tomorrow, and it is expected that the two remaining games of the series will be two of the best of the season.

The fans are standing by the team loyally, and it is expected that two of the best crowds of the season will be out to witness the last two appearances of the coming champions. The Schooners play fast, snappy baseball, the kind that it is a real pleasure to watch. Schoonhoven has a great team, one that will make any team in the country, outside of the two majors, go some.

WAUSAU WINS FROM SUPERIOR

Lumberjacks Mix Hits With Errors By Dukes, Nosing Out Victory.

Wausau won a 5-to-3 game from the Dukes yesterday, Lakoff having the Red Legs guessing wrong over his offerings during the greater part of the game. Wausau made five runs in the opening round, the hits of the Jacks coming in close connection with the errors of the Grumblers. If a lot of "ifs" had happened, or had not happened, the Dukes would have won the game, according to the Superior version. The Jacks won because their hits were mixed with the glaring errors of the Superior team and because the Dukes could not hit Lakoff when a hit would have broken up the game. Lakoff also received good support throughout the contest.

NORTH DAKOTA U GAMES SCHEDULED

Some of the Steller Contests Planned By Grand Forks Institution.

Grand Forks, N. D., Aug. 27.—(Special to The Herald.) — Hamline at St. Paul on Oct. 22; Carleton at Grand Forks on Oct. 15, the North Dakota Agricultural college at Grand Forks on Nov. 5, together with games against the South Dakota university on a date not yet fixed and one with the Fargo college, Oct. 29 at Fargo, are the feature games of the schedule of the North Dakota University Football team, just announced. In addition to these games there will also be contests with the Grand Forks high school and the University Alumna, the first of these taking place on Oct. 1 and the second being scheduled for Oct. 8.

The university classes will be called on Sept. 20 and on that day the candidates for places on the team will have their first practice. Just who of the old men will return is as yet somewhat uncertain, but this much is known, that all members of the back field will be on the field again this season with only one exception. Of the five team members graduating last year, only one was a back field man, that being Wineman at full. The line men who graduated are Stewart and Lynn at tackle, Edwunds at center and Bonzer at left guard.

From the material that was developed last year, and from the new men who will be out for the first time this fall, it is expected that some good men can be secured to fill these places.

Big Events of Season.

The Hamline, Carleton and the North Dakota Agricultural games are the big events of the season's card. Last year the Flickertails were successful in defeating the Hamline team and that means that the Midway men will make a hard battle for the victory this season. Carleton is an old time enemy of the Dakota team and that game will be one of the closely contested ones.

Resumption of football relations with the state agricultural college is one of the season's big numbers. Last year a game was scheduled between the two colleges but the negotiations fell through, the agricultural college deciding that it did not want to play the university and as a result a friendly agreement to call the match off was made. This season, however, there appears every reason to believe that the game will be played on the date fixed. It will be the first time the two schools have gotten together on the gridiron in several seasons, the old elligibility rules war having prevented them from getting together.

Manager Fred Brockhoff, who announced the schedule, says there are good prospects of a game against the South Dakota university and expects to conclude arrangements within a short time. These institutions had a working agreement up to last year, the contract expiring at that time.

EVANS AND HUNTER MEET FOR TROPHY.

Chicago, Aug. 27.—Charles Evans, Jr., of Edgewater, the former Western champion, and Paul Hunter of Midlothian, who won the Southern California championship in 1909, met today in the first half of the 36-hole final for the Mayflower cup, the main prize in the fifteenth annual golf tournament of the Onwentsia club.

They are rated as two of the best players in the country, and while Hunter has not won as many big events as his opponent, he has played some wonderful golf at times and is expected to give the Edgewater player a hard battle over the long route.

Many of the leading Chicago players were on hand for the annual competition for the Onwentsia and Lake Forest cups, which are played for at thirty-six holes. H. Chandler Egan of Exmoor is the present holder of the former cup.

RACE MEET AT GALESBURG IS ENDED.

Galesburg, Ill., Aug. 27.—The fourth and last day of the 1910 race meeting at Galesburg was marked by a continuance of speedy work. In the 2:08 pace, Bland S. made the first heat in 2:03½, losing the race, however, to Tony Swift, by Swift Bell.

NEW YORK ATHLETES TO COMPETE AT CHICAGO.

GOOD TIME ON NEW ELGIN TRACK

Livingstone, Buck and Hearne Win Big Events on Opening Day.

Elgin, Ill., Aug. 27.—Out of a potpourri or road races over the new eight and one-half mile course here yesterday, three drivers and three cars emeraged with distinguished honors. A. Livingstone, spinning a mile a minute for 203.35 miles, annexed the major event, the Illinois trophy, with a National. C. D. Buck, who drove half of his race with one spring suspension broken, captured the Kane trophy, covering the 169.46 miles in 3:04:45.79. A. Hearne, who drove his own entry, a Benz, in the small car contest took the Fox River trophy. His time for the 135.57 miles was 2:30:4.35.

Livingstone averaged 60.6 miles per hour. Buck, 56 miles and Hearne 54. The pilot of the National made the entire trip without stopping—without even hesitating in fact. Hearne was similarly fortunate. Buck stopped for a short time when his spring suspension broke.

Ned Crane suffered a heart-breaking experience. His Staver-Chicago car had worked consistently from fourth place to second for which place he had a lead over Miller, the Warren-Detroit pilot. On the fifteenth lap, with only one more to go, the machine was disqualified because as Starter Wagner explained, Crane's mechanician had failed to look behind him to see if it were necessary to make way for some driver desiring to pass him. Greiner, driving a National, was the man immediately behind, and he had to swerve violently to avoid hitting the Staver-Chicago.

There was but one accident and that not serious. Al Fritsche, who was at the wheel of a Cino, skidded into a ditch and wrenched his shoulder. The mechanician also was slightly hurt. A motor ambulance did good time in keping away from the racers while taking the injured man down the course to the emergency hospital.

A crowd estimated at 50,000 to 75,000 saw the contests.

BRANDOM APOLOGIZES AND IS REINSTATED.

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 27.—An apology from Chester M. (Chick) Brandom to Manager Danny Shay of the local American association baseball team has won the pitcher his place back on the club's roster. Brandom was suspended for the season by Shay at Toledo Thursday. Yesterday he told Shay he was sorry he had been insubordinate.

Shay yesterday purchased Frank Higgins, a semi-professional pitcher, in Toledo.

SVANBERG BREAKS MARATHON RECORD.

Lawrence, Mass., Aug. 27.—John Svanberg, the Swede Marathon runner, last night broke the world's Marathon record for twenty-six miles, 385 yards, recently made by himself at New York, running the distance here in two hours, twenty-nine minutes, forty seconds. Pat Dineen of Boston was two laps behind, finishing in 2:31:55.

ALEX SMITH HOLDS OPEN GOLF HONORS.

Deal, N. J., Aug. 27.—Alex Smith retained the Metropolitan open golf championship by winning in 301. John McDermott turned in 303 and H. H. Barker 306.

HANDICAP RECENT FEATURE FOR NORTHLAND CLUB.

The eighteen hole medal play handicap will be the golf feature at the Northland Country club this afternoon. There are a large number of entries in this event, and one of the best contests of the present season is expected.

Next Saturday the team from Houghton will be here to play another leg in the contest for the Calverly cup. There will be not less than five on the visiting team or more than seven. This contest will be one of the big events of the local golf season, and the team of the Northland club is engaging in daily practice in anticipation of defeating the golfers from the Copper country.

Mausolf Wins Last.

August Mausolf took the final game of the pool series with Frank Kendig, but lost the series by the total of 518 to 625. Last evening Mausolf ran up 147 while Kendig was stringing out 125 balls. The play of Mausolf last evening was the best he has shown during the series. His high run was 20, while 19 was the highest run scored by Kendig.

PLACE SIGNS ON ALL ROADS

Duluth Auto Club Will Follow System of International Road Congress.

Signs, Not Words, Will Be Used at Points Where Needed.

"Marking the roads by means of a definite code of signals instead of by printed signs, has so many advantages that no one was surprised that the International Roads congress two years ago adopted this method for international use," says the American Motorist.

This same code will probably be the one selected by the Duluth Automobile club as it is the one that is used generally all over the country. Continuing the magazine article states:

"This code has been in use in France for some time, and is familiar to all who have toured in that country. For international use it has been considerably simplified, the number of different signals having been reduced to five.

"The great advantage of this code is that it is self-explanatory. Anyone with a fair share of common sense could tell at a glance what each of the signs means when met on the road. The upper one is obviously a cross-roads; the second a turn to the right; the third a turn to the left; the fourth a dangerous descent, and the bottom one a railroad crossing, which may or may not be protected by a gate. No knowledge of the language of the country is required, and the signs can be read at a glance at full speed.

"These signs are destined to come into general use by the clubs which are members of the American Automobile association to mark the roads in the neighborhood of their respective cities, and arrangements have been made to procure them in quantities, thus getting the benefit of lower prices. The standard sign is 18 by 24 inches, and is painted dead black, with the signal in white. The name of the club which erected the sign will appear in black letters on a yellow band across the top of the sign. The colors and arrangement attract the attention far more surely than any other combination which has been discovered, standing out from against any background with startling prominence.

"Wood is used for all signs, the body being sound white pine dressed ⅞-inch thick. Each sign is made of three planks, tongued and grooved into a cleat at each end; this makes them proof against the worst weather conditions. They are painted on the face and edges with two coats of white lead, with letters in oil colors. The backs can be painted at a slight extra charge, improving their wearing qualities.

"Several kinds of posts have met with favor; the standard size is 4 by 4 inches, dressed on all four sides. They are sunk about 3½ feet; that part which is under ground is creasoted and the upper part is given two coats of paint."

COURT UPHOLDS SELDEN PATENT

Injunction Ordered to Restrain Manufacture of Ford Automobiles.

New York, Aug. 27.—Decrees were recently filed by Judge Hough in the United States court in the principal suits under the Selden patent, covering the modern gasoline automobile. The decrees hold that the patent is valid and infringed upon by the Ford Motor company, and by Panhard & Levassor and their agents, and order an injunction to be issued restraining the manufacture, use and sale of infringing automobiles.

Simultaneously a memorandum was filed stating that if an appeal is taken by the defendants, the Ford Motor company, then an order will be entered suspending the injunction pendig the appeal, but such an order will be only entered if the Ford company files a bond, which the court says shall be in the sum of $350,000. If such an order is entered, further conditions provide that the defendants will be required to file with the court sworn monthly statements of their business.

In the test suits against Panhard & Levassor, similar provision is made that an order suspending injunction may be entered if appeal is taken, but a bond of only $16,000 must be filed together with the monthly statements.

In the three other cases, that is, the suit against Wanamaker, O. J. Gude & Co., and also suit against the importers, Henry and Albert C. Nebauer, there is no provision for the suspension of the injunction.

AUTOS ARE NOT PANIC MENACE

More Money Spent for Soda Water Annually Than for Motors.

"One of the greatest evidences of the power and force of advertising to mold the public mind that has been exemplified in this country," states R. A. Palmer, secretary and general manager of the Cartercar company, "is the attention which is being given the automobile and allied industries right at the present moment. Everybody is interesting himself in the welfare of the business, and whether or not they are connected and dependent upon it, they are predicting what is going to happen. And why is it? The public as a whole does not seem to care as much about other business interests. I am firmly convinced that it is because of the great force of advertising which has grown greater and greater all the time. No other interests have ever recognized and attempted as much with this force as have automobile manufacturers.

"Much is said about the 'extravagance' of the public in buying automobiles, and about the 'calamity' which will result if a halt is not called. Yet these same persons have never taken the trouble to investigate how much is spent annually in some other lines. For instance, no one would think of saying a word about a lady or child drinking a glass of soda water when they wish it. They would be considered deranged if they talked that everything was going to pieces and the public would be broke because of the soda water drank. And yet it is only a matter of statistics that there was three, yes, four times as much spent for soda water in the United States last year as the entire value of the automobiles produced.

"Five hundred millions of dollars was pent for soda water by the American public in 1909. All of the automobiles built last year were worth only $135,000,000. Where is the extravagance? On the top of this a few other lines might be referred to, but it is hardly necessary to point to more than one—just one. One billion, one hundred fourteen million dollars was spent last year for alcoholic liquors alone. We will not say anything about chewing gum and cigars.

"It is generally conceded that a man whose income is $3,000 a year can afford to buy and maintain a moderate-priced automobile. There are 700,000 families in this country which draw between $3,000 and $6,000 yearly. To date there have been only about 500,000 automobiles built, and the first of these are not running at present. There are still 2,000 families to be supplied in this class. But there are 250,000 families whose income ranges between $6,000 and $15,000. And there are 47,000 families whose incomes are more than this. Can't these people have automobiles if they want them without doing any serious harm to their purses?

"It is simply plain facts that there are about 1,000,000 families in the United States who earn enough annually so that they can afford an automobile if they wish it. This is one family in every ninety-two. If the one family does not buy a car the other ninety-one begin talking about it and say the man is 'going broke.' I have heard a great deal of talk about people 'mortgaging their homes' to buy automobiles. The first of these has yet to come to my personal knowledge. Others have mentioned it to me, and I have always asked them if they knew personally of a particular case, but none have."

MOTOR TRUCKS CARRY THE MAIL

Uncle Sam Is Watching the Experiment of Great Britain.

Washington, Aug. 27.—Great Britain has solved, in a measure, the question of cheap transportation of its mails. Automobile trucks are being used in conveying the mail matter between London and Birmingham, especially the heavier class of mail, according to Albert Halstead, United States consul at Birmingham. The distance between the two cities is 113 miles, and the automobile wagons connect with wagons of similar type along the route which will carry mails to smaller towns. In this manner, says Mr. Halstead, much territory is covered and better service is assured.

It is believed this service will materially improve the postal service, says Mr. Halstead. It will naturally reduce the amount of carriage by rail and will probably be more economical.

The report has aroused much interest in the postal department here, because of the rapid growth of the rural free delivery system in the United States.

HAS PERFECTED A NEW BATTERY

Thomas A. Edison Claims Great Things for His Latest Motor.

Thomas A. Edison, the man who has proved such a wizard along mechanical lines, is perfecting a storage battery for which he claims a mileage of 500 miles. Already a battery which he has invented is being installed in electric vehicles, and the dealers claim that this has made a remarkable motor.

The dream of Edison is to build an electric motor which will be a complete storage battery in which a man can take a trip into Mexico, or far from a recharging station without worry to himself or the occupants of the car. When this is possible, Edison says everybody will be using electric cars.

One of the greatest boons that the automobile industry could possibly have would be an electric car that would travel from Los Angeles to San Francisco and back without recharging. The battery which Edison is perfecting is said to be as light as the ordinary battery, the extra supply of juice occasioning no extra amount of weight.

AUTO SPEEDWAY FOR NEW YORK

Banking of 90 Per Cent Is Feature of Plans Made By E. A. Moross.

New York, Aug. 27.—The feature of what is to be a model speedway course, as outlined by E. A. Moross, former director of contests at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, and which will be submitted in Detroit, New York and Chicago, is the plan for a banking of 90 per cent. The course in Indianapolis is banked to 35 per cent, while the famous Brooklands (England) track is banked to 80 per cent.

The track calls for two miles to the lap, the straights to be three-eights of a mile in length and the curves five-eights of a mile perfect circle which will equal the radius of the Brooklands course and surpass the radius at the Indianapolis, Atlanta and Los Angeles speedway.

The track is to be 120 feet wide on the turns, banked forty-five feet from the ground to the edge of the rim. For the first thirty-five feet from the pole the banking is to be 35 per cent, for the next thirty-five feet or up to seventy feet, the banking is to be at an angle of 60 per cent, for the last thirty feet, completing the 100 feet in width, the banking is to be 90 per cent, on which it will be possible to attain a speed of 150 miles per hour if such speed is possible for an automobile.

The garages are to be placed in a concrete basin sunk below the level of the track the pits sunk also allowing only twenty-four inches of rail to protrude above the ground. The judges and press stands are to be on the outside of the track, with the stands for the timers and other officials inside of the track. There will be tunnels to reach all points.

The surface of the track will be of boards. A space of 200 feet in width will be used as a danger zone on the inside of the track between the parking space and track, which will accommodate 10,000 automobiles. Grand stands to care for 40,000 are outlined in the drawing.

A newly designed motor omnibus is expected to displace all other vehicles for the cheap transportation of people in London. It will have a body of sheet metal, and so riveted that there will be little rattling.

A bright red electric auto truck has recently made its appearance in Boston. It is business-like in build, being of the express body type, is fast, easily handled and quiet running. This wagon carries two tons and is used for the collection of bones and grease from the hotels around Boston.

An automobile passenger and freight-carrying line between Bowling Green and Scotsville, Ky., between which there are no railroad connections, is proposed, and it is announced that machines will be purchased shortly. The mail contract will also be sought by the new company.

Four motor trucks are now in operation on the Philadelphia and Reading railway. The trucks carry two and three men and are used mostly in the automatic signal department of the road. They have been known to attain a speed of fifty miles an hour on a straight track.

Twelve hundred taxis is the estimate of the number now operated in New York city. London has about 3,000 and Paris 2,000. Local livery people say that the horse-drawn equipage is again coming into favor, and that this is true of London and Paris as well as New York.

During June the Ohio State Motor Vehicle department issued registration numbers for 2,378 machines. During the same month driving licenses were issued to 450 chauffeurs, and twenty-two manufacturers and dealers took out registration numbers.

It is a fact that in driving the average automobilist seems to depend upon the brakes rather than upon gravity of the machine to overcome velocity, and the use of the clutch, which is often engaged much too abruptly, causes violent starting and stopping, and consequently excessive wear on the shoes. It may not be realized by any motorist that there is probably quite as much damage caused to tires by applying the brakes without judgment as from lack of pressure, and that the same process is found in the faulty use of the clutch. These are results in the operation of the car which can always be insured against, although there may be instances where the emergency use of the brakes or the clutch may require results such as have been referred to. With rare exception, however, the driver can give reasonable care, drive just as far, and have equal enjoyment with those who are desirous of destruction.

When we consider that it is generally accepted in steam engineering that a coating a quarter inch thick on the inside of the boiler tubes necessitates an increase of about 60 per cent in the heat supplied to produce the same amount of staem, the effect of excessive coatings of carbon on the walls of gasoline motor cylinders can be appreciated. The carbon prevents the heat from readily reaching the water jacket, and while at first it may tend to increase the power to an extent, it eventually causes pre-ignition through retaining too great a proportion of the heat generated on the power strokes.

It is a common experience to find shortly after you have made yourself comfortable in the driving seat after lighting up, that a lamp is smoking so badly that the interior is blackened, and to render it more useful for looking at the sun on the occasion of an eclipse than that of allowing the light to be reflected through it. The trouble is simply due to regulating the wick at a suitable height when the lamp is cold. As soon as it becomes heated the oil rising from the container to the wick becomes more volatile and more easily fed to the wick and flame, the result being the same as if wick were turned up to high to begin with. The remedy is, of course, not to turn it up quite so high at the beginning, or at least to allow the lamp to burn for a few minutes before restarting on one's journey.

SEASON IS NEARLY OVER

Few Games Remain Before Curtain Is Dropped in Minny League.

There are but few more opportunities to see the White Sox play the present season. There are the two games this afternoon with the coming Eau Claire champions, which will mark the farewell appearance in this city of Tommy Schoonhoven's great team. It will also mark, in all probability, the farewell appearance here of Russ Bailey, John Kading and Tyrus Cobb Callahan. Two of these players have already been sold, and it is very probable that Bailey will return to the A. A. at the end of the present season.

Rochester comes after the departure of the Schooners, and an interesting series may be looked for, as the Sox aro hopeful of passing both Red Wing and Rochester in the final sprint of the season. Rochester is sliding and the Sox should be able to grab the series from the medical men.

Following Rochester comes Red Wing for the near-windup of the season. The Indians are playing great baseball and the Sox will have to go some to take the long end of the series from them. After the series with Red Wing the Sox go to Rochester for a series of three games, then to Red Wing for a series, finishing up the season with Superior.

The games are numbered here, the present series and the two series with Red Wing and Rochester marking the farewell appearance of the present season of those teams.

The Sox are fighting hard to get out of the cellar.

RUPTURE IS IN PROSPECT

The World's Series May Not Be Played This Year.

American League Season Ends a Week Earlier Than National.

New York, Aug. 27.—There is no absolute certainty that there will be a series for the championship of the world this fall, though a clause of the agreement under which the National and American leagues are now working in peace, but not in harmony, calls for an annual set of contests between the flag winners of the two big organizations. The club owners of the junior body think that it is about time for the magnates of the parent organization to realize that the present prosperity of the game is due more to them than to the men who once had to sue for mercy, and that it will only serve Charles W. Murphy, owner of the Cubs, who are the likely flag winners of the National league, right if the series is called off.

Murphy is not liked by the progressive Johnsonites, and the schedule he framed up last winter, to comprise 168 games and to extend play until Oct. 15, was not relished by the American leaguers, who avowed that 154 games per season was all that fans could digest and that it was the height of asininity to compel the pastimers to work in championship ball unless their contracts had expired on Oct. 15.

There is not now, and there has not been for a long time, the best of feeling between the American and National magnates. The men who control clubs in the junior league will do whatever President Johnson tells them to do, and they resented last winter and last spring the plan of the Murphy-Ebbetts faction of the National league first to elect John Montgomery Ward as the senior league's president, and secondly to put through the 168-game schedule. The insurgent Johnsonites carried their first point and defeated Ward, but in the interest of harmony they agreed to compromise on the schedule proposition, warning the men who wanted to elect Ward and who advocated the long schedule that the fault would be theirs if the world championship series was not played.

Murphy Stirred Up Fuss.

The American and National leagues settled their difficulties in Cincinnati several years ago and it was thought the two organizations would work harmoniously, and so they did for several seasons. Their little differences were easily smoothed out and it was not until Charley Murphy of the Cubs, lined up Charley Ebbetts of the Superbas, on his side that any sign of trouble appeared on the horizon. These two magnates advocated the long schedule and induced Stanley Robison of the St. Louis club, into trailing with them. Murphy's coup in getting Charles P. Taft to purchase the Philadelphia club gave them another supporter. At the last meeting, if it had not been for the threats of Barney Dreyfuss and Garry Herrman to cause a lot of trouble, the 168-game schedule surely would have gone through. Then notice was served on the Murphy-Ebbetts faction that the American league might refuse to let its pennant winner enter into competition with the National league's flag capturer.

The Johnsonites then had a good excuse to refuse to permit their champions to buck the National league's best team. As matters now stand, the American leaguers get through on Oct. 9. The National league schedule was arranged so that the two teams would not wind up until Oct. 15, and the president of the Cubs worked valiantly to be permitted to play games on Sunday, Oct. 16.

The Johnsonites reason rightly that their flag-winning combination should not be compelled to loaf for six or seven days in order to stack up against the National league champions. Moreover, since John Montgomery Ward has started a libel suit against Ban Johnson the club owners of the junior organization scent plot on the golfing lawyer for the National league presidency again, and to cause more trouble in the baseball world.

Might as Well Begin.

If there is any trouble coming the American leaguers think they might as well have it next fall as next winter. They can properly refuse to let their flag-winnning team enter the world's series, pointing to the fact that the National leaguers had practically violated the peace agreement by adopting a schedule that does not end until Oct. 15.

There will be some series, however, between National and American league clubs this fall. The Cleveland and Cincinnati clubs already have entered into an agreement to battle for the championship of Ohio. In case the Pirates and Athletics fail to finish first in their respective races they will clash to see which is the best club in Pennsylvania. The way things point now is that the Cubs, if they win the National league pennant, will be able to claim the world's championship by default, for the American league team will not be permitted to play them. The American league's reason will be that the Cubs do not wind up their season until Oct. 15, six days after the Johnsonites close, and that Mr. Murphy is persona non grata to their club owners. The Johnsonites think that the proper way to deal the little president a blow that will hurt is by hitting him in the pocketbook.

RECORD CROWD AT AUTO RACES

Fast Cars in Keen Competition for the Elgin National Trophy.

Elgin, Ill., Aug. 27.—The crowd which gathered here today to see the crack automobile drivers go 305.03 miles for the Elgin national trophy, which saw the curtain raisers yesterday—probably 100,000 persons.

An endless stream of machines laden with enthusiasts occupied the roads between here and Chicago. They began arriving at daylight, gay with flags and pennants, and their occupants muffled against the morning chill. Cuts made in the 8½-mile track yesterday were filled in over night and a light coat of top dressing applied were needed.

Thirteen cars were scheduled to start as follows:

Cars.	Driver.
National, 40.	Greiner.
Black Crow, 40.	Steinson.
Lozier, 50.	Mulford.
Marmon, 40.	Harroun.
Simplex, 50.	Robertson.
Alco, 50.	Grant.
National, 40.	Livingstone.
Simplex, 50.	Saynor.
Kissel Kar, 40.	H. Endicott.
Marmon, 40.	Dawson.
Matheson, 50.	Basle.
Knox, 60.	Oldfield
Jackson, 40.	Schiefler.

The two Nationals are the same as those which ran yesterday, and in one of which Livingstone won the feature event at 203 miles. Grant's car is the one in which he captured the last Vanderbilt race. There was much interest attached to the entrance of Barney Oldfield, whose reputation has been gained on speedways rather than in road races.

Cholera Infantum Cured.

"Something like two years ago my baby, which was then about a year old, was taken seriously ill with cholera infantum, vomiting and purging profusely," writes J. F. Dempsey of Dempsey, Ala. "I did what I could to relieve her but did her no good, and being very much alarmed about her went for a physican but failed to find one, so came back by Elder Bros. & Carter's store and Mr. Elder recommended Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea remedy. I procured a bottle of it, went home as quickly as possible and gave the baby a dose of the remedy. It relieved her in fifteen minutes and soon cured her entirely." For sale by all druggists.

THE COMING WEEK IN DULUTH THEATERS

LYCEUM--Sunday Matinee and Night, "The Flower of the Ranch." Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, "Strongheart" By Pierce Players. Thursday, Friday and Saturday, "The White Horse Tavern" By Pierce Players.

ORPHEUM--Advanced Vaudeville All Week, Featuring Gus Edwards' "Night Birds," a Company of Thirteen People in a Musical Comedy Sketch.

BIJOU--Refined Vaudeville All Week, Three Shows a Day, Featuring Billy Van, the Former Minstrel.

ORPHEUM and LYRIC--Motion Picture Houses, Presenting the Latest Motion Picture Films and Illustrated Songs.

Duluth saw the unusual sight this week of three theaters "sold out."

On Monday evening the new Orpheum theater opened with every seat sold out, and occupied by Duluth's most prominent society people. The Pierce Players opened at the Lyceum in "The Squaw Man" before an exceptionally good house, with practically every seat sold, and the Bijou was running along just as usual with the house packed for the first performance and a crowd waiting for the second.

Many have speculated on where the new Orpheum will draw its business from. The answer was furnished Monday night. It was filled and the other theaters were doing just as good business as usual. Duluth is no longer a "jay town" in theatrical parlance, but is getting in the class with the "week stands." The census is expected to show 85,000 people in place of 52,000 ten years ago, and these remaining 31,000 have to be amused the same as the other 52,000.

It was unfortunate that every one in Duluth could not have seen Mrs. Fiske last Saturday in "Pillars of Society" and "Becky Sharpe." Mrs. Fiske's productions were of a class that is all too rare. They were a treat-artistic, finished, complete. A perusal of "Pillars of Society" gives no idea of its value as a play. It impresses one as being "talky" and "preachy," but it is far from that, when presented by such a company as Mrs. Fiske had surrounding her. And to see "Becky Sharpe" was like visiting the old home town and seeing old friends again.

* * *

The Pierce Players opened at the Lyceum last Monday night. The company is a Duluth production, and the owners, Harry Pierce and James L. Morrissey have nothing to be ashamed of. It is a first-class organization, far superior to the average stock company. "The Squaw Man" was the bill all last week, and "Strongheart" and "The White Horse Tavern" will be presented next week.

The vaudeville craze seems to have Duluth firmly in its grasp. Attractive bills are announced by both the Orpheum and the Bijou for next week.

NEXT WEEK'S BILL AT THE ORPHEUM.

Heading next week's bill at the new Orpheum theater will be Gus Edwards' "Night Birds," presenting a musical act of the type made popular by this prolific young producer, who has earned the title of the George Cohan of vaudeville.

Edwards has a number of vaudeville acts running at the present time, and all of them are successful. Among them are "School Boys and Girls" and "Kountry Kids."

His "Night Birds" is his newest and claimed to be his best production. There are twelve youngsters in the act, and Miss Nellie Brewster. They do a singing and dancing act that has been a big hit over the Orpheum circuit.

Miss Brewster does a chantecler sketch in the act which has made an excellent impression in other cities, and there are several catchy musical numbers, among them being "I Won't Be Home to Dinner" and "Birdie," both of which were written especially for this act by Mr. Edwards. The act, like all the Orpheum musical turns, will be well staged and costumed.

Feats of magic will occupy a prominent position on next week's bill, owing to the booking of the Great Asahi and his quintette of Japanese. This quintette is claimed to excel any troupe of this kind that has ever left the Flowery Kingdom. The feature of their act is "The Human Fountain," a spectacular bit of work in which Asahi shows his ability to make a stream of water spout up almost anywhere from the end of his fan. The water comes from the floor, or from the faces, hands or feet of his assistants. The stage setting of the act is one of the big features connected with it. The curtain carried with it, is a most elaborate, hand embroidered affair and is said to have cost $4,000.

Asahi made a big hit in St. Paul where he appeared last week, and his act caused no small amount of comment there.

The act that is expected to prove the "big scream" of the bill, is that given by Willard Simms and company, known as "Flinder's Furnished Flat." This has been called the funniest sketch in vaudeville by several Eastern writers, and is one of the few English dramatic sketches that has played France, Austria and Germany. In spite of the fact that the dialogue could not be understood there, the funny wall paper scene in the act made it irresistibly funny even to the foreigners.

Leona Thurber and Harry Madison are well known vaudeville stars. This year they have joined forces, and are presenting a sketch which they call "On a Shopping Tour." It is made up of dialogue, song and dance. Mr. Madison is an acrobatic dancer and comedian, and Miss Thurber is said to be a very prepossessing young woman, with a striking figure and stage presence. The dash and vim to the act are what are relied upon to make it popular.

Louise Meyers Mildred Warren and Bert Lyon have an act which they call "A Little of Everything." They are all former musical comedy players. The act presents a prima donna, her maid and a former sweetheart. The dancing of Miss Meyers, who has the role of the maid, is the feature of the act. It was seen in Minneapolis last week, and the Journal of that city, writes of it as follows:

"The other numbers are the typical fooleries which everyone enjoys and in which more or less fascinating personalities frolic through song, dance and nonsense. Louise Meyers, Mildred Warren and Bert Lyon set forth an attractive singing skit in which Miss Warren's beautiful voice and Miss Meyers' talent for mimicry are the principal features."

Clarence Siegel and Anna Matthews have what is known as a "straight" musical turn. The act is a well dressed one, and the two performers play on banjos and several novelty stringed instruments. Their selections are said to be of a very high order, musically.

No vaudeville bill is quite complete without some acrobatic work. The La Toy brothers will provide this feature of the entertainment next week. They are billed as "comedy acrobats" and are said to be very clever at this line of work.

The overture by the Orpheum concert orchestra of fourteen pieces under the direction of Fred G. Bradbury, and the kinodrome, showing the latest in moving pictures, will complete the bill.

Tickets will be on sale tonight for any performance next week. The house was completely sold out every evening last week, by 8 o'clock, so it is necessary to make reservations ahead. Seats reserved by telephone are not held after 7:30 p. m. Matinees are given daily, and performances Sunday afternoon and evening.

WILL PRESENT DOUBLE BILL NEXT WEEK.

Seldom has any stock company created more favorable comment than H. E. Pierce & Company's Associate Players who have been presenting "The Squaw Man," at the Lyceum this week.

Mr. Jossey and Miss Douglas seem to be the especially favored ones though the entire company seems to be evenly balanced throughout. The company is a Duluth product.

WILLARD SIMMS,
Who Will Be Seen at the Orpheum Next Week.

The engagement of "The Squaw Man," will end tonight, the company going to Superior Sunday returning here Monday, Aug. 29, when it will present for the first half of the week William De Mille's great play of college life "Strongheart."

"Strongheart," the great American comedy of college life reflects the days of college fun and forlic, of fraternities, campus scenes and football games, but amid all this light hearted gaiety stands the figure of "Strongheart," the Indian, who is one with them all until his love for Dorothy, the beautiful white girl, and his call to leave his native people, bring him to the sad realization of his color. Mr. Jossey and Miss Douglas will be seen in the leading roles.

"Strongheart" will be followed the last half of the week by "At the White Horse Tavern," which is said to be even funnier than "Charley's Aunt." In this piece Mr. Jossey is given a fine opportunity to display his ability as a character comedian.

"At The White Horse Tavern," tells the story of one William Giesiecke, an eccentric German inventor, who having some masquerade costumes left over from the previous winter, decides to take his family up into the Austrian Alps to spend the summer in order to make use of the costumes. The complications that follow are said to be screamingly funny. The climax of the first act will disclose one of the most realistic rain effects ever seen on the Lyceum stage.

BILLY VAN COMING TO THE BIJOU NEXT WEEK.

Heading the Bijou bill next week will be one of America's greatest entertainers, Billy Van, the most popular minstrel star on earth, fresh from his starring tour. He returns to vaudeville and comes to the Bijou Monday.

This announcement marks the coming of one of the season's stellar attractions. Mr. Van's vaudeville engagements are very limited, and his appearance at the Bijou will perhaps be his last visit to Duluth, for he intends retiring from the stage after concluding his contract with the Sullivan & Considine circuit. Every theater-goer in any city or town with 5,000 inhabitants is familiar with Billy Van. Mr. Van started his career as a minstrel when but a boy. In 1885 he was made a minstrel star, heading an organization known as Al G. Field's minstrels. He toured the country five successive seasons as star of this company. His next venture was star of the famous Gorman Brothers' minstrels, remaining three seasons. Primrose & West then took Mr. Van as their star for six consecutive seasons. Mr. Van at that time received the highest salary in the history of minstrelsy. His recent starring tours were with his own companies. Magazines and daily and weekly publications throughout the country have printed Mr. Van's stories and jokes, so that the public enjoys his brilliant humor even in his absence. Mr. Van when not at the theater can be found at his hotel, busily writing new songs and stories. He is gifted with a happy and winning personality, which is the secret of his success. It has been said by distinguished critics all over the country and by Mr. Van's friends, who are many, that he is the greatest and foremost minstrel comedian on the American stage.

MISS LOUISE MEYERS,
Of Meyers, Warren & Lyon at the Orpheum Next Week.

SCENE FROM "STRONGHEART."
At the Lyceum, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

T. Nelson Downs, one of the star features of the bill, has earned the sobriquet, "Kink of Coins." Downs would be a star feature of any vaudeville bill. He is not only a clever magician and conjuror, but a thoumaturgist and enchanter. Only those who are acquainted with the subject can realize the difficulty of Mr. Downs' work, which he performs in the most nonchalant manner. It used to be thought wonderful if a coin manipulator could palm five or six dollars. Nelson Downs palms two scores in his hands, and you cannot see him do it. He has mastered a most difficult and intricate series of passes, and he absolutely uses no apparatus. Everything he does is done with the cleverest pair of hands in the world. His "Miser's Dream" is a beautiful act—poetic in the conception and enchanting in the performance. "You are to imagine me a miser dreaming of money," says Mr. Downs, and therewith he proceeds to pluck money out of the air—quantities of gold and silver.

Lancaster, Hayward and Lancaster offer one of the most laughable interludes in vaudeville, entitled "A Marriage Broker." The oddity is one long scream, owing to its funny situations and the clever work on the part of the artists who take part in it. Mr. Lancaster is seen in the role of an Irish marriage broker, whose ambition in life is to make every one in the world like somebody else. His form of investigation that he puts to his applicants who apply to become wife or husband causes many laughable complications, and laughter is continued from the opening line to the finish, interrupted only by a number of exceedingly amusing situations which interpret the plot of the sketch.

Dewitt Young and sister offer a picturesque juggling novelty. These artists do not perform the ordinary feats seen so frequently with balls, Indian clubs and the like, but their performance includes the juggling of everything that goes to make up a real college boy's room, including bedsteads, bookcases, framed pictures; in fact, all of the furnishings of the rah rah boy are seen in the air being tossed from one end of the room to the other. Miss Young is the only lady on the American stage who is an Australian boomerang thrower, and her juggling feats are astounding.

A pretentious and gorgeous operatic act is presented by May Orletta and Fred W. Taylor, which will be the big added feature for the week. Their creation is termed "The Butterfly and the Prince," and is a grand opera with strikingly beautiful scenery and brilliant costumes condensed into fifteen minutes of light opera. The costumes, scenic and electrical effects combined with the excellent musical numbers presented by Miss Orletta and Mr. Taylor offer the most beautiful prodution seen in Duluth in some time.

James B. Adams will sing the now popular song hit, "Moving Day in Jungle Town," which will be illustrated with beautiful colored views. The moving pictures for the week will be of the usual high standard, showing only pictures of the better class. Matinees are given daily at 2:45, and every night at 8 and 9:30. Prices remain the same. Seats may be reserved by either telephone. A special school children's matinee will be given Saturday afternoon at 2:30, and performances Sunday afternoon and night.

"THE FLOWER OF THE RANCH."

"The Flower of the Ranch," which comes to the Lyceum Sunday, matinee and night, is a musical play in three acts, all of the scenes of which have been laid to the rugged West, with colorful and complete scenic settings of great beauty. The book, lyrics and music of the play have been written by Joseph E. Howard, composer of "The Time, the Place, the Girl," "The Girl Question," "Honeymoon Trail," "A Stubborn Cinderella," and other successful works, and is declared to be the best he has contributed to the stage. The story of the play in brief is as follows: Winding down a steep mountain trail in California a stage coach containing several passengers is overturned and crashed down into the valley. A ranchman arrives on the scene and finds but one living survivor of the wreck, a baby girl, held fast in her dead mother's arms. He takes the child, and as no papers or evidence of the child's identity can be found, adopts her as his own. Seventeen years later, the child, grown to happy young womanhood and beloved by every one with whom she comes in contact, is the life of the town of Tomahawk, a straggling settlement in which she has charge of her father's general store. Jack Farnum, a popular young ranchman, whose possessions are coveted by a scheming sheriff, falls in love with Flower, as the young woman is known, and complications in which a thieving Mexican adds to the interest, develop. An Indian chief whom Farnum had befriended assists Flower in thwarting the designs of the sheriff and the young ranchman regains the deed to his property, which had been stolen by the Mexican, who in turn has been slain by the sheriff whom he tried to betray.

Of course everything ends happily, but in the development of the story many strong situations and stirring scenes are enacted. Character types true to the locale participates in the action of the play. The musical numbers, of which there are some twenty, are logically and naturally introduced, and a romping, spirited chorus of handsome young women, who not only sing, but dance with grace and vigor, add to the interest of an entertainment that last season was declared by New York, Boston and Chicago papers to be one of the most novel and pleasurable of the entire season.

AT THE MOTION PICTURE THEATERS.

The pictures at the Orpheum and Lyric motion picture theaters next week will be up to the usual high standard. Comedy will be interspersed with pathetic films and there will be dramatic views and tragedy. The entertainment will be clean and educational and up-to-date.

At the Orpheum the pictures follow: "Sorrows of the Unfaithful," a comic film; "Willie," a comic film from Selig; "The Shepherd's Dog," a highly dramatic film; "A School in New Guinea," educational. Miss Nelson will sing, "Mary is a Big Girl Now."

At the Lyric theater "His New Family," is a dramatic film. "The Count that Counted," is a funny film and "The Estrangement," is dramatic. An interesting film of scenes is "Across Russian Poland." Miss Erd will sing "It is Same Old Me."

Thomas W. Ryley is holding rehearsals of "The Storm," by Langdon McCormick. He has engaged Robert T. Haines and Conway Tearle to play the leading roles. The play opens in Washington in September.

* * *

"The Round Up" opens its fourth season in Boston. Rapley Holmes will play the part of the fat sheriff whom nobody loves. This play of the Arizona desert, with its horses and battles, is the most successful melodrama of the current decade of theatricals.

* * *

Henry Miller goes to the Pacific coast early in the season with "Her Husband's Wife," a comedy by A. E. Thomas, which was quite the vogue in New York city in the spring. Laura Hope Crews will be with him in the cast, which is of a high standard. Mr. Miller will appear later in the season in a new play.

* * *

Klaw & Erlanger and Joseph Brooks will produce "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" in New York in October. The dramatization of the "Rebecca" stories was made by the author, Kate Douglas Wiggin, and Charlotte Thompson. Edith Taliaferro will play the part of Rebecca. Archie Boyd is cast for the role of the philosophical stage driver.

"Ben Hur" opens the season in September.

This is its eleventh year. The leading members of the cast are Richard Buhler, Anthony Andre, Walter M. Sherwin, Frank Weston, J. Arthur Young, Van Dusen Phillips, Charles Canfield, A. J. Golding, C. Russell Sage, Walter Colligan, Helen Singer, Loyola O'Connor, Maud Ream Stover, Alice Haynes and Pauline M. Darling.

Brown, Lynn Pratt, Irving Cummings, Joseph Tuohy, John G. Brammall, Ed. Warren, Victor Benoit, Olive Harper, Hattie Russell Jessie Ralph and Viola Leach.

Miss Edith Taliaferro, who is to play the role of Rebecca in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," which will be presented in New York in October, is the guest of the author, Mrs. Kate Douglas Wiggin, at her summer home, Quilcote, near Hollis, Maine. The scenes of the book and play are laid in and about this Maine village, so that Miss Taliaferro is absorbing "atmosphere" during her vacation. She will remain at Quilcote until after the Dorcas fair.

* * *

A novel musical comedy experiment will be attempted next spring by Charles Frohman. He will interchange the casts for "Our Miss Gibbs" and "The Arcadians," to see the comparative versality of the American and English stars in the two productions.

* * *

Maclyn Arbuckle will be starred this season by Joseph Brooks in a farce by George Hobart called "Welcome to Our City." It will have its New York hearing at the Bijou in September. Mr. Arbuckle's role is that of a Southern gentleman who comes to New York on his first visit. He is welcomed by a Broadwayite, who lands him in court and then into a mess of trouble before he learns that a winning smile is not always a sign of good intentions.

* * *

Fred Terry, the English actor, will come to New York in October with his wife, Julia Neilson, to play a ten weeks' engagement under the management of Claw & Erlanger. They will bring with them their own company, appearing in "The Scarlet Pimpernel," and "Henry of Navarre." The former play has been running for three years on and off in London. Mr. Terry produced one play after another, but his admirers insisted upon his returning to the role of Sir Percy. Mr. Terry will play brief engagements in Boston and Philadelphia and Chicago, while in America.

* * *

Charles Frohman has secured "Papillon,' the comedy that has had an eight months' run at the Antoine theater in Paris. It will be produced simultaneously in London by Cyril Maude.

* * *

Chicago's newest theater, the New Blackstone, will be opened by William H. Crane in George Ade's new comedy, "U. S. Minister Jackson." As the playhouse has its first night Nov. 15, the humorist is working day and night to complete the manuscript begun only last week.

* * *

John Drew has an unusually strong cast to support him in "Smith," in which he will appear in New York during the first week in September. It includes among others, Miss Mary Boland, Miss Isabel Irving, Miss Jane Laurel, Hassard Short and Morton Selten.

* * *

Edwin Stevens, who plays the part of the marvelous Genie in "The Brass Bottle," is a past master of the weird. He created the title role of "The Devil" in this country and has played "The Black Crook" and the "Mephisto," in both the drama and the opera as well as a score more of supernatural parts.

* * *

Miss Mary Blayney's most prized possession is a diamond brooch presented to her by the late King Edward shortly before his death, following her performance as "The Little Damozel" in honor of Queen Alexandria at Sandringham. Miss Blayney is now appearing in this country in "Love Among the Lions."

* * *

Constance Collier will return to America this fall to star under Charles Frohman's management in a new production, as yet unannounced. She has not been in America since her appearance in "Israel" last fall. During the past season she has been acting with Sir Beerbohm Tree at His Majesty's theater in London.

Maeterlinck's "The Blue Bird" will be the opening attraction, its American premiere occurring on Sept. 26. The English production of the play will be minutely copied in its mechanical side and it is even stated that moving pictures have been taken of the London performance for the purpose of aiding in the American presentation.

* * *

The Lyric theater will open its regular season on Sept. 11 with Lew Dockstader's Minstrels. Some of its early attractions will be Grace George and Frank Worthing in "Baby Mine," Henry W. Savage's 'Madam Y" and "Miss Patsy," Thomas Barry's "The Upstart" and Clara Lipman in "Marjorie's Mother."

* * *

Sir John Hare, the English comedian, is to visit America this season under Charles Frohman's management. Another English star to be seen here is Marie Lohr, who has been quite the sensation in London.

Sir Arthur Wing Pinero was made an offer by an American agency to deliver a series of lectures in this country during his visit here next winter. He has refused, however, stating that when he does visit American shores it

Mme. Anna Pavlowa and M. Michael Mordkin have brought their triumphant London season to a close. Last Saturday saw the finale of their reign as the sensation of London, but so great was the vogue of the two famous Russian dancers that special matinees were provided for several days to accommodate early applicants for tickets who had waited in vain for many weeks. Throughout their season the crush to see Pavlowa and Mordkin has been so great that the Palace theater has been sold out five and six weeks in advance. Mme. Pavlowa arranged for a brief rest in Russia before coming to America for her approaching tour.

Homer Lind,one of the principal baritones with the Carl Rosa Grand Opera company in London and the Metropolitan and Henry W. Savage Grand Opera companies in America, announces that he is preparing a tabloid version of "The Tales of Hoffman," to be presented upon the vaudeville stage.

One of the distinguished visitors promised for the current season is Ernst von Possart, the celebrated German actor, who has not been seen in this country in a number of years. In addition to playing in New York, he will also make a tour of the leading cities.

* * *

It is stated on good authority that Rostand's much-heralded "Chantecler," which has been running at the Porte Saint Martin theater in Paris, has been losing money. The cost of the production was enormous, and the management seems to have been unable to retrieve. It is said that Rostand himself has come to the financial rescue of the management. "Chantecler" will be sucoeeded by "L'Adventurier," by M. Alfred Capus, with M. Lucien Guitry in the principal part.

* * *

Blanche Ring will open her second season in "The Yankee Girl" at Asbury Park next Friday. Miss Ring's supporting company will be headed by Harry Gilfoil, William P. Carleton, Edith Conral, Halliday and Curley, Marguerite Wright and Margaret Malcolm. The tour of "The Yankee Girl" will be a long one, taking Miss Ring through to the Pacific coast.

* * *

An interesting debut in vaudeville last week was that of Frances and Hilda Keenan, daughters of Frank Keenan. Their sketch is a piano and singing act, called "The Matinee Maids," and was very cordially received. Both play the piano and sing as well.

* * *

Fritzi Scheff's vehicle for the coming season will be a musical version of "Trilby," with Mme. Scheff naturally in the title role the far-famed Parisian art-model. The libretto, including lyrics, for the new version of the story which Du Maurier made famous in its original novel form and in which Wilton Lackaye attained success when it was dramatized, is by Joseph Herbert, it will be remembered, wrote the music for "Mlle. Modiste" and "The Prima Donna," Fritzi Scheff's last two productions.

Saturday evening, Sept. 3, is announced by the Shuberts as the date for the opening of the fifth season of the New York hippodrome. The bill, as usual, will be a triple one of entirely new spectacles, named "The International Cup," "The Ballet of Niagara," and "The Eearthquake." They were written and will be produced under the direction of R. H. Burnside. In addition to these spectacles there are twelve novel and sensational American and European circus acts appearing in the circus part of the program. The scenario is invented by Arthur Voegtlin. The music and the lyrics have been composed by Manuel Klein.

One of the most impressive examples of the popularity of big melodramas in London is the run of "The Whip," Cecil Raleigh and Cosmo Hamilton's great sporting drama at Drury Lane. It passed its 260th performance a few days ago. The successful melodrama looks like continuing to attract the public until the pantomime is ready for production around the holidays.

"The Fortunes of Betty," is a new rural play in which the little comedienne, Cecil Spooner, will be seen the coming season.

* * *

Cohan & Harris have added another star to their galaxy in the person of Miss Adelaide Thurston. Miss Thurston will be presented in "Miss Ananias," a new comedy by Catherine Chisholm Cushing, a Washington society woman.

* * *

"The Climax" is to be presented during the coming season by no less than five companies, playing it in all parts of the country.

* * *

The new play in which Blanche Bates is to appear has been named. It will be called "Nobody's Widow," is designated as a modern comedy and was written by Avery Hopwood.

* * *

Miss Mabel de Nordendorf, prima donna last season with the "Red Mill company," is this season cast as Margaret, the school marm, the prima donna role in Joseph E. Howard's new musical comedy, "The Flower of the Ranch," coming to the Lylceum theater matinee and night, Sunday, Aug. 28. This leading role not only requires an artist in voice but, she is called upon to display her acting ability and it is in this double role, that Miss de Nordendorf in the language of the stage "makes good."

With a dozen really new novelty numbers, another score of jingling musical hits and more genuine comedy than is to be found in half a dozen so-called musical successes, Mort H. Singer's "The Goddess of Liberty," with Joseph E. Howard, will come to the Lyceum for an engagement of two days on Sept. 11 and 12.

A wealth of merriment is what Charles A. Sellon's "The Cow and the Moon" is termed. From the time the story commences in litle Not Much Ville, Ind., to which point Great Domo, king of the moon, comes in search of a moon bride, who must be a maiden never having seen a man, the action starts and never lets up a moment up to the finale, which is supposed to be in the palace of the man in the moon.

The earth beings involved in the story are Happy Hans and Mike of "The Cat and the Fiddle" fame ,aided by the Genii, the good fairy, the new play being a continuation of their experiences. Mr. Sellon is aided by some forty other personages, with a number of musical features and song hits and a carload of scenery effects. "The Cow and the Moon" comes to the Lyceum on Sept. 7 and 8.

Augustus Thomas' newest play, "The Witching Hour," the drama treating seriously of telepathic science, in which the Mesrs. Shubert will introduce their new stellar player, John Mason, is the famous playwright's generally recognized masterpiece. Its remarkable New York success — over one year's uninterrupted run at the Hackett theater—created a demand for the strange piece in all parts of the world, and the Messrs. Shubert have been obliged to organize several companies to appear simultaneously throughout the country. The origianl organization, headed by Mr. Mason and his identical Hacket theater company of associate players, will be the one to hold forth at the Lyceum on Sept. 4 and 5, and after engagements in a few other large cities the original production will be sent tbroad. Paris, Berlin and London, it seems, are particularly anxious to have their craze of theatric telepathy.

Among the popular entertainers who come to Duluth are Phil and Nettie Peters.

Aubrey Boucicault is to be in vaudeville for a short tour. He will appear in the garb of an ancient Roman. He has been playing in London for some time.

Julius Steger has signed a contract with Klaw & Erlanger, which means that at the end of his present vaudeville bookings, he becomes the star of a three-act play.

Jack Kane, last season a partner in fun of Max Rogers and now appearing in Chicago with the revival of "Are You a Mason," is planning an early return to vaudeville with Blossom Seeley, the coonshouter, as his partner. Their act will be called "Coming West."

Martin Beck has secured some exceptional attractions for the Orpheum circuit the coming season. Among the foreign stars, who will be seen here the coming season, are: Ada Reeves, a great London favorite; Alice Lloyd, Mlle. La Pal, Rigoletti Twins, Camille Ober, Rameses, the sensational magician; Tortajada, Cecilia Loftus, Lily Lena, Gaby Delys, Albert Whelen, and a host of other London, Paris and Berlin features.

FROM THE MINES AND THE SMELTERS

NEVADA RANKS SECOND

Colorado Alone Surpasses It in Production of Gold and Silver—Rapidly Coming to the Front as Copper Producer.

The annual report of E. E. Stuart, state mine inspector for the state of Nevada, has just been issued. Mr. Stuart says that in its output of yellow and white metals Nevada is now second only to Colorado, having distanced the old producers, Utah, Montana and Idaho. All this has been accomplished within five years. Continuing, Mr. Stuart says:

"At the recent rate of increase now more rapid than it has ever been, it is safe to say that within two years Nevada will rank first as the producer of gold and silver in the United States, and also take high rank as a producer of copper. It is not impossible, but rather probable that before many years Nevada may stand at the head of the American states in the production of copper.

"The southern and eastern parts of the state of Nevada have, within a few short years, developed the greatest mineralized belt in the world, and still the ground has as yet been only partially prospected. For years to come we have every reason to believe that new districts will be found and that the state will in two or three years be the leading producer in the United States.

"Fortunately for the state of Nevada, permanency of its mines has been demonstrated beyond a doubt, and the great properties of Ely, Goldfield, Tonopah, Round Mountain and the Comstock lode have fallen into the hands of capitalists who have pursued a policy of development that cannot but meet with the approval of all intelligent mining men. Modern improvements and inventions have been introduced. Mines have been explored to a great depth in all instances. Ore bodies have been continuous from surface to 2,600 feet in depth on the Comstock, 1,200 in Ely, 800 in Goldfield, 1,400 in Tonopah, 700 in Round Mountain, 400 in Pioneer and 500 at the Shoshone mine at Rhyolite. In every instance the veins are still found in the bottom of the workings, and the size of the bodies, in many instances, is greater at this depth than in any other place in the mines. Towns are springing up as if by magic, and there remains many an unprospected range awaiting the hardy prospector, the advance agent, as it were, of our principal industry."

RYAN ON THE COPPER SITUATION

Says No Drastic Curtailment of Production Will Be Necessary, But Record-Breaking Outputs Will No Longer Be Sought.

Butte, Mont., Aug. 27.—John D. Ryan, president of the Amalgamated Copper company, is making his semi-annual visit to Butte. He does not speak in detail of the plans of copper producers, but in an interview with The Herald correspondent, intimated that there would be no great or drastic curtailment necessary, and that there would be no further reduction by the Butte mines. Speaking of his trip to Europe, conditions there, and the copper situation generally, he said:

"I was never in Germany before, and I was greatly interested in business conditions there. I found that the Germans are making more progress in an industrial way at the present time than any other nation. Not even is our country forging ahead as fast as Germany from an industrial point of view at the present time. They have not as much raw material as some of the other countries, but they get the material and use it. They have the help of the German government, which encourages them in every way in carrying forward industrial enterprises, and practically compels them to work for the best interests in the particular line they are pursuing.

Consuming Much Copper.

"Germany is the greatest copper-consuming country just now, and all the copper-using trades are exceedingly prosperous. The increase in the consumption of copper in Germany is very marked. They are greatly benefited by the low price of copper that has prevailed and are taking full advantage of the lowness of the price.

"All the copper-consuming countries—England, France and Italy—are now at their maximum in the use of copper—they are using more than they ever used before. We are exporting at the rate of 750,000,000 pounds of copper a year, which is practically half of our production. If we were getting a fair price for our copper—say 2 cents more per pound—it would make a balance of trade in favor of this country of about $15,000,000 a year without stifling consumption at all.

"In spite of the great consumption, the production of copper has been slightly in excess of what has been used, and the foreign consumers have gotten most of the benefit of the low price which has consequently prevailed. I think the desire to make an excessive production of copper has been a mistake on the part of American producers and has been disastrous to the mines. I think all the producers realize that this is the case, and while there is no decision arrived at as to curtailment, and there will be no important curtailment, yet efforts to make record-breaking outputs will, in my opinion, be over for the present.

Butte's Production.

"The Butte mines are producing over 20 per cent of the American production of copper and 17 per cent of the world's production. There will be no curtailment of production that will affect Butte materially, because all the the producers recognize that there has been a slight overproduction and they are not forcing production as they have in the past. Other districts are not producing as much. So far as Butte is concerned there will be no curtailment of an extent to affect the community in any degree. If we can obtain a little better price for our copper we can then increase, instead of decreasing, our tonage from our mines by taking out lower grade ore, and that will make it necessary to employ in reality more men instead of less men and the general industrial conditions of this district will be better.

"There is no reason for any one to believe that in our time Butte will lose its position as the greatest of all copper districts and no district is making such strides as is Butte in the direction of economies and improvements in handling the output of the mines.

Montana Conditions.

"The general conditions of the country are fairly good and are improving. So far as I could judge in passing through the state, conditions are even better in Montana than generally elsewhere. Very many settlers are coming into the state on every train. There were many of them on the train that brought me here. There has been a wonderful influx into this state all through the spring and summer. The advertising Montana is getting by this influx of settlers and by what the railroads are doing in the way of letting the world know about Montana is having a very beneficial effect. I heard people talking about Montana and its resources in Europe."

Mr. Ryan expects to make a long stay in Butte this time, unless something now unforeseen should call him East.

NEW MINES FOR COPPER QUEEN

Imperial Copper Company at Silverbell Said to Have Disposed of Its Properties to the Phelps-Dodge Interests.

Tucson, Ariz., Aug. 27.—That the Copper Queen company has taken over the Geeseman, Leatherwood and Billie Reed properties in the Santa Catalina mountains has been confirmed and the terms of the sales given out. There also came authentic reports of a vastly larger deal in which Tucson is vitally interested.

The deal for the Santa Catalina mountain properties was practically closed by Walter Douglas on his recent visit to Tucson, but there remained several details which were several days in being straightened out. These details are now settled and the terms are public. Robert Leatherwood and Judge Lowell receive $80,000 between them for their interests, Geeseman receives $35,000, William Rid gets $15,000 and the Ramsdel estate gets $6,000. These figures are authentic.

The more important deal reported for the past day or so and partially verified is to the effect that the Copper Queen people have also taken over the properties of the Imperial Copper company at Silverbell. Walter Douglas was at Silverbell recently in his private car and accompanied by officials of the Phelps-Dodge company. It is also reported that a representative of the Guggenheims was present, but it is understood that he was present merely as an expert and probably as an appraiser.

The current report on the streets of Tucson is to the effect that the deal for the Imperial Copper company properties at Silverbell was closed a month ago, and the option had then been taken up. This report is given credence by the fact that the mines were recently closed down without any sufficient reason being given. It is now stated that the closing down was merely for the purpose of making an appraisement of the possessions of the Imperial company and then for transferring the holdings to the new propiretors. Therefore, instead of being closed down, it is expected that the Silverbell mines will be running at full blast again at no remote date.

Included in the reported transfer is the Port Lobos railroad, which is merely a confirmation of a report circulated months ago to the effect that the Port Lobos road was to be built to give the El Paso & Southwestern an outlet to the sea. The rumor has often been abroad that the El Paso & Southwestern was behind the Port Lobos road, and now this seems to be certain, and the Copper Queen company and the El Paso & Southwestern road are owned and controlled by the same people.

The belief that the Silverbell mines have been purchased and the Port Lobos operations taken over by the Phelps-Dodge interests is welcomed in Tucson, because it leaves absolutely no doubt that the extension of the El Paso & Southwestern will come here. To reach both of the recent acquisitions of the Copper Queen company it will be necessary for the El Paso & Southwestern to pass through Tucson, and it is unprecedented that a railroad has ever passed within a few miles of a city the size of this one without tapping it and making a fight for its business, especially when the competing line is not a very dear friend.

From a source which cannot be divulged it has been learned that at least two persons in Tucson were given official notice of the sale of the Imperial Copper company interests to the Phelps-Dodge people more than a month ago. However, these parties kept their secret well until two or three days ago, when it was deemed unnecessary to be so particular longer.

Although there has been no announcement of the intentions of the Copper Queen company, there is no doubt that the purchase by that company near Tucson means a wonderful increase in development work in this section of the country. The Copper Queen company is able to spend whatever is necessary on development work and expansion, and the company's history is one of progress. It is thought to be the company's intention to push work at both of the new points in the very near future. The fact that the Phelps-Dodge interests are behind the Port Lobos road also make that line doubly sure.

AT THE LAKE COPPER MINES

South Lake Encounters Ore at 900 Feet From Surface—Drilling at Indiana and Atlantic—Unidentified Lode Uncovered at New Arcadian.

Houghton, Mich., Aug. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The South Lake Mining company has succeeded in reaching copper ground in the No. 4 drill hole at a depth of about 900 feet from the surface. The drill core indicates a width of about eighty-eight feet in this lode though not all of it is copper bearing, and probably not over twenty feet carrying the mineral in commercial quantity. The last ten feet next to the foot-wall contact is exceptionally rich. The indentity of this copper bearing bed has not been definitely determined. It was first cut on this property in the No. 3 drill hole, and apparently is the underlay of the Lake lode which it strongly resembles. The No. 3 drill hole has attained a depth of 1,869 feet and will probably be abandoned owing to broken and caving ground. A new hole, designed as No. 5, will be started at a point 250 feet east of the No. 4 hole.

Algomah.

More recent developments at the Algomah property, where shaft sinking is in progress, has resulted in the disclosure of native copper at a depth of thirty-five feet on the surface. The change in the shaft from ore only to mixture of copper ore, amygdaloid and native ore was not entirely unexpected, and will probably show greater change from ore of native copper at still greater depth. The hoist and air-compressor recently installed at the shaft have been made available for service and are now in commission. The diamond drill outfit, the operation of which was delayed owing to lack of water, has also gone into commission.

Indiana.

The operations of the Indiana Copper company continue centered in diamond drilling in an effort to locate the extension of the ore body cut in the No. 2 drill hole early last winter. Two exploratory drills are in service at two points within 300 feet of the No. 2, or discovery hole. One hole, the No. 7, has attained a depth of about 1,200 feet, and the other, or No. 9 hole, is around 1,000 feet in depth. Both drill holes are expected to cut the Indiana deposit between 1,400 and 1,500 feet in these holes. A site has been cleared near the scene of these operations, and should developments warrant a shaft will be started vertically to top the deposit.

Atlantic.

The Atlantic Mining company has planned to diamond drill the eastern portion of the Old Atlantic tract on sections 4 and 9, and active work is expected to begin shortly. The territory to be exploited underlies the Ashbed horizon, upon which the old Atlantic mine is opened, and very probably carries an extension of the Quincy Pewabic lode. This formation has not been definitely located on the South range, but there seems little doubt that the Atlantic company will fail to locate it. The operations of the company on section 16, show no great encouragement, the shaft continues temporarily bottomed below the twenty-fifth level at which point and at the twentieth and sixteenth levels above drifting is in progress. A lode that appears to be an extension of the Superior lode, has been opened at the sixteenth level and is being followed. It is not of very great promise at this point, so far as opened. The character of the ground at greater depth in the vicinity of the shaft is much better, and is yielding a little copper from time to time.

Franklin.

The No. 3 Pewabic shaft of the Franklin Mining company has been temporarily bottomed at the sixteenth level, and the operations of the company are now confined to territory tributary to the older No. 1 shaft which has reached the thirtieth level, 3,000 feet from surface. Drifting in progress at this point on the Franklin property reveals copper ground of average grade and undoubted commercial value. The ground below the twentieth level shows better and more consistent values than in the higher openings, and is receiving the undivided attention of the management. The No. 3 shaft was put down to supply much needed ventilation to the workings in the No. 1 shaft with which it is connected at the fifteenth level and serving this purpose will probably not be further deepened in the immediate future.

New Baltic.

The New Baltic Mining company has added a small six-drill air-compressor to its equipment and should be available for service before long. Shaft sinking is at present being carried on with the use of steam drills, and there displacement by the compressed air-drill should facilitate work at this point. The shaft has attained adepth of thirty feet.

New Arcadia.

The New Arcadia Copper company has uncovered the outcropping of an unidentified amygdaloid lode recently cut in the No. 7 drill hole, revealing a lode about fifteen feet thick of which eight feet carried copper in apparent commercial quantity. The outcropping of the lode though badly weathered carries considerable fine copper in place and the showing is altogether highly encouraging. The test pit in which this surface showing is being obtained is being made to follow the dip of the formation, and thus far has been in copper ground from the ledge downward. The No. 7 drill hole which passed through this lode about 100 feet below the outcropping, has attained a depth of something over 1,100 feet, and is thought to be within 500 feet of intersecting the New Baltic lode.

WILL REVIVE THE "SMOKE CASE"

Another Chapter in Fight Between Deer Lodge Valley Farmers and Washoe Smelter—Hudson Mine Sold to New York Capitalists.

Butte, Mont., Aug. 27.—The so-called smoke case is apparently to be renewed with more vigor than ever this fall.

Some months ago the attorney general of the United States, acting in representation made to him by the farmers of the Deer Lodge valley, filed a suit against the Washoe Smelter company, alleging that vegetation was being destroyed by the fumes from the Washoe smelter at Anaconda. It is the same old case which was heard before Judge Hunt, but the findings in the case were not considered satisfactory, so the government was induced to take the matter up. A dozen or more expert chemists are now in the Deer Lodge valley taking samples of the soil and examining the trees, vegetables and grain for the purpose of ascertaining if the allegations of the farmers are correct. The Anaconda Copper Mining company, which owns the Washoe smelter, has a number of experts on the scene also making tests and the taking of testimony is expected to be even more extended than it was in the smoke case of more than one year ago. Considering the dryness of the season, the crops in the Deer Lodge valley never looked better and this will of course, be taken advantage of by the Anaconda company to show that the alleged poisonous gases and arsenic from the stack of the smelter are not as destructive to the grain and vegetarian generally as represented by the ranchers. Whether Attorney General Wickersham will personally appear in the case is not yet known, but it is believed he will, in view of the fact that he is named in the complaint as the government's attorney. The side of the Anaconda company will be represented by Attorney C. F. Kelley, chief counsel for the Amalgamated Copper company and he will have several assistants.

The Hudson mine in the Twin Bridges district, which in the past has produced much valuable ore, has passed into the hands of New York capitalists who refuse to disclose their identity at the present time. An old mill known as the Iron Rod, located on the west bank of the Jefferson river, is being remodeled and equipped with modern machinery and will handle the ore of the Hudson. The mill has not been operated for twenty years and the machinery is so crude that practically every part of it will have to be replaced with up-to-date machinery.

The Southern Cross mine, located just out of Anaconda, the property on which there was an option by the United States Smelting, Refining & Mining company, is to be worked by the owners, according to a statement made by Supt. Allen. "All negotiations for the sale of the property are off," said the superintendent, "and we propose to operate the mine ourselves on an extensive scale." Mr. Allen says that repairs are being made to the mill and that just as soon as they are completed it will be started up. The superintendent says that the mill has a capacity of 150 tons of ore daily, but that much will be handled at present as the cyanide plant is not large enough to care for more than seventy-five tons and that in thirty days that much will be running through the mill. Mr. Allen says that the mill has a heating plant in connection with its boilers and this will make it possible to continue operations all winter. At a depth of 300 feet some fine ore is blocked out and the superintendent is confident that still greater values will be encountered at depth.

* * *

The ranchers in the Jefferson valley are strongly protesting against the dumping of tailings from the Basin concentrator in the Jefferson river and there is talk of action being brought to restrain the management of the Basin mill from what is alleged as polluting the water and making it unfit for domestic purposes. Should such action be taken it will seriously interfere with the working of the Butte & Superior mine and also the Davis-Daly, where the ores from both mines are treated. The recent decision of Federal Judge Dietrich of the Idaho district in practically deciding that the ranchers had no ground for complaint up to the present time is to the dumping of tailings in streams, but at the same time awarding the nine plaintiffs a verdict for $1 in all, will have an important bearing in the case of the Jefferson valley ranches inasmuch as the cases are practically the same so far as the alleged pollution of waters are concerned. It is said that the Jefferson valley ranchers have held consultations on the matter and that one or more lawyers have been consulted with a view of seeking a remedy. As yet, however, no formal steps have been taken to bring the case before the courts, but it is believed that in the immediate future a start will be made. Whether an attempt will be made to close down the concentrator or an agreement will be entered into to prevent such step is not known at the present time.

* * *

The announcement is made that F. Augustus Heinze is coming to this city to look after the Davis-Daly property and put the Colorado mine in shape for the commencement of shipments of ore to the Basin mill. It is stated that something like 39,415 shares defaulted on the first payment of the $1 assessment, but this was rather expected and it is now assured that after the second payment of 50 cents is made September 20 some $561,594 will have been received into the treasury out of $600,000 which would have been realized if all the stockholders had paid the assessment. It is stated that within the next thirty days the Colorado ore will be going to the Basin concentrator at the rate of about 200 tons a day, but up to the present time no orders have been received in this city to prepare for active operations. A large amount of concentrating ore has been blocked out on the levels down to the 1,700-foot level, sufficient, it is stated, to keep up shipments for a year or more.

Development work is going along in the various mines of the Anaconda company without interruption. The new shaft in the Gagnon is down to a depth of about 800 feet, while the sinking of the new Belmont shaft to connect with the Anaconda mine is down to a depth of 1,600 feet.

* * *

The boom in North Butte the past week has been due to the highly encouraging reports coming from the mine. During July the company produced nearly 2,000,000 pounds of copper out of an ore tonnage of 1,100 tons. It is reported on what seems good authority that ore of a high grade has been encountered which will bring the mine back to its old standing among the rich producers of the district.

* * *

Butte & Superior is making daily shipments as usual to the Basin concentrator, but owing to the statement of A. M. Chisholm, a heavy stockholder, just before his departure for Europe, there seems to be an uncertainty as to the refinancing scheme adopted at a stockholders' meeting some time ago being carried into effect and this is having a rather depressing effect. Mr. Chisholm has declared that he and associates propose to prevent the carrying out of the scheme, but at the same time he adds the property is in good shape and the future of the mine need not cause any worry. He has failed to state what his plans are in the matter.

The increased activity in the copper market is welcome news in this district and there is a general feeling that the reported curtailment among the big producers of 25 per cent for three months and 10 per cent for six months will scarcely go into effect in its entirety for the reason that the demand for the red metal will have so increased in the next two or three months that the surplus will be practically wiped out. The big sales reported by the United Metal selling company of 100,000,000 pounds at around 12⅝ and 12¾ cents a pound, has had a most stimulating effect among the mining men in this city and this has been further increased by the announcement that the surplus in the hands of the producers has been decreased to such an extent that htere is little copper on hand and that any surplus above normal requirement is in the hands of speculators. In this district there has been no movement within the past few weeks to further curtail the output and about the same number of men are employed and the same amount of ore is being hoisted as a month ago. As has been previously stated, up to the present time the curtailment here amounts practically to the output of the Clark mines previous to being taken over by the Anaconda company. This was 1,912,450 pounds during the last month the mines were operated by the Clark interests. The balance of the decrease is practically confined to the Boston and Montana group of mines which are being operated but six days a week. Once more it may be stated that all the mines of the Amalgamated company with the exception of the Boston & Montana, are running seven days in the week.

* * *

Judge Dietrich of the federal court in the Idaho distsrict, has made a decision which is highly favorable to the mine owners of the locality. Six years ago several ranchers combined and brought action against certain mining companies, claiming damages to the amount of over $1,000,000 on the ground that the dumping of tailings in the river ruined their property by overflowing the land. Recently the cases were brought to trial and after all the evidence had been submitted the judge took the case from the jury on the ground that there was not sufficient evidence to warrant consideration, but instructed that a verdict be entered giving the plaintiffs the sum of $1. There were nine plaintiffs in all. The cases tried were against the Bunker Hill and Sullivan company. Other cases were continued until the next terms of court.

MAY PURCHASE MEXICAN MINES

Rothschilds Said To Be After Rich Silver Properties Across the Border—Mine Was Worked Many Years Ago and Abandoned.

Douglas, Ariz., Aug. 27.—While stopping over in Douglas on his way to La Antigua, F. M. Steindler confirmed the report that the English and French Rothschilds interests had made overtures for the purchase of La Antigua and El Temblor properties. He is a member of the well known Steindler family of New York, who with H. C. Carr control the Sonora Exploration company.

Mr. Steindler gave out the following statement to a Dispatch representative:

"Some time ago large banking interests on the other side asked for an option on the various properties controlled by the Sonora Exploration company, which includes La Antigua, El Temblor, New York, Last Chance and the Texas. This we refused to grant or even consider and advised them to look over the properties and then make a bona fide offer for an interest, if they cared to do so. I understand that they sent their engineers, Wilkinson and Powers, into the field and that they made a wide inspection of the various properties in that district.

"It is the general understanding, as far as can be gathered in Eastern circles, that they intend to make a pretty generous offer for a small interest in the concern, but as yet there has been little definite or final regarding the closing of the proposition."

Local mining circles are eagerly watching developments in the Rothschild's negotiations for an interest in the Tabacachi district, and are awaiting with considerable impatience the result of the engineers' report.

The Antigua was purchased last December by Henry C. Carr and associates. The mine was worked by the ancients for silver, but since Carr and his associates have opened it up, it has become a promising copper proposition. Water was brought through a line from Elist creek, houses were erected and machinery installed.

At the time Carr purchased La Antigua he took over El Temblor, Last Chance, Texas and New York. Work was begun on El Temblor, which was purchased from Tim Lambertson and R. L. Van Dusen of Douglas, who held an option on the properties, and work was started at once. Silver ore said to assay up to $6,000 a ton was struck and the later developments, it is said have made this strike more than a promise.

In the same district are situated a long list of properties, more or less developed, many of them having records of high grade shipments before the panic of 1907 closed out the small operators in Sonora. Among these are the Rosales, owned by Dr. J. J. P. Armstrong of Douglas, the Helvetia, the Santa Ana, the Santa Fe and others.

The Steindler and Carr interests have been receiving a number of flattering offers for the property from New York and German capitalists, which, it is said, excited the interest of the Rothschilds in the proposition. The latter, it is said, are large holders of stock in a number of Central Mexico enterprises and are contemplating an entrance into the Northern Sonora field.

Local mining men say they are all at sea as to the prospective action of the English banking firm and are awaiting with considerable interest further developments. If the properties mentioned are taken up by the foreigners, it will mean that an entirely different angle will be reached and for the better in mining circles in the Southwest.

NEW SMELTER IS SHIPPING

First Copper Goes Through Converter of International Smelting and Refining Company at Pine Canyon, Utah—Five Furnaces in All.

Salt Lake, Utah, Aug. 27.—The first shipment of copper from the International Smelting & Refining company plant at Pine Canyon, Tooele county, Utah, will be made this month and the first copper has been successfully made. The first copper went through the converter last week, while the first slag was taken from the reverberatory furnace Saturday. The first consignment of red metal has been kept by the company and will be used in making souvenirs of the occasion of opening the baby plant of Utah.

There are three things in connection with the new plant which speak much praise of General Manager E. P. Mathew son of the Washoe smelter of Anaconda, who has carefully supervised the work of building the present plant. The plant was erected within the contract time, which was thirteen months after the Tooele Valley railroad, which is owned by the company and which runs from Tooele station on the Salt Lake route to the smelter, reached the smelter site. It was built within the appropriation allowed by the company for the erection of the plant and it has started up without a hitch of any kind. Nothing has had to be changed, the only thing necessary being the adjustment of machinery.

The plant when running full capacity will be able to handle about 1,800 tons of charge a day. One reverberatory furnace is now making copper and a second one is being warmed and filled. The second furnace will be ready with its molten metal within a week. A third furnace has been lighted and accumulating heat and charge for the past four days. In about two weeks this will be handling a daily charge. The fourth furnace will soon follow. The fifth furnace will be used for emergencies although it will be warmed up with others. One furnace will probably be down most of the time, but four furnaces will be running continuously.

Althrough it has only been necessary to operate three of the roasters up to the time copper was made, five more have since been put into operation. It requires eight roasters to a furnace and by Labor day there is no doubt but what the entire plant will be in operation, and the thirty-two roasters going.

The plant has been started up with unusual success. All the machinery was worked before operations started and the rough edges worn down. When the real work started the plant worked with the nicety of a watch.

Although the Utah Consolidated has had a large amount of trouble with its new tramway over the mountain and a number of buckets were lost in getting the machinery into action, it is now working fairly well. At present there are about 10,000 tons of ore from the mine in the bins at the smelter, so there will be no delay in feeding the roasters ores for calcines for the furnaces.

The conveyer belts which carry the ore from the crushers to the roasters worked from the first. The sampling mill is running as though it had been at work for a year. No troubles have occurred at the power plant and everything can be said to be in first-class shape.

DEPOSITS WIDESPREAD

Copper Now Known to Exist at Many Points in County Where Its Presence Was Not Dreamed of a Few Years Ago.

Copper was once supposed to occur at only a few places in the United States, but it is now known to be widespread. Most of the deposits are of low grade, but improved modern methods of treatment have made low grade copper ores very valuable. Geologists of the United States geological survey describe the copper deposits of three localities in an advance chapter from the survey's bulletin 430. Containing short pages and preliminary reports on work done in 1909.

The Shasta region in California is the second largest copper region in the United States that can be considered a geological unit. In shape it forms a curved belt thirty-five miles long, popularly known as the "copper crescent." Copper sulphides have been known to occur with the gold lodes of this region for many years, but were not handled until 1895, and since that year the region has produced 300,000,000 pounds of copper. In 1909 it produced 50,000,000 pounds, which makes it rank as the sixth or seventh copper district in the United States. The ores are pyritic and are of medium richness, averaging 3 to 3½ per cent. Some of them form the largest sulphide ore bodies in the world, measuring 1,200 by 300 by 300 feet. They represent, not the filling of cavities, but the replacement of parts of the rock by which they are surrounded. The report on these deposits was made by L. C. Graton.

In Bear Lake county, Indiana, copper deposits occur near Montpelier. Here, however, they are mostly carbonate and not sulphide ores. Their value has not yet been definitely proved, nor is their extent known. The chief project for their development is the Bonaza shaft, but has not yet shipped ore. Shales, stained green, maroon and chocolate by iron, abound in the region, the colors mimicking those of copper stains and misleading the prospector, who suposes that the vivid tints are indications of copper. The ores run only about 2 per cent, but may be made to pay by proper treatment. The deposits are described by H. S. Cale.

Near South Mountains, Pa., copper in the shape of blebs, grains and wires is associated with ancient lavas, particularly with the green stone that is so widespread in that region. Traces of copper are found for eight miles, from the Gettysburg pike to a point beyond the Maryland state line. Most of the prospects are at stream crossings, where the overlying rocks have been worn away. The copper was brought up from the interior of the earth with the lava, but was then very finely disseminated through the mass and was worthless. Later it was concentrated in veins by hot circulating waters which dissolved it and later redeposited it, on the walls of cavities, and in other places. There deposits, which are described by G. W. Stose have been known for several years but have not yet proved to be commercially important. Systematic search, however, might reveal valuable deposits.

The advance chapter containing these reports is numbered 430-B, and may be had by applying to the Director of the survey at Washington.

GOLD STRIKE IN IDAHO

Salmon City Excited Over Find Made on Kirtley Creek—Ore Said to Contain Nuggets the Size of a Pea.

Salmon City, Idaho, Aug. 27.—Salmon City is greatly excited over a wonderfully rich strike of gold-copper ore made in the Treasure Box mine at the head of Kirtley creek, about sixteen miles from town. George Smith, the owner of the property, came to town today, bringing samples of the ore. It is incredibly rich. The gold occurs, free, and contains nuggets the size of a pea. The vein is ten to twenty inches in width.

The gold is associated with copper, in a quartz gangue; the copper being in the form of a sulphide, with small amounts of copper carbonate. This will make an ideal ore for smelting purposes, regardless of the fact that the gold is free milling, as a good percentage of iron oxide occurs in the ore as well as that associated with a high percentage of copper.

Mr. Smith says that the gold occurs in veinlets through the quartz. A good part of the free gold he is showing, both in nuggets and separated from the gangue, was dug from the face of the tunnel with a pocket knife. The tunnel is in sixty feet, which also reaches a vertical depth of sixty feet. Rich ore was encountered thirty feet from the entrance of the tunnel, and has developed into the marvelously rich deposit in a distance of thirty feet. Assays of the samples shown would run up into the thousands, but assays from fair, mixed samples are now being made. Experts say that this ore equals the best in Colorado and Nevada.

The Treasure Box claim is in a district which has long been known to be rich in gold and copper. Adjoining claims have been held by men who have not had the means to develop them. All the neighboring claims have been filed upon, and it is certain that this district will soon be a very rich producer.

The property is sixteen miles from the Gilmore & Pittsburg railroad, and there are good roads all the way to the mine. Smith has men at work developing the mine, and expects to ship as soon as possible. He has about ten tons now ready.

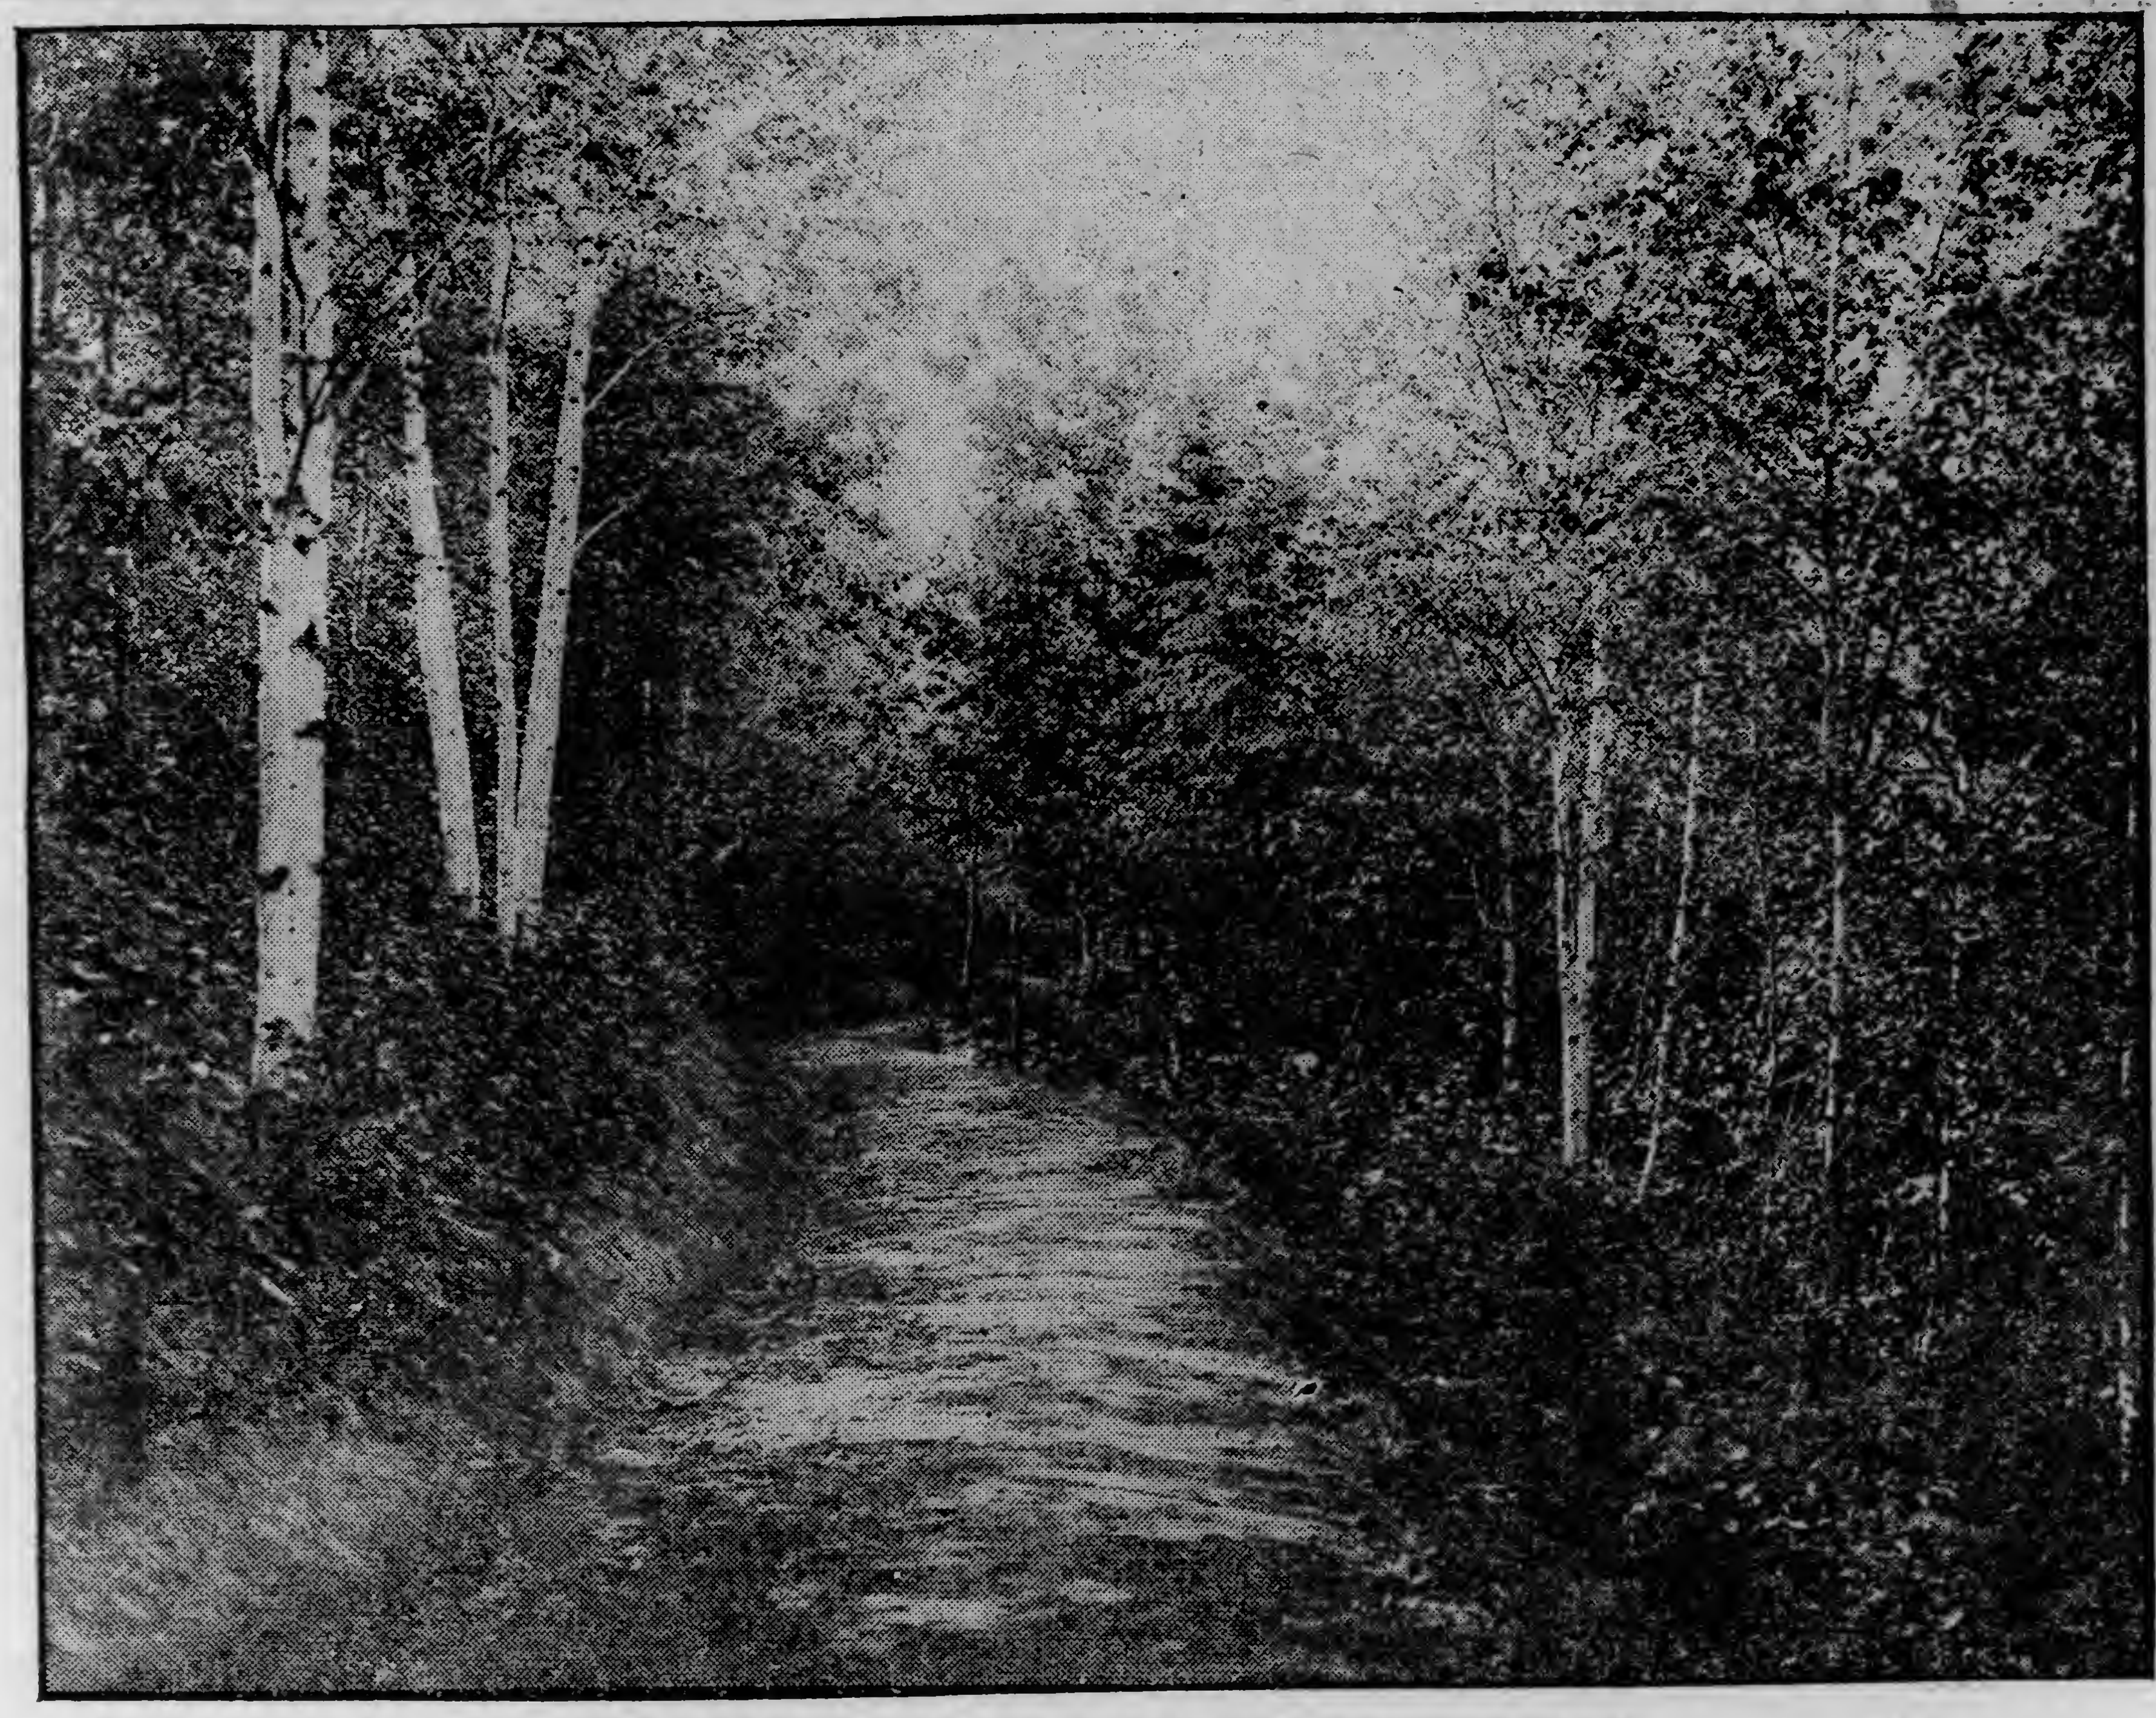
CONGDON PARK, THE NEWEST AND MOST BEAUTIFUL OF DULUTH'S BEAUTIFUL SPOTS



ONE OF THE FOOTPATHS IN BEAUTIFUL CONGDON PARK.

For years the Old World was considered nature's only beauty spot, while America with its vast area was but a wild, unattractive country, entirely unfit to furnish that pleasure which human eye seeks.

Today it is different. The songs of the poets, which really added beauty to the scenes of the Old World, are not eloquent enough in their description to apply to the natural beauty spots of America. The "See America First" movement has opened the eyes of every patroitic American, who, heretofore, has looked upon Europe as the only place where nature bestowed all her blessings, and he has come to the realization that this is the most beautiful country in the world. His enthusiasm in America's beauty has spread until it has awakened interest among foreigners and every year this country is the mecca for thousands from other lands, who seek after real nature.

Among the places in America especially blessed by nature is Duluth with its many rock hills, its deep ravines, its creeks and rivers with their many waterfalls, and the rock-bound coast of Lake Superior.

Duluthians have been wide-awake to the many beauties within the city's limits, and some of these have been preserved in parks where the people can gather for their own pleasure and comfort.

Duluth's newest acquisition in the line of parks is Congdon park, in the East end. This park, though not completed, is even in its present state considered the most beautiful of all the city parks, and when the last touches of the workmen have been made, it is believed it will be the prettiest in the Northwest.

It is laid out on the banks of Tischer's creek, one of the most picturesque creeks in the country, and which for years has been famous for its trout. The park, when completed, will extend from London road to St. Marie street, a distance of more than three-quarters of a mile, every inch of which has its own attraction.

History of the Park.

The history of the new park began a few years ago, when Chester A. Congdon donated to the board of park commissioners the land along the banks of the creek from London road to Superior street. Following this gift the board purchased the land north of Superior street with the view of converting the entire district into a park. In courtesy to Mr. Congdon, who so generously gave the original tract of land, the park board named it Congdon park.

When this season's work will have ended, the board will have spent $10,000 in converting the wilderness into a pleasant breathing spot for the residents of Duluth and its many visitors. But to complete the work will require two or three years, for extensive work is yet to be done. The expenditure will exceed $25,000.

By the end of next week a 220-foot driveway will have been completed, extending from Superior street along the creek to St. Marie street. From this driveway, one can find access to the principal streets of the city, and a through drive can be made from the park to Oneota cemetery in West Duluth.

Beside this driveway is an 8-foot path, which can be used by both equestrians and pedestrians. This was opened Tuesday when the first equestrian passed over it, and found it a most enjoyable ride. Two small foot-paths, on each side of the creek, will be used only by the pleasure-seekers. These have not been entirely completed, but one can even now make his way comfortably from one end of the park to the other.

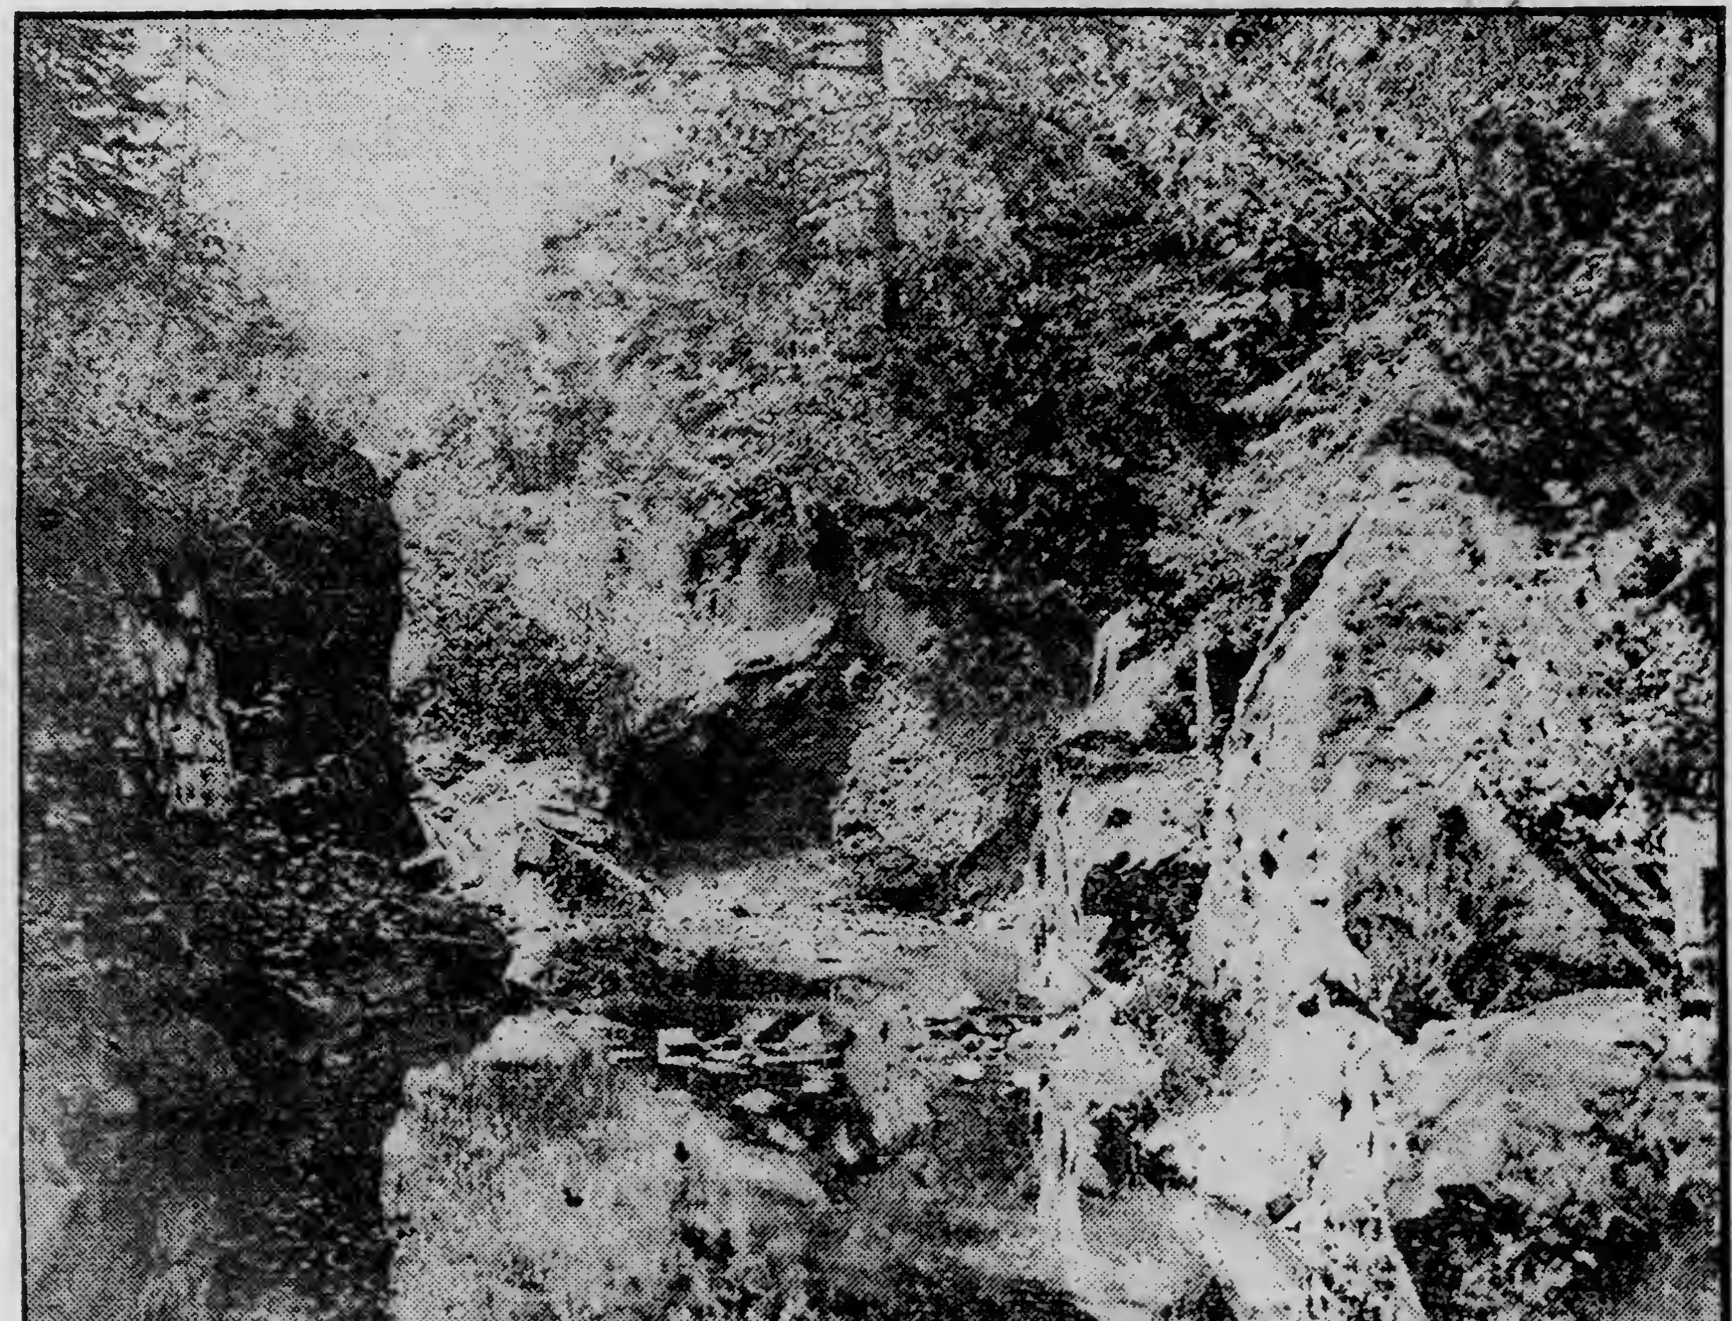
These paths lead up and down the high, rocky banks of the creek, in winding courses, here and there crossing the creek where stepping stones have been arranged. These stepping stones, which are laid in concrete, are as solid as the firmest rock walls, and on each side end-guard stones have been placed, which are leveled off to form seats. In places where it was impossible to make use of stones for steps, concrete, colored to match the rocks on both sides of the creek, was used to make a stairway. In every way, the path was made as easy as possible so that children of tender ages could walk about the park with as little trouble as an adult.

Many high waterfalls are shown to advantage, and along the tops of the bank, as well as along the paths, platforms have been arranged, or will be constructed later, from which the visitors to the park can secure the best view of these falls.

The high banks, with their rough rocks, projecting overhead, form a miniature canon, which, except at high noon, is a protection from the hot sun, thus affording a cool, comfortable spot for those who seek shetler from a sweltering sun.

Creek Still Open.

Tischer's creek, so long known as the best trout stream in the city, from which thousands of fish have been drawn, will not be taken away from the people. The board understands that it is the people's creek, and that they have a right to all the fish they can catch there, so for years, yet to come, fishermen will be seen wading in the stream.

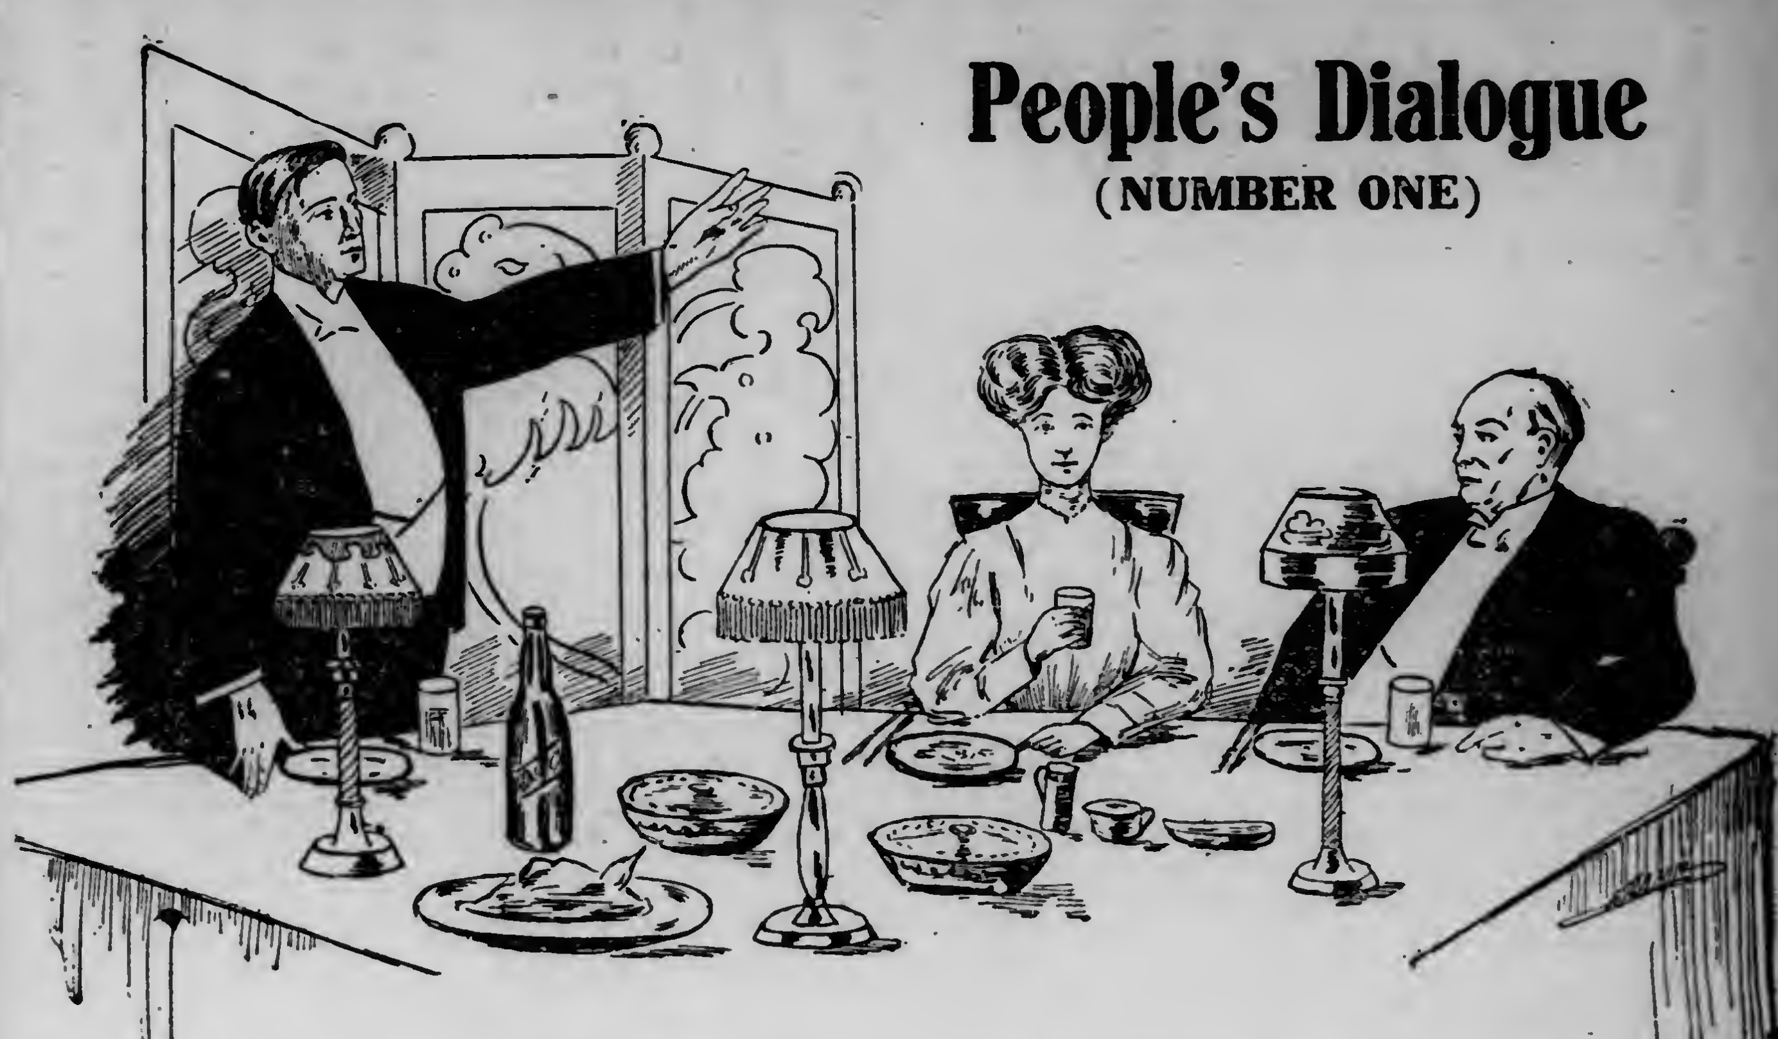


A ROCKY GORGE IN CONGDON PARK.

Not many benches of the kind so commonly seen in other parks, will be found in Congdon park, but the visitor will seat himself upon stones, uncut and untrimmed, except by the hand of nature, which the workmen have found upon the grounds, and arranged in convenient places.

In laying out the park, the board has been especially anxious to maintain all the rustic attractions, making no changes in the trees, shrubbery, banks or the laying of the stones, except in the making of the roads and paths, and the arranging for platforms and seats. Even the moss on the stones has been untouched, and is left to add to the natural appearance of the beautiful park.

Over Tischer's creek on Superior street, the board of public works is building a new bridge of steel and reenforced concrete, which when finished will cost about $20,000. The driveway which leads north, will be extended to London road, and with it will be built the equestrian drives, and two footpaths. Work on the southern end of the park will be taken up next year, the same general scheme being used in converting that part into a park that has been used on the other.



People's Dialogue
(NUMBER ONE)

"I am surprised, Mr. Jones," said the Deacon, who was dining with the Jones family, "to see that you allow an intoxicating beverage on your table."

"Where?" said Jones, pretending to look under his plate and the doilies.

Frowning sternly, the Deacon pointed to a bottle of

PEOPLES' BEER

at Jones' side.

"Why, that isn't intoxicating, Deacon, that's PEOPLES' Beer; we drink it not only because we like it, but because it is HEALTHIER than water---the splendid sterilizing plant of the Peoples' Brewing Company kills every last one of those wriggly little microbes, of which there are--so I have heard--about twenty billions in every cubic inch of water. As for its being intoxicating, why, you would have to drink a dozen bottles to get the same amount of alcohol that there is in one glass of whiskey!"

----The Deacon passed his glass.

KAISER'S SPEECH STIRS THEM UP

German Papers Are Greatly Excited Over His Claim of Divine Right.

Berlin, Aug. 27.—The speech delivered by Emperor William of Germany before the provincial banquet at Koenigsburg yesterday, in which he reiterated and emphasized his belief in the divine mandate by which he rules, referred to the Prussian crown as bestowed by God's grace and not by parliaments or peoples' assemblies, and laid a lance against the present movement for women suffrage, is the political sensation of the hour.

The leading organs of the German press devote extended comment to it, generally criticising the emperor's sentiments, and there are indications that the discourse will have a deep effect on the country, nearly all the Berlin papers discussing the subject in connection with the political crisis of November, 1908, when the publication by the London Daily Telegraph of an interview with the emperor aroused a storm against the uncontrolled public speaking of the emperor.

Say It Means Trouble.

The serious Vossische Zeitung, the Tageblatt, the Post and other papers point out the constitutional character of the kingdom of Prussia in the empire, and inquire whether the chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, was privy to the emperor's purpose of delivering such a speech. They predict that it will lead to a renewed discussion of the emperor's constitutional position when the reichstag reassembles in November.

The organ of the landed nobility, the Deutsche Tages Zeitung, thoroughly approves of the expressions of the emperor.

Intense Collcky Pains Relieved.

"For some years I suffered from intense colicky pains which would come on at times and from which I could find no relief," says I. S. Mason of Beaver Dam, Ky. "Chamberlain's Colic Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy was recommendey to me by a friend. After taking a few doses of the remedy I was entirely relieved. That was four years ago and there has been no return of the symptoms since that time." This remedy is for sale by all druggists.

LOSE POINT IN CAR FRAUD CASE

Defendants in Illinois Central Affair Refused Change of Venue.

Chicago, Aug. 27.—Attorneys for three former high officials of the Illinois Central railroad, Frank B. Harriman, formerly general manager; John M. Taylor, storekeeper; and Charles L. Ewing, superintendent of the lines north of the Ohio river, received a setback on the first day of their criminal trial when Judge Bruggemeyer refused the defendants a bill of particulars or a change of vanue. The men are charged with participating in frauds by which the railroad company is alleged to have been mulcted out of more than $1,000,000 through inflated car repair bills.

Rawn's Name Brought In.

Despite objections by attorneys for the defense, the names of Ira G. Rawn, former president of the Monon route, who met death recently by a bullet wound, and J. E. Baker and William Renshaw, former superintendents of machinery of the Illinois Central, were brought into the case in the testimony of Theophil Reuter, formerly general manager of the Osterman Car company, now employed as a locomotive engineer for the Illinois Central road. His testimony was placed in the record, but Judge Bruggemeyer asserted it might be stricken out later if attorneys for the prosecution failed to prove it material.

SAYS LIGHTNING WAS CAUSE OF MANY FIRES.

Washington, Aug. 27.—Clement Ucker, chief clerk of the interior department has returned from a trip of inspection of the Glacier national park in Montana whither he went to formulate plans for improving the park and making it easily accessible to the public. In Mr. Ucker's opinion the majority of the forest fires in the park were started by lightning, while others were traceable to carelessness and maliciousness.

WANT JAPANESE HISTORY TAUGHT IN OUR SCHOOLS.

Washington, Aug. 27.—Asserting that the curriculum of the lower and higher schools of America, "while rightly paying great attention to the history of other nations," provides for little or no instruction in the history of China and Japan, a petition signed by more than 100 prominent American residents in Japan asks all the educational authorities of the United States, both public and private, to supply the deficiency "in the interests both of American education itself, and also of international comity, based upon mutual understanding."

The petition is being circulated throughout the United States by the American-Asiatic Society of Yokohama, Japan, which asserts that "the children of Japan are far better informed as to the character, resources and standards of civilization of American people than are the children of America regarding things Japanese."

MONTANA STENOGRAPHER HAS CHECK DRAWING MANIA.

Helena, Mont., Aug. 26.—A jury in the district court has found John W. Saltenberger to be a paroniac and he was ordered committed to an insane asylum. He is a young married stenographer and last week went to a local bank and cashed a check for $1,600 signed by a law firm by which he was employed. He immediately paid all his debts and was about to leave the city when arrested. He had a number of other large checks in his possession.

A Practical Demonstration

If any reader of this little article is in doubt as to the importance of keeping the spine in perfect condition, a visit to Dr. Riesland's office will convince him or her that it is most essential. Dr. Riesland has in his office two human spines, one normal, the other abnormal. No reasonable person can examine these spines and doubt the value to the entire world of the science of Chiropractic.

GREAT NORTHERN KILLS A FARMER

Swan Johnson Living Near Hinckley Meets With Instant Death.

Hinckley, Minn., Aug. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Swan Johnson, a farmer living about two miles southwest of Hinckley, was struck in the head and instantly killed by a Great Northern train Tuesday night.

There were no witnesses to the accident, but how it happened was as plain to those who viewed the body in the morning as if they had been present.

There was an ugly wound on the back of his head, and it was found on examination that his jawbone and some of his teeth were broken from the force of the blow.

The funeral was held in the Swedish Lutheran church Friday afternoon.

Swan Johnson was born in Sweden and was 69 years old on June 6. He emigrated to the United States in 1880 and has lived near Hinckley for about eighteen years. He leaves five children—Mrs. Frank Nelson, St. Paul; Mrs. Hanson, Balaton; Mrs. Charles Larson and Mrs. Erick Cederstrom, Hinckley, and John Shoberg, Grand Rapids.

The accident seems particularly sad, as his wife, whom he married in 1864, died just three weeks to a day previous.

PREDICTS HIGH PRICES.

Red Lake County Says Horses and Cattle Will Be High.

Thief River Falls, Minn., Aug. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Olaf Ramstad, one of the best posted men in this section of the state on the livestock market, predicts that next spring cattle and horses will bring the best prices in the history of this country. Mr. Ramstad is familiar with conditions in all parts of the Northwest, and he says that there will be a big shortage next year. Farmers of Montana and North Dakota have in many instances been forced to sell off their stock this summer, and that is the reason that the prices are so low at the present time. He believes that any farmer in this section who sells any stock this fall will greatly regret the fact next spring.

Bagley, Minn., Aug. 27.—The case of Eugene J. Warren vs. M. J. Kolb, in which the plaintiff sued for $30,000, for alleged fraud was tried here during the last few days. The jury, after being out eighteen hours, brought in a verdict for plaintiff for $1,500. The plaintiff is a mixed blood allottee of the White Earth reservation and the defendant a banker, residing at Bagley.

This is the first case of the kind that has ever been tried in this section of the state. It is not likely that an appeal will be taken.

TIME FOR ACTION.

At the last meeting of the St. Louis County club a discussion of the road problem in St. Louis county brought out some very valuable facts, and attracted widespread interest.

Isn't it about time that discussion were being followed up by action?

It would seem that at least it is time that plans were being discussed. Legislative action very probably will be necessary, and if so it is none too soon to begin laying wires to get such legislative results as the situation may call for.

What St. Louis county needs as a foundation for the agricultural development to which some of the best and most earnest thought of its people is being given is more and better roads.

An essential preliminary is a comprehensive system toward the completion of which all road work from now on shall be directed.

A plan of providing the money needed for carrying out this system must be devised. Whether the money is to be raised by a bond issue or by a larger annual levy for road purposes is yet undecided.

A third vital question is that of management. Shall the board of county commissioners, which already is well occupied with the financial details of conducting the business of St. Louis county, be left to assume the full responsibility of carrying on this work, or shall there be a road commission, made up of citizens whose chief duties it shall be to pass on the system proposed, to select an expert engineer to plan and conduct the work, and to supervise the completion of the system after it is formulated? Two years ago sentiment in the county seemed to have crystalized in favor of the commission plan. There was some objection on the part of those who looked upon it as an infringement on the province of the county commissioners, but this was a mistaken view. The commission plan was not the result of any suspicion of the capacity or integrity of the county commissioners. It grew out of a conviction that the present system, by which the commissioners are forced to engage in a scramble to see which can get the most for his district, does not make for the best results because it overlooks the common interest of the whole county.

St. Louis county could spend $10,000,000 on its roads, and if it were spent wisely and in accordance with a broad and comprehensive plan aimed at a complete system of county roads, it would be a richly paying investment.

St. Louis county, to a large degree, is a locked-up empire, and roads are the key that will open it.

It is going to take a good deal of thought and study to work out the right kind of system, and to form the right kind of plans for moving that system from the engineers' maps to the surface of St. Louis county.

It seems to be about time to make a start toward this work which is of such vital importance to St. Louis county, the iron range communities, the rural sections and Duluth.

HIS WORK CUT OUT FOR HIM.

According to an interpretation of the law handed down by Attorney General Simpson, by request, a sheriff in this state is not expected to wait until somebody comes to tell him that the law is being violated or about to be violated. He is supposed to prevent its violation on his own initiative.

His duty is not completed, according to this ruling, when he arrests those who have violated the law and against whom complaints have been lodged. His is a positive duty of preventing law violations and of arresting lawbreakers and intending lawbreakers; not a negative duty of sitting back to wait until somebody formally complains.

Furthermore, if he neglects this side of his duties —as most sheriffs are certainly doing at present— he is subject to removal by the governor for his neglect.

If this rule is adhered to, it makes the office of sheriff much more important than it has been considered in the past. The sheriff, according to this construction, is a sort of county chief of police. He is supposed to keep watch of what is going on, and to pursue lawbreakers as regularly as he pursues those who have neglected to pay their personal property taxes, those whom attorneys have requested him to serve papers upon, and those who have been drawn for jury service or called as witnesses.

Says the attorney general: "It is not enough for a sheriff to plead that no complaint has been made to him with regard to the alleged violation of law, or that no warrant has been placed in his hands for service. When complaint is made to him that a law is about to be violated, or he has reason to believe that the peace of the county is about to be broken, a duty rests upon the sheriff to conserve the peace, and for that purpose he may call to his aid as many of the citizens of the county as may be necessary."

To follow out that construction—and there probably is no doubt of its correctness—means that a sheriff has his work cut out for him. If he is subject to removal for permitting the law to be violated, and the governor happens to be a sharp constructionist and an eager pursuer of lawbreakers the sheriff's position is precarious unless he takes steps to keep himself informed of probable outbreaks against the peace, or probable violations of law.

Prize fights, blind pig keeping, timber trespassing, riots—these and other disturbances of the peace and violations of the law will have to be watched as carefully by the sheriff as the policeman on his beat watches what happens in his district. If the sheriff's office is made a positive force for the preservation of the peace, he will need an organization like the city force of detectives and patrolmen to enable him to keep command of the situation.

Strict construction of the rule laid down by the attorney general, while helpful to the cause of preserving the peace, will make the office of sheriff far less a sinecure than it was when it was looked upon largely as a civil function with its duties chiefly consisting of the service of papers.

THE THREE-MONTHS' VACATION.

President Taft's amazingly flat remark at Bar Harbor, that two or three months is none too long for a vacation in these days of tense industry and anxiety, refuses to subside, though it was made a couple of months ago.

Says Puck in its current issue: "President Taft has discovered that there is such a thing as exhausting the capital of one's health, and that 'two or three months' vacation after the hard and nervous strain,' etc., etc., are a necessity in these feverish days. Very nice, but hardly a necessity, Mr. President. The great majority of employes, clerks, stenographers, office boys and so forth, do not average more than a month or six weeks' vacation. That is, with pay!"

It might easily be admitted that a vacation of a couple of months or so would be a good thing for hard workers. Less might be made to do, of course, but the suggestion is so stupendously absurd that it is hardly worth while to argue about it.

Nobody is asking President Taft to dwell on the advantages of the three-months' vacation.

If he can propose anything that will guarantee the average worker on salary or wages a real vacation of two weeks every year on full pay, he will be accomplishing a real public service.

But he needn't bother about that, even. If he can propose anything that will guarantee that every man who is willing to work and has need of work to buy bread for his children shall have a chance to work at reasonable wages every working day of every year, that will be very much more to the point.

Asked, one time, what a man is to do who is out of a job and penniless, this president of the United States replied: "God knows!"

Asked, another time, what caused the high cost of living, he replied: "It is beyond me."

The people would like to see in the presidency a man who has a plan to offer that will insure merely that every man who is willing and able to work for his living shall have a chance to do so. In place of such a man they have a president who throws up his hands helplessly when asked what a man out of work can do, who gives up without a struggle the problem of the cost of living, and who chats amiably before an audience of summer resorters about the advantages of a three-months' vacation.

Vacations are important, but they are not so pressing as the problem of giving every man "a chance to earn his living and lead his life under the best and most favorable conditions," as Roosevelt put it the other day. When that problem is settled, then it will be time enough to talk about long vacations.

What really bothers now are the long vacations that men without food or money, but with dependent women and children at home, are forced to take at the whim of the greedy and powerful few who control with iron grip the industries of the nation, and who reap the cream of the profit from the nation's productiveness while denying to millions their right to earn their bread by the sweat of their faces.

AN "EXPURGATED SCOTT."

An enterprising publisher having put out three of the Waverly novels in an "expurgated edition," in which the heavy padding of description is cut out and the story reduced to convenient bulk, the New York Times Saturday Review waxed facetious about it, with some indignation but half-concealed by its humor.

Whereupon the man who did the expurgating responds in the current issue of the Saturday Review with a defense of his action.

The weight of logic is with the expurgator. There are no classics that need expurgating, in the sense in which it is used here, more than Scott's novels; and none that will stand it better.

Who hasn't grown weary with the interminable descriptions that fill at least the first third of nearly all of Scott's novels, and that wander at large through the rest of the huge volumes? To the antiquary, to the student, to the seeker for serious reading, these descriptions are interesting. For such, the unexpurgated editions by all means.

But are the children reading Scott nowadays? If they are not the fault lies largely with the unnecessary bulk of his novels; and there is a good deal of evidence that the children are reading shorter and snappier books than those that Scott wrote. Even in "Ivanhoe", a real treasury of undiluted romance, it is really hard work, for young people at least, to wade through the forest of description that begins it to get to the pleasant glades of charming story that it contains.

To some lovers of Scott it will seem little short of profanation to cut out a single sentence. To real lovers of Scott, who wish that author to retain his popularity and who wish that the younger generation were availing itself of the pleasures he offers, the device of blue-penciling the padding out of these romances will appeal strongly.

Says Herbert P. Williams, the man who pleads guilty to the expurgation of the Waverly novels: "Scott's novels are not read so much by anybody as they were a generation ago. Indeed, their yearly sales, as I am told, have fallen off enormously in the last ten or fifteen years. Furthermore, the young person nowadays will not read Scott. The reasons for this are largely to be found in the long historical and descriptive passages with which these wonderful romances abound. Scott himself delighted in this antiquarian lore; perhaps he wrote his novels largely for its sake. These passages have become of less interest in proportion as the time to which they relate has receded further into the past. The story, in each case, keeps the novel alive, although Scott seems to have put in the story to carry the antiquarian material. The modern child, I find, will not read these long historical and descriptive passages—not even for the sake of the story, which is, of course, all he cares about. He won't even skip through these passages, as we used to do, in order to get to the story."

Now isn't that true? You read Scott as a child; are your children reading him now? When you read Ivanhoe you skipped whole pages of description to get at the story. In the present fashion of short, direct tales the child of today has lost the faculty of wading through a diffuse and wearisome preliminary to get at the story; he refuses to bite through so much husk to get at the kernel beneath.

Let the work of expurgation go on. It will serve to reinstate Scott as a childhood favorite; and when the taste for him is recreated by this device, in later years the complete volumes can be read with real delight.

THE "OLD GUARD" VIEWPOINT.

Says William Barnes, leader of the New York Republican "old guard", referring to Roosevelt's attacks upon corruption, crookedness and bossism: "He is hardly helping the party by the course he is taking, but he is getting the personal advertisement that he so much desires."

There's the "old guard's" viewpoint to a nicety.

It cannot see that helping the people is more important than helping the party; that patriotism is a higher and finer thing than partisanship; that he is the best party man who devotes himself to crushing the crooks that muddy the party's fair name and undermine its strength; that a fight against the corrupt organization of a party is a fight in that party's interest and not a fight against the party.

It cannot conceive the possibility that men who make such a fight are honestly seeking to be of service to their fellow man. Knowing nothing in its own experience but unprincipled selfishness, it can see nothing but selfishness back of the actions of those who oppose it.

The "old guard," in New York, in Minnesota, in California, in Georgia, in the nation, seeks only power and profit. Its motives are sordid, its principles are tarnished and decayed, its aims are unworthy and its ends are shameful. It is the connecting link between government and greedy Special Privilege. Its servitors are the servitors of those whose prosperity means misery and suffering and deprivation for the millions. Knowing nothing but selfishness in itself, it sees nothing but selfishness in others.

THE POWER OF ONE VOTE.

In about three weeks there will be a primary election in Minnesota, at which candidates for congressional positions, legislature, and county offices will be picked.

The primary election is as important as the general election. In many places, where nomination practically means election, it is more important. It is the duty of every citizen, therefore, to go to the polls on primary election day and register his choice. Not only that, but in the meantime he should study the contesting candidates and pick out those who, in his belief, will best serve the interest of the nation, the state and the community.

The average voter, especially when thousands of votes are being cast, is likely to underestimate the importance of his individual vote. What difference can it make, he thinks, in these thousands of votes, whether I cast my ballot or not, or how I cast it?

He should take a card from the policy of the accomplished political manager. The trained politician treats every vote just exactly as though that vote would decide the election. It may decide it; you can't tell about that. And anyway the result, whatever it is, will be determined by totals made up of individual votes. The wise politician does not deal so much in masses of votes as he does in individual votes. To him every single vote is important. He never losses track of the fact that a single vote may determine the result, or the fact that a result is nothing but the sum of individual votes.

The voter ought to look at it in the same way. He ought to respect his own vote as much as he respects the votes of all his fellow-citizens. If the votes of his fellow-citizens should happen to be divided equally, his own vote may settle the contest. And even if the result is not close, it depends upon how each individual casts his ballot.

The safe way, and the fair way, the way every good citizen always should do, is to go upon the assumption that your vote is going to be the deciding ballot. When you decide between candidates for congress or county auditor or state senator or representative, act just as you would if you were personally responsible for the selection of the men who are to fill those offices. If by chance your vote should decide an equal contest, you would be personally responsible for the way it was decided.

Look over the field of candidates. Pick those who seem to you best fitted for the places they seek, and most likely to fill them to the satisfaction of the community. Go to the polls on primary election day and vote according to your judgment.

Especially important is the selection of senators and representatives in the legislature. You can't afford to let friendship or sympathy or any other outside consideration affect your choice, for the welfare of the state and of your community may depend upon the kind of men you send to the legislature. Study the candidates. Find out all you can about them. Judge them impartially, and with a view solely to the service you expect them to give, and vote accordingly.

Don't underestimate the importance of your own vote. Treat it as though it were the only vote that is being cast, and as though it would decide the election.

A MONUMENT TO PROCTOR KNOTT.

To the Editor of The Herald:

J. Proctor Knott is still living in Lebanon, Ky., and will be 80 years old on the 29th inst.

We have a village and suburb to perpetuate his name, but is that sufficient? Let us not wait till Duluth shall have a million or more inhabitants, when all the people shall say, "Lo, the seer, our prophet, who has so vividly foretold, minutely picturesquely and grandly described the great city that was to be, let us erect a great granite statue on Zenith hill and worship at his shrine."

No, let us not wait for coming generations to do that. Let us do it now and honor our marvellous prophet while he lives.

Let the city of Duluth erect the great granite statue to his memory up on the highest point in Central park, overlooking the pellucid waters of Lake Superior.

In building this monument to honor his memory, Duluth will reflect credit upon herself and this statue with appropriate inscriptions from his phophecy, will become the famous objective point to be visited by the thousands of other cities, other states and other nations.

Which one of the aldermen will move to bring this important matter up before the council? Or shall the Commercial club take the initiative?

THE Y. M. C. A. AND ITS ELEVATOR SERVICE.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Perhaps publishing a little article in your paper would help a little towards a speedy repair of the Y. M. C. A. elevator, which has been out of order about every four hours off and on, ever since the building has been opened, and which is out of order now, and has been for the past week and a half and no effort made to repair it. We roomers who have to walk up four and five flights of stairs, morning, noon and night and oftentimes during the day, would certainly appreciate a little better service on the part of the elevators.

When asked at the office of the Y. M. C. A. when the elevator will be in running order again, the answer is always the same, "I don't know," as much as to say, don't bother us with such small matters. They admit they got stung on the elevator when it was installed, as it is about as poor a specimen of an elevator as one would want to ride in.

They pass all kinds of laws around the building, especially the anti-cigarette law, which was passed there some time ago, and which received such a lot of agitation in the papers, and it had about as much effect on the roomers towards stopping the smoking of cigarettes, as pouring kerosene on a fire would have. A good many hours in the day no one is in the office at all, and people call on the telephone for the roomers and receive no response, and often times there are important calls, and telephone calls are left which are not delivered until the next day, or, so long after that they are useless. The same with the mail. It is not delivered until some one in the office happens to be going upstairs, which is about every three or four days. I positively know of a case where a letter was received at the Y. M. C. A. in the first delivery and was not delivered to the roomer until four days after, which was too late to do any good. Hoping that you will publish this little article or something to this effect, I am yours truly,

A ROOMER.

LESSONS FROM GERMANY.

Editorial Correspondence Engineering News: We Americans can profit by studying German street railway practice—and indeed all matters in connection with public welfare in these German cities. It greatly interested me to find that while all the cities on the lower Rhine had municipal ownership and operation of their street railways, in Strassburg the railways are operated by a company. About the only noticeable difference was that the Strassburg cars had advertising placards inside, which was not the case with any of the city-owned cars. Strassbourg, it will be remembered also, is in former French territory and it is an interesting speculation whether the franchise plan in Strassburg represents the prevalence of French ideas and systems instead of German.

It is exceedingly interesting, also, to recall that these cities along the lower Rhine were prominent among the places where in the middle ages the ideas that lie at the basis of modern democratic society first flourished. It was these cities, growing prosperous from the traffic of the Rhine, that first became strong enough to withstand the "robber barons" in their castles and finally drove them from these strongholds.

Far back, in the so-called dark ages, the people of these cities learned to stand together for protection against common enemies. They taught some of the first lessons in democracy to the world, and there are, I believe, still other lessons that we can learn from them with profit.

I do not care to draw too close a parallel between the "robber barons" who were overthrown by these free cities of the Rhine and the "robber barons" to whom we in America have bartered the right to control the streets of our cities. I know that, just as in the dark ages many men would have acted exactly like the "robber barons" of the Rhine if they had had possession of their castles, so nowadays many of us would like to take the place of our street railway "barons" and in their places would do likewise. As some wise man said, "Human nature is pretty much of a muchness."

The parallel that it does seem worth while to draw is the parallel between what these German cities did centuries ago in defending themselves from the extortion practiced by the robber barons of the middle ages and the example they are setting to the world today in showing how the public welfare may be promoted by efficient municipal action, in proving by their experience that it is not necessary to pay tribute to "robber barons" of the present day to secure a high degree of public welfare.

As we sail along the Rhine today we see where alongside some of the old castles their baronial occupants erected chapels to salve their consciences and insure their souls against future conflagrations; but these did not avail to save them and their strongholds from passing away with the evolution of a new civilization. On the other hand some of these old-time barons also underwent a process of evolution. Instead of marauders they became public protectors and earned their living by waging warfare against common enemies.

I do not think our modern "barons" can thwart the process of evolution by gifts of libraries and picture galleries. They may, however, by transforming their methods, gain salvation like those oldtime barons who survived—by becoming leaders in real public service.

These are the roots that lie 'neath the house the "Jack" rose built.
This is the Mouse-ear, so pink and shy,

SATURDAY NIGHT TALK

What Strength Owes to Weakness.

One sure sign that this world is improving is found in the constantly greater consideration which the strong extend to the weak. Among barbarous or semi-civilized people strength says to weakness. "Come and serve me, till my fields, fight my battles, spread my table, fill my cup, do my bidding." But some nineteen hundred years ago a different conception of the relation of strength to weakness was introduced, brought into the world by one who said of Himself, "I am among you as one that serveth," and who said to His disciples, "The kings of the Gentiles have lordship over them and they that have authority over them are called benefactors. But ye shall not be so, but he that is the greater among you let him become as the younger and he that is chief as he that doth serve."

It is not without significance that it is only in Christian countries or in lands where Christian influence has begun to make itself felt that we find, on any large scale, hospitals and dispensaries, asylums and homes for the aged, the crippled, for orphans and other unfortunate children. Only in Christian lands do we find much agitation against child labor and tuberculosis and other evils that sap the life of the people and particularly of those already at a disadvantage in the struggle for existence.

But we still have a long way to go before strength is uniformly tender toward weakness. How can we help the world in general to practice Paul's injunction, "We then that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak." In the first place, who are the strong and who are the weak? One hesitates to draw a line in any home in any community and put on one side all the weak members and on the other all the strong ones.

Most of us are blends of strength and weaknes. A safer classification would put by themselves only those who want to be strong, who are using the means at their dispesal for acquiring strength even though they may be painfully conscious of certain evident or latent weakness. Hardly anyone, indeed, is devoid of at least one or two elements of strength. Health is one and another is unimpaired mental faculties. Knowledge and experience, money and friends, a cheerful disposition, a firm faith in God, such things as these contribute to a man's strength.

And if you possess any one of them you are in duty bound to put it up against corresponding weakness in someone else. And who are the weak? Without attaching an unpleasant label to my brother or my neighbor I would say in general that these are some of the most obvious weak points in the lives of men in the mass, streaks of coarseness and vanity, a hasty temper, an uncontrollable tongue, a sour and fault-finding disposition, a tendency toward pessimism, an overmastering appetite. Now when we run up against such traits as these in our own home, our club, our church, our social circle, shall we draw the cloak of Phariseeism about us and inwardly felicitate ourselves that we are not like other men? Shall we assume an indifferent attitude as the little girl tried to do who came home and told her mother that she had seen down town a poor, lame man sitting beside the way and holding out his hat for pennies, "He looked very hungry, mamma, and very ragged, but it wasn't any of my business was it mamma?"

Whenever and however strength can buttress weakness it is its business so to do. We can at least try to shield weakness from the gaze of others instead of jeering at or advertising it. We can try tactfully to supply strength at the weak point. Delicate business, it is trying to help others and some of the weakest people resent help when offered. In such cases we can do things. We can set them a good example and we can do what Jesus did for Peter, "Simon, Simon. Satan is after you but I have prayed for you."

How rich and happy life in any community will be when all its strength is brought to bear upon its varied weaknesses and the strong, the well to do, the educated, the self-controlled, the virtuous and the godly think first not of how they may enjoy their own possessions, but of how they may use them for others. Would not you like to try to make your town that kind of a place?

THE PARSON.

Get Together.

Sioux City Tribune: There are party organizations, but there are no parties. "Republican" and "Democrat" have ceased to mean anything. "Some great cause, God's new Messiah," has come to "part the goats on the left hand and the sheep upon the right." New names designate the division of men. By them men begin to reknow themselves. A man is now either a "progressive" or a "standpatter." He cannot help himself. He is resistlessly compelled to be one or the other. And he will be one or the other as his temperament and interests color his judgment.

In the ranks of eitehr division are men who still wear their old badges, progressive Republicans mingle with and fraternize with progressive Democrats. Across the line standpatters exhibiting the badge "Democrat" commune on friendly terms with other standpatters whose badge reads "Republican." In the field we have candidates for office who wear these badges but who are asking votes because they are either progressives or standpatters. Here and there are candidates standing for the same policy but clinging frantically to their badges and insisting that the badge and not principle, is the chief thing, an absurd waste of energy.

What is the clear course for every man? Wickersham, in that petulant talk in which he scolded the Republican progressives, stated concisely the great law of partisan organization:

"Men who think alike should get together."

It is the law of politics just as the law of cohesion is a law of nature. "Like attracts like" and repels unlike. It is foolish for men who think alike to remain apart simply because, heretofore, they had been separated by unlike thinking.

"The old order changeth." Questions that divided men, causing some to be Democrats and some Republicans, have paled in the light of the new questions now up for answer. By sticking to the old order the desired new movement may be defeated; by getting together it can be carried.

The Stomach Hold.

Washington Star: Col. H. N. Renouf, at the "Old Guard" banquet at Delmonico's emphasized the importance to an army of a good commissariat.

"You have perhaps heard," he said, "of the company of privates that a patriotic lady entertained one Memorial day at dinner.

"It was a good dinner, and at its end a pretty maid servant entered with a superb dessert.

"'Dessert, sergeant?' she said to the stalwart young soldier at the head of the table.

"'Desert,' the sergeant answered, 'When I can get eats like this for nothin'? Nixie! Not me!'"

COMMENT AND REMINISCENCE

By SAVOYARD.

I believe Charles Dickens intimated that his immortal miscreant, Beth Pecksniff, actually believed that he was a thoroughly good man, one of God's elect, the salt of the earth, and we can easily believe it when we find in real life such an editorial in a leading newspaper as that which appeared recently in the Philadelphia Telegraph, entitled, "Is the South Going Back?" The question might become pertinent, propounded by somebody outside of the state of "Addition, Division and Silence." This Philadelphia pharisee parvenue is much disgusted with Southern representation in the United States senate, and is led to presume that the late Samuel D. McEnery had a monopoly of the statesmanship south of Mason and Dixon line. All the rest are nobodies not to be mentioned in connection with the leadership of the old South. The Telegraph even pays a high compliment to Jefferson Davis, the president of the Confederate States of America, in order to get a fling at John Sharpe Williams, a far better and a far abler man than Pennsylvania has had in public life since the retirement of Jeremiah S. Black, half a century ago.

Pennsylvania has been a mendicant supported by the South for a full century. She imports duty-free the pauper labor of Europe to reduce the wages of her working men, and puts prohibitive tariff duties on importations of foreign merchandise, in order to sell at extortionate prices her own products, the property of her millionaires. Pennsylvania is rich, legally so; but it would be just as honorable, though not as legal, to get rich robbing a bank, or forging a check, or picking a pocket. It were equally as decent to save money by welching a bet as to grow rich by a protective tariff.

And speaking about statesmen, the late Matt Quay, was the ablest and most brilliant political boss even Pennsylvania ever had. His forte was the "shaking of the plum tree," as he called it, when he ordered his henchman, the treasurer of the state, to lend public funds to others of his henchmen, to employ in gambling transactions in Wall street. Not a great while ago Pennsylvania builded a new state capitol. The edifice cost millions, and investigation developed the fact that at least 70 per cent of the cost was pure graft that went into the coffers of the immaculate G. O. P. It would have been just as respectable to raise the denomination of a bank note, in order to swindle, as to kite the bills of the contractors, who paid the blackmail to the cormorant political bosses, who fed on the treasury; but Pennsylvania is rich—in ill-got gains—and can stand the graft.

Except that miserable period 1865-75, the era of reconstruction, when vultures from Pennsylvania went South to prey on a prostrate people, there was more graft discovered in the investigation of the state capitol frauds in Pennsylvania than all the former slave states could show for the 121 years of the existence of he republic.

There has been no popular government in Pennsylvania since the state cast her vote for James Buchanan for president of the United States in 1856. As for elections, all the boss was necessitated to do was to make requisitions on the sub-bosses of Philadelphia and Pittsburg for such majorities as were required to carry the state. Quay was as much boss of the alleged Democratic party of Pennsylvania as he was of the Republican party of the commonwealth. He was too shrewd, however, to take the whole Democratic layout into camp; but when decent Republicans insurged against his corruptions, he always commanded just enough support from his Democratic henchmen to save his bacon.

Pittsburg is as full of millionaires as Tophet is of fiddlers, all tariff-made plutocrats—steel, glass, coal, and whatnot, the property of capital protected by law and the cost of living thus enhanced to the teeming millions of the vulgar herd. Andy Carnegie made half a billion—that is, $500,000,000—out of the tariff. He was a tax collector, but none that came to him ever saw the treasury; and he is only one of a thousand tariff-bloated plutocrats. And this is the Pennsylvania that sneers at the South! O shame, where is thy blush!

It will readily be recalled that about a year ago the Hon. Herbert Parsons, a Republican member of congress and magnate of the G. O. P. in New York, in order to make Tammany odious and defeat Gaynor for mayor, felt called on to denounce what he called a dicker whereby Tammany saved "Uncle Joe" Cannon's scalp at the extra session of congress the previous March, when the Democrats and the insurgents had the veteran going. It was the sensation of the hour, and the newspapers were full of it for at least two weeks.

It was no new thing for the G. O. P. to plow with the Tammany heifer, but Uncle Joe was very wroth, and set up an Ananias club and made the Hon. Parsons chief of it. And Uncle Joe denounced the statement as all sorts of a lie, swore a great oath, and raising that left hand aloft, damned himself if he did not intend to demand a committee to investigate the thing when congress came together again in December.

Then the Hon. Parsons damned himself if he did not intend to have a committee of congress to make scrutiny of the charge and grant him honorable demit from the Ananias club into which Uncle Joe had pitchforked him and of which Uncle Joe had made him president. A day or so later, the Hon. John Joseph Fitzgerald, the Tammany congressman whom the Hon. Parsons charged with having negotiated the deal, damned himself if he, too, did not intend to have an investigation of the charge, or know the reason why.

Well, congress met before the winter solstice, remained in session until after the succeeding summer solstice, and everybody, Cannon, Parsons, Fitzgerald, et al., was as mute as a fish about the "dicker." Gaynor had been elected, and the public memory is short.

And Gaynor was elected. He is made in the mold in which Grover Cleveland was cast. He is a strong man like Jackson and he can hate like Dana. A lawyer, he will have no master but the law, and he would defend the law even to the sacrifice of his life. He will do nothing that the law does not authorize, and he will do everything that the law enjoins. He is the greatest mayor New York has ever had, and the greatest man to fill that station since DeWitt Clinton resigned his seat in the United States senate to be mayor of the then village of New York compared with the mighty metropolis of Gaynor's time.

What a splendid president he would make, but it is now an open secret that Judson Harmon has the White House pre-empted for the term beginning March 4, 1913. He will sweep Ohio in November, and he will sweep the Democratic convention in midsummer 1912, and the following November he will sweep the country.

Harmon, too, is a strong man, one of the mold of Grover Cleveland. At last the Democratic party is again Democratic, and when it is in that condition it is invincible, irresistible.

P. S. This was written before Gaynor was shot.

DUST AS A CAUSE OF DISEASE

Prevention of Street Dust by Using Oil—Pneumatic Cleaning of Buildings as a Health Precaution—Ventilation in Factories to Safeguard Workers From Dust.

By FREDERICK L. HOFFMAN.
Statistican of the Prudential Life Insurance Company.

(Exclusive Service The Survey Press Bureau.)

The dust problem underlies all deliberate efforts to improve the conditions which, more or less, determine human health. Other things equal, the length of life will be in almost exact proportion to the degree and kind of dust exposure. Those who live in a dust-laden atmosphere are especally liable to diseases of the respiratory system.

Outdoor dust, as met with on streets and in travel, is, in a measure more of a public nuisance than a direct menace to health. The dust of streets and roads is, however, the cause of a vast amount of sickness. Automobiles have increased enormously the difficulties of dealing effectively with this nuisance. Street dust is but street destruction and disintegration. The use of water and salt solution, of tar and oil binders, of asphalt emulsions, and similar preparations, are more or less effective efforts to control the dust menace and to preserve the roads. The watering of public streets and highways is entirely insufficient.

Crude methods of sidewalk cleaning are practically universal and even where ordinances exist that require such cleaning to be done early in the morning, they are seldom enforced. It is only on rare occasions that previous sprinkling prevails. Dust, in cases of this kind, may carry infection directly by means of dried tuberculosis sputum.

Vast quantities of health-injurious dust are also produced during building operations. The workmen themselves are most seriously affected. Still more aggravating is the nuisance in the case of building demolition because of the non-use of spraying, sprinkling, or dust laying material, which a rational municipal administration should insist upon. The London county council has decreed that such work shall be restricted to the hours between 6 o'clock in the evening and 10 in the morning. The walls are thoroughly watered during the process.

More serious than outdoor dust is that met with in houses and in public places. The methods of cleaning in these places are rarely more than crude methods of dust disturbance. The ordinary crude ways of sweeping should be absolutely done away with in public and semi-public buildings and pneumatic methods of dust removal insisted upon. Public conveyances, Pullman cars, plush cushioned street cars, particularly require to be cleaned and disinfected with great care. It is a most serious reflection upon the present state of public intelligence that practically no objection should be raised against the brushing of coats, hats, etc., after a dust stained travel in Pullman, sleeping or parlor cars.

The problem of reducing the dust nuisance to a minimum in public school buildings is peculiarly difficult. The most intelligent means of cleaning should be insisted upon in place of the present crude methods. The close coincidence of school attendance with epidemics is very largely the result of dust exposure.

Domestic dust is a more serious menace to health than is generally assumed. Pneumatic processes of cleaning should, as far as practicable, replace crude methods of sweeping and dust disturbance. Needless carpets, rugs, hangings, etc., should be done away with. It is not at all going too far to absolutely prohibit the sale and use of feather dusters, as perhaps one of the most seriously detrimental agencies to health in the home. The use of proper dust binding floor covering material reduces the dust to a minimum. In matters of this kind the useful should precede the ornamental.

Dust prevention and removal in public places, or the home, must necessarily be inter-dependent with methods of effective ventilation. In all dusty trades the chief air is to remove the dust at the point of origin and before there has been any chance for atmospheric contamination. By local ventilation, as it is called the dust is carried out by means of exhaust fans. Of course, where the object of the manufacturig processes is the production of dust itself, as in the case of flour and cement, methods of preventing dusty substances from mixing with the general atmosphere are governed by commercial desire to eliminate the element of waste. As pointed out in the report of the departmental committee on ventilation. "The application of such effective devices can best be observed in modern flour mills using the patent roller process, in fur blowing rooms of felt hat factories, and numerous similar establishments. In cases of this kind the commercial object of avoiding waste, or loss of valuable substances, coincides happily with the humanitarian desire to reduce health—injurious conditions in industry to a minimum."

There will always remain some occupations where dust avoidance will be practically impossible. The use of efficient respirators is to be insisted upon. One very simple precaution, however, is to breath through the nose, and during work at dusty processes there should be as little conversation as possible. The nose is peculiarly adapted by nature to interpose effective obstacles against the admission of particles injurious to the air passages and lungs. The nose should, therefore, be kept in a thoroughly healthy condition and its cleansing morning and night insisted upon, as equivalent in impartance to the brushing of the teeth.

In its large aspect, all matters of this kind involve the question of community responsibility. What is required today is effective public sanitary supervision and control of schools, factories, public conveyances, public works, highways and public buildings. Throughout the nation there is now a vivid realization of the economic value of human life and health. In no field is the outlook for successful work more hopeful than in that of dust prevention as the first successful step towards the elimination of an agency decidedly harmful to human health and life. The control of the dust nuisance on public highways must needs have its effect on real estate values, which are now, in many localities, depressed because of the diminished attraction of country life. Enormous sums which are now wasted on account of sickness will become available for other purposes. Those who now die in the midst of a useful career, will survive to old age. Thus the dust problem, all comprehensive and all inclusive, constitutes one of the greatest sanitary problems of the present day.

IN THE LITERARY WORLD

THE SOVEREIGNTY OF THE STATES. By Walter Neale. New York: Neale Publishing company. $1 net.

This oration was delivered before a gathering of Confederate veterans this summer, and it proves that Mr. Neale is one of those anachronistic though well-intentioned individuals who think of the United States in the plural, as a collection of nations and not as one great nation. That issue is all but settled and dead. The doctrine of state's rights, so far as it is strained beyond a reasonable construction of the home rule idea, is merely a stumbling block in the path of progress and an anchor to windward for the beneficiaries of economic evils that are national and must be treated by a national power if they are to be solved.

Nevertheless, Mr. Neale argues his bad case earnestly, lucidly and ably, and his address is therefore good to read.

When he pictures Mr. Taft as a despot seeking to impose the income tax on his subjects, he strains plausibility to the breaking point. The president hasn't been so fearfully keen about the income tax, and so just is that tax that a fossilized doctrine of state's rights, a doctrine that logically pursued would shackle the nation, should not be allowed to interfere with it.

When Mr. Neale calls the Constitution a treaty, and calls upon Virginians to take up arms rather than submit to an amendment providing for an income tax, he becomes absurd, and it is to be hoped that his absurdity brought forth from his audience the amused smiles it calls for. Mr. Neale goes into history to prove that the states were nations and that the Constitution was merely a "treaty," and he makes rather heavy going of it, as he would be expected to do with a theory so far-fetched. His address is valuable chiefly as a result of a reductio ad absurdum of the state's rights doctrine.

GUIDA DEGLI STATI UNIS PER L'IMMIGRANTE ITALIANO. By John Foster Carr. Published under the auspices of the Connecticut society of Daughters of the American Revolution by Doubleday, Page & Co.

The Connecticut Daughters of the American Revolution are doing a splendid public service in putting forth this valuable volume. It is a very elementary explanation of the conditions that confront the Italian in the new world, with explicit directions for conduct from the moment of arriving at Ellis island. The immigration laws are clearly explained, and the immigrants are warned against the perils that beset the friendless and ignorant in a strange land. They should at once ask the aid of the society for Italian immigrants, two of whose agents, with badges, are always on duty. How to travel is clearly explained. The immigrant is advised to learn English as soon as possible, because without it there can be no promotion from the humblest ranks and because hundreds of people are killed every year because of their inability to read signs of warning. The immigrants are warned against sharpers, and taught some of their ways.

In short, this book should be invaluable to the newly arrived immigrant. Its publication is a creditable thing to its author and to the society which puts it forth. There should be more of such books, in all the principal languages spoken by the immigrants that swarm to America.

THE BOY SCOUTS OF AMERICA. A handbook of woodcraft, scouting, etc. By Ernest Thompson Seton. With Gen. Sir Robert Baden-Powell's "Scouting for Boys." New York: Published for the Boy Scouts of America by Doubleday, Page & Co. 25 cents.

The Boy Scouts are an importation, but the idea seems to have found hospitable soil. While carping critics may condemn it for possible inculcation of militarism, the elements of outdoor activity, wholesome training of hand and eye and brain, and valuable physical development, far outweigh the element of war, which serves chiefly to give it piquant coherency. The official handbook will prove entertaining and instructive not only to "boy scouts" but to all real boys. It tells how to organize the Boy Scouts, with full details as to uniforms, crests, totems, medals, tests, etc. It gives a large variety of codes, from Morse to the Indian sign language. It tells about camping, and how to play many games. The Boy Scouts is a good organization for boys to form and belong to, and the handbook will delight any boy.

THE HOUSE ON STILTS. By R. H. Hazard. New York: G. W. Dillingham company. $1.50.

A reporter and a detective, pursuing a criminal who carries a million in securities from a looted bank, are cast away on the island of Gabrielle, where they are received by an American consul with a beautiful daughter. They hear of the Yellow Queen, a Vooodo princess who commands the storms and the volcano, and of the Dumb Monks, a monastery full of mysterious sun-worshipers. Presently, they come into conflict with these mystic and terrible beings, and the result is a torrential succession of thrills a la Rider Haggard. The book will interest those who like plenty of excitement in their romances, and who are not too exacting as to quality.

JOHN MARSH'S MILLIONS. By Charles Klein and Arthur Hornblow, authors of "The Lion and the Mouse," "The Third Degree," etc. New York: G. W. Dillingham company. $1.50.

John Marsh, after letting his brother live in dissipated expectancy of inheriting his fortune through twenty-five years, dies and leaves it to the daughter of a secret marriage. The girl comes to claim her inheritance, but the machinations of her uncle and his corrupt lawyer not only keep her out of it, but get her into an insane asylum through the connivance of a charlatan doctor. The story exposes the delays of the law, the ease of getting lunacy commitments in New York, and the corrupting influence of a life lived in the expectancy of an inheritance. Aside from these things, it is rather flashily melodramatic, and it will interest largely those who demand thrills first, second and last without much regard to literary qualities.

WHEN FOLKS WAS FOLKS. By Elizabeth L. Blunt. New York: Cochrane Publishing company. $1.

A kindly old woman, looking back into her youth, has made in this little volume a collection of sketches of life in Central New York about the middle of the last century, when she was a little girl. The daily life in a thrifty village, the training of the children, the work, talk and pleasures of their elders, the dress and house furnishings, the manners and customs, the gossip and social and intellectual interests, all enter into the descriptions and stories of the life of the time. It is written with simplicity and literalness, but out of a loving memory, and the picture it gives is well worth preserving.

THERAPEUTIC ACTION OF LIGHT. By Corydon Eugene Rogers, M. D. Chicago: Published by the author. $3.50.

Dr. Rogers evidently has given his subject deep study and painstaking experiment. In this book he presents in a concise and lucid way the results of the employment of a new light ray in therapeutics. He describes various lights and their therapeutic effect—or lack of effect—and then develops his discoveries in the use of what, for lack of a better name, he calls the "Rho rays." After experimenting with light for many years he produced a structure which, "by the angularity of rays of light emanating from high candle-power incandescent lamps, were changed to produce and project within a predetermined area non-parallel beams, crossing each other in sufficient numbers to form one or more very brilliant spots." By pictures he shows that the penetrating power of these rays is greatly in excess of the X-ray. He claims for the Rho rays that they are highly valuable in the destruction of germs, the reduction of inflammation and the relief of pain, and he gives most of his space up to relating successful experiments in the cure of a large variety of serious diseases.

Of Books and Writers.

It is interesting to learn that the kidnapping of Gray Stoddard in "The Power and the Glory," Grace MacGowan Cooke's virile story which Doubleday, Page & Co. have just published, owes its origin to a true occurrence. The story parallels the facts in the tragic disappearance of a wealthy young fellow whose people had invested in an enterprise that drew its laboring class from the mountain region about Bristol, on the state line between Tennessee and Virginia. These people built a hospital for the benefit of their employes. Word went out in the mountains among those medieval-minded dwellers, that it was a money-making scheme under the guise of beneficence, which shipped dead bodies north for the student doctors to cut up. The feud spirit arose. The young man, a charming and beloved figure, the only son of great wealth and wide culture, rode out of the village one morning—bare-headed, in riding dress—and was never seen again. Those who followed the agonizing search as it was reported in the local papers will not easily forget the fluctuations of hope, fear, and horror through which it ran. John Fox, the novelist, was an intimate friend of the family and of the missing young man, and he went down to the home of his parents at Big Stone Gap to join in the search.

Frederick Townsend Martin has just finished and delivered to his publishers, Doubleday, Page & Co., the manuscript of his book "The Reminiscences of My Life." Mr. Martin's recollections cover a most interesting period of American society. The book closes with a description of the fancy ball given by his brother, Bradley Martin, in 1898. Before it is published in book form, it will appear serially.

American readers will have their first opportunity this autumn of becoming acquainted with a detective who is rivaling in interest Sherlock Holmes abroad, for Paul Beck is a clever elucidator of mystery who does not, like Conan Doyle's famous detective, proceed upon inductive reasoning but arrives at his surprising conclusions by following tangible clews. The creator of "Paul Beck" is McDonnell Bodkin, an Irish judge, who has had an eventful political, literary and legal career. With the publication of "The Quests of Paul Beck" by Little, Brown & Co., Sept. 10, Judge Bodkin's invincible detective promises to become as well known in America as he is in Great Britain.

Although the first edition of E. It was this Oppenheim story that Dr. Richard Burton, professor of English of the University of Minnesota, pronounced "a mystery novel that few current writers are likely to surpass in the essentials of plot, situations and suspensive interest."

OUR YOUNG FOLKS PAGE

The Magic Tree - A Fairy Story.

BY MAUD WALKER.

ON an island in a far-off sea there lived a family by the name of Pandons. There were Jacob Pandons, head of the household; Maria Pandons, his wife, and Susan Pandons, their daughter. And one more of the blood was a member of the Pandons' household, though he was classed with the servants and was kept as a mere slave. He was Richard Pandons, orphan nephew to Jacob Pandons.

After Richard Pandons (aged 12 years) came to live with his uncle he soon discovered that his lot henceforth was to be that of a menial. But he could not run away from his cruel uncle and more cruel aunt on account of his poverty. Not one farthing did the child possess, and as he was a stranger in a strange land—having come from a country far to the north of the island-home of his uncle—he felt helpless in his new position as boy-of-all work in his uncle's family. His uncle was a very rich man, having swindled the people round about him out of all their land, till now—at the time of this story—he owned the half of the island. And all his land lay along a deep, fertile valley, surrounded by highlands far less tillable than his own rich acres. And to the uplands he had driven the neighboring farmers till now not one remained in the fertile valley of which he had robbed them. About his vast estates he kept many helpless slaves, and it was their work to keep out the farmers, who, realizing from time to time that they had been dishonestly dispossessed of their lands, tried to reinstate themselves in the valley. But Jacob Pandons' slaves were well trained in the use of weapons, and at their master's bidding slayed the dispossessed farmers whenever a fresh band of them tried to regain their former rightful holdings.

And as poor orphan Richard worked about the castle or in the fields of his uncle he became acquainted with the latter's rascality. And each day his heart grew heavier and heavier, more in sympathy for the poor people whom his uncle had robbed than in pity for himself, though his own lot was very, very hard to bear.

In one part of the valley lay a great placid lake, surrounded by splendid trees and grape vines. It was Richard's duty to go to the lake-side to gather fresh grapes from the heavily-laden vines, thus to supply his uncle's table with grapes. But one day when he went to gather a basket of the luscious fruit he found several half-grown boys there in advance of himself. And they were filling huge baskets and carts with the fruit. When they beheld Richard they bowed in a friendly way and one of them spoke: "We are the sons of the farmers on the uplands, and we have crept here unseen by Jacob Pandons' guards and are gathering the fruit, which, by right, belongs to us. We take it that you are a young slave, newly come to this place, for we have never seen your face before, and we keep a close watch-out for newcomers. It is our hope to regain possession of our lands sometime in the future, and it behooves us to know all with whom we shall have to deal—or perhaps to fight."

Richard confessed his relationship to Jacob Pandons, but explained that he was not treated like one of the family, but as a slave. That he toiled all day for his uncle, aunt, and vain, heartless cousin, receiving in return only harsh words, blows, and a straw bed in an old unused part of the castle and the scraps from his uncle's table as his food.

"Ah, then you are one of us, and will not tell your uncle of our being here in the vineyard, will you?" asked one of the youths.

"I know that these grapes belong to you—as well as the land on which they grow," said Richard. "And though my uncle beats me, I shall not tell him of your having gathered the fruit. Come, I shall assist you in filling your baskets. And then I shall gather what is left for my cruel aunt." So saying, he fell to gathering only the very best fruit for the young fellows who seemed such a fine, honorable lot, for Richard knew by looking into their honest blue eyes, at their labor-developed bodies, at their coarse but clean work-clothes, that they were just what they represented themselves to be.

After the young farmer lads had filled their baskets and hand-carts with great bunches of juice-filled grapes they thanked Richard in friendly tones and departed, going off through the heavy timber to a spot where they could creep from the valley into the uplands without being seen by any of the slave guards stationed along the border of old Jacob Pandons' estates.

Then, as Richard was very tired from having worked hard all day, he decided to rest beneath a great tree for a few minutes before gathering the grapes for his aunt's dinner table. So he stretched himself on the soft earth in the shade of a friendly tree and dropped asleep. He had not lain there long, however, when a strange voice awoke him, saying: "Richard, arise and harken to me. I have important things to say to you."

Richard quickly arose to a sitting posture and looked about him. Where did the voice come from? He saw no one in sight, not even one of the slave guards whose duty it was to pass up and down that part of the valley at stated intervals.

"It is I—the tree under which you recline—that speaks," said the voice. "To prove the truth of my assertion I shall shake my limbs and drop my leaves when you count three. Begin."

Richard counted, "One, two, three." And suddenly the tree's limbs shook violently as from a heavy wind, though not a breeze was stirring. And down rained hundreds of fresh, green leaves, strewing the ground on which Richard lay. "Now, my son, you believe me, don't you?" asked the voice. Richard, dumfounded, replied: "Yes, I believe you are the tree that speaks."

"Then listen to my message and take the warning I give you. I am an enchanted tree, allowed to use my power only once in a hundred years. If I see no reason to become animated, I remain silent and wait till another century rolls round. Now, I must exert my power, for I have witnessed the dishonesty of your uncle, seen his ill-treatment of his fellow-beings; also noticed the cruelty and arrogance of your cousin, the ill-tempered Susan, and of your aunt Maria Pandons. It is my intention to replace this beautiful valley in the hands of those who rightfully own it, awarding a nice part of it to you for your kindness to the farmers' sons a while ago. And they will most gladly share the rich valley with you—giving you 50 acres of the land on which your uncle's castle stands. The buildings shall belong to you."

"Oh, and I shall set the castle aside as a home for the orphans of the poor men Uncle Jacob has slain," cried Richard. "I shall be content with a little cabin in the garden, where I shall have such pleasure in growing things for the good people to eat as well as for myself. But—" and Richard looked uncertain—"what is to become of my uncle and his family? He will never relinquish the land to its rightful owners."

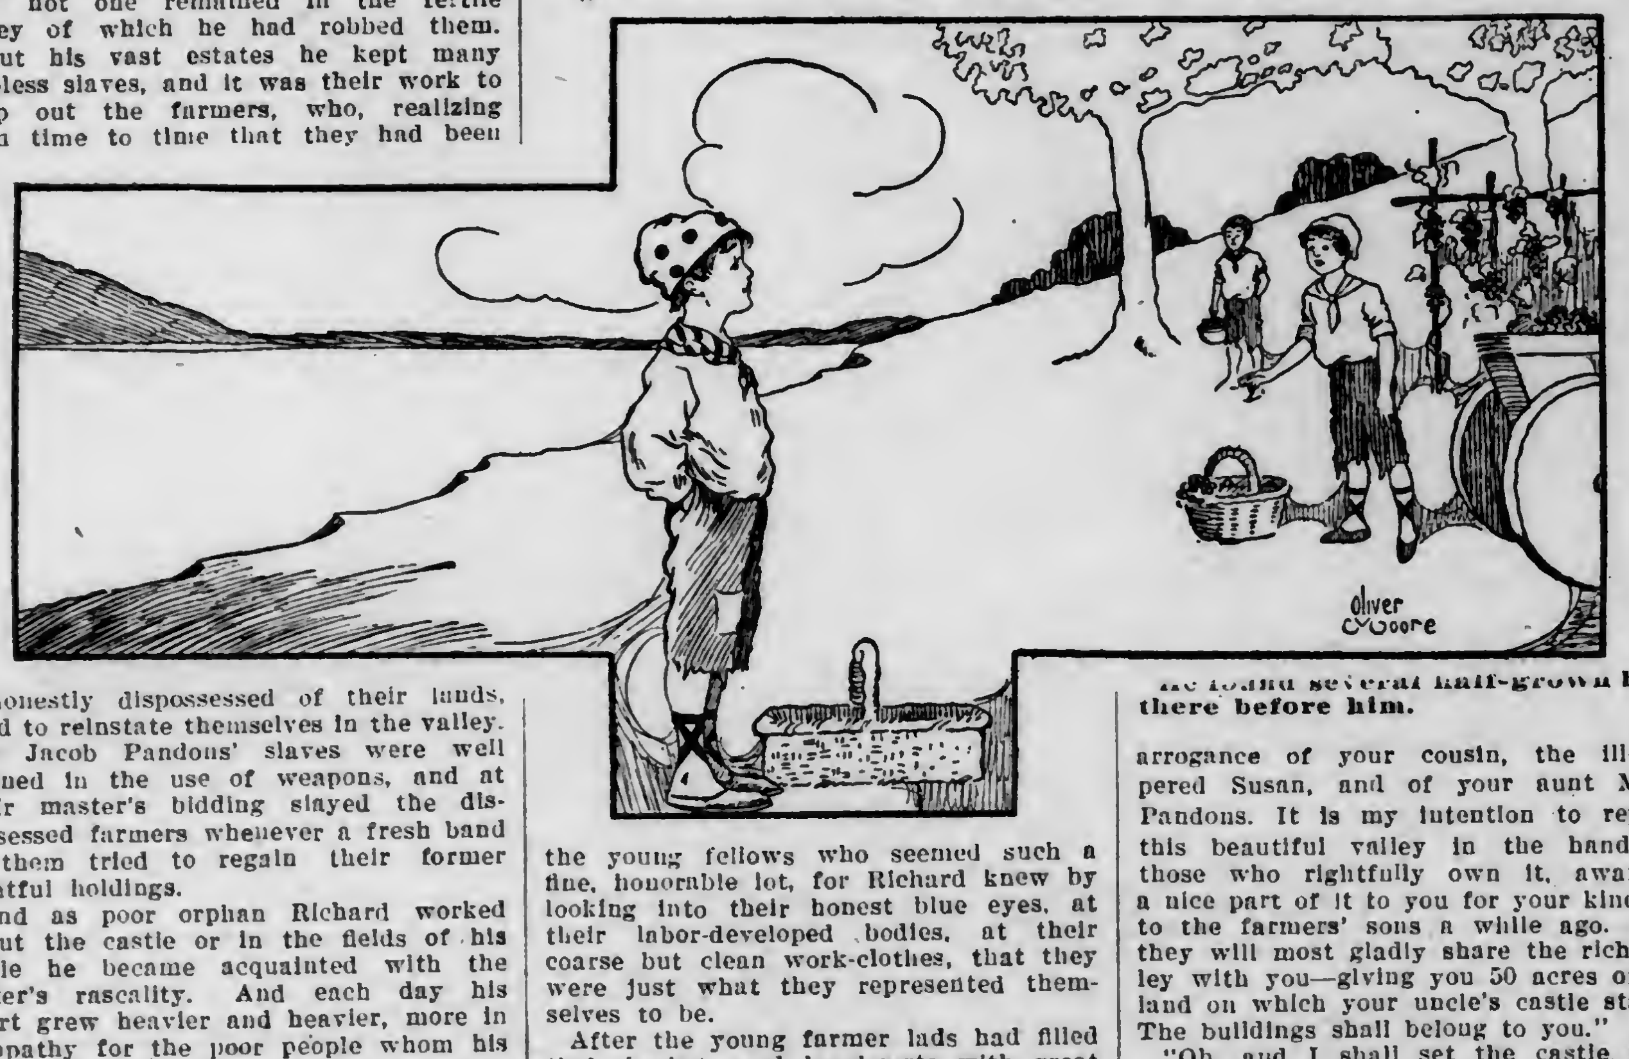
"You are to carry the message to the slaves composing your uncle's guardsmen. Tell them to take to the uplands and remain there among the driven-out farmers. And you—you are to return and climb into my topmost branches, and then all will take place. And—do not be afraid of what you see transpiring. All will end well."

Richard, possessed of a certain courage strange to him since becoming his uncle's slave, hurried about the valley, for he really seemed possessed of wings on his feet, so swiftly and easily did he run over the earth. And to each slave guardsman he gave the warning, and strange to say, each slave did his bidding and set off at a rapid run for the uplands which surrounded the valley.

It took Richard only a short time to carry the warning to each slave, then he returned to the tree that once again spoke: "Go to your uncle's castle—the family are now taking their afternoon nap—and warn the house servants and field servants as you have warned the slave guards. Tell them to lose no time in reaching the uplands, for vengeance in the form of Death, is to visit the Wicked living in the stolen valley."

Pretty soon Richard had the satisfaction of seeing the house servants and field servants running towards a mountain three or four miles to the south, and then he hurried back to the tree beside the lake. His face was all aglow, his eyes luminous, and there had been something so strange and earnest in his voice and manner that every slave or servant had heeded his word. "He's possessed of the Magic Power," they had whispered to each other. And then had taken flight according to his bidding.

"Climb into my topmost branches," said the tree, and up went Richard with the agility of a squirrel, for somehow all weariness had fallen from him. Then he saw the lake suddenly rise and overflow the entire valley, covering completely the castle and castle outbuildings. And then Richard felt drowsy and fell asleep. When he awoke the lake had resumed its former proportions and depth and the valley lay as before, sweet and peaceful in the sunshine. Richard climbed down and ran to the castle. Outside the gate lay the drowned bodies of his uncle, aunt and cousin, and all wore wicked expressions on their haughty, cruel faces. And inside the castle was unhurt from the waters and everything as usual. The servants came back and the slaves returned to see what was to be done. And the good farmers also came to the valley and apportioned the land as it should be, and made the slaves free and gave them work to do and paid them well. And Richard had the castle and grounds, and made good use of both, giving a home and employment to the orphans whom his uncle had robbed.



He found several half-grown boys there before him.

Mrs. Tattle-Tale Squirrel.

BY HELENA DAVIS.

IF there was one thing that the squirrels of The Wood liked better than another, it was "attending to one's own business," as they put it. And that was why Mrs. Mink Squirrel became known as Mrs. Tattle-Tale Squirrel, and was so much disliked by all her neighbors in The Wood. Now, Mrs. Mink Squirrel—or rather, Mrs. "Tattle-Tale" Squirrel, as she shall be called during the remainder of this story—was not really a bad sort, for in certain things she was a very good little lady squirrel; but her besetting sin was to meddle with the business of her neighbors. And that, you know, is a grievous fault, if not to say worse.

Well, one day Mrs. Tattle-Tale got herself into a very unpleasant mix-up. It happened in this way: As she was starting down to the pond with her two dear little children, Patty and Tatty, twin son and daughter, her keen ears (always on the alert to hear that which was not intended for them) overheard Mrs. Adam Squirrel saying to Mrs. Peep-boo Squirrel: "I hear that the widower, Mr. Max Dandy Squirrel, is to marry little Miss Mousie Brown Squirrel. And my informant says it is not a love match—on little Miss Mousie Brown Squirrel's part."

Now, when Mrs. Tattle-Tale Squirrel heard that, she said to her children: "Run along and take your dip in the pond alone. Mother must attend to some business right away." And off she ran, first to one house and then to another, repeating the thing she had overheard Mrs. Adam Squirrel saying to her sister, Mrs. Peep-boo Squirrel. And she—like all gossips—was not satisfied with repeating just what she heard, but added some of her own ideas to the tale, which, after the third repetition, went something like this: "Did you know that that old widower, Max Dandy Squirrel, is to marry against her will—Miss Mousie Brown Squirrel? And they say the match was made by Miss Mousie's grasping mother, who is desirous of moving from the tree she now lives in to a larger and more pretentious one, and has not the money to do so unless Mousie weds wealth. Isn't that disgraceful?" And the story grew and grew even more and more as Mrs. Tattle-Tale Squirrel went the rounds of her neighbors.

And by nightfall the story reached the ears of Mr. Max Dandy Squirrel, a very amiable gentleman, who was very much in love with his little fiancee, Mousie Brown Squirrel. And when he was told what the town was saying, he was so hurt that he decided to break off the engagement and leave The Wood, seeking contentment in some other Forest. He—foolish squirrel—did not think to inquire who the tale-bearer was, but took it for granted that Miss Mousie had told some one that she was bringing no love to her husband on her wedding day. So, writing a heart-broken note on a huge forest leaf, poor Mr. Max Dandy packed up his belongings and left The Wood. He traveled all night and on the following morning found a snug place to rest on the banks of a strange stream. There he decided to remain till he might recover from his grief over the loss of his lovely bride-to-be.

And when little Miss Mousie Brown Squirrel received the farewell note from her fiance she ran to her mother in grief; "Mamma, what can this mean?" she cried, tears streaming from her eyes. "Dearest Max has broken our engagement. He says 'he thinks it means my happiness to have my freedom.' Now, what can it mean?" And the poor little Mousie threw herself into her mother's arms, weeping over the note she could not understand. For a certainty, Mousie Brown Squirrel was deeply devoted to Mr. Max Dandy Squirrel, and was happy in the anticipation of their future life together in the dear home in a tree neighboring her mother's tree. And she had planned so many sweet little parties to be given in honor of her kind-hearted fiance, one of which was to have taken place within the week that he broke their engagement so unexpectedly.

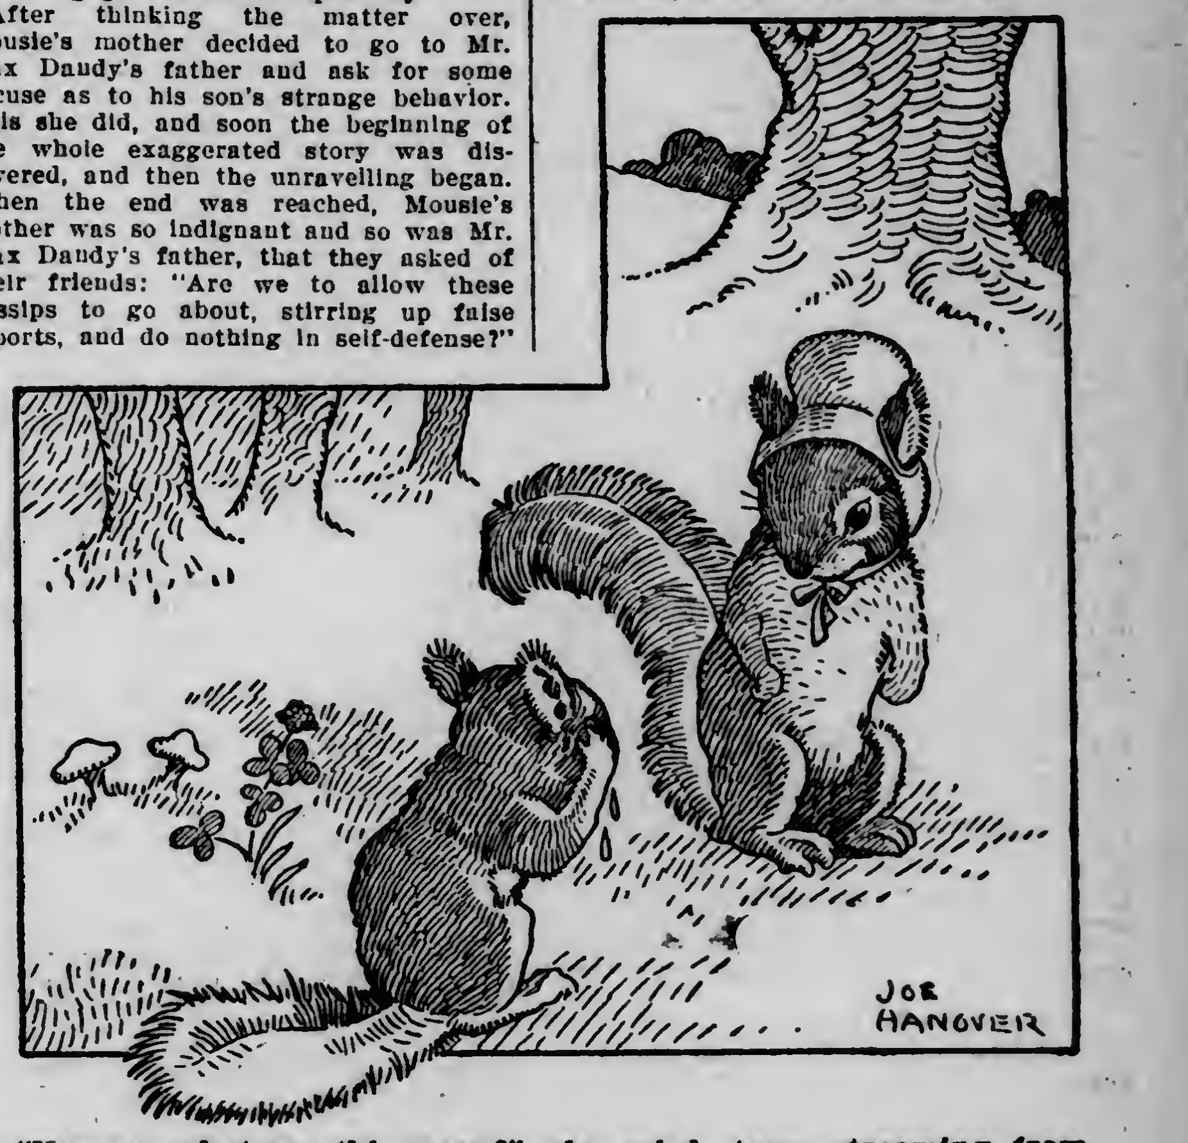
After thinking the matter over, Mousie's mother decided to go to Mr. Max Dandy's father and ask for some excuse as to his son's strange behavior. This she did, and soon the beginning of the whole exaggerated story was discovered, and then the unravelling began. When the end was reached, Mousie's mother was so indignant and so was Mr. Max Dandy's father, that they asked of their friends: "Are we to allow these gossips to go about, stirring up false reports, and do nothing in self-defense?"

And the friends said: "No, we must rid The Wood of obnoxious people. Let the bad go somewhere and live together, and the good squirrels will be very happy without them."

So a committee of the best squirrels of The Wood visited Mrs. Tattle-Tale Squirrel, and begged her to either pledge herself to telling no more lies, and repeating no more gossip, or to take herself off to some other place. Then the sisters, Mrs. Adam Squirrel and Mrs. Peep-boo Squirrel were also waited upon with the same request. To be sure, they were not such disagreeable or dangerous gossips as was Mrs. Tattle-Tale, but they were the means of starting the latter with many of her mischief-making stories, and should be made to become honest citizens of The Wood or told to move to a more congenial clime. So Mrs. Tattle-Tale Squirrel shamefacedly confessed to having exaggerated the gossip she had overheard, and promised that she would behave better in future if allowed to remain a citizen of The Wood. And the sisters, Mrs. Adam and Mrs. Peep-boo did the same. So they were allowed to remain, with the understanding that should they be found guilty of such misconduct again they would be in deep disgrace and obliged to take themselves off.

Then several of Miss Mousie's best friends went in search of her poor unhappy fiance with the result that he was found that very same day and brought back a very happy squirrel, and the engagement with Miss Mousie was renewed, and the wedding was set for the following Sunday.

And once again all the squirrels in The Wood were happy, for the gossips had been stilled and sweet peace reigned, and, as Mrs. Brown Squirrel said, "all attend to their own business, allowing their neighbors the same privilege."



"Mamma, what can this mean?" she cried, tears streaming from her eyes.

The Fate of Dissatisfied Lily.

STORY OF A FLOWER FOR THE WEE ONES. BY ANNIE JAMES.

THERE were many, many lovely blossoms growing at the edge of the forest, right in the depths of a green meadow, where the sun shone brightly and the rain fell refreshingly, and where the nightly dews came to the blossoms as sweetest nectar.

And all the flowers in the meadow were happy, save one little lily. And she was dissatisfied because she wanted to see the great turbulent world. "Be happy in your own sphere, my child," advised old Mrs. Sunflower, turning her bright golden petals toward the sun and smiling into his life-giving face. "We are placed in the meadow, where everything necessary to our happiness is lavished upon us. What more do you want?"

"I want to go into the world," cried the lily, and her pale face wore an unhappy look. "I want to visit other meadows and get acquainted with other flowers. I am tired of this meadow and of my companions."

"For shame!" declared a beautiful full-blown rose. "You do not know when you are well off. Here is peace and contentment. Be satisfied with your lot."

But the pale little lily would not stop her complaining, and threw up her head and declared: "I wish someone would come and carry me off."

Then her companions, seeing that advice and friendly council made no impression on her, turned their attention to other things and left her to her own thoughts. The ants and bees and other insects were coming to make short calls, and although the lily had always loved them, she ignored them on this morning and stood head erect and face frowning, while the others about her chatted in a friendly way with the visitors.

One of the honey bees brought news to the meadow. "There is a band of children coming along the road, just outside the meadow," he explained, "and they have a basket, in which they are putting wild blossoms who were foolish enough to grow close beside the road. If you are wise, my friends, you will hold your heads down in the grass till the children have passed on their way."

All save the lily took the warning and bent themselves low into the heavy green meadow grass, entirely hiding themselves from the eye of a chance passer-by. But Lily stood more erect than ever, trying to catch the attention of the children. "Ah, yonder is a white blossom—away over in the high grass!" cried a Boy. "Wait for me; I'll run and gather it." So saying, the Boy hurried through the grass of the meadow and reached the tall, fair lily. She did not try to hide her head as her companions did, but stood straight up as if beckoning to the great giant who was advancing to pull off her head.

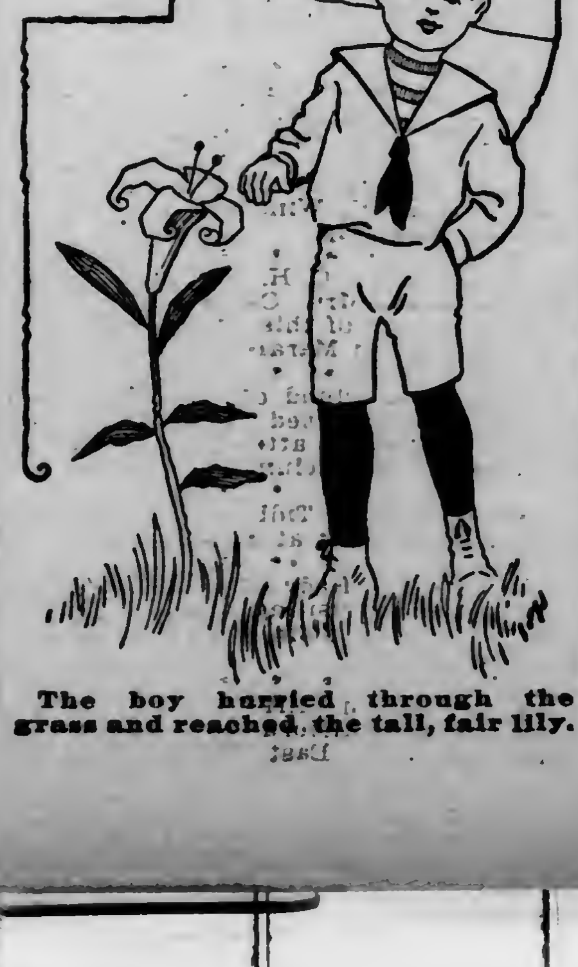
But the moment she felt her lovely head severed from her tall body she realized what a foolish thing she had done. And there in the grass, carefully hiding themselves, were her wiser comrades. Ah, they knew what was well for them! And not a glimpse of one of them did the Boy get. He gathered the lily and ran to the road with her poor aching head in his hot hand. And then she was placed in the basket along with other severed blossoms. And as she lay there, suffering great pain, she said to another suffering flower: "Oh, how foolish to long for the great wicked world. It means torture and, later, death. Ah, to be once more in the meadow where my friends are so happy and peaceful! But I wanted this experience, and, lo! I have it."

"Yes, that's the way with us," replied the other blossom. "I was so eager to show my beauty that I grew close beside the big road, and now I am paying for the glory I received from being admired."

Just then the children reached their home, and the blossoms were taken from the basket and placed in a tall vase of water. And then they were put on a dining table where they drooped, dying, dying. And the next morning they were all wilted and ugly, and were tossed into the back yard, where the sun finished their ruin, for while the sun loves live flowers, and gives them life, he is merciless with dying or dead ones, for he burns them up.

And in the meadow the story of poor, vain, dissatisfied Lily was told to all the younger blossoms as a warning against their wishing to go into the big wicked world. And all Lily's former friends mourned over her loss, knowing that she had met a most sad fate.

And whenever the bees or the ants, or other insects, possibly the butterflies, come to the meadow with the news that "children are coming along the big road," the blossoms, one and all, hide themselves in the deep grass, and are safe from the hands of the enemy. And the story of the foolish lily's sad experience has kept many another lily from going the same way.



The boy hurried through the grass and reached the tall, fair lily.

When Buttons Were First Invented.

THE following is the story of the button and buttonhole, which shows that not many centuries ago people either had to pin or tie their garments together:

"The Elizabethan era gave vogue to the button and buttonhole, two inventions which may fairly be regarded as important, since they did much to revolutionize dress. The original button was wholly a product of needlework, which was soon improved by the use of a wooden mold. The brass button is said to have been introduced by a Birmingham merchant in 1680. It took 200 years to improve on the method of sewing the cloth upon the covered button. Then an ingenious Dane hit upon the idea of making the button in two parts and clamping them together with the cloth between. The most important branch of the button industry in the United States is the making of pearl buttons, the material for which is obtained from shells gathered along the Mississippi River. The industry has grown up within the last 15 years. Its introduction was due to a native of Germany, who learned the trade abroad. He saw that millions of dollars were going to waste in the shells known as "nigger-heads" of which tons were piled up on the banks of the river. Thousands of people are now employed in turning these shells into buttons, the small manufactories being found all the way from Minnesota to Missouri."

(Copyrighted, 1910, by E. J. Edwards.)

Last October, John D. Rockefeller announced that he would give $1,000,000 within the following five years to carry on an organized warfare against the hook-worm. Today the work of rescue of the 2,000,000 persons in this country—besides the hundreds of thousands in Porto Rico—affected with the disease is being pushed forward with zeal and intelligence. In numerous laboratories the battle is being waged. Car loads of literature are being distributed from thousands of little red school houses; the educational systems of states are fighting against the parasite of laziness. Shoes are being distributed to the barefoot thousands and tens of thousands of the South and of Porto Rico, that the parasite may not enter their blood through the soles of the feet. The homes of the lowly are being visited by men and women skilled in the application of the simplest sanitary conditions that will bring about the death of the hook-worm. In every conceivable way the pest is being attacked in its strongholds.

It is a great fight, in humanity's name. And it is gradually proving itself to be a winning fight. Yet, for all that ultimate victory means the release of millions living and the freedom of millions yet unborn from the bondage of life—long ill-health, the advance of the conquering force is not made known by drum and trumpet. The men who are leading it are not in any sense "before the public." Theirs is not the work that demands publicity as a stimulant. It is accomplished in the seclusion of the study and the laboratory, and they who are engaged in it are men of whom it may be said most fitly, "By their works shall ye know them."

A Sherlock Holmes of the Microscope.

Quite naturally, Dr. Charles W. Stiles, the man who was first to locate and describe the peculiar form of a hook-worm, which works such havoc in America, is taking a leading part in the hot fight now being waged along so many lines against the parasite.

Dr. Stiles is a sort of Sherlock Holmes of the microscope who has made public many another little scientific peculiarity of "bird, beast and winged insect." As long ago as 1890, when he was a candidate for the doctorate in philosophy at the University at Leipzig, he offered a thesis based on his discovery that the rattlesnake is subject to a certain affection of the lungs caused by eating mice afflicted with the disease, and he was not satisfied until he had located the disorder in the mouse and had proved its communicability.

With an inborn passion for original research, Dr. Stiles has spent long years in the minutest investigation into certain forms of animal life concerning which little has been known. For the mosquito and the common house fly in their normal condition he has little interest, but he has made an exhaustive study of the various diseases which are peculiar to these insects. It matters not at all how low down in the scale of animal existence an object may be, it is always full of interest for him provided it be diseased. If it happens to be afflicted with something which may be communicated to the human species, by mere contract or in any other manner, he is lost to all external attractions until he has probed the matter to the bottom.

Before he found the hook-worm in man Dr. Stiles had already discovered it under other forms in sheep, dogs, goats, blue foxes and fur seals. It was this earlier discovery that prepared him for its presence in man. He realized that all the conditions seemed to be favorable, especially in the South, and he pursued his investigation with great skill and patience. The outcome was a triump of pure reasoning and analogy—he was able to confirm what his scientific mind had believed to be probable. In the course of his subsequent experiments he found a case of the hook-worm disease in Galveston, Tex., another in North Carolina, and others at various points. Beyond these localities there was no evidence of the disorder. By uniting these points with a pencil line he determined the probable hook-worm area and later research verified the correctness of his original conclusions.

Despite his devotion to scientific research Dr. Stiles is a many-sided man. His labor in the field of investigation has been stupendous, but he has found time to become a remarkable linguist. Although it seems incredible, he has managed to acquire facility in ten modern languages and has a working knowledge of several others. Born at Spring Valley, N. Y., May 15, 1867, the son of a Methodist minister, he was sent at the age of 16 to the Wesleyan university at Middletown, Conn., where he remained but a year, going thence to the College de France, Paris. A year later found him at the University of Berlin and after ten months devoted to zoological study in that institution he went to Leipzig, where he studied a year, going thence to the zoological station at Trieste, Austria. A few months later he returned to Paris and became a student at the Pasteur Institute and the College de France. In 1890 he received the degree of A. M. and Ph. D. from Leipzig. Thus, by spending no more than a year at a time in various foreign centers of learning, he managed to make himself a linguist, picking up the languages of the countries where he studied, and of the various groups of foreign-born students attending these institutions. It was a novel, but effective way of securing a most liberal linguistic education.

Returning to America, Dr. Stiles found that his services were in active demand. His work abroad had attracted the attention of many scientific institutions in this country, and he was confronted with an embarrassment of riches when he landed in America. For fourteen years he was professor of medical zoology at Georgetown university and has been special lecturer at Johns Hopkins since 1897. Last year he was appointed secretary of the Rockefeller commission for the eradication of the hook-worm disease, and he is a member of most of the scientific organization of the world.

He Tells What State You Hail From.

Personally Dr. Stiles is so agreeable in his manner that he might pass without question as a society man, in the best sense of the term. There is no suggestion of the pedant in his intercourse with those of his fellows who are less richly endowed with knowledge, and he shows a lively interest in all the small events that make up the measure of his daily life in the national capital.

In the course of his long investigation of the minute differences in parasitic germs he has developed a remarkable sense of physical discrimination, which he sometimes exhibits for the entertainment of his friends. Recently, while the doctor was a guest at a young ladies' boarding school in a Southern city, a test of this power was proposed and he consented amiably. Fifteen pupils not in the secret were introduced to the doctor rapidly, one after the other, and he was asked by his friend, the principal, to tell from which part of the country each of the young ladies came. In fourteen cases his "guess" was correct, but the fifteenth girl proved to be a scientific puzzle. At last he said, with a smile:

"I think she comes from ——county. She comes from a sandy country."

"She comes from a clay county," declared the principal.

The doctor smiled shrewdly. "She certainly comes from—county," he insisted. "That county is half clay, half sand. She comes from the sandy part."

The doctor proved to be right.

On another occasion, four North Carolinians were dining with Dr. Stiles and he was asked to tell what part of the state they hailed from. He placed three of them without question, but the fourth insisted that the doctor had made a mistake in his case. Dr. Stiles was positive that he was right. "Your body comes from Eastern Carolina at any rate," he maintained stoutly. Finally the man confessed that he was a native of the eastern part of the state, but had removed several years before and had grown a set of whiskers in the meantime.

A Unique American Pathologist.

William Henry Welch, affectionately dubbed "Popsey" by the budding sawbones at the Johns Hopkins medical school, where he was dean of the faculty from 1893 to 1898, is one of the wheel horses of the hook-worm campaign. Merely to call the roll of his various activities and scientific affiliations would take more time than he has ever given to the subject of matrimony, for when he is asked to assign a cause for his condition of single blessedness—no man ever created seems to be better qualified for domestic felicity—he declares that by the time he had succeeded in getting pathology into his head there was no room for anything else.

He began early, too, winning his degree at Yale in his twentieth year. After securing his professional degree at Columbia he specialized in pathology at the universities of Strassburg, Breslau, Leipzig and Berlin and then took the chair of pathology in Bellevue Medical college. Twenty-six years ago he went to Johns Hopkins as professor of pathology, and his investigations conducted at that institution have made both himself and the school famous. He has been a director of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research since 1901, and a trustee of the Carnegie Institution since 1906.

Perhaps the most notable thing about "Popsey"—always bearing in mind the fact that he is premier pathologist of America—is his acute interest in the scientific doings of others. His unselfishness in this respect has been made manifest continually; he is never too engrossed in his own studies to lend a kindly hand in the promotion of the interests of others. He has earned richly the title of "maker of men," for those who have been lifted into professional success by his individual effort may be numbered by scores. To make it possible for men to "find themselves" has been his special philanthropy. He is ever on the alert to discover the coming men of science and his method of announcing his discovery is both unique and whole hearted. For stenography and typewriting he has a profound distaste, but he does not hesitate to sit down and pen several pages in a hand as legible as copperplate to some "young fellow in science" whom he has discovered just coming over the edge of the horizon. His prompt and hearty recognition of a promising newcomer in the field of science has lifted the burden from many a plodding and well nigh discouraged investigator.

No one in the scientific field today drives himself harder than does Dr. Welch. He digs into things first hand, right from the start; he will take no man's word for anything scientific. As a result, he is sbusy not only all day long, but far into the night. It is the usual thing for him to pursue his studies until 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning, yet if he gets unusually interested in the subject in hand he may forget to go to bed at all. If he retires at, say 2 or 3 o'clock, he is up and breakfasting at 9, as fresh and cheery as nine hours of sound slumber makes the average man of bounding health.

But though Dr. Welch delights in work, the detail of executive work drives him to distraction, almost. His knowledge is for counsel, not for execution, except in a very large way, and it is in this manner that he is doing such effective work in the widespread warfare on the hook-worm.

A Victory Over Skepticism.

The brisk campaign against the "lazy sickness" and its malignant inspirer, the hook-worm, which is being conducted in Porto Rico is the outcome of the effort of a young American army officer, Dr. Bailey M. Ashforth, who has taken up his residence permanently on the island, having married into one of the old Porto Rican families and settled down into a lifelong crusade against the hook-worm.

Soon after he entered the service Dr. Ashford was detailed to Porto Rico and the year after his arrival a hurricane devestated the island, leaving in its train widespread sickness, which really amounted to an epidemic. That was in 1900. The war department put up tent hospitals at various points and undertook the treatment of the poverty-stricken unfortunates who soon filled them. Dr. Ashford, then a beginner, but a close student, was puzzled to observe that his patients, although brought under sanitary conditions and given good food, failed to recover strength. He began a series of investigations which resulted in the location of the hook-worm, which had been discovered on the mainland at an earlier date, by Dr. Stiles.

Dr. Ashford's discovery failed to impress the army medical men on the island. The native physicians arrayed themselves solidly against the theory, and for a long time the young American stood practically alone in his conviction. He persisted stubbornly and professed himself able to demonstrate the truth of his contention. At last he was given an opportunity to make good and he did it. Despite the protests of the Porto Rican doctors the assembly voted the sum of $5,000 to be applied to the relief of sufferers from the pest. Dr. Ashford managed the matter so skillfully that he was able to show that 5,000 natives had been cured as a result of the appropriation. Afterward he and his two associates treated many thousand cases, at an average cost of 61 cents. All told, since he won his fight against skepticism and prejudice, nearly a quarter of a million cases for hook-worm have been treated in the island.

The son of a well known physician, Dr. Ashford is under 40, tall, blond, and energetic, as well as dogged. Until this summer he had never taken a vacation from the day he landed in Porto Rico. True student of science that he is, his first vacation in over a decade is being spent in Europe in attendance on a hygienic congress.

Education Versus Ignorance.

Many are the medical scientists who are engaged in fighting to the death against the hook-worm, and, of course, Dr. Simon Flexner, head of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, is a leading participator. But the scientists enrolled for the battle are not any more numerous than the educators fighting both as commanders and subordinates. The battle calls for the eradication of ignorance in the parts of the country infested by the hook-worm and so many of the country's best known educators are to be found working with or as members of the hook-worm commission.

Of these educators, Dr. Edwin A. Alderman, president of the University of Virginia, and undoubtedly the most famous living man of education the South has today, is the most prominent nationally. Not only throughout the South, but in the North as well, he has a large and attentive audience whenever he speaks on any topic relating to educational and moral questions, and by such men as former President Eliot of Harvard he is looked upon as one of the country's great intellectual leaders. In Virginia he is particularly adept at reading how events will likely shape themselves a year or two hence; he is a keen observer of blowing straws. It is for this reason that he is often consulted by men whose reputations for sagacity are commented on nationally.

As a talker Dr. Alderman is one of the best that has ever come out cf the South since the war. He is in great demand in the winter for after dinner speeches, such cities as New York, Washington and Baltimore calling upon him frequently. He "regrets" twenty times where he makes the hearts of a toast list committee exceedingly glad once.

Dr. James J. Joyner, state superintendent of public instruction of North Carolina, sits with Dr. Alderman on the hook-worn commission. He has especial charge of the campaign of education in his state, where so many cases of hook-worm are to be found. Literature by the car load lot is being distributed throughout the infected districts under Dr. Joyner's supervision, and practically every public school in the state is a center of warfare against the laziness-breeding parasite. Already, it is said, highly satisfactory results are being accomplished by this campaign.

Dr. Joyner is not of that class of men and women who take to teaching until something "better" turns up. He prefers to be a pedagogue, and because he so prefers he has squelched all attempts on the part of his friends and admirers to make him governor of the state. He is a prominent member of the Baptist church and a warm personal friend of Mr. Rockefeller.

Fighting shoulder to shoulder with Dr. Alderman and Superintendent Joyner, are Dr. David F. Houston, chancellor of Washington university, St. Louis and Prof. Hollis B. Frissell, principal of Hampton institute. Dr. Houston's energies are being directed toward organization; he has a genius for organization. Prof. Frissell, who has made a long and exhaustive study of the race problem, acts as executive advisor of his fellow leaders in all matters relating to the best methods of eradicating the disease among the negroes and of getting them personally interested in the work, so that they, too, will be enrolled in the great army of energy against laziness. Walter H. Page, the well known magazine editor, is the one prominent purely literary man deeply engaged in helping with his pen and voice the educators and medical scientists who surround him. He, too, is a Southerner, a native of North Carolina, and he knows his South as well as any man living. He is a confirmed optimist and it has been said of him that if he is ever blue he conceals it under a mass of some livelier color. Apropos of his shrewdness, a friend has said of him: "If Page finds that he must run his head against a brick wall, trust him to find the place where the wall is thinnest."

The Man Who Dominates the Fight.

Back of the present movement to expel the hook-worm from the country are two men neither scientists nor educators, whose active co-operation is essential to the success of the undertaking. One of these is John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and the other is Frederick T. Gates, chief almoner for the distribution of the Rockefeller charities.

When the proposition to get after the hook-worm was first presented to Mr. Gates it was fortified with the argument that the scheme would bring about a saving of $100,000,000 a year in actual energy then going to waste. Mr. Gates listened in silence, no sign about his inscrutable exterior to indicate that he was being convinced. When it came his turn to speak no one present had the faintest notion of what he was going to say. The advocates of the project feared from his impassive manner that they had failed to impress him favorably.

"Gentlemen," he began slowly, "it seems to me that you have not got at the root of this matter. It seems to me that the all important question to be solved is 'how many human lives will be saved?'"

The hook-worm commission was an accomplished fact from that moment. This is the man who dominates the organized fight now being made in this country and its possessions against the hook-worm.

WHO AFTER BALLINGER?

Possible Successors Are Being Considered in Washington Circles.

Van Hise of University of Wisconsin Among Those Mentioned.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, Aug. 27.—By the time Secretary Ballinger finally decides to take the hint of the administration leaders who would rather see him out of the cabinet than in it, the president will have had called to his attention the names of perhaps a dozen men as the probable successors of the one-time Cunningham lawyer. Both so-called regulars and progressives have been suggested for the place, corporation lawyers and fighters for land reform policies, non-conservationists and conservationists. The list of possibilities up to date include the following:

Senator Frank P. Flint of California.
Senator Joseph M. Dixon of Montana.
Senator George E. Chamberlain of Oregon.
George W. Woodruff of New York.
W. O. Thompson of Ohio.
Charles R. Van Hise of Wisconsin.
Representative Duncan E. McKinlay of California.

Flint Hardly Probable.

While Senator Flint's name, for one reason or the other, has been brought up more than that of any other man, his selection is not probable because of his former alliance with the Southern Pacific political machine in California. Joseph M. Dixon, the junior senator from Montana, seems to stand a better chance, providing the president is disposed to appoint an independent. Dixon knows all there is to be known about administration of land laws, is thoroughly conversant with condition in the West, and besides is chairman of the committee on conservation of natural resources in the senate.

Senator Chamberlain of Oregon has been mentioned as the best man Taft could appoint, if he is to name a progressive Democrat. It is not probable, however, that the president will put another Democrat in the cabinet, and it is altogether unlikely that Chamberlain would accept the office unless a thorough clean-up of the department could be made, and a serious effort be made to further the Roosevelt land reform policies, which he has always supported.

Woodruff Too Progressive.

George W. Woodruff is said to be equal to any of those named in point of knowledge of land law and the administration of Indian affairs, but he is also perhaps too pronounced a conservationist to qualify for the appointment. He was the assistant attorney general assigned to the interior department when Garfield was secretary, and,, like Senator Chamberlain, there is not the slightest chance that he would consider the place unless the men who have fought the Cunningham and Morgan-Guggenheim fight with and for Ballinger were dropped from the government payrolls.

Charles R. Van Hise, president of the University of Wisconsin, has earned a national reputation both as an administrator and educator, and besides has taken an active part in advancing the movement for a land reform policy and for conservation.

Thompson and McKinlay.

W. O. Thompson, who also has been mentioned as a probable candidate when the secretary's office is vacated, is a prominent educator and minister of Ohio. He is now president of the Ohio state university, and whether he would be able to bring order out of the interior department chaos is a matter for conjecture.

Duncan E. McKinlay, having been beaten for re-election to congress from the Second California district by William Kent, is now in the "lame duck" class, and after March 4, 1911, will be without an official job. McKinlay is wealthy, a disciple of Cannonism, and his appointment, it is considered here, would appear to be for political purposes rather than to get a more efficient administration of the interior department.

May Be Dark Horse.

The lists will remain open until after Ballinger resigns, and there is still a chance for a "dark horse" who is not now considered in the running. It is probable that one or two of the men who have been named would not be found anxious to be considered candidates for the secretaryship, notwithstanding the fact that in point of responsibility the office is considered by many to be the most important cabinet position in the gift of the president.

The trouble which Ballinger began to stir up a few weeks after coming into office has continued for sixteen or seventeen months and a demoralized department with hundreds of loose ends in organization, and with a policy which is an attempt at a straddle between "Morganheimism" and the support of conservation, does not offer anything very encouraging to that man who might aspire to step into the Seattle man's boots. When Ballinger goes, it is expected that Assistant Secretary Pierce, Commissioner Dennett, George Otis Smith, Oscar Lawler, and perhaps one or two of the other subordinates will either resign or be dropped. All of the men named have been involved in the trouble over the Glavis charges, and have tried to save the present secretary from his impending fate.

See Ballinger's Finish.

While Ballinger has not by any means become reconciled to the idea of enforced resignation to please Senator Crane, Secretary Norton, or any of the others who have plans for bringing quiet in the republican sea of troubles, it is realized even by the secretary's friends that his days of usefulness to the party are at an end. The date of his going may or may not be Sept. 15, the time set in the Beverly dispatches, which evidently had semi-official sanction.

Ballinger's presence in the cabinet is giving most trouble to the "regular" candidates for re-election to congress who are compelled to defend him almost every time they appear at a public gathering. The farther the campaign progresses, the harder the regulars claim the task will be, and the more chance the insurgents and the Democrats, who are lambasting the secretary, will have at the polls.

So, while Ballinger kicks and declares that he will not resign to please his enemies, that he is not a quitter, and that the president is the only one who can demand his resignation, others in the administration are already busy considering possible candidates for the next secretary of the interior.

BRIDE RECEIVES AN AEROPLANE.

Lady's Pictorial: Wedding presents are a very good index to the tastes of the times and the character of the young folk of the period. One has seen some curious changes in this direction during the last quarter of a century. There was a time when the lucky bride proudly numbered a brougham and horse among the "numerous and costly." This gave place to the silver plated bicycle, that in turn was superseded by the motor car, and now one reads that an aeroplane was among the gifts presented to a recent bride. This presumably will become an established present for a while, but what its successor may be is beyond the wildest imagination to conceive.

WOMEN DISTRUST THE MAILS.

Now and then you meet a woman who nurses a deep distruct of the mails. Whenever she sends off a letter she feels sure that everybody in the postal service, from the ltter carrier up, is simply dying to know what's in the letter she has posted.

"You can't tell me that letters are not opened and read," says one young woman. "I've had too many come to me half sealed or with torn envelopes. But I have found a way to fix an envelope so that if it is opened it can't possibly be resealed without evidence that it has been tampered with. It's easy enough to roll a lead pencil under an envelope flap and to pry it open, and it's no trick at all to steam open a letter. But I always know whether any of the letters I get have been opened, for all my correspondents have adopted my system. When they fasten down the flap three short parallel lines across the flap to the lower part of the envelope. No one can open an envelope so marked and gum down the flap so exactly that the lines will fit. So I always know."

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST

DITCH WORK GOES AHEAD

Great Dredging Operations in Northwestern Minnesota Making Progress.

Using Electric Power, Big Concerns Work Dredges Day and Night.

Thief River Falls, Minn., Aug. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Excellent progress is being made on the large ditching projects in Eastern Marshall county, in Roseau and Western Beltrami. The construction of the smaller ditches in this territory the ones which are dug with dry ditchers, has been retarded by reason of the dry season.

Some of the companies to whom have been awarded contracts which should have been completed this fall are failing to comply with the requirements of the contract. The total absence of water in some of the drainage sections has prevented them from working machines.

The largest operators in the counties having ditching done is the Northern Drainage company, of which concern A. M. Arpin of this city is manager. The ditchers owned and operated by this company have not ceased work since the snow disappeared last spring. Their great dredges are lighted by their own electric plants and continue their work day and night. Large dams have been constructed to maintain a head of water in which to float the monster diggers.

Eight Miles of Roads Built.

The whole 750,000 acres in one of their ditching contracts is netted with a metallic circuit telephone line and miles of good graded highways have been built from the nearest railway points to the stations along the ditches. Over these the supplies are hauled in. The men employed are housed and fed in houseboats, similar to pleasure craft, and no trouble has been experienced in holding the crews, even in face of the high wages paid in the nearby harvest fields.

By the close of the year the larger portion of the mains will have been dug. These mains are sixty feet wide and sixteen feet deep and are real canals. They empty into the Thief river, a stream some 150 feet wide on the average, but crooked. This is being dredged out straight and given a sixteen-foot channel, in order to permit it to carry the spring floods which the main ditches will throw into it in the spring.

NEGAUNEE HAS FINE FIRE HALL

Upper Michigan City Boasts of Modern, Well-Equipped Structure.

Negaunee, Mich., Aug. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Few fire halls in the upper peninsula are as convenient or attractive as the one just completed in this city by Contractor Spalding of Menominee.

A $900 clock and new equipment has been installed.

There are six stalls directly back of the equipment room.

The hall on the second floor is one of the largest and most convenient in the city. There is ample space for parties conducted by the department.

There is a vestibule at the top of the stairs, leading to the hall. The upper story is provided with a ladies' dressing room and at the rear there is a bathroom for the men, which includes both tub and shower baths.

The stall doors have electric connection with the fire alarm system and will open automatically every time an alarm comes in. The horses will be trained to leave the stalls as soon as the doors fly open, so that they will be in their places under the harnesses before the firemen and drivers can get down from the floor above.

The building is heated by steam.

IS BADLY HURT IN ITASCA PARK

John Bender Cuts Himself With Ax and Is Hurried to Park Rapids.

Park Rapids, Minn., Aug. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—John Bender met with a severe accident Tuesday at the Itasca State park while clearing a right-of-way. In chopping a young tree the ax caught in a limb and glanced, striking him on the shin bone nearly severing the bone and making an ugly cut. He was hurried to Park Rapids and had the wound dressed.

William Fisher, caretaker of the city park, is confined to his home with a severe attack of sciatic rheumatism and unable to attend to his duties.

There is considerable talk about a proposed electric railroad from Park Rapids to Detroit, Minn. A. C. Furgison of Cleveland, Ohio, is agitating the proposition.

The county fair will be held here on Sept. 14, 15 and 16. Necessary money has been raised and plans for the best ever have been made.

Sam Pierce, who has charge of the Bank of Ponsford, has resigned. James Kissock has taken his place as cashier.

Fred Rima and family moved Tuesday morning to Abasorok, Mont. Fred has a position as traveling salesman, his territory is in the West. The move was made so that he could be near his family.

Thrashing is pretty well along in this vicinity and a fair estimate of the conditions can be made. Wheat is of an excellent quality, but low yield to the acre. Oats will yield from three to ten bushels to the acre of prime quality. Rye goes seven to ten bushels.

C. W. Benham sold his herd of Jersey cows to Jerome Bert of Hubbard. The scare of no fodder is being dispelled and farmers are taking pains to continue their herds and protect their dairy interests.

Hugh Campbell, an old resident of Park Rapids, but who is now in business in Los Angeles, Cal., was greeting old friends and acquaintances the fore part of this week.

Park Rapids experienced early in the week the same phenomenon as other sections of the country by being enveloped in a pall of yellow smoke. The sky was so darkened that it was necessary to light lamps to see to doing any kind of business.

The commercial club will begin work on the Rima building, fitting it for its new quarters Monday. When completed it will make one of the best equipped club rooms in Northern Minnesota.

Rockland, Mich., Aug. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The old settlers' reunion here Wednesday was an entire success in every way.

Rockland was in gala attire. All of the stores were closed and the business men and clerks took a holiday. The town was decorated with bunting and flags of welcome, and the old settlers and their friends were met at the Rockland depot by a number of automobiles and carriages which were used throughout the day in conveying the visitors to old and familiar scenes and points of interest.

The flag "Welcome to Rockland" was freely displayed, and on leaving flags and bunting were displayed bearing the words, "Good-bye, come again."

C. Garvey, who seized a shortgun from under his bed, and engaged in a hand to hand conflict with a bandit who had succeeded in entering the building.

There was $300 in cash in the cash drawer of the postoffice, according to Mr. Garvey, besides which the postmaster had $84 in a pair of trousers, hung over the foot of the bed. As the robber jumped out of the window of the postoffice, he grabbed a pair of pants, but, said Mr. Garvey, "he took a new pair, and I had the money in my everyday pants, and he didn't even get that."

Calumet, Mich., Aug. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Charles Townsend of Jackson, Mich., who is a candidate against Julius C. Burrows for the Republican nomination for United States senator, can have no complaint as to the amount of enthusiasm he is stirring up in the Copper country as evidenced by his enthusiastic reception here last night. It was clearly one of the greatest meetings ever held in the Copper country and at its conclusion the people fought to shake hands with the popular congressman. It is predicted Townsend will carry every county in Upper Michigan with the possible exception of Iron and Gogebic.

Kills the Dandruff Germ Stops Falling Hair

Others Imitate and Make Similar Claims, but the Genuine and Original Dandruff Germ Destroyer is

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

The discovery of the dandruff germ as the cause of all hair troubles is not a recent event. Prof. Unna gave a germ theory to the world in 1887 and two years later Sebourard by his experiments with a rabbit proved beyond a doubt the actual existence of this germ.

On the heels of this establishment of the germ theory came the discovery of Newbro's Herpicide. This was the first and only remedy for the destruction of the dandruff germ.

There have been other preparations alleged to kill this germ, stop falling hair and itching of the scalp. But Newbro's Herpicide really does these things. For this reason it has long been known as the Original Remedy and the only one that is genuine.

Don't be fooled by preparations which are trading upon the marvelous success of Herpicide. Remember you take no chances with Newbro's Herpicide. It is absolutely guaranteed.

The exact loss to the ice company is probably about $2,000. REAL ESTATE AND BUILDING

STEEL PLANT PERMIT HAS EFFECT ON REALTY MARKET

Greater Interest Is Shown in Investment Propositions in Duluth.

Rush of Eastern Money Is Expected By Real Estate Men.

The investment market, which has been almost neglected while people were climbing over each other to get residence lots on the installment plan, showed signs of awakening and taking notice this week when the permit for the steel plant, covering buildings to cost $10,000,000, was isued by Building Inspector S. M. Kielley.

If the confirmed skeptics, who have been waiting for the psychological moment to hop around and yell, "I told you so," will make a visit to the site of the steel plant, they will probably become convinced that the Steel Corporation means business, if the work already done and the issuing of the permit have not convinced them of the fact.

There is an immense amount of preliminary work necessary before an immense project like the steel plant can be gotten under way. A good part of the work has now been done and the work in the future will be more in the open, more tangible and more convincing to the doubters.

The issuing of the permit had the effect of stiffening up the flabby backbone of the market. An industrial proposition like a steel plant is certain to have great effect on property values all through the city. The effect has been noticeable to some extent ever since the announcement was made that the plant would be erected here. The skeptics have served to hold the natural enthusiasm in check, however, and the gains in property values on the strength of the coming of the steel plant have been comparatively insignificant.

In the future the steel plant will exert an appreciable influence on the market, however. The future prosperity of the city will be assured and outside investors will feel more confidence in the city. There has been an immense amount of outside money loitering around watching for the right moment to step into the Duluth market, and dealers believe the moment has come. A rush of capital may be expected to invade the Duluth realty field and take up attractive investment propositions.

The Steel corporation is employing many men on the site of the steel plant now and the progress being made assures the completion of the plant within a reasonable time. Probably 3,000 men will be employed in the operation of the plant at first and the influx of such a large body of men with their families means much to any city—a growth in population, a growth in prosperity, increased demand for homes and increased real estate values.

The investment market has done little more than sit up and take notice this week, however. That is more than it has done for a good many weeks, so that dealers interested in high-class business properties are encouraged by the showing.

There has been a wonderful activity in real estate in Duluth this year, but it has been confined almost entirely to improved residence property and to lots in the new additions placed on the market. The general public has shown its confidence in Duluth by plunging heavily on lots according to their means, while the capitalists have been holding off during the summer months. Real estate dealers believe the big money is coming into the market now.

* * *

The loan market is wide open and there is little trouble either in placing money or securing loans on adequate securities. People with money to loan are steering clear of residence mortgages, especially if they have large sums to put out, and are demanding mortgages on business property, with ample security for loans in large amounts. The man with a good piece of property need not wory if he wants to raise money on it.

* * *

The most important deal of the week was the sale by Austin Lathers and H. M. Blackmarr to Heber L. Hartley of the lots on the upper side of Superior street between Fourth and Fifth avenues west for a consideration understood to be in the neighborhood of $15,000. The property is located in the path of the extension of the business district of the city and will be much more valuable in a few years than it is today.

* * *

Mary E. McComber has sold to David D. Mackey 100 feet on the southwest corner of Seventeenth avenue east and Sixth street for $2,100.

* * *

Carrie G. Moore has sold to R. H. Grimshaw a property on the southwest corner of Nineteenth avenue east and Fifth street, the consideration not being given in the deed.

* * *

The Duluth Building & Land company has sold to Mary M. Deetz a property on the southwest corner of Fourth street and Nineteenth avenue east for $2,500.

* * *

Charles Downer has sold to Jacob Jacobson a property on the southeast corner of Twenty-first avenue west and Superior street for $12,000.

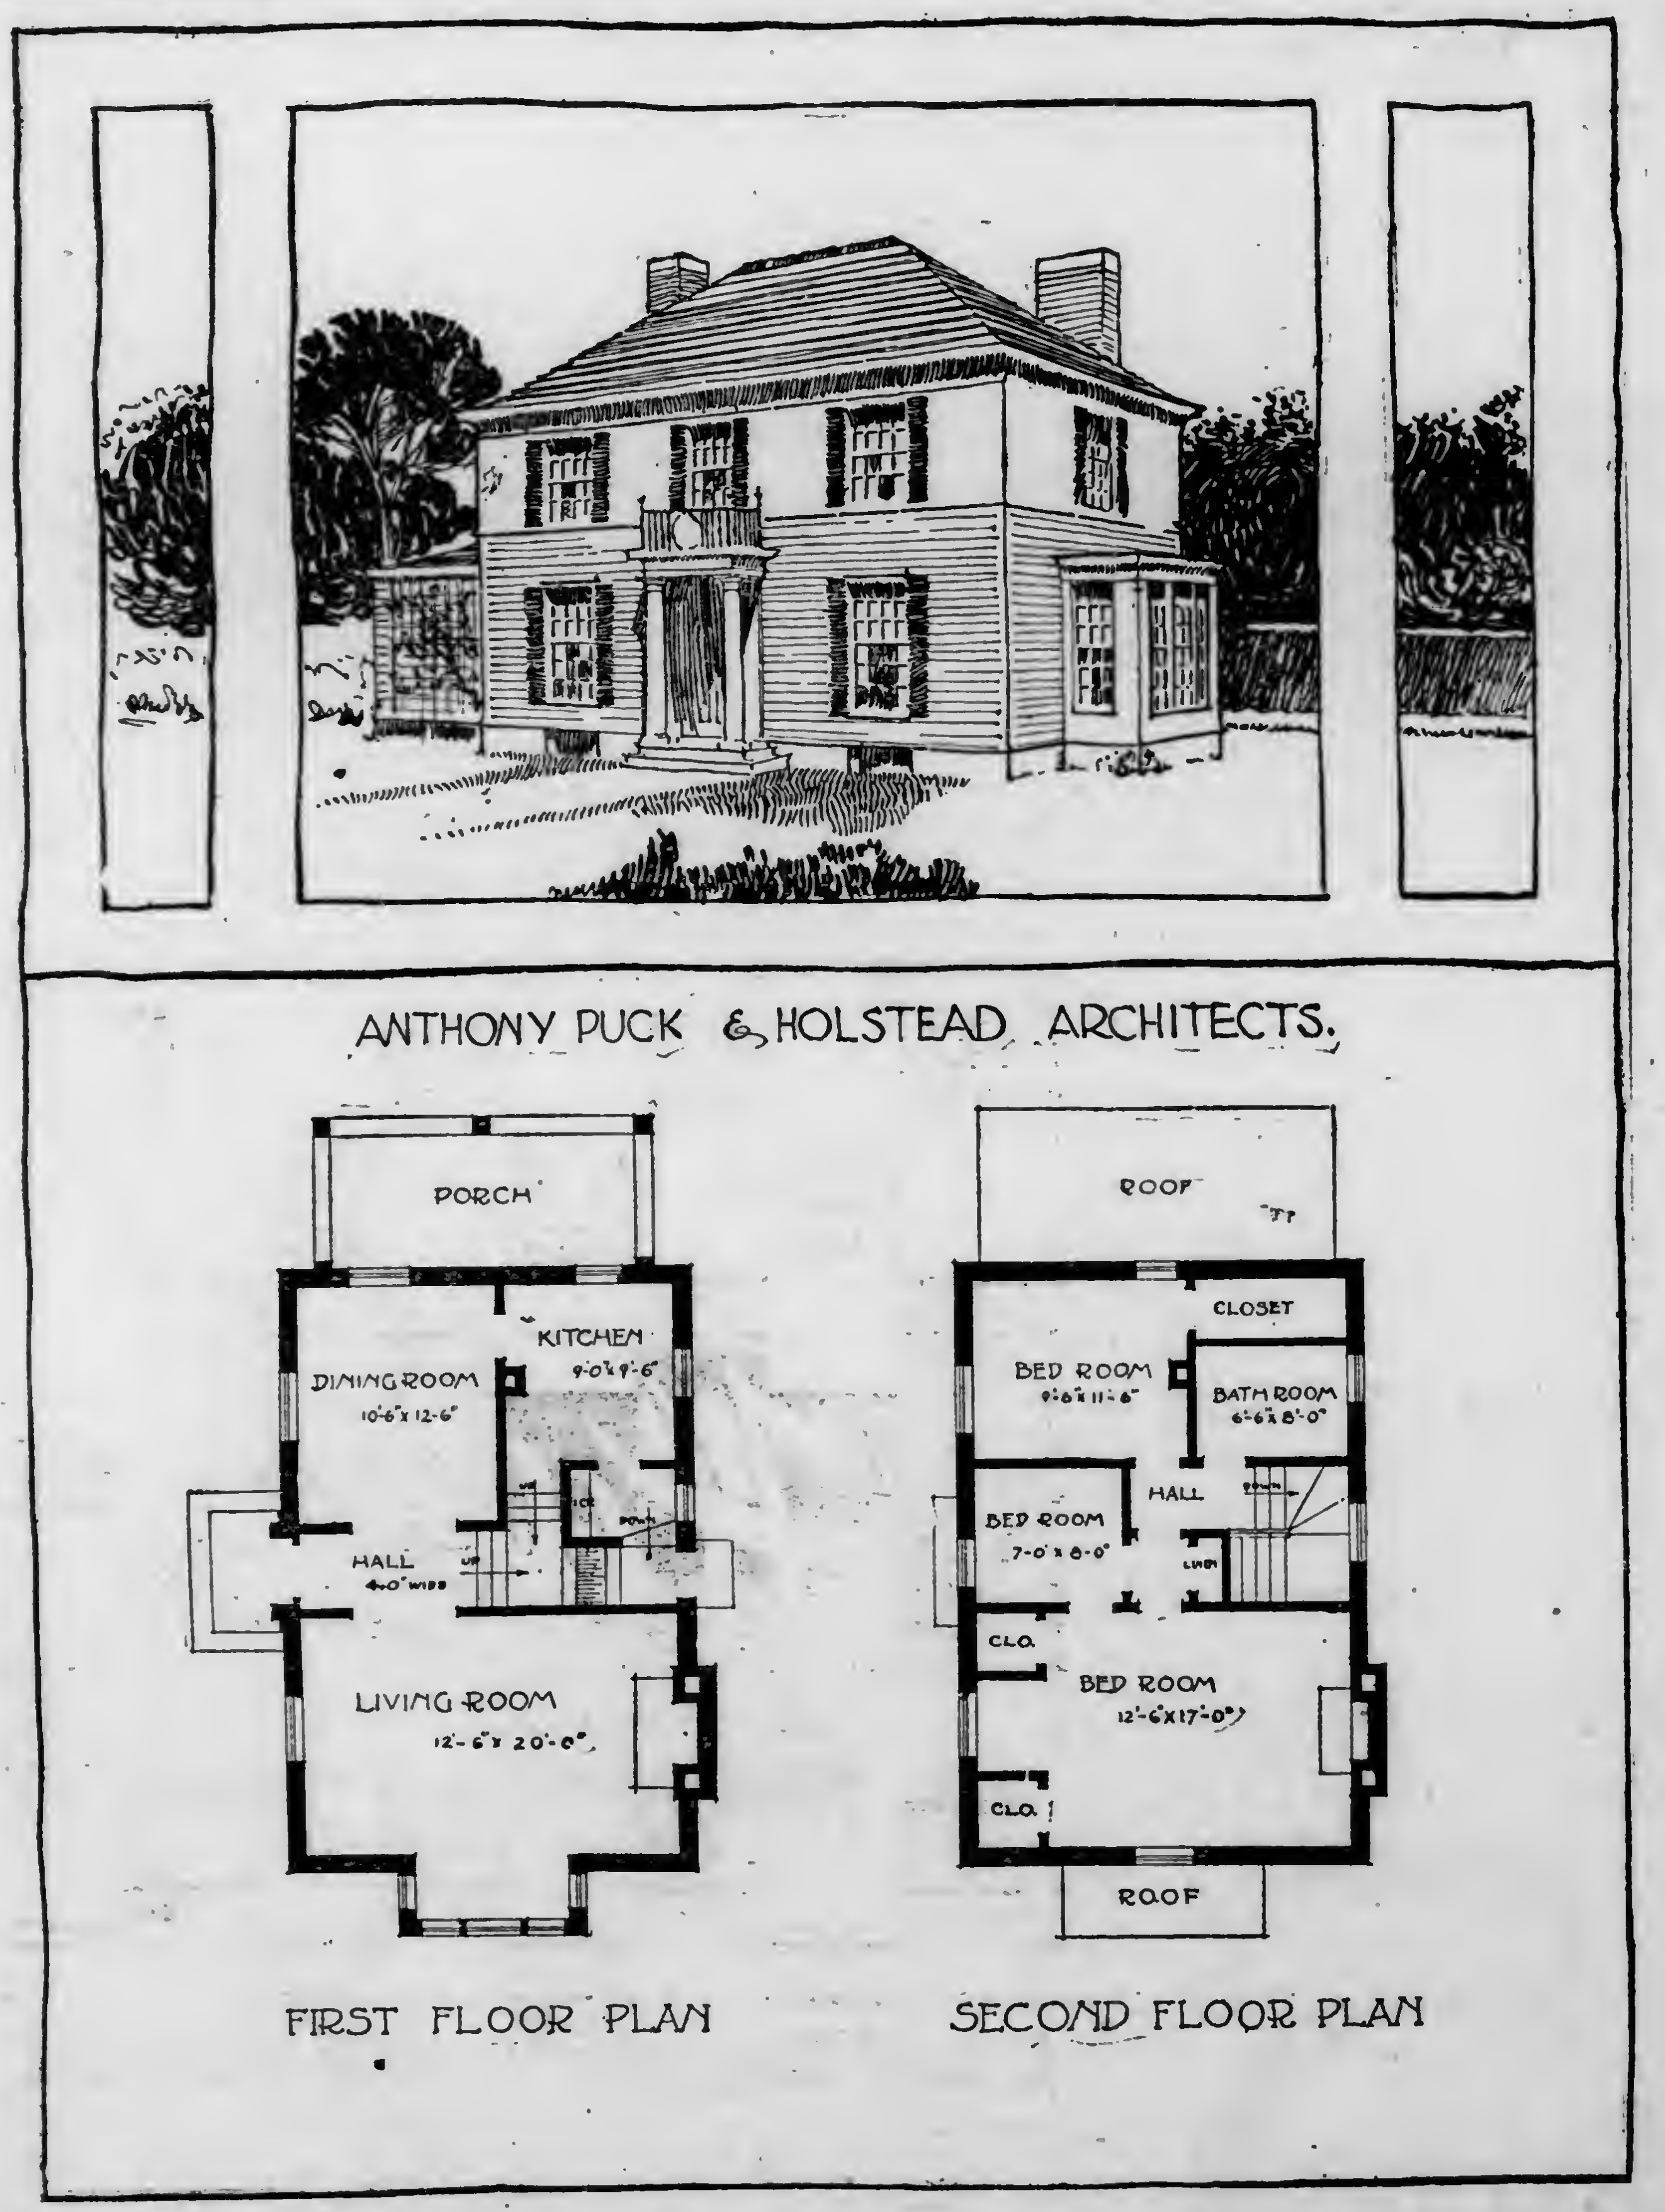
SIMPLE HOME IN "COLONIAL" STYLE WHICH WOULD COST $4,000 IN DULUTH



The above design is for a small house in the "colonial" style, the mode of building which prevailed in the British settlements in America previous to 1776.

The style is a modification of the English Georgian style, and is interesting because of the singular results of transferring the classic designs of the eighteenth century to a new country where wood was largely used, and where the workmen were far less restrained by an educated opinion. Its refined and delicate detailing will always attract many admirers.

The ground plan shows a large living room with roomy bay window and large fireplace, a room which could be made very impressive. The stair is ingenuously worked in the minimum of space, with a back staircase from the kitchen.

From the dining room through French casement windows one enters on to a large porch.

The second floor shows three bedrooms with closet space and bathroom. All the rooms are in Southern pine, enameled white except the kitchen, which is in birch, and the floor in maple. The furniture should be of mahogany, and a range of styles could be used from heavy forms to light, delicate Chipendale work.

The above house, inclusive of heating and plumbing, would cost $4,000 in Duluth and vicinity.

OWN YOUR HOME We Will Lend You the Money at 5 Per Cent Simple Interest.

Money invested in house rent receipts is a poor investment, and one that you will never derive and future benefits from. Anybody can pay rent, but it takes energy, economy and determination to own a home. We will lend you money to buy, build, improve homes or lift mortgages anywhere in the Union. For each $1,000.00 borrowed, you pay us $7.50 per month, together with 5 per cent interest on yearly balances; giving you 10½ years in which to repay loan, with the privilege of taking up all notes or as many as you wish at any time, and by so doing you would get a discount of the 5 per cent interest on all notes taken up before maturity. We allow six months grace in case of adverse circumstances. Now why do you pay rent when our plan will enable you to own a home with the money you spend for rent? On receipt of this coupon, properly filled out, we will mail you full particulars in regard to our methods of loaning money, or, better still, come to our office and let us explain to you our liberal proposition in detail.

PERMIT FOR STEEL PLANT

Big Boost is Given Duluth Building Records for Year.

Work on Architects' Tables Is Mostly for Residences.

Total building permits for the week, $10,021,825.

The estimated cost of work for which building permits were issued by Building Inspector S. M. Kielley during the past week was the greatest in the history of Duluth. The same will be true of the record for the month and the year, for $10,000,000 permits are not applied for every week or so.

Despite the fact that the permit for the steel plant is unusual, it is a legitimate item in the total building records of the city. The plant is to be a Duluth industry and there is no valid excuse for setting the permit aside for wenderment at its size.

On the whole, the building situation is quiet. The permit for Andrew Nelson's new residence on Third street between Twenty-sixth and Twenty-seventh avenues east was issued during the week. The home will cost $10,000, but all other permits of the week were for small residences or repair work.

There are no big buildings being planned as far as is known and the architects' activity is confined almost exclusively to residence work.

The permits issued during the week by Building Inspector S. M. Kielley follow:

Not only does this pertain to the railroad man living in Proctor or vicinity, but also to the man who wants to own a pieceof land in an enterprising community and pay for it without financial risk or business inconvenience.

MAPLE GROVE PARK

the scene of a great sale on June 11th last, is only six blocks from Proctor proper.

In Proctor, new shop operations are in progress, increasing railroad facilities for handling the great iron ore traffic are under way. The new street car extension is being built from Duluth, and a proposed street car extension to the Steel Plant is under consideration. All this means much to Proctor. The population will steadily increase, and with it a great demand for home building property.

TO THE MAN OF MODERATE MEANS

this is a great chance for a country home, where you can grow your own garden products, raise chickens and have all the conveniences of a city lot. Maple Grove lots are only a few blocks from every modern improvement.

Prices range from $125 to $375 for a Half, Whole or Two-Acre Tract, and only $1 down and $1 to $2 weekly, with no payments when sick; no mortgage; no notes to sign, no interest to pay, and a Torrens title.

As a good quality home land, or a solid and safe investment where your savings can work for you more surely and more profitably than on any other real estate proposition in the country, Maple Grove Park affords more opportunities.

SATURDAY AND SUNDAY—ALL DAY
AUGUST 27th and 28th

we will show you this property. Take the Incline at Grand Avenue and our agents will meet you at the top of the hill and conduct you to the property.

If every lot in every addition that has been put on the market or boomed for sale in Duluth during the past six months were sold, and on each lot a residence were built, the city of Duluth would have the size and population in realization of the dreams of those who see in the industrial and commercial activity of the past few years a great city at the Head of the Lakes—a Pittsburg of the West with more to commend it than the original Pittsburg.

It is not too wild a dream and the next five or ten years will probably see its realization, besides the placing on the market of scores of other additions and divisions, which will be snapped up just as readily as those which have been put on the market during the past year.

Not since the boom's days when every square inch of ground was held at almost as much gold coin as would cover it, has there been such real estate activity—an activity that makes for a greater city, with greater stability of prosperity and population. In the old boom days, men were hysterical. The installment plan of selling real estate was almost unknown. Savings of a lifetime, were thrown into the whirlpool of speculative hysteria to be diminished when the bubble was pricked. Reason and judgment were submerged in the greed for profits and the wheel of fortune turned until everybody lost and the profits were in the kitty. In the reaction Duluth suffered and real estate prices descended even below the level of values.

No Hysteria Now.

It is different now. There is no hysteria, no speculative aspect to the market, no South Duluths and fictitious divisions of West Duluth. The market is on a sound basis of values and the activity is on a sound basis of reason and judgment.

The land-owning germ seems to have become suddenly active. Its activities have been confined for some years to a very few. Now, it has spread out to take in rich and poor, professional man and wage-earner, young men and old, and even women wage and salary-earners. Each has the desire to own a piece of property and that desire is being satisfied in a market that is making some of the old-timers gasp with wonder.

The desire to own property is natural. Give a man a homesite, even though it be a rocky, almost inaccessible tract, and he becomes more a man. His self-respect is increased. He knows that he is a potent factor in the life of the city. He takes more interest in matters of taxation and government. He becomes a better citizen. The germ once active never stops its work. One a man owns a piece of property he hopes to get more or improve what he has. He becomes more frugal, more industrious and more settled. The city has gained a permanent citizen and a citizen that will help the city grow.

Installment Plan.

The installment system of selling real estate is responsible for the activity in the Duluth market this year. It has found a wonderful response among the dealers and the public alike. Men who could not possibly buy property for cash are depending upon their earning capacity to make them the possessors of land. The contract for deed is a contract with a savings proposition to deposit two or three dollars a week—dollars that will draw more interest than the 3 per cent of the savings bank. Under the installment plan, none but legitimate propositions can be put on the market, for a man has ample opportunity for examining the land and if he is not satisfied, he can let his contract lapse with very little loss to himself, for the advance payments are not great.

But there are no illegitimate propositions on the market. Real estate dealers are looking forward to the growth of the city and converting wild land, near the present built-up portions of the city, into building sites. The competition is so great that every addition put on the market must have its peculiar advantages—location, sewers and water, accessibility—in order to attract the buyers.

Real estate sales put on recently have been phenomenal. In Highland, C. P. Craig sold 100 lots last Saturday afternoon. People are swarming to Motor Line division, Idlewild, Greysolon and Crescent View Park. Whether the property is open to all, or whether it is restricted to residences costing not less than four or five thousand dollars each, the buyers are attracted and the lots are sold. Even the additions in which the lots are highest priced, the installment plan prevails. The real estate men have good propositions, they are out to attract buyers and the results are such that the man in other lines of business may learn something.

Crescent View Park has not yet been put on the market by W. M. Prindle company, but scores of lots have already been picked out by buyers, who will purchase the lots at the first sale next Saturday. In Greysolon division, which is being put on the market by E. W. Markell, fills and cut are still being made and the land is being cleared, but the sale of lots is heavy. Idlewild is attracting its full share of attention and Whitney Wall & Co. report numerous sales. C. H. Graves & Co. are busy attending to the wants of the people who have picked Motor Line division lots as their home sites. Today, Richardson, Day & Harrison will sell a number of lots on Otsego street in London Park addition and they have been deluged with inquiries during the week.

The people who are buying are not speculators, but staid men of families who are seeking home sites. The 'Own Your Own Home" slogan has many followers in Duluth and thousands are rallying around it this year by getting a start for homes by securing the sites. Once a man has a piece of property, he will not rest until he has a home on it and has stepped out of the class of rent payers.

The industrial developments in Duluth during the past few years and those that are to come could not fail but tremendously incretse the size of the city. The present real estate activity is a result, but it will also be a cause. It is preliminary to the growth. The way is being paved for the strides that are to be taken. The home is the unit of the city and the real estate dealers are furiishing hundreds with the locations for the units on terms that are alluring even to the office boy on five per week.

NAME CHOSEN FOR ADDITION

Mrs. D. Cameron Wins $10 for Suggestion to Whitney Wall & Co.

Mrs D. Cameron of 710 East Sixth street is the winner of the $10 offered by Whitney Wall & Co. for a new name for the new addition which the company is placing on the market near the boulevard at the head of Eighth avenue east. Mrs. Cameron submitted "Homewood" as the name for the addition, and her suggestion was selected from the hundreds submitted. Many applications have already been made for lots at Homewood and the sale is expected to open with a brisk demand.

NEW ADDITION ON THE HILLSIDE

Residence Lots Within Walking Distance on Easy Terms.

It is reported that a fifty-acre tract of land located on the upper side of the Boulevard, with a frontage of 2,000 feet on the Boulevard drive, has been sold through the office of the Whitney-Wall company, who will, within the next thirty days, place it on the market.

It is the intention to open up the streets and plat the property into lots. It will be offered to the public at prices ranging from $200 to $400 a lot (a few choice lots a bit higher) on the easy weekly or monthly payment plan with no interest, no taxes and no payments while sick.

This will be the first time that centrally located property, (as this property is within walking distance from Duluth's retail business center), has been offered on these easy payments.

This land is covered with a splendid growth of cedars, (evergreens) mountain ash, oaks, maples, elms, willows, poplars, small pines and various bushes.

The location is between Fifth avenue east and Tenth avenue east. It is practically the only location on the Boulevard that has a gentle slope, running back from the Boulevard, and it is the only spot centrally located on this beautiful driveway from which roads run both east and west into the country back of Duluth, or in other words, it is the only natural outlet from the center of the city.

On the west the Sundby road, which is to be used by the street railway company and which opens up into the Pike Lake, Hermantown and Rice Lake districts, starts. Mesaba avenue also leads to the farming country on the poor farm road.

On the east is the Kenwood road, which leads into one of Duluth's largest populated suburbs and into the district surrounding the large Catholic boarding school. This road has been surfaced and widened at considerable expense within the last year, and is today one of the best roads or streets to be found in or out of the city of Duluth.

The settlement of the district directly south of this tract of land from East Fourth street up to the Boulevard drive proves that as a residence district this is one of the most popular locations for homes to be found in the city, as it is covered with well-built and attractive homes, and the advance in lot values has been of greater percentage in the past few years in this district than in any other part of the city and it is fast becoming the center of population.

The fifty-acre tract of land is located only one mile from Duluth's retail center and as soon as the city has laid the gas and water pipes that are now on Seventh avenue east up to Eleventh street, the street car company will prepare to lay tracks at once up to Eleventh street and in the near future will continue its line on past the Boulevard both east and west, past this fifty-acre tract into the country.

Although the property is not yet ready for the market, the inquiry and the applications for lots has been marvelous. It is expected that the addition will be put on sale the latter part of September and considering the location, the demand for property in the vicinity, the proximity to the city, the magnificent lay of the land covered as it is with trees and the exceptionally easy terms, the sale will be a record breaker.

SENTIMENT IS BULLISH

Pit Element Buys Wheat and Export Trade Helps to Boost Prices.

Foreigner Takes Manitobas and Winter Grain---Flax Business Better.

Duluth Board of Trade, Aug. 27.—Wheat advanced today in a moderately brisk market. September gained 1⅝-½c December 1⅜c and May 1⅛c. The close was strong and at the day's high levels.

The feature of the day was the export business from this country on a rapidly advancing market. Bids on Manitobas were within a fraction of a cent of this market last night but today's advance made it impossible for local exporters to do any business. Other markets met with better success and the export trade was brisk.

Chicago sold winter wheat to France last night and Germany took some No. 2 hard winter wheat for shipment from gulf ports. Baltimore wired that the export demand was good. Toward the close there was sudden strength in Winnipeg and that market wired that France had purchased some No. 1 northern. Montreal reported 160,000 bu sold for export. Baltimore 36,000 bu and New York 48,000 bu last night.

The flour trade is picking up and spring wheat millers are doing a little business. The biggest trade is in low grades and in winter wheat flour, however. Buyers look upon the spread between winter and spring wheat flours as too great and think the prices on the former must decline. The Eastern milling demand for wheat is confined to scattered orders on a hand-to-mouth basis. In the Northwest the mills bought December moderately and the professional traders picked up September and December. Buying in May was comparatively small. The chief interest seemed to be in the December contract.

Pit sentiment was bullish and the long interest was increased. The export trade and the continued decrease in the winter wheat shipments caused the market to advance rapidly and the bulls said their opinion of values was confirmed. The bears were not active and shorts were forced to cover. There was very little selling on the bulge and there was no hesitancy on the part of bulls in going long over the holiday. The cash busines had a healthier tone although offerings were scattered and business was somewhat dull.

The Northwestern Grain Dealers' association estimated the acreage of the three Northwestern provinces of Canada at 8,453,200 and the yield of wheat at 106,510,000 bu, about 5,000,000 bu in excess of the estimate of the government and the Winnipeg Free Press.

Cables were higher and foreign news was moderately bearish. Arrivals of wheat at Russian ports are liberal, but harvest reports are irregular. There are complaints of the plant being spotted. In the Southwest and the Southeast there will be fair yields, but there has been much damage by recent heavy rains. In the Volga district the yields are poor on account of drouth. Arrivals of wheat at Braila, Roumania, are heavy. Rainy weather is impeding harvesting in Southern Norway. In the Trondhjem district the drouth continues and the prospects are said to be poor. In Finmarken the farmers have had a bad year.

The weather in the Northwest was favorable. Temperatures were warmer and the map did not show any frosts. Receipts at Northwestern primary markets increased today, but decreased receipts are expected next week by the bulls who say the farmer is storing wheat at elevators and on the farms and that it will take an advance of several cents to encourage him to sell.

Cash wheat was on a parity with the September contract. Barley and rye were unchanged from yesterday, durum advanced ½c and oats gained ¼c.

Flax was slightly stronger and trading was moderate. September was offered at $2.48 and sold at $2.47½, $2.47¾, $2.49 and closed at $2.49. October gained 1c, November 1c and December 1c. The buying was partly from Minneapolis crushers against small sales of oil.

Cash Sales Saturday.

Broomhall cabled: Wheat at opening was affected by disappointing American cables yesterday, talk of very heavy Russian shipments this week and cheaper La Plata offerings and values were ¼d to ⅜d lower. Later there was a steadier undertone developed and prices advanced ⅛d from opening. Buying was induced by an improved inquiry for cargoes, with fewer sellers. At close market was about steady with values ⅛d to ¼d lower than yesterday. Corn was easy, ¼d lower on weakness in America yesterday, pressure of spot and the larger arrivals. Cargoes arrived off coast, nil, awaiting orders, 6. Wheat cargoes in distant positions firmer owing to a better inquiry. Corn easy offering at ½d decline.

The Commercial West says: "As a general statement the undertone of the Minneapolis market has been very stubborn, although the general volume of trade has been exceedingly light. In a way the buying has been good, the bulk coming from those identified with the milling interests, suggesting a more favorable turn in the flour demand.

The steady accumulation of wheat in Chicago and the evident pronounced bearish sentiment in that center is not encouraging to those speculatively inclined to buy for the rise. Farmers in winter wheat sections of the country have been quite free sellers of their crop. The movement to date has been free, but the season is, of course, so much earlier than last year that present comparisons are not a good criterion. However, the period of the spring wheat selling is at hand and it may be taken for granted that Northwestern receipts will be fairly large for some time to come. Present prices mean good returns at country points, although they may not square with farmers' notions of the ultimate value of their crop after hearing so much of damage and the losses in the spring wheat crops abroad. Considerable storing is going on at interior elevators and it is generally reported that the storage capacity on the farms, which is known to be large, is being filled to the limit.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Opens Irregular But Prices Gradually Work Up.

Chicago, Aug. 27.—Wheat opened irregular today with values ⅛c off to ¼c higher. Foreign markets were firm with a slightly downward trend and the controlling factor in the early trading was an improved local demand. In the first hour prices worked slowly away from the low point, September creeping up to 99½c, a net gain of ⅝c over yesterday's closing quotation. Influential concerns invested to some extent in the nearby delivery. The other options showed a healthy tone and reports of export sales were heard. September opened ⅛c to ¼c higher at 99c to 99⅛c. December opened unchanged to ⅛c down at $1.03⅛ to $1.03¼ and then advanced to $1.03⅞@1.04.

The market continued strong throughout the session. The close was strong with September 1⅛c higher at $1.00. December closed 1@1⅛c up at $1.04⅝ to $1.04¼@1.04⅜.

Corn was steady at the opening and developed some firmness early in the session, fear of a recurrence of frost scares making shorts timid. The start was ⅛c down to ⅛c up and a fair demand crowded the figures slightly higher. Ideal conditions in the corn belt gave the bears encouragement. September opened ⅛c down to ⅛c up at 60⅝c to 63⅜c and later advanced to 61c. December opened unchanged to ⅛c down and also gained a little in the first hour.

Firmness continued throughout the day. The close was firm with September ½c up at 61c. December closed ¼c higher at 58⅜c.

There was a firm undertone in the oats pit and opening figures were generally unchanged. A moderate demand early in the day helped the market. September opened unchanged at 34¼c. December started unchanged to a shade higher at 36½ to 36½@36⅝c.

Trading in hog products was light and prices kept within narrow limits in the early trading. Pork opened 7½c down to 2½c up; lard unchanged to 2½c down and ribs unchanged to 2½c down. Opening prices for the October products: Pork, $20.75, 2½c up; lard, $11.97½, unchanged and ribs $11.70, unchanged.

STOCKS SAG AT CLOSE

Market Tone Becomes Heavy Without Apparent Concerted Pressure.

Light Selling Follows Featureless Opening of Market.

New York, Aug. 27.—Price changes at the opening of the stock market were insignificant and the handful of stocks dealt in showed trivial changes either way from yesterday's closing. Central Leather advanced a point.

Light selling caused a slight reaction to below yesterday's final figures. Subsequently Reading was bid up from 140½ to 141½, and the rest of the list hardened. Denver & Rio Grande preferred and American Telephone & Telegraph improved 1 and International Harvester 1½. Consolidated Gas declined 1. Reading met a good deal of stock at the high level and went off again to 141.

The market closed heavy. The tone became heavy, stocks apparently sagging more of their own weight than from any concerted pressure. Union Pacific went a point under yesterday's closing, and Reading and United States Steel yielded as much from their best prices. Chicago Great Western moved up 1 and American Beet Sugar 2¼. General Electric lost 1.

STOCK REVIEW AND GENERAL SUMMARY

New York, Aug. 27. — Stocks were again reactionary this week, with some slight recovery from lowest prices. Trading continued moderate and highly professional. Politics was still a factor, the situation in this state and the West giving rise to much speculation as to the outcome. Forecasts of the early congressional elections in New England are not encouraging to the dominant party.

The week witnessed a further stiffening of the monetary situation at home and abroad. The drain on local financial institutions presaged the preparations now making for crop moving, while the advance in discounts at London resulted not only from the keen inquiry for funds to be used at that center, but from the continent as well.

Crop prospects continued favorable although corn in the Northwest received some check by recent frosts. General trade conditions are little changed, the dullness of the last few weeks being most marked in iron and steel. Textile conditions show no immediate signs of revival, further restriction of operations being ordered at New England and Southern mills.

SHERMAN REFUSES TO TALK POLITICS

Vice President Starts From Chicago on His Campaign Tour.

Chicago, Aug. 27.—Vice President J. S. Sherman arived from the East early this morning and departed for Clinton, Ill., shortly after 10 o'clock to begin his speech-making tour through Illinois, Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma. The vice president was greeted on his arrival by Henry Casson, secretary of the Republican congressional committee and during his two-hour stay visited Republican congressional headquarters at a downtown hotel. Mr. Sherman refused to discuss politics when questioned by newspaper men.

CUT CURLS OFF AND PASTED THEM ON AGAIN.

Two East end children were playing together in the nursery when the older decided she disliked her little sister's curls so she proceeded to cut them off.

When the task was completed she was not pleased with the outcome so procured a bottle of glue and carefully put the curls back on, one by one.

When the mother went upstairs to see what her darlings were doing, she found that the beautiful head of curls, of which she was so proud, was a hopeless mess. She was so overcome by the sight that she forgot to punish the doer of the mischief.

MARKET OVERSOLD AND VALUES RALLY

Coppers Dead Until Toward the Close, When Light Buying Appears.

The copper market was dead until the close when a few shorts covered and scattered buying caused values to firm. Trading was small and consisted chiefly of evening up accounts. The bank statement was unfavorable, but it came too late to do any damage. The London market was lower, but it had little effect on this side as trading was too dull in the fore part of the session to carry values either way.

The market gets oversold easily and traders look for occasional bulges. Sentiment, however, is mainly pessimistic and few people think prevailing conditions warrant higher prices. They feel confident, however, that values will show great improvement as soon as the political tangle is straightened out.

President J. H. Lanyon of the Duluth-Lemhi Mining company in a letter to some local stockholders says that the gold vein recently encountered is nine feet wide, lies between porphyry and diorite and values increase with depth. Samples taken from the fissure assay at $25 to $100 a ton and 10 per cent copper. The strike has started a flow of prospectors into the district and mining companies are getting hold of all the land available.

The Duluth Lemhi Mining company owns a property in the Wimpey Creek district, Lemhi district, Idaho, and its stockholders are business men of Duluth and Superior.

THINKS KAISER AND TEDDY IN CAHOOTS.

London, Aug. 27.—The Times in an editorial dealing with the speech of Emperor William says:

"History is not likely to regard it as an accident that the two figures whose eloquence reached furthest in the Western world of their day, should have insisted in language so similar in its directness and force on the simple human obligations which men and women were seeking to escape. Emperor William and Col. Roosevelt do not preach from the same text, but the moral of their preaching is the same."
